The battayle of Saul agaynst the Philistines, in which he dieth, & his sonnes also.

And the Philistines soughte agaynst Israel, and the men of Israel fled before the Philistynes, and were ouerthrowen and slaine in mounte Gylboe. And the Philistines pursued Saul and his sonnes, and slew Jonathan, Abynadab, and Melchysua the sonnes of Saule. And the battayle went fore agaynst Saule, in so much that the shoters mette hym, and he was wounded of the shoters. Then sayed Saul to his weapon bearer: * drawe thy sword

1. Reg. xxi. 1. 1. Reg. xxxi.

16 Swerde and thruste me thorowe therewith that these vncircumcised come not and do me shame. And his weapon bearer woulde not, but feared exceedingely. Where vpon Saule caught a swerd and fel vpon it. And when his harness bearer saw that Saule was dead, he fel on a swerd also and dyed.

And thus Saule and his three sonnes, and all his house died together. And when all the men that dwelte in the valeys saw howe they fledde, and that Saule and his sonnes were dead, they forsoke theyr cirtyes and ranne away, and the Philistines came and dwelte in them.

D On the morowe when the Philistines came to strypppe the dead bodyes, they found Saule and his sours ouerthrowen in mount Belyoe. And when they had strypte hym, they toke his heade and his harness and sente them into the land of the Philistines rounde aboute to shew tidings vnto their goddes, and to the people. And they put his harness in the house of theyr goddes. But his head they hanged in the house of Dagon. And when all they of Gabes in Gath heard all that the Philistines hadde done to Saule, all the men of warre arose and sette awaye the bodye of Saule, and the bodyes of his sonnes, and broughte theym to Gabes, and buried the bones of theym vnder an oke in Gabes, and fasted seven dayes.

Thus Saule dyed for his trespass that he trespassed agaynst the Lorde, in that he kept not the word of the Lorde, and in that he asked counsell of a woman that wrought with a spire, and asked not of the Lorde. And therefore the Lorde kylled hym, and touned the kyngedome vnto Dauid the sonne of Isay.

The.xi. Chapter.

After the death of Saul, is Dauid annointed in Hebron. The Jebusites rebell against Dauid, from whiche he taketh the towne of Syon. His men are numbred.

1 Then all Israell assembled to Dauid vnto Hebron, and sayed: Se, we be thy bones and thy flesh. And moreouer in tyme past when Saule was kyng, thou leddest Israell oute and in, and the Lorde thy God sayed vnto thee: thou shalt lead my people Israell, and shalt be captayne ouer my people Israell. And when all the elders of Israell were come to the king to Hebron Dauid made a covenant with them ther before the Lorde. And they anoynted Dauid king ouer Israell, accordinge to the worde of the Lorde by the hand of Samuell. Dauid also and all Israell wente to Ierusalem, whiche is Jebus: for ther dwelt the Jebusites the inhabitants of the lande. And the inhabitants of Jebus sayed to Dauid: thou comest not here. Neuerthelesse Dauid won the castelle of Syon, whiche is called the citie of Dauid. Then saide Dauid: whosoever smyte the Jebusites sytt, shall be the pryncypal capytayne, and a Lorde. And Joab the sonne of Zaruiah wente first vp, and was therefore the chiefe captaine. And because Dauid dwelte in the castle, it was called the citie of Dauid. And he bilte the citie on euery syde from Bello rounde aboute. But Joab repayed the rest of the citie. And Dauid prospered and waxed great, & the Lord of hostes was with him. * These are the pryncypall men of power that claued to Dauid in his kyngdome with al Israell, to make him kyng vpon Israell, accordinge to the word of the lorde, whiche he spake to Israell. And this is the number of the myghty men which Dauid had: Isababam the sonne of Bachamou the chiefe of thirtie, he lyfte vp his speare agaynst thre hundred, and slewe them at one tyme.

After him Eleazar the sonne of Dodo his vncle an Abotyte, whych was one of the thre myghtyeste, he was with Dauid at Gath where the Philistines were gathered to batrayle. In which place was a parcel of ground ful of barly, and þ people fledde for feare of the Philistines. And they kepte forth in the mids of the ground and defended it, and slew the Philistines. And the Lord gaue a great victorie.

And the thre of þ thirtie chiefe, wente to a rocke to Dauid at the caue Doollā, where the host of the Philistines had pitched in the valley of Raphaim. And Dauid was in an hold. And ther was a garrison of the Philistines at Bethlehem the same tyme. And Dauid longed and sayd. Oh, that one woulde gyue me of the water of the well of Bethlehem that is in the gate, for to drinke. And these thre brake thorowe the hoste of the Philistines, and drew of the water of the well of Bethlehem, that was in the gate, and tooke it and broughte it to Dauid. Neuerthelesse Dauid woulde not dryncke of it, but offered it to the Lorde, and sayed: God forbidde it me that I shoulde doo this thinge to dryncke the bloude of these menne that haue put theyr lyues in iopardye (for with the iopardye of theyr lyues they broughte it) and therefore he woulde not dryncke it. Thys dyd the thre myghtyeste.

And Abisai the brother of Joab was captaine of the thre, and he lyfte vp his spere agaynst thre hundred and slewe them, and had a name amonge the thre. And he was muche more noble then anye of the thre, and was their capteine, but was not lyke to any of the thre in actes.

Banaiath, the sonne of Joiada the sonne of a stronge man that had done greate deedes, and was of Cabzeel, he slewe two stronge lyons of Moab, and wente downe and slewe a Lyon in a pit in tyme of snow, and he slewe an Egyptyan, whose stature was fyue cubytes longe, and in his hande had a speare lyke a weauers beame. And the other wente to hym with a waster, and plucked the speare oute of the Egyptyan.

trans hand, and flew hym wyth hys spere. Suche thynges dyd Banayab the sonne of Joiada, & had a name wth the thre myghtyest, & was the mooste gloriouse of thyrtye, but attained not vnto the thre. And Dauid made hym of his secret counsel.

And these wer the best men of war of the hooste: Asael the brother of Joab, and Elhanan the sonne of Dodo of Bethlehem, Samoth the Harozite, Helez the Ishalonite: Ira s<sup>on</sup> of Akas the Thekuite, Abieser s<sup>on</sup> of Anathothite, Sobacai the husathite Ilay the Abihite: Ababaray the Bethphathite, & Heled s<sup>on</sup> of Baanab s<sup>on</sup> of Reithophathite, Itbay s<sup>on</sup> of Rebay of Baabaah s<sup>on</sup> peraynerh to the chyldren of Benjamin: Banayab s<sup>on</sup> of Harathonite: Hauzrai of the ryuer of Baas, and Abpell the Achathite: Azmoth the Baharumyte, Elahaba the Saalbanyte. The sonnes of Halsem the Bezonite, Jonathan the sonne of Sagah, an Hararite: Ahyam the sonne of Sacar the Bacatite, Ellyhall the sonne of Ur, Hephher the Mecharathite, Ahyah the Ishalonite: Hezro the Carmelyte and Naaty the sonne of Azbay: Joell the Brother of Nathan: Gibabar the sonne of Gary: zelec an Ammonyte, and Naharai a Berothite the bearer of the harnesse of Joab, the sonne of zarupah, Ira the Jethyte, and Bared a Jethyte. Urias the Bethite zabab the sonne of Obolui: Adyna the sonne of Siza a Rubenite, and an heade amonge the Rubenites, and thyrtye aboute hym: Hanon the sonne of Maacah, and Jonaphat a Garbanite: Ozeah an Ascharothite: Sama and Jaiell the sonne of Hothan an Aroerite: Jedyaall the sonne of Zamer and Joha hys brother, Thozytes: Elpell a Gahumyte. And Jeribaye and Josaph the sonnes of Elnaem and Jethemah a Moabyte, Elpell and Obed and Jaspell of Masobah.

The. xii. Chapter.

What they were that wente wyth Dauid whan he fled from Saule.

And these folowynge came to Dauid to zikleg whyle he yet kept him selfe close for feare of Saule the sonne of Eys: and they were of the men that succoured the battayle, weaponed wyth bowes, and coulde handle stones, arrows and bow as well wyth the lefte hande as wyth the right, and were of Saules brethren, even of the trybe of Benjamin. The chiefest were Abiezer and Joas the sonnes of Samaab a Babaonyte, and Jaziell a Ishalyte, the sonnes of Azmob. Baracah and Jebu of Anathoth, and Ilamayah a Babaonyte as myghtye as any of thyrty, and more myghtye. And Jeremiah, Jebazrell, Jothanan and Josabad of Gedoz, Eleusay, Jerymoth, Baaliab, Samariah & Saphattah, Haraphytes: Elcanah, Jeshiah, Azrael, Joazer, Jeseboam of karehym. And Joelah, and zabadyah the sonnes of Jeroham of Gedoz.

Also certayne of the Gaddytes fledde vnto Dauid, when he kepte an holde in the wyldernesse, menne of myghte, and men apte for warre, and coulde handle shyld and spere, whose faces were lyke the faces of Lyons, & they were also as swyfte as the roes of the mountaynes: Ezer the fyrste, Oddyab the seconde, Eliab the thyrde, Manuab the fourthe, Jeremyah the fyfte, Eshi the syxte, Elpell the seuenche, Jothanan the eyghte, Elcabad the nyntch, Jeremyah the tenth, and Macabbanai the eleuenth. These were of the sonnes of Gad, and were capytaynes ouer men of warre, the small ouer an hundred, and the greate ouer a thousand. These are they that went ouer Jordan in the fyrste moneth, when he had fylled ouer all hys banke, and they put to flyght them of the valey, both of the east syde and also the west.

And there came of the chyldren of Benjamin and Juda, to the holde of Dauid. And Dauid went out to them, and answered, and sayd to them: Yf ye be come peesably vnto me, to help me, mine hert shalbe to gyther with you. But if you come to begyle me, and to be myne aduersary, sythe there is no wyckednesse in myne hands, the God of our fathers loke theron and rebuke it. And the spyrte came vpon Amasai a capytayne ouer. xxx. and he sayed: thyne are we Dauid, and on thy syde thou sonne of Ilape: *peace be with the, and peace with thyne healpers, for thy God healeth the. Cobi. xii. d.

Then Dauid receyued theym, and made them heades of companyes of men of war. And there felle of Agassalles to Dauid, when he wente wyth the philistynes agaynst Saule to battayle. but holpe them not. For the lordes of the philistines toke counsell and sente hym awaye, sayinge: he wyll fall to hys master Saule, to the iopardye of our heades. And as he wente to zikelegge, there felle to hym of Agassalles: Ednab, Jozabad, Jedyaell, Japchaell: of Jozabad, Elihu, and zaltchay, heades of the thousandes of Agassalles. And they holpe Dauid agaynst those rouers. For they were all myghty men, and Captaines in war. And ther came one or other to Dauid day by day, to helpe hym: vntyl it was a great host, like the host of God.

And thys is the noumber of the heades prepared to battayle, that came to Dauid to Hebron to turne the kyngedome of Saule to hym, accordynge to the woorde of the Lorde.

The chyldren of Juda that bare shyld and spere, were sixe thousande, and eighte hundred, well furnyshed to warre. Of the chyldren of Symeon, me of myght to war, seuen thousande, and one hundred. And of the chyldren of Leuy, were foure thousand and syxe hundred. And Joiada was the chyefe of theym of Aaron, and wyth hym thre thousande and seuen hundred. And zadock a yonge man of greate power, had hys hys fathers houholde wyth capytaynes two and twenty. And of the chyldre of Benjamin the brethre of Saul, were thre thousand. And a greate part of them dyd yet so lowe the house of Saule.

And of the chyldren of Ephraim, were twenty thousand, and eynhundred men of myghte, and named men in theboulholdes of theyr fathers. And of the halfe tribe of Manasses, xlii. thousand, whych were appoynted by name to goo to make Dauid kynge. And of the chyldren of Issacar, whiche were men that had understaunding in the myghte tyme to knowe what Israel oughte to do. The heades of theym were two hundred, and all theyr brethren at theyr wyll. And of Zabulon that wente out wyth the host, and proceded in aray to battayle wyth all maner of weapons of warre, xlv. thousand that kepte in aray with one accord. And of Reubyn a thousand capytaynes, and wyth them wyth shild and spere seven and thyrty thousand. And of Dan prepared to battayle, were eynhundred and twenty thousand and syre hundred. And of Aser that wente out wyth the host to make battayle, fourty thousand. And of the other syde Jordan, of the Rubenytes, Gadites, and of the halfe tribe of Manasses, wyth all maner of habylmentes of warre an hundred and twenty thousand.

All these beyng men of warre hable to order the aray, came to Hebron wyth pure harte, to make Dauid kynge vpon all Israel. And mozeouer, all the reste of Israel was of one accorde to make Dauid kynge. And there they were wyth Dauid thre dayes eatynge and drynkyng: for theyr brethren prepared for them. Mozeouer they that were nye to them, as Isachar Zabulon and Reubyn, broughte bread on asses, camelles, mules, and oxen, and meat flour, fygges, casnynges, wyne, oyle, oren and sheepe aboundaunte. For ther was myghte in Israel.

The. xiii. Chapter.

The Arke is brought agayne from Kartath Jarym to Jerusalem, Dza dyeth.

And Dauid counsayled wyth þe grā capytaynes, and petre capytaynes, and wyth all the lordes, and sayed vnto all the congregacyon of Israel: if it seeme you good, and also to be of the Lorde our God, lette vs take and sende vnto the remnaunte of our brethren thowt out of all the lande of Israel, and to the prests and Levites wyth them in theyr cytyes and suburges, and gather them together to vs, and let vs byngne agayne the Arke of God to vs: for we regarded it not in the dayes of Saule. And all the congregacyon was content so to do, for the thyng seemed good in the eyes of all the people.

And Dauid gathered all Israel together fro Sibor in Egypte vnto Hemath so byngne the arke of the Lorde from Kartath Jarym.

And Dauid went vp and all Israel to Baalab, and so to Kartath Jarym that is in Juda, to set thence the arke of the God and Lorde that sitteth on the Cherubes, where hys name is called on. And they caried the arke of God in a new cartte out of the house of Amynadab. And Dza and Abio draue the cartte. And Dauid and all Israel played before God wyth all theyr myghte, wyth synnyng, harpes, psalteryes, tymbylles, and trompettes. And when they came on þe thershyng floore of Chidon, Dza put forth the hys had to hold the arke, for the oxen stoumblid. And the Lorde was wroth wyth Dza and smot him because he put hys hande to the arke. And there he dyed before God. And Dauid was heuy, because the Lorde had rente in peces Dza, and called the said place Perez vnto this daye. And Dauid was so afrayed of God that day, that he sayed: howe shall I byngne the arke of God home to me? And so Dauid brought not þe arke home to him to the city of Dauid: But turned it into the house of Obed Edom a Gerhyte. And the arke of God was wyth Obed Edom in hys house, thre monethes. And the Lorde blessed the house of Obed Edom and all that he hadde.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Ham sendeth woode and workemen to Dauid. Dauid begetteth chyldren, after he had taken hym wyues. He hath two byctoryes of the Philistynes.

Then Ham kynge of Tyre sente messengers to Dauid, and tymber of Cedar trees wyth masons and carpenters, to builde hym an house. Wherby Dauid perceyued that the Lorde had prepared hym to be kynge vpon Israel, in that his kyngedome was lyft vp on hygh, because of hys people Israel. And Dauid toke yet mo wyues at Jerusalem, and begatte mo sonnes and daughters. And these are the names of hys chyldren, which he had born hym at Jerusalem: Samua, Sobab, Nathan, and Salomon: Jebhar, Ellisua, and Eliphalet Moga, Reubeg, and Japhyay Elisama, Galiada, and Elpheler.

And when it was knowen amonge the Philistynes, that Dauid was annoynted kynge vpon all Israel, all the Philistynes went vp to seke Dauid. And Dauid herde of it, and wente oute agaynst them. And the Philistynes came and prauised in the vale of Raphaim. And Dauid asked god, sayinge: Shall I goo agaynst the Philistynes? and wylte thou delpyer them into myne handes? And the Lorde sayed to hym: goo, for I wyl delpyer them into thyne handes. And when they were come as farre as Baale Jharazym Dauid bette them there. And Dauid sayed: God hath deuyded myne enemyes wyth myne hande, as a man woulde deuide water. And therefore they called the name of the sayde place Baale Jharazym. An they left they: Gods ther, whypche Dauid had to be burnt wth fyre.

And the philistynes came agayne and ran abroade in the valleye. Then Dauid asked God: And God sayed to hym: go not after them, but tourne awaye from them and come vpon them straghte from the pere trees. And when thou herest a sounde of one that goeth in the toppes of the pere trees, then goo oute to battayle: for God wyll go oute before the to smyte the hooite of the philistynes. And Dauid dyd as God commaunded hym. And they smote the hooite of the philistynes all the waye from Gabaon to Bazer, and the same of Dauid wente oute into all landes, and the Lord made al nations feare hym.

The.xv. Chapter.

The Levites bring agayne the Arke of the Couenante of the Lorde. Dauid daunsynge before it, is despyed of his wyfe Michol, daughter of Saule.

AND Dauid made hym houses in the ctype of Dauid, and prepared a place for the arcke of God, and pytched for it a tent. And then Dauid sayed, the Arcke of God oughte not to be carped but of the Levites. For them hath the Lorde chosen to beare the Arcke of the Lorde, and to minister to hym for ever. And therefore Dauid gathered al Israell to Jerusalem, to fetch the Arcke of the Lorde vnto the place whypche he had ordeyned for it. And Dauid broughte together the chyldren of Aaron and the Levites. Of the sonnes of Ithamar Gziel the chiefe, and of hys brethren an hundred and twenty. And of the chyldren of Merari, Alaiab the chiefe, and of hys brethren two hundred and twenty. And of the sonnes of Gerson, Joell the chiefe, and of hys brethren an hundred and thyrtye. And of the chyldren of Elizaphan: Semer the chiefe, and of hys brethren two hundred. And of the sonnes of Hebron, Elpell the chiefe, and of hys brethren foure score. And of the sonnes of Ozziel, Amynadab the chiefe, and of hys brethren an hundred and twelue.

And Dauid called to zadocke and Abiathar the priestes, and to the Levites, Gziel, Alaiab, Joell, Semer, Elpell, and Amynadab, and sayde vnto them: ye are the principal heades of the Levites, sanctifye therefore youre selues and your brethren, and bringe the Arcke of the Lorde God of Israell vnto the place that I haue prepared for it. For because ye were not there at the first tyme, the Lorde our God hath deuided vs, for that we soughte hym not as the fashyon oughte to be. And the priestes and the Levites sanctified them selues, to let the Arcke of the Lorde God of Israell. And the chyldren of the Levites bare the Arcke of god vpon their shulders wth staves, as Moyses commaunded, according to the word of the Lord. And Dauid spake to the chiefe heades of the Levites, that they shoulde appoynte of their brethren to singe with instrumentes of musycke psalterpes, Harpes, and Symbailes that soune Synzers, and to synge on highe with ioyfulness. And the Levites appoynted Heman the sonne of Joell: and of hys brethren, Asaph the sonne of Barachyah.

And of the sonnes of Merari, they brethren, Erhan the sonne of Lufaiab. And wth them they brethren, the seconde degree: zachariab, Ben, Naaziell, Semiramoth, Nabyel, Ani, Eliad, Baaniab, Maasiah, Machathiah, Eliphelehu, Machaniab, Obed Edom, and Jaiel, porters. Heman Asaph, and Elhan sange wth symbales of brasse to make a sound. And zacharyah, Oziel, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Ani, Eliab, Maasiah, and Baaniab sange wth psalteries in an Almoth. And Machathiah, Eliphelehu, Machaniab, Obed Edom, Jaiel, and Ozazpah sang wth harpes, an eyght aboute, to courage wythall. And Conanay the chiefe of the Levites was master of the song, and taught to synge, for he was a man of vnderstandynge.

And Barachias & Elcana kepte the doze of the arke. And Sacanah, Josaphat, Athanael, Amasai, zachariab, Baaniab, & Eliezzer priestes, were blowers of trumpets before the arke of God. And Obed Edom, and Jaiab were keepers of the doze of the arke. * And Dauid, and the elders of Israell, and the captaines ouer thousandes went to fet the arke of the appoyntement of the Lorde oute of the house of Obed Edom wth gladnesse. And when God had holpe the Levites that bare the arke of the appoyntement of the Lorde, they offered seuen oxen, and seuen rammes. And Dauid hadde on hym an albe of bilie, so hadde the Levites that bare the arke, and so had the synzers, and Conaniab the ruler of the song and of the synzers. And Dauid had moreouer vpon hym an Ephod of linnen. And al Israell brought the arcke of the Lordes couenante wth shoutynge and blowynge of hornes, and wth trompettes and symbales that sounded, and wth psalterpes and harpes.

And as the arcke of the appoyntement of the Lorde came into the ctype of Dauid, Michol the daughter of Saule looked out at a wyndowe: and when she sawe kynge Dauid daunsynge and playinge, she despyed hym in her herte.

The.xvi. Chapter.

After the arke was broughte, Dauid ordeyneth Asaph & hys brethren to minister before the Lorde. And he prayseth the Lorde God of Israell.

When they hadde broughte in the Arcke of God, they sette it in the Arke, that Dauid hadde pytched for it. And they broughte burnt sacrifice and peaceofferynges before God. And when Dauid had made an ende of offerynge of burntcofferynge, and and of peaceofferings, he blessed the people with the name of the Lord. And he delt to all Israel both man and woman a cracker of bread, a piece of flesh and a mess of foppes. And he appoynted certayne of the Leuytes to minister before the Lord, and to repete, and too thanke and prayse the Lord God of Israel, that is to wyte:

Asaph the chyefe, and nexte to hym zachariah, then Jziel, Semiramoth, Jehiell: Mathathiah, Eliab, Banaiah, Obed Edom, and Jziel with psalties and harps. But Asaph with soundyngymbales and Banaiah and Jahaziell priestes with trumpettes continuallye before the Arcke of the couenaunte of God. In that tyme Dauid dyd appoynte chiefe too thanke the Lord, Asaph and hys brethren. * Thanke the Lord, call on hys name, make hys actes be knowne amonge the people.

Synge vnto hym and play vnto hym, recorde all hys wonderfull dedes. Praise his holy name. And let the hertes of them that seke the Lord reioyce. Seke the Lord and hys strengthe: seke hys presence alwaye.

Remember hys maruables whiche he dyd, and hys wonders, and the iudgements of his mouth. The seede of Israel are hys seruautes: the chyldren of Jacob are hys chosen. He is the Lord oure God: and in all landes are hys iudgements. Thinke on hys appoyntemente euer, and on the worde whiche he commaunded to a thousande generacions. Of hys couenaunt to Abraham, and of hys othe to Isaac: whiche he set before Jacob for a decree, and to Israel for an euerlastinge couenaunte, sayinge: to the I will gyue the Lande of Canaan, too bee the porcion of your enheritaunce. When you were a smalle company in number, euen but a fewe, and thereto straungers therein. And they went from people to people, and from one kyngedome to another nacyon. He suffered no man to do them wronge: But rebuked kynges for theyr sake. Touche not myne annoynted, nor do my prophetes any harme. * Synge vnto the Lord all the earth, and shewe from dape to dape hys byetorpe.

Tel amonge the Heathen of hys glorie and amonge all nacpons of hys wonderfull dedes.

For great is the Lord, and to be praysted exceedingly: and terriblye is he aboue gods.

For all the gods of the heathen are ydols, but the Lord made heauen.

Prayse and honour are in hys presence, strength and gladnes are in his place.

Ascribe to the Lord, o pe kyndes of people: ascribe to the Lord glorie and strength.

Byue honour vnto the Lordes name: byyng presentes and come before hym, and bowe to the Lord in holpe apparell.

All the earth feare hym, he stablyshed the earth that it can not moue. The heauen reioyce, and the earth be gladde, and let men tell amonge the nacpons, that the Lord is a kyng.

Let the sea sounde and hys fulnes, and let the felde reioyce and all that are therein.

Let the trees of the wood synge at the presence of the Lord: for he cometh too iudge the earth.

Thanke the Lord for he is good, and hys mercye lasteth euer, and saue vs (O God oure saupoure) and gather vs together, and deliuer vs from the Heathen that we maye thanke thy holpe name, and praise the with praise that becometh the. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel for euer, and euer, and all nacpons shall saue Amen, so pray synge the Lord.

And he sette there before the Arcke of the Lordes couenaunte, Asaph and hys brethren to minister before the arcke euer more dape by dape. And Obed Edom, with hys brethren thre score and eght, and Obed Edom the sonne of Iduthun and Ozah to bee porters. And Zadock the prieste with his brethren the priestes dyd he sette before the tabernacle of the Lord: at the hyl aulter of Gabaon, to offer burnt offerings vnto the Lord vpon the burnt offeringe aulter perpetuallye at morning and euenyng accordyng to all that is wyrtten in the lawe of the Lord whiche he commaunded Israel. And with them Beman and Iduthun, and other that were chosen and named by name, to thanke the Lord that hys mercye lasteth euer. And with the said Beman and Iduthun were trumpettes and soundyngymbales, and instruments of the melodye of God. And the sonnes of Iduthun were porters. And then all the people departed euerye man to hys house, and Dauid returned to loke to hys householde.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Dauid is forpydden to buyld an house vnto the Lord. Ch. xvi. He is promised vnder the figure of Salomon.

As Dauid dwelt in his house, he sayd to Nathan the prophete: lo, I dwell in an house of Cedar tree: and the arcke of the Lordes couenaunte dwelleth vnder skyppes. And Nathan sayde to Dauid: do all that is in thyne hert, for God is with the. But the same night the word of God came to Nathan, sayinge: goo and tell Dauid my seruaunte, thus sayeth the Lord: Thou shalt not buyld me an house to dwell in, for I haue dwelte in no house synthens I brought out the chyldren of Israel vnto this day: but I haue gone from tente to tente, and from one tabernacle to another. Neyther in any place wheresoeuer I haue walked thorowout all Israel, spake I euer one worde to any of the Iudges of Israel whych I commaunded to fede my people, sayinge: why buylde ye not me an house of Cedar tree? The. xliii. Chapter.

The battayles of Dauid agaynst the philistynes.

After thys, Dauid beate the philistynes, and subdued them, and toke Beth and the townes there vnto pertaynyng out of the handes of the philistynes. And he beate the Moabites, and the Moabites became Dauides seruauntes, and payde hym tribute. And Dauid beate Hadadezer kyng of Zobah vnto Hemath, as he wente to byng hys domynyon vnto the ruer Euphrates. And Dauid toke from him a thousand charrettes, and seuen thousande horsemen, and twenty thousande fotemen, and brake al the charrets, saue that he reserued of them an hundred. Then came the Sirians of Damascus to helpe Hadadezer kyng of Zobah. And Dauid slewe of the Sirians, two and twenty thousande, and putte garisons in Siria Damascus: And the Sirians came to Dauides seruauntes, and brought hym tribute. For the Lord holpe Dauid in al that he wente aboute. And Dauid toke the shildes of goulde that were on the seruauntes of Hadadezer and brought them to Jerusalem, And from Thebath, and Chuncytes of Hadadezer, broughte Dauid exceedinge muche brasce. Wherewith Salomō afterwarde made the brasen sea and the pylers and the vessels of brasce.

And when * Thou kyng of Hemath hearde howe Dauid had beaten the hooft of Hadadezer kyng of Zobah, he sent Duram hys sonne to kyng Dauid, to aske hys peace, and too prayse hym because he had fought with Hadadezer and beete him (for Thou had war wth Hadadezer) and sent al maner of iewels of gold syluer and brasce wth hym.

And kyng Dauid dedycated them al so vnto the Lord wth the syluer and gold that he brought from all nacions, from the Edomites, from the Moabites, from the chyldren of Ammon, from the Philistines, and from the Amalekites. And Abisai the sonne of Zaruiah slewe of the Edomites in the salt valey. xliii. thousand, and put a garyson in Edom, and all Edom, became Dauides seruauntes, for the Lorde kepte Dauid in all that he toke in hand. And Dauid raygued ouer all Israel, and dyd right and equitie vnto all hys people. And Joab the sonne of Zaruiah was ouer the host, and Joaphat the son of Ahilud recorder, and Zadoc the sonne of Achitob, & Abimelech the sonne of Abiathar were the priestes, and Sufa was scribe, and Banaiiah the sonne of Joiada was ouer the Cerethites and the Ishelithites, and the eldest sonnes of Dauid w<sup>re</sup> waped at the kynges hand.

And all Iſrael wer in number a thouſand thouſandes, and an hundred thouſand men that drewe ſwerd: and Juda was four hundred and threſcore and ten thouſande men that drewe ſwerd. But the Leuites & Benjamin he counted not amonge them. For the kynges dede ſemed abhominable to Joab. And the Lord was diſpleaſed with this thing, and ſmote Iſrael. Then ſayd Dauid to God: I haue ſinned exceedingly, in doyng thys thyng. Neuertheleſſe yet do away the wickedneſſe of thy ſeruaunte, for I haue done aboue meaſure ſolp ſhye.

And the Lord ſpake vnto Gad, Dauides ſear of viſions, ſayinge: go and tell Dauid, ſayinge: Thus ſaythe the Lord: I geue thee the choiſe of thre thinges: choſe the one of them, that I maye do vnto the. And Gad came to Dauid and ſayde vnto him. Thus ſaith the Lord: Choſe the either thre peres ſamishment, or thre monethes to be coſumed of thine aduerſaries, the ſwerd of thine enemies ouertaking the: or els the ſwerd of the Lord. iii. dayes, and peſtilence in the lande, the aungell of the Lord deſtroyng thorowout al the coaſtes of Iſrael. And nowe auſe thy ſelfe what worde I ſhal brynge agayne to hym that ſente me. And Dauid ſayde to Gad, I am in excea- dyng ſtrengthes. But lette me fall into the handes of the Lord, for paſſyng greate is hys mercey, and let me not fall into the handes of men.

And the Lord ſente peſtilence vpon all Iſrael, ſo that there were ouerthrowne of Iſrael, threſcore and ten thouſande men. And God ſente the aungell to Jeruſalem to deſtroy it. And as he was aboute to deſtroye, the Lord behelde: and had compaſſion on the wretchedneſſe, and ſayde to the aungell that deſtroyed, it is pnowge, now ceaſe thyne hande. And the aungell of the Lord ſtoode by the threſhyng floore of Ornan the Jebuſite. And Dauid lyfte vp hys eyes, and ſawe the angel of the Lord ſtand betwene the earth & heauen with a drawen ſwerd in hys hande, ſtretched out towarde Jeruſalem. Then fel Dauid and the elders of Iſrael in ſacke vppon theyre faces. And Dauid ſayde vnto God: Is it not I that commaunded too number the people? And I am he that haue ſynned and done euyl in dede, But what haue theſe ſhepe done? let thyne hande therefore, O Lord God, be on me and on my fathers houſe, & not on thy people to deſtroye them.

And the aungell commaunded Gad to ſaye to Dauid, that Dauid ſhoulde go and ere by an aulter vnto the Lord in the threſhyng floore of Ornan the Jebuſite. And Dauid went at the ſaying of Gad, whiche ſpake in the name of the Lord. And Ornan turned about, and ſaw the angel, and hys iii. ſonnes wpth him, and hid them ſelues: for Ornan was threſhing whete. And Dauid came to Ornan. And when Ornan looked and ſawe Dauid, he wente oute of the threſhyng floore, and bowed hym ſelfe to Dauid, with hys face to the grounde.

And Dauid ſaide to Ornan: geue me the place of the threſhyng floore, that I may buyde an aulter therein vnto the Lord. Let me haue it for as muche monye as it is worthe, that the plage maye ceaſe frome the people. And Ornan ſayde to Dauid: take it to the and lette my Lord kyng do what ſemeth good in hys eyes. Se, I geue the open for a burnt ſacrifice, and the threſhyng ſeades for woode, and wheate for meate offerpge: I geue it all. But kyng Dauid ſayde to Ornan: not ſo, but I wyl bye it for as muche monye as it is worthe, I wyl not take that whiche is thynge for the Lord, and offer burnt offerpges wpthoute coſte.

And Dauid builde there an alter vnto the Lord, and offered burnt offerpges, and peace offerpges, and called vnto the Lord, and he heard him from heauen in ſyre vpon the alter of burnt offering. And the Lord comaunded the aungell to put vp hys ſwerd agayne into the ſheathe of it. At that tyme whē Dauid ſaw þ the Lord had heard him in the threſhyng floore of Ornan the Jebuſite, he vſed to offer there. For the tabernacle of the Lord which Moſes made in the wyldernes, and the alter of burnt offering were at that ſeaſon in the hylat Gabaon. And Dauid coulde not go before it to ſeke God, becauſe he was a ſerde of the ſwerd, of the aungel of the Lord. And Dauid ſaid, This is the houſe of the Lord God, & this is the burnt offerpge aulter for Iſrael.

The. xxii. Chapter

Dauid willet hys ſonne Salomon to build the temple of the Lord, whiche thyng he hym ſelfe was forbydden to do.

And Dauid comaunded to gather the ſtraingers that were in þ land of Iſrael, & ſet hewers to hewe ſtone to build the houſe of God. And Dauid prepared ple of yron for nayles too the doores of the gates, and too ioyne wpth all, and aboundaunce of braſſe wpthoute waighe and of Cedar trees wpthoute number. For the zidonians and they of Tyre brought much Cedar woode to Dauid. For Dauid thus thought: Salomon my ſon is yong and tender, and the houſe that is to be buylt for the Lord,

Lord, muste excede in greatenesse, that it may be spoken of, and praised in al lands, I wyl therefore make ordynance for it. And so Dauid made greates piouspon be- fore hys deathe.

B And he called Salomon hys sonne, and charged him to buyld an house for the lord God of Israel. And Dauid sayde to Salomon: * my sonne, I hadde in myne herte to build an house vnto the name of the lord my God. But the worde of the Lord came to me sayinge: thou haste shed much blood and hast made many battailes. Thou shalt not build an house for my name, forasmuch as thou haste shed so much bloude too the earth in my syghte. Beholde a sonne that be bozne the, whiche shalbe a man of reste, for I wyl gyue hym reste from all hys enemyes rounde aboute. And hys name shalbe * Salomon: for I wyl send rest and peace vpon Israel in hys dayes. He shall buyld as muche to an house for my name, and he shall be my sonne, and I wyl be hys father, and wil sta- blysh the seate of his kingdome vpon Israel for euer. Nowe my sonne the Lord be with the, that thou mayest prospere & build house of the Lord thy God, as he hath sayd of the. And the Lord gyue the wyl- dome and vnderstandynge, and make the gouernoure of Israel, and to kepe the law of the Lord thy God. For then thou shalt prospere: If thou shalt be diligente to do the ordynances and lawes which the Lord charged Moyses wth, to deliuer to Israel. Plucke vp thine hearte, and be stronge, drede not nor be dyscouraged. Behould in myne aduersyte, I haue prepared for the the house of the Lord an hundred thou- sande talentes of syluer, and as for brasse & yron it cannot be numbred it is so muche. And I haue prepared timber and stone, & thou shalt proude more therto. Moreouer thou haste workemen inough and masons and carpenters to worke in stone, and tym- ber: and all manner of wisemen for what- soeuer worcke it be. And of goulde, syluer, brasse and yron there is no number. Arple therefore and sette vpon it, and the Lord shall be wth the.

A And Dauid commaunded all the Lordes of Israel, to helpe Salomon his sonne sayinge. Is not the Lord your God wth you? and hath he not geuen you reste on euerie syde? for he hath geuen the inhabi- tauntes of the lande into myne hande, and the lande is subdued before the Lord and before hys people. Now therefore set your hertes and your soules, to seke the Lord your God. And arple and buyld ye the temple of the Lord God, to brynge the arke of the couenaunte of the Lord, and the holpe vessels of God into the house so buylte for the name of the Lord.

And Dauid commaunded all the Lordes of Israel, to helpe Salomon his sonne sayinge. Is not the Lord your God wth you? and hath he not geuen you reste on euerie syde? for he hath geuen the inhabi- tauntes of the lande into myne hande, and the lande is subdued before the Lord and before hys people. Now therefore set your hertes and your soules, to seke the Lord your God. And arple and buyld ye the temple of the Lord God, to brynge the arke of the couenaunte of the Lord, and the holpe vessels of God into the house so buylte for the name of the Lord.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Dauid being old ordeineth Salomon king. He causeth the Levites to be numbred, and assigneth them to their offices.

AND when Dauid was olde and stryken in yeares, he made Salomon hys sonne kynge ouer Israel. And then he gathered together all the Lordes of Israel wth the ppestes and the Levites. And the Levites were num- bred from xxx. yere and aboue, and the tale of them in men polle by polle was. xxxviii. thousand. Of whiche. xlii. thousand were set to further the worke of the house of the Lord. And fyve thousande were officers & iudges. Foure thousand were porters, and four thousand prapled the Lord with such instruments as Dauid had made to praple wth. And Dauid put an order among the children of Levi: Gerson, Cahath and Merari. Of the Gersonytes was Laadan and Semei. The sonnes of Laadan: the chyef was Jehiell, and then zethan and Joell thre. The sonnes of Semei Salomith, Hazi- el, and Haran, thre. These were the aun- ciente heades of Laada. And the sonnes of Semei were also Jahath, Zinah, Jaus and Bariah: these. iiii. were the sonnes of Se- mei. And Jahath was the chyefe, zinah the second. But Jaus and Bariah had not ma- ny sonnes, and therefore they were reckened for one auncente houlholde.

The sonnes of Cahath: Amram, Hicor, Hebzon and Uziel, foure. * The sonnes of Amram: Aaron and Moyses. And Aaron was appointed to consecrate in the place moste holpe wth hys sonnes for euer: and too burne the offerpuges before the Lord, and to minister, and to blesse in hys name for e- uer. And the chyldren of Moyses the man of God, were named wth the trybe of Levi. The sonnes of Moyses: Gerson and Elie- zer. And of the sonnes of Gerson: Sabaell was the chyefe. The sonnes of Eliezer: Ro- habah the cheife. And Eliezer hadde none other sonnes: But the sonnes of Rohabiah were verp manpe. And of the sonnes of Je- sachar, Salomi the cheife. The sonnes of Hebzon, Jeriah the firste, Amariah the se- cond, Jahaziel the third, and Jecmaam the fourth. The sonnes of Uziel: Micah the. i. and Jeshiah the seconde. The sonnes of Merari: Mahali, and Musi: The sonnes of Mahali, Eleaser and Lys. And Eleaser di- ed, and had no sonnes, but doughters onli, and they brethren the sonnes of Lys toke them. The sonnes of Musi: Mahali, Eder and Jerumuth, thre.

These are the children of Levi in the houl- holdes of they fathers the auncent hea- des, bewed & numbred by name, & polle by polle from. xx. yere and aboue to worke in ser- uice of the house of the Lord: For Da- uid said: the Lord God of Israel hath ge- uen rest vnto his people, and they shal dwel in Jerusalem for euer.

Moreouer the Levites shall nowe no- more beare the tabernacle and all the ves- sels that perteyned to the serupce thereof. But at the laste commaundemente of Da- uid, the Levites were numbred from twen- ty

And to wait on euery offring of burnt sacrifices vnto the Lord, the Sabothes, and first daies of the monethes, and other feastfull dayes by numbze and custome, was theyr office euer before the Lorde. And that they shoulde wayt on the tabernacle of witnes and on the holy place, and on the sonnes of Aaron theyr brethren, in the seruice of the house of the Lorde.

The. xliii. Chapter.

David assygneth theyr offyce to the sonnes of Aaron.

Leui. xvi. a.

The deuision of the sonnes of Aaron: Nadab, Abihu, Eleazer and Ithamar. * But Nadab and Abihu dyed before their father, and had no chyliden. And Eleazer and Ithamar wer the priests, And Dauid ordered them on this maner. zadock of the sonnes of Eleazer, and Achimelecke of the sonnes of Ithamar too bee in offyce by course. And there were no myghty heades found of the sonnes of Eleazar then of the sonnes of Ithamar. And he deuyled them into. xvi. heades of auncpente householdes, of the sonnes of Eleazer, and epghte of the sonnes of Ithamar. And he put them in order by lot, one wpyth auother to be rulers in the sanctuary and lordes before God as wel of the sons of Ithamar as of the sons of Eleazar. And Semeiah the sonne of Nathaniel the scribe of the Leuites wrot the before the kynge and the Lordes, and before zadocke the priest and Achimelecke the sonne of Abiathar, and before the auncpente heades of the priestes and of the Leuites: one pryncypall household for Eleazer, and one for Ithamar.

And the first lotte fell to Jeoiarib. The ii. to Jedaiiah. The. iii. to Barim. The. iiii. to Seozim. The. v. to Melchiah, the syrte to Miamin. The. vii. to Bakes. The. viii. to Abiah. The. xxvi. Chapter.

The porters of the temple are ordeined eu-ery man to the gate which he shuld kepe.

A The dyspysion of the porters amonge the Kohites: Meselemiah the sonne of Kozeh of the chyldre of Alaph.

And the sonnes of Meselemiah were these: zachariah the eldeste, Jadrill the seconde, zabadiab the thyrde, Nathanell the fourth, Elam the fyft, Johanan the syxte, Elionai the. vii. And Obed Edom hadde sonnes, Semeiah the eldeste, Josabad the seconde, Joab the thirde, Sacar the fourth, Nathanael the fyft, Ampell the syxte, Machar the seuenth and Josathai the eyght, for God had blessed hym.

And vnto Semeiah his sonne, were son-nes bozne that ruled in the house of theyr father, for they were men of myghte. The sonnes of Semeiah, Orhni, Rappach, Obed and Elzabad, and his brethren menne of actpuyte, Elphu and Samachyah. All
B these were of the chyldren of Obed Edom, which with theyr brethren and their chyldren, actiue men, and of strengthe to doo seruyce, were the scoze and two of Obed Edom. And Meselemiah had sonnes and brethren, and actiue men, eyghtene. And Josah of the chyldren of Merarie hadde sonnes, Semei the chyefe, yet he was not the eldest but his father made him the chiefest. Helkiah the secod, Tabetah the thirde, and zachariah the fourth: so that all his son-nes and brethren of Josah were thyrteene.

Vnto these was deuptyd the offyce of the porterhpy, as vnto heades ouer the me that wayted with theyr brethren, and mi-nistred in the house of the Lorde. And they cast lottes, the small as well as the greate in the householdes of theyr fathers, so that to gate. And the Eastelotte fell to Semeiah. And for zacharyah his sonne a wyse counselloure they caste lottes, and his lotte came oute towarde the North. And Obed Edoms lotte fell to the South. And to his sonnes fel the counsel houses. And to Suphim and Josah fell the West with the gate Salecherh, wher the way goth vp ward the one way beyng fast by the other.

In the East kepte fyre Leuytes: in the North, foure a daye, and in the South foure a daye, and in euery counsell house twoo, and * in the watche houses on the wygh waye Westwarde, foure: twoo in a house. These are the deuysions of the porters amonge the sonnes of Kozeh, and the sonnes of Merari. And of the Leuytes Ahyah had the ouerspyghte of the treasure of the house of God, and of the treasure of the offered thynges.

As concernynge the sonnes of Laadan which were Bersonites: Laadan hadde an ciente fathers. Laadan the Bersonite had Jehiel. The sonnes of Jehiel: zethan and Joell his brother, whiche were ouer the treasures of the house of the lorde. Among the Amramites, Izabacites, Hebronites, and Ozielites, was Subuell the sonne of Berso, the sonne of Moyles, a ruler ouer the treasure. And of his brethren the sonnes of Eliezer, was Rababyah, whose sonne was Asaiab, and his sonne was Joazam, and his sonne zechri, and his sonne was Selomith, whiche Selomith and his brethren were ouer al the treasure of the dedicate giftes, which Dauid the kynge and the aunciente heades of the Capptaynes ouer thousandes and hundredes, and the capptaynes of the hoste had dedycated of the spoule wonne in battayle, to mayntayne the house of the Lorde: and ouer all that Samuell the Sear, and Saule the sonne of Eys, and Abner the sonne of Ner, and Joab, the sonne of zarutah had dedicated. All that was dedicated, was vnder the hand of Selomith, and of his brethren.

Of the Izabarytes, Conantah and his sonnes were in busineses, withoute forth made officers and iudges ouer Israell.
And of the Hebronites, Hasabyah and his brethren men of actiuite a thousande and seuen hundred were officers in Israell on this syde Jordan westwarde, in all affayres of the Lorde and seruyce of the kynge. And Jehiab was the chyefe amonge the kynredes and fathers of the Hebronites. And in the fourty yere of the raygne of Dauid, they were soughte for. And there were found of them men of prowesse at Hezer in Galaad. And his brethren were in men of prowesse, two thousand and seven hundred auncyente heades, whiche kynge Dauid made rulers ouer the Rubenites, Gadites, and halfe the tribe of Manasses, in all matters concernyng good busynesses of the kynge.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Of the princes and rulers that mynystred vnto the kynge.

To speake of the chyldren of Israel in the number of them were auncyente heades and capitaines of thousandes and hundredes, and offycers that serued the kynge in all thyng accordyng to the compaynes that came in, or went out moneth by moneth thowout all the monethes of the yere. And euery compayne had foure and twenty thousande.ouer the first compayne in the fyrste moneth, was Iasobeam the sonne of Zabdiel. And in hys number were foure and twenty thousand. And chiefe of all the captaynes in the hooste of the fyrste moneth was of the chyldren of Iudah. ouer the compayne of the second moneth, Dedai an Abobite, and in his hooste was Makeloth a ruler, And in hys compayne were foure and twenty thousande. The chiefe Capytayne of the thyrde hooste in the thyrde moneth, was Banayab the sonne of Joiada the pryeste.

And in hys hoost foure & twenty thousand. This is the same Banaias that was mighty among thyrty and aboue thyrty. And in hys parte was Amizabad hys sonne.

The fourth capytayne in the fourth moneth was Asael & brother of Joab, and Zabadiab his sone after hym. And in hys hoost foure & twenty thousande. The fyfte capytayne in the fyfte moneth was Samabur the Jezrabite: & in his hoost. xlii. thousand. The sixt capytayne in the sixt moneth was Ira the sonne of Akas a Jebusite: and in hys hoost foure and twenty thousande.

The seuenth capytayne in the seuenth moneth was Beleg the Ithaluyte, of the chyldren of Ephraim: and in hys hoost foure and twenty thousande. The eyght capytayne in the eyght moneth was Sobocay an Husathite of the kyn of Sarah: and in hys hoost foure and twenty thousand. The nynthe capytayne in the nynthe moneth: was Abyezer an Anathothite of the sonnes of Iemini: and in hys hoost. xlii. thousande. The tenth capytayne in the tenth moneth, was Mahari the Netophathite of the Zarathites: and in the hoost foure and twenty thousande. The eleuenth moneth was Banayab the Itharathite of the chyldren of Ephraim: and in hys hoost foure and twenty thousande. The twelfth capytayne in the twelfth moneth was Helday the Netophathite of the Beniaminites: and in hys hoost. xlii. thousande.

And the rulers ouer the tribes of Israel were these: Amonge the Rubenytes, was Eliezer the sonne of Zechi. Amonge the Symeonites, was Saphathpah the sonne of Maacab. Amonge the Leuites: Babelab the sonne of Amuell. Amonge the Haromytes Zadoc. In Iuda, Eliu of the brethren of Dauid. In Issachar, Amry the sonne of Michaell. In Zabulon, Hesmaph the sonne of Abdiab. In Reubtalpe, Herymoth the sonne of Aziell. Amonge the chyldren of Ephraim: Hosea the sonne of Ozyah. In the halfe tribe of Manasses: Joell the sonne of Phadaiah. Of the halfe tribe of Manasses in Galaad: Jado the sonne of Zachariah. In Beniamin, Jasiel & son of Abner. In Dan: Azariel the son of Merobah. These are the Lordes in & tribes of Israel.

But Dauid toke not the number of the vnder twenty yere: for the Lorde sayde he woulde encrease Israel lyke vnto the sters of the skye. And Joab the sonne of Zaruhab began to number, and though he fynished it not, yet there fel wrath for that vpon Israel. And therefore the number was not put in the Chronicles of King Dauid.

ouer the kinges treasure was Azmoth the sonne of Adiel. And ouer the treasure of the felde in the cyties, byllages, and castelles, was Jonathan, the sonne of Oziab. And ouer the workemen in the fyelds that tilled the ground, was Ezi the sonne of Chelub. And the ouersyghe of the bynerardes hadde Semeiah the Ramathite. ouer the wynecellers was Saddy the Saphonite. And ouer the olyue trees and mulberry trees that was in the valleyes, was Baal Hanan the Gadareite. And ouer the treasure of oyle were Hoas. And ouer the oxen that fed in Sarō was Setari the Saronite. And ouer the oxen in the valleyes was Saphat the sone of Adlap, and ouer the camels Abil the Ismaelit. And ouer the asses was Johadiab the Merothite. And ouer the shepe was Azis the Hagarite. All these were the rulers of the substance of kynge Dauid, and Jonathan Dauids brothers sonne, a man of counsell, a man that taught wysdome, and a wyrtier, he and Jehiel the sonne of Bachamō wayted on the kynges sonnes. And Achitophel was of the kinges counsell. And Husai the Archite was the kynges companion. And nexte to Achitophelle was Joiada the sonne of Banayab, and Abiathar. And the capytayne of the kinges wars was Joab.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Because Dauid was forbidden to build the Temple, he exhorteth Salomon and the people to performe it.

AND Dauid gathered together all the lordes of Israel: the lordes of the tribes, the lordes of compaynes that mynystred to the kynge by course, the lordes ouer the thousandes and ouer the hundredes, and the lordes ouer all the gooddes and cattel of the king, and of hys sonnes, with the chamberlaynes, warpours, and all valyaunt menne vnto Jerusalem. And king David stode vpon his fete and saide.

Ex. xxxvi. xxxvii. and xxxviii.

iii. reg. ii. c.

And Salomon offered there before the Lord vpon the brazen altar that was by the tabernacle of witness a thousand burnt sacrifices. And the same nyghte God appeared vnto Salomon, and sayed to hym: aske what shall I geue the. And Solomon sayed vnto God: thou hast shewed greete mercy vnto Dauid my father, and haste made me kynge in hys steele: and nowe Lorde God let thy promise vnto Dauid my father be true. For thou hast made me kynge ouer a people lyke the duste of the earth in multitude. Wherefore geue me wysdome and knowledge how to behaue my selfe to this people: for who is able to iudge this people that is so greate?

Then God sayed to Salomon, because thou haddest this in thyne harte, and dyd-dest not aske treasure and riches, honoure and the lyues of thyne enemyes, neyther perlonge lyfe: but haste asked wysdome and knowledge, to iudge my people, ouer whiche I haue made the kynge, wysdome and knowledge shall be geuen the, and I will geue the treasure, riches, and glorie also, that amonge the kynges before the after the, none was or shalbe lyke the. And so Salomon came from the hyll altar that was at Gabaon to Ierusalem from the tabernacle of witness, and reigned at Jerusalem. And Salomon gathered charretes and horsemen so that he had a thousande and foure hundred charrettes, and twelue thousande horsemen, whiche he bestowed in the charette cyrpes, and aboute the kinge at Ierusalem. And the kynge made syluer and golde at Ierusalem as plenteous as stones, and Cedar trees as plentye as the mulberry trees that growe in the valeyes. And the horses whiche Salomon had, were broughte hym out of Egypt fro Ikeua. The kynges marchauntes set them oute of Ikeua at a ppyce. They came and broughte oute of Egypte a charret for sixe hundred sylles, and an horse for an hundred and fyfye, And so broughte they to all the kynges of the Herhtes and to the kynges of Siria thowowe the handes of þ said marchauntes.

The ii. Chapter.

Salomon sendeth to Hiram the kynge of Tyre for woode and workemen.

And Salomon determyned to buyde an house for the name of the Lorde, and an house for hys kyngdome: and tolde out thre skore and ten thousand men to beare burdens, and fourescore thousand to helpe in the mountayne, and thre thousand and fyre hundred to ouerset them.

And Salomon sente to Hiram kynge of Tyre, sayinge: As thou dyddeste deale wyth Dauid my father, and dyddest sende hym Cedar woode, to buyde him an house to dwell in, even so deale wyth me nowe, that I may build an house for the name of the lord my God, to consecrate it to him to burne swete odours and to set the wybrake before him perpetually, and for burne sacri-fyce morning and euenyng, and on the Sa-bath dayes, & the fyrst daye of euerie newe mone, & in the solempne feastes of the Lord our God, so to contynue euer in Israell.

And the house which I build is greate, for greate is oure God aboue all Goddes.
So that who can be able to buyde hym an house, when that heauen, neyther heauen aboue all heauens is able to receyue hym, what am I then that I should buyde hym an house: naye, but to burne sacrifice before hym: sende me nowe therfore a con-nyng man to worke in gold, syluer, brasse Yron, Scarlet, Cremosin, and Iacynthe coloure, and that can skil to graue, to be with the cunnynge men that are wyth me in Iu-da and Ierusalem, whiche Dauid my father dyd prepare. And sende me also Cedar trees, fyre trees and some trees oute of Libanon. For I mote well thy seruants can skyll to hew timber in Libanon. And loo, my men shalbe wyth thyne, that they may prepare me timber ynough. For the house which I buyde is greate and wonderfull.
And beholde, I sent for thy seruantes the cutters and hewers of timber twentye thousande quarters of wheate, and twen-tye thousand quarters of barley, and twenty thousand bathes of wyne, and twentye thousand bathes of oyle.

And Hiram kynge of Tyre answered in wytynge and sente to Salomon: because the Lord loueth his people, he hath made the kynge ouer them. And Hiram sayde moreouer: blessed be the Lorde God of Israell, whiche hath made both heauen and earth, that he hath gyuen Dauid the kynge a wyse sonne that hath dyscrecyon and vnderstandynge, to buyde an house for the Lorde, and an other for his kyngdome. And now I haue sent a wyse man and a man of vnderstandinge called Hiram Abi, and is the sonne of a woman of the daughters of Dan (howe be it hys father was a Tician) and he can skille to worke in golde, syluer, brasse, yron, stone, timber, scarlet, Iacynthe, bisse, and cremosin: and graue al maner of graynges, and to fynde all maner sortle worke that shalbe set before hym, with thy cunnynge men, and wyth the cunnynge men of my Lord Dauid thy father. And nowe þ wheate, barley, oyle, and wyne whiche my Lorde hath sayde, let hym sende hys seruauntes. And wee will cutte woode oute of Libanon, as muche as thou shalte nede, and will brynge it to the in shippes, by sea to porte Jabo: and thence thou mayeste carpe them to Ierusalem. And Salomon numbered all the straungers that were in the lande of Israell, after the tyme hys father Dauid had numbred them. And they were founde an hundred. and. liii. thousande, and fyre hundred. And he sette. lxx.
thousand of them to beare burthens, & lxxx.
thousand to helpe in the mountayne, and three thousand and five hundred to encourage and to set the people a worke.

The.iii. Chapter.

The temple of the Lord & the porch are builded with other thynges therto belongyng.

Then Salomon began to build the house of the Lord at Jerusalem in mount Moriah, which was shewed David his father when he prepared a place in the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite. And he began to build the second day of the seconde moneth, the fourth yere of his raygne. And this is the foundacyon of Salomon, in buildinge the house of God. The length was .lx. cubites after the olde cubite, and the bredth .xx. And the porch at the ende was as large as the house bredth, twenty cubites: and the height was an hundred and twenty cubites. And he overlaid it on the inner syde with pure golde. And the great house he filled with fyre tre, and overlaid it thorow with good golde, and graued thereto palm trees, and chaines, foldinge in with lynckes. And he paved the house with precious marbel good lye. And it was gold of Shinaraim. And he overlaid the house, both beames, postes, walles, and doores with golde, and graued Cherubes upon the walles.

And he made the house most holpe, and whose length was twenty cubites lyke to the bredth of the house, and the bredth therof was also twenty cubites. And he overlaid it with the best golde, that due to the sum of fyre hundred talents, he made also nailes of golde, & the waight of euery nail of gold weyed fifty cycles. And he overlaid the upper chambers with golde.

Exo. xxv. b. And he made in the house mooste holpe two Cherubbes of Image worke, and gilded them with golde. And the wynges of the Cherubes wer twenty cubites long. The one wyng was fyue cubites longe and touched the wall of the house, and the other wyng was lyke wyse fyue cubites, and touched the wyng of the other Cherub. And the one wyng of the other Cherub was fyue cubites, and touched the wall of the house, and the other wyng was fyue cubites also, and reached to the wyng of the other Cherub. So that the wynges of the Lord Cherubs caught twenty cubits. And they stode on their fete and looked inwards. And he made a forehangyng of flacinct colour, of scarlet, cremosin and byss: and caused Cherubs to be brodered thereon. And he made before the house two pillers of .xxxv. cubites long. And the head that was aboue on the top of one of them was .v. cubites. And he made suche chaines as was in the quere, and put them on the heades of the pillers, and made an hundred pomegranates, and put them on the chaynes. And he reared up the pillers before the temple: one on the ryghte hande, and an other on the lefte, and called the ryghte, Jachyn, and the lefte, Boaz.

The.iii. Chapter.

The altar of brasse, the sea, the vessels to wash, with the candelstyches. &c.

And he made an altar of brasse .xx. cubites longe and .xx. cubites brode and ten cubites hygh. And he caste a brasse sea of .x. cubites from brim to brim, and rounde in compass, and fyue cubites hygh: and a lyne of thirte cubites myght haue compassed it roundabout. And he likenes of oxen dyd compass it roundabout vnder it: that is to wete, two rowes of oxen cast, which when it was cast, dyd compass that see which was ten cubites wide round aboute. And it stode vpon .xii. oxen, of which the three looked North, the Weste, the South, and the East, and the sea vpon the aboue on hygh, and the hynder partes of them inward. And the thickest of it was an handbread, and he bym lyke the bym of a cup, with floures of lyles. And it receyued and held three thousand barthes.

And he made ten lauers: and put fyue on the ryghte hande and fyue on the lefte, to washe with. And in them they thurst the fleshe of the burnt offerynges. But the sea was for the prestes, too washe in. And he made tenne candelstiches of golde, in theyr facyons, and put them in the temple: fyue on the ryghte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And hee made also tenne tables, and put them in the temple, fyue on the ryghte syde and fyue on the lefte. And he made an hundred basens of golde. And he made the courte of the prestes, and the greate courte and doores do it: & overlaid the doores of them, with brasse. And he sette the sea in the rightside of the East end towarde the South. And Biram made portes, shouelles and bafes. And he finished the worke he made for king Salomon vnto the temple of God: The two pillers with their scalpes of the two hedys that were on the tops of the pillers, and the two wretches to couer the two scalpes of the heades that were on the toppes of the pillers: and foure hundred pomegranettes for the two wretches, two rowes of pomegranettes for euery wretche, to couer two scalpes of the heades that were on the pillers. And he made bottomes, and lauers vpon the bottomes: and the sea with twelue oxen vnder it. And thereto pots, shouels, fleshhokes and al their vessels dyd Biram Aby make for kynge Salomon, for the house of the Lord, of bright brasse. In the playne of Jordan dyd the kynge cast them, in the thicke earth, betwen Socoth and Zaredatha. And he made of al these vessels so myghty greate abundance, that the waight of brasse could not be reakened. And Salomon made all the vessels that pertainyng to the house of God: the golden altar and the tables with the shewbread vpon them, the candelstyches with their lampes to burne after the the maner befoze the quire, & that of pure gold, and the floures, and the lampes, and the snuffers were golde, and that perfecte gold, & the dressing kniues, basens, spones and censours of pure golde. And the ynnere dozes of the place most holy, and the dozes of the temple were gold. And thus was all the worke that Salomō made for þ house of the Lord finished. And when the worke that Salomon made in the house of the Lord was finished, the Salomon brought in the giftes dedicate by Dauid his father, the syluer and the gold, & al the Iuels, and put them among the treasure of the house of God.

The fyfte Chapter.

After the storehouses and the Arke were put in the temple, the glorie of the Lord fylled the temple.

A When Salomon gathered the elders of Israel together and all the heades of the tribes and auncient Lords among the chyldzen of Israel, vnto Jerusalem: to brynge the arke of the couenaunte of the Lord forthe of the cite of Dauid whiche is zion. And al the mē of Israel resorted vnto the king in the feast of the vii. moneth. And when al the elders of Israel wer come, the Leuites toke vp the Arke, and the priestes and the Leuites broughte awape the Arke and the tabernacle of witnesse, and all the holpe vessels that were in the tabernacle. And kyng Salomon and al the congregation of Israel that wer assembled vnto hym befoze the Arke, offered sheepe and oxen, so manye that they could not be told or numbred for multitude. And the priestes broughte the arke of the appointmente of the Lord vnto hys place in the quere of the temple and place most holy: even vnder the wyngs of the Cherubes, that the Cherubs stretched oute theiꝝ wynges ouer the place of the Arke, and couered the Arke, and her stauies aboue on hygh. And the stauies of the Arke wer so long, that they wer sene a lytle befoze the quere, but not farre wpythout. And ther it remayneth vnto this dape. Moreover there was nothyng in the Arke saue the two tables, whiche Moyses put therein in Horeb, whych the Lord had wyrtten to the chyldrene of Israel, after theiꝝ comynge forth from Egypte. And when the priestes were come oute of the holpe place (for al the priestes that wer found there, sanctyfied theiꝝ selves and did not as yet at any tyme wayte by course.) But the Leuites euerpe one of theiꝝ that were vnder Asaph, Beman and Juthun, and amonge theiꝝ chyldzen and brethzen were a rapped in bysse, and sange wpyth Simbales, psalteries, and Harpes, standynge Easte frome the aulter, and wpyth them an hundre red and. xx. priestes, blowynge trompettes. And the trompet blowers and the syngers so agreed, that it seemed but one voyce in praysong & thanking the Lord. And as the voyce of the tꝛopets, Simbales & instrumēt of melody arose, * and as they praysted the Lord that he was good, and that hys mercye lasteth euer, the house of the Lord was fylled wpyth a clowde, so that the priestes coulde not endure to minister by reason of the clowde. For the glorie of the Lord had fylled the house of God.

The. vi. Chapter.

The words of Salomon to the people, and the prayer he made to God.

Then Salomon sayde: The Lord hath spoken, that he wyl dwel in darkenes. And I haue buylt an habitation for þ and a place to dwel in for euer. And þ kinge turned hys face and blessed the holpe congregation of Israel, and al the congregation of Israel stode. And he sayde: blessed be the Lord God of Israel, whiche spake wpyth hys mouthe to my father Dauid, and hath fulfilled it wpyth hys hands, for god saide: sythens the tyme I brought my people oute of the lande of Egypt, I chose no cytpe amonge all the trybes of Israel too buylde an house in, that my name myghte be there, neyther chose I anye man to be a ruler ouer my people Israel. But nowe I haue chosen Jerusalem to haue my name there, and haue chosen Dauid too be ouer my people Israel.

* And it was in the hearte of Dauid my father to buylde an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel: But the lord said to Dauid my father: for as much as it was in thyne hearte, to buylde an house for my name, thou dydest wel that thou haddest it in thyne herte. Notwpythstandynge thou shalt not buylde the house, but thy sonne whych shall issue out of thy loynes; he shall buylde an house for my name. And the Lord hath made good hys sayinge that he hath spoken. For I arose in the rowm of Dauid my father, and sate on the seate of Israel, as the Lord promysed, and haue buylt an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel. And therein I haue put the arke, wher in the couenaunte of the Lord made with the chyldzen of Israel, is. And he stept forth befoze the aulter of the Lord in the presence of al the congregation of Israel, and stretched out hys hands, for Salomon had made a brasen pulpit of. v. Cubites longe. v. cubytes broade, and thye of heigth, and had set it in the middes of the great court: vpon that he stepte and kneled downe vpon his knees befoze all the congregacion of Israel, and stretched oute hys handes to heauen and sayde: Lord God of Israel there is no God lyke the either in heauen or in earth, whych kepest couenaunte and the west mercy vnto thy seruaunts, that walk befoze the, wpyth al theiꝝ herts. Which hast kept with Dauid my father that thou promisedst hym: thou saidst it with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it wpyth thyne hande, as it is to se this dape.

Nowe Lord God of Israel kepe wpyth thy seruaunte Dauid my father, that thou

iii. Re. ii. a. and. ix. b ii. Da. vii. b prompstedest hym, saying: * thou shalt not be wythoute one or other in my syght that shall sit vpon the seate of Israel, vpon this condoption yet, if thy children wil take hede to the; wapes to walke in my law, as thou haste walked before me. Now Lorde God of Israel let thy saying be true, which thou saydest vnto thy seruaunte Dauid. Howbeit in verpe dede, can God dwel with man on earth? Beholde, neyther heauen or heauen aboue al heauens is able to contene the howe shulde the house then whych I haue buylte for the do it? But returne to the prayer of thy seruaunte and to his supplication (O Lord mi God) to herken vnto the voice and prayer whych the thy seruaunte maketh before the. That thine eyes be open ouer thys house daye and nyghte, and ouer the place of whych thou haste sayde, that thou woldeste putte thy name there: to hearken vnto the prayer, which thy seruaunte prayeth at thys place: herken therfore vnto the prayers of thy seruaunte and of thy people Israel, whych they praye in thys place. But heare thou it oute of thy dwelling place, heauen: and when thou hearest it be mercifull. * If a man synne agaynst his neyghboure, and an adiuration be layde to his charge, to adiure hym wythal, and the adiuration come before thine altier in this house: then hear thou from heuen, & worke and iudge thy seruaunts, that thou reward the euil, and bringe his way vpon his head and iustify the rightouse, and geue hym according to his rightwisnesse.

iii. re. viii. d
If a man synne agaynst his neyghboure, and an adiuration be layde to his charge, to adiure hym wythal, and the adiuration come before thine altier in this house: then hear thou from heuen, & worke and iudge thy seruaunts, that thou reward the euil, and bringe his way vpon his head and iustify the rightouse, and geue hym according to his rightwisnesse.

If heauen be shut vp, that there be no rapne, because they haue synned agaynst the, yet if they praye at thys place and confesse thy name, and turn from theyr synnes at thy scourgyng: then heare thou from heauen and be mercifull vnto the synne of thy seruautes and of thy people Israel, that thou shew them a good way to walk in, and sende rapne vpon thy lande whych thou hast geuen vnto thy people for an inheritaunce.

If there chaunce deathe in the lande, pestilence, drouthe, or mildewe, grasshoppers, or caterpillers, or that theyr enemyes besyge them in the cyties of theyr owne lande, or what soeuer plage or syknes it be. Then all the supplicatons, and prayers that shalbe made of all men amonge all thy people Israel, whiche shall knowe euery man his owne soze and his owne grief, and shal stretch out their handes toward this house: thou shalt heare from heauen thy dwelling place, and shalt be mercifull, and geue euery man according vnto al his way, even as thou shalt knowe euery mans hert (for thou onely knowest the heartes of the chyldren of Adam) that they maie feare the and walcke in thy wapes as longe as they lyue vpon the earthe, whych thou gauest to oute fathers.

Moreover a straunger whych is not of thy people Israel, if he come from a far Lande for thy greates sake, and thy myghte hande and stretched out arme, and to come and praye at thys house: thou shalt heare hym from heauen thy dwelling place, & shalt do accordyng to all that the strainger calleth to the for: that al the nationys of the earthe maye knowe thy name and feare the, as dothe thy people Israel: and that it maye bee knowne that thys house whych I haue buylte is called after thy name.

When thy people shall go oute to warre agaynst theyr enemyes the waye that thou shalt send them: If they praye to the, the way toward this cite which thou hast chosen, and house whiche I haue buylte for thy name: then heare from heauen, their supplication and prayer, and helpe them in theyr ryghte. If they shal synne agaynst the (as there is no man but that he shal synne) and thou be angrie with them and deliuer them to their enemyes, and they lead them away captiue vnto a land far or neare, yet if their hertes come to them agayne in the lande, where they be in captiuitie, and turne and praye vnto the in the land where they be in captiuitie, saying: we haue sinned and haue done euyl and wickedlye, and turne again to the wyth all theyr hertes, and all theyr soules, in the land of theyr captiuitie, wher they be kepte in bondage, and so praye toward their lande whiche thou gauest vnto theyr fathers, and cytye whiche thou haste chosen, and to thys house whych I haue built for thy name: then heare from heauen thy dwelling place, theyr supplication and prayers, and iudge theyr cause, and be mercifull vnto thy people, though they haue synned agaynst the. So now mi God let thine eyes be open and thine eares attent vnto the prayers made in this place. And now therfore arise Lorde God in thy resting place, both þ, and the arkce of thy strength, and let thy priests put on victorie, & thy saintes reioyse in goodnes. And Lorde God turne not awai þ face of thine anointed. But remembre the mercies promised to Dauid thy seruaunte.

The. vii. Chapter.

The fyre consumed the Sacrefyce. The Lorde appeareth to Salomon the second time.

into the house of the Lord, because the gloire of the Lord had filled the house of the Lord. And all the children of Israel sawe howe the fyre came downe, and the gloire of the Lord vpon the house, and stouped wth thei<sup>r</sup> faces to the earth vpon the pavement, and bowed them selues, and confessed vnto the Lord, that he was good, and that his mercy lasted euer.

And the kinge and all the people offered offerings before the Lord. So that king Salomon offered. xxi. thousande oxen, and an hundred and twentye thousande shepe. And so the kyng and all the people hallowed the house of God. And the priestes way-ted on their offices, and the Levites with in-strumetes of musike of the Lord whiche king David made to confesse vnto the Lord that his mercy lasteth euer, when David all Israel stode. Moreover Salomon halorynges, because the brasen aulter whiche Salomon hadde made, was not able to receyue the burnte offerynges and the meat-offerings, and the fat.

And Salomon kepte a feast the same season of seven dayes, and all Israel wth hym, an excedyng greate congregatyon, euen from Demath vnto the riuier of Egypt.
And the eighte day they made a gathering.

Salomon synysed the house of the Lord: and the kynges house, and all that came in hys heart, to make in the house of the Lord and in his own house & that prosperously.

iii. Re. ix. a.

And the Lord appeared to Salomon by nyghte and sayde to hym, I haue heard thy petition and haue chosen this place for my selfe, to be an house of sacrifyce.
Moreover if I shut vp heauen that ther be no raygne, or if I commaunde the grasshoppers to deuoure the lande, or if I sende pestilence amonge my people, yet if my people that are named after my name, shall humble them selves and make intercession and seke my presence, and turne from their wicked wayes, then wyl I heare from heauen, and be merciful to thei<sup>r</sup> synnes, and wyl heale thei<sup>r</sup> lande. Furthermore myne eyes shall be open and myne eares attente vnto the prayers made in this place. And synallye, I haue chosen and sanctified this house that my name bee there fore-be there perpetuallye.

And if thou walte walcke before me as David thy father walked, to do accorde to all that I commaunded, and shalt kepe myne ordinaunces and my lawes: then wil

I stablish the seate of thy kingdome, ac-

David thy father, sayinge: * Thou shalt haue euer one or other that shall rule in Is-geuen thei<sup>m</sup>, and * wyl caste this house whiche I haue sanctified for my name out of my syghte, and wyl make a proverbe and a tale of it amonge all Natyons.

And this house that is so hyghe, shall bee a wonder to all that passeth thereby, that they shall saye: Why hath the Lord dealt on this fashion wth this land, and wth this house? And it shall be answered them: because they forsoke the Lord God of thei<sup>r</sup>

The. viii. Chapter.

The cities that Salomon builded after the house of God, was synysed.

After twentye yeres when Salomon had builded the house of the Lord and his owne house: he builded the cities that Hiram gaue him and put certayne of the children of Israel in them. And Salomon wente to Demath, Tobah, and strengthened it. And he builded Thadmor in the wydernesse and all the store cities whiche he builded in Demath and he built Bethhoron the upper, and Bethhoron the nether, and made them stronge cities with wals, gates and barres. And Baalah and all the store cities that Salomon had, and all the charette cities, and the cities of horsmen, & all that Salomon had luste to builde in Ierusalem and Libanon, and thowowt all the lande of his dominion.

And all the people that were left of the Bethites, Amozites, Pherezites, Heuites and Jebusites, which wer not of the children of Israel: euen the children of them whiche were left after them in the lande and were not consumed of the children of Israel, dyd Salomon make tributaries vnto this daye. But of the children of Israel did Salomon make no bondmenne in hys woorkes: but they were men of warre and rulers and greate Lordes wth hym:
and capytaynes ouer hys charrets, and horsmen: And kyng Salomons officers that ouer saw and ruled the people, wer two hundred and fyfthe.

And Salomon brought the doughter of Pharao out of the city of David into the house that he had made for her. For he sayde: my wyfe shall not dwel in the house of Dauid kyng of Israel, for it is holy, because the arcke of the Lord came into it.

And

And from thence forth Salomon offered burnt offerings vnto the Lord on the altar of the Lord, which he had built before the portche to offer day by day, accordyng to the commaundemente of Moyses, and in the Sabbothes and newe mones, and the thre solempne feastes of the yere, the feaste of sweate breade, the feaste of wekes, and the feaste of boothes.

And Salomon assigned the priestes euerie man to his office, as David his father had ordered them, and the Leuites vnto their office, for to prayse and mynstrel before the priestes day by day, and the porters by course at euery gate. For so had David the man of God commaunded. And the commaundement of the king vnto the priestes and the Leuites concerning whatsoeuer cause it was, and concerning the treasures, was not disobeyed.

And al the worke of Salomon wente well forwarde euen from the daye that the foundation of the house of the Lord was layde, tyll he had fynished it, that the house of the Lord was perfected. And then went kynge Salomon to Azion Gaber, and too cloth and to the seaces syde in the lande of Edom. And Hiram sent hym by the hande of his seruauntes, shippes and seruauntes that coulde skill of the sea: Whiche wente wyth the seruauntes of Salomon to Ophir and broughte thence foure hundreded and fyfthe talentes of golde, and brought it to kynge Salomon.

The. ix. Chapter.

The communication of Salomon wyth the quene of Saba, and the gyftes that the one gaue the other. The deathe of Salomon: after whome succeedeth Roboam.

AND the quene of Saba hearde of the fame of Salomon and came to proue hym with riddels at Jerusalem wyth a berpe greate companie, and wyth Camelles that bare swete odoures, and plenti of golde and precious stone. And when she was come to Salomon, she communed with him of al that was in her herte. And Salomon copled her all her questyons, that ther was nothyng he had frome Salomon, whyche he tolde her not.

And when the quene of Saba had seene the wysdome of Salomon and the house that he had buylte, and the meate of hys table and the syttinge of hys seruauntes, and the standyng of hys wapters, and theyr apparell, and hys buttelaes wyth theyr apparell, and hys parloure, oute of which he went into the house of the Lord, she was so astonied that ther was no more herte in her.

And then she sayde to the king: the saying whiche I heard in mine owne lande, of thyne actes and of thy wysdome, is truthe. But I beleued not the wordes of them, vntyll I came and myne eyes hadde seene it. And lo, the one halfe of thy wysdome was not tolde me: thou exceedest the fame that I hearde, happye are thy men, and happye are these thy seruauntes whiche stande before the alwaye and heare thy wysdome. Blessed be the Lord thy God which had lust to the, to make the king on his seate, vnto the Lord thy God. Because thy God loued Israel, to make them continue euer, therfore made he the kynge ouer them too doo righte and equitie.

And she gaue the kinge an hundreded and xx. talentes of golde, and of swete odoures exceedinge greate aboundaunce with precious stones, that there was no suche swete odoures as the quene of Saba gaue kynge Salomon.

And moreouer the seruauntes of Hiram and the seruauntes of Salomon whiche broughte golde from Ophir, broughte also Algume woode and precious stones. And the kinge made of the Algume woode steyres in the house of the Lord, and in the kynges palace, and harpes and psalteries for singers. And there was no suche woode sene before in the lande of Iuda. And kynge Salomon gaue to the Quene of Saba al her desyre that she asked aboue that she broughte vnto the kynge. And so she turned and went away to her own land wyth her seruauntes.

The summe of golde that came to Salomon yere by yere, was fyre hundreded. lxxvi. talentes of golde, besides that whiche chapmen and marchauntes broughte and all the kynges of Arabia, and Dukes of countreies broughte goulde and syluer to Salomon.

And kynge Salomon made two hundred buckelars of golde. vi. hundred cycles of beaten goulde to a buckelar: and three hundred shylles of beaten goulde, three hundred cycles of goulde to a shylde, and he putte them in the house of the forreste of Libanon.

And the kynge made a greate seate of Iuorpe, and ouerlapde it with pure golde. And ther was fyre steyres to the seate with a fote stole of golde fastned to the seate: and pomels on ech side of the sitting place, and ii. lions standyng by the pomelles. And. xii. lions stode on the one side and on the other vpon fyre steyres, that there were no suche in anye kyngedome.

And all the drynke vessels of kynge Salomon wer golde, and all the vessels of the house of the forreste of Libanon, were pure gold, and as for siluer, it was counted nothyng worthe in the dayes of Salomon. For the kynges shippes wente to Tharshis with the seruauntes of Hiram euerie thre yere once. And the shippes of Tharshis brought gold, siluer, the tethe of Elephants apes and peacockes.

And kynge Salomon passed al the kynges of the earth in riches and wysdome. And all the kynges of the earth soughte the presence of Salomon, to hear the wise dome that God had put in hys herte. And they

they brought euery man his present in vessels of syluer, and vessels of gold, and raiment, harness, sweete odoures, horses and mules, pere by pere.

And Salomon had four thousand mangers of horses, and charettes for them, and xii. thousande horsemen. And he bestowed them in the charet cities, & wpyth the kynge at Ierusalem. And he raygned ouer all the kinges from Euphrates, vnto the lande of the Philistines, and so to the borders of Egypt. * And the king made syluer in Ierusalem as plenteous as stones, and Cedar trees as plenteous as the Quiberpe trees that growe in the valeys. And Salomon had horses broughte him oute of Egypt, and oute of all landes.

* The reste of the actes of kynge Salomon both fyrst and last, are wyrtten in the booke of Nathan the prophete, and in the prophesy of Abiah the Silonite, and in the visions of Iadi the sear of visions against Ieroboam the sonne of Nabat. And when Salomon had raygned in Ierusalem vpon all Israell .xl. yeres, he layde hym too rest with his fathers, and was buryed in the cite of Dauid his father, and Roboam hys sonne raygned in hys stede.

The .x. Chapter.

The folynesse of Roboam, and the deuision of his realme.

iii. Reg. xii. a

And Roboam went to Sichem: for to Sichem were all Israell come to make hym kynge. And when Ieroboam the sonne of Nabat beinge in Egypte hearde it (for he was fled for feare of Salomon the kinge) he retourned oute of Egypte. And they sente and called hym. And so Ieroboam and all Israell came and comuned wpyth Roboam and sayde. Thy father made vs a greuous poke: but remitte thou somewhat of the greuous serupce of thy father, and of his heuie poke that he put vpon vs, and we wpyll serue the. And he sayde too them: come agayn after thre daies to me. And the people departed.

And kynge Roboam counselled wpyth the elders that stode befoze Salomon hys father whyle he lyued, and sayde: What counsell gyue ye me, to aunswere this people agayne? And they tolde hym sayinge, if thou shalte bee kynde too thys people and please them, and shalt speake lounge wordes to them, they wil be thy seruants for euer. But he left the counsel whych the elders gaue him, and toke counsell wpyth the ponge menne that were nourshed by wpyth hym, and hadde stande in his presence, and sayde to them: What aduple gyue ye, that I may answer this people whych haue comuned with me, sayinge: Abate somewhat of the poke which thy father did put vpon vs.

And the ponge men that were nourshed by wpyth hym, talked wpyth hym, sayinge, thus answered the people that spake to the, sayinge. Thy father made oure poke heauye: But make thou oure poke somewhat lyghter. Thus wise aunswere them: say lytle spnger shalbe heauyer then my fathers loynes. * For where my father putte a heauye poke vpon you, I wpyll put more thereto, and where my father chastised you with whippes, I wpyll chastice you with Scorpions. Howe when Ieroboam and all Israell were come the thyrde day, as the kynge had sayinge: come agayne to me the thyrde day, the kynge aunswere theym cruellpe: for kynge Roboam leste the counsell of the aged menne, and aunswere them after the aduise of the ponge menne, sayinge: if my father haue made your poke greuous, I wpyll adde thereto, and where my father chastised you with whippes, I wpyll chastice you with Scorpions.

And so the kynge harkened not vnto the people, for the turning away was of God; that the Lord myghte make good hys sayinge whiche he spake by the hande of Ahiah the Silonite, to Ieroboam the sonne of Nabat. And when all Israell sawe that the kynge woulde not heare them, the people aunswere the kynge sayinge: what parte haue we with Dauid, or enheritaunce with the sonne of Iesai: let euery manne of Israell go to hys tente. And now Dauid se to thyne owne house.

And thereupon all Israell gatte them to thepyntes, so that Roboam raygned ouer no mo of the children of Israell then dwelte in the ctytes of Iuda. When kynge Roboam sente too theym Haduram that was ouer the trybute, and the chyldren of Israell stoned hym wpyth stones that he dyed. But kynge Roboam made spede & gate him by to his charette to fle to Ierusalem. And so Israell departed from the house of Dauid vnto this dape.

The .xi. Chapter.

Roboam is forbidden to fight against Ieroboam. He hath .xviii. wyues and .iii. score concubines: and by them viii. and twenty sonnes, and .iii. score daughters.

And when Roboam was come to Ierusalem, he gathered of the house of Dauid Ben Iamin to the number of nine score. Chosen men of war to fight wpyth Israell, for to byrge the kyngdome agayne to Roboam. But the worde of the Lord came to Semeiah the ma of God, sayng: speake to Roboam the sonne of Salomon king of Iuda, and to all Israell that are in Iuda, and to Ben Iamin, and saye: thus sayeth the Lorde. Be not, nor fyghte wpyth your brethren, but retorne euery man to hys house, for this thpyng is done of me. And they obeyed the wordes of the Lorde, and returned fro goyng agaynst Ieroboam.

And Roboam dwelt in Ierusalem, and buylt strong cities in Iuda: as Bethlehem, Etam, and Thekua, Bethsur, Socho, and Odollam: Beth, Marelah and ziph: Aduraim, Lachis and Ascalah: zarah, Aialon and Hebron, whych were the stronge ctytes of Iuda and Ben Iamin. And when he hadde repay repayred suche stronge cityes; he put captarnes in them, and store of vntaple, and of oyle, and of wine. And he ordeined in al cities shieldes and speres, and made them excedinge stronge. And so Iuda and Ben Jamin were vnder him.

And the priestes and the Lewites that were in all Israell resorted to hym oute of all theyr coastes. In so muche that the Le-uites left their suburbs and possessiouns and came to Iuda and Ierusalem: for Jeroboam and his sonnes had caste them out from ministringe vnto the Lorde. * And he ordeyned hym priestes of hill alters, bothe to spelde deupples, and also too the calues whych he had made. And after them there came of all the trybes of Israell (suche as they herres moued them to seke the Lorde God of Israell) to Ierusalem to offer vnto the Lorde God of theyr fathers, and so they strengthened the kingdome of Iuda, & made Roboam the sonne of Salomon myghty. iii. perelög: for. iii. yere they walked in the way of Dauid and Salomon.

And Roboam toke hym Mahalah the doughter of Jerimoth the sonne of Dauid to wife. And Abihail the doughter of Eliab the sonne of Ithai, which bare him chyldren: Jeus, Samariah & Zaham. And after her, he toke Maacah the doughter of Abisai, whiche bare him Abiah, Ethai, Ziza and Salumi. But Roboam loued Maacah the doughter of Abisai aboue al his other wiues and concubines, for he toke. xviii. to his wives, and. iii. score concubines, and begat thre score doughters, and eyght and twen-tye sonnes. And Roboam made Abiah the sonne of Maacah the chiefe ruler amonge his brethren, for to make hym kynge. And he played a wyse parte, and scattered of al hys chylidren thowhe oute al the countres of Iuda and Ben Iamin in euerie stronge cite. And he gaue them aboundaunce of vntaple, and asked manye wyues.

The. xii. Chapter.

Sesac kynge of Egypt robbeth the temple of the Lorde. Roboam dyeth, and Abiah his sonne succeedeth hym.

And when Roboam hadde stablished the kyngedome and made it stronge, he forsoke the law of the Lorde, and all Israell wyth hym: * Wherefore the fyfte yere of kynge Ro-boam, Sesac the kynge of Egypte came vp agaynst Ierusalem (because they hadde trespassed agaynst the Lorde) with twelue hundred charettes, and thre score thousand horsemen. And the people were without nū-ber that came with him forth of Egypte:
wyth them of Libia, and the * Succites, and the blackemozes. And they tooke the strong ctytes that were in Iuda, and came to Ierusalem.

Then came Semeiah the prophete too Roboam, and to the Lordes of Iuda that wer gathered to Ierusalem for feare of Se-sac and sayed to them: thus sayth the lord:

Ye haue left me, and therefore will I leaue you also in the handes of Sesac. Where-vpon the Lordes of Israell and the kynge humbled them selues, and sayde: the Lorde is ryghteous. And when the Lorde sawe that they submitted them selues, the word of the Lorde came too Semeiah, sayinge:
they meke them selues, and therefore I wyl not destroye them. But I will deliuer them sumwhat, and my wraethe shall not fall vpon Ierusalem. Neuerthelesse they shall be hys seruauntes, to knowe what difference is betwene my serupce and the serupce of the kynngdomes of other landes. So Sesac kynge of Egypte came to Ierusalem, and toke awaye the treasures of the house of the Lorde, and the treasures of the kings house and whate he toke all. And he toke also the shieldes of gold which Salomon made.
In stede of which king Roboam made shieldes of brasse, and puttethem in the keppinge of the capptarnes of hys garde, whiche way-ted in the gate of the kynnges house. And as ofte as the kynge wente too the house of the Lorde, the garde wente and sette themy, and broughte theym agayne vnto the garde chamber. And so because he humbled hym selfe, the wraethe of the Lorde turned from hym, and destroyed not al together. And mozeouer there were manye good yet in Iuda.

So kynge Roboam wared myghty in Ierusalem and raygned. And Roboam was one. xl. yeres olde when he was made king, & he raygned. xvi. yeres in Ierusalem, the cty which the Lorde had chosen oute of al the tribes of Israell, to put his name ther.
His mothers name was Maamah, an Am-monite. * And he did euill, for he prepared not his hert to seke the Lorde.

The actes of Roboam fyrst and last, are wyrtten in the sayinges of Semeiah the prophete, and of Ado the sear of vntaples so muche as they recorde hys genealogye and the perpetuall warre that was be-twene Roboam and Ieroboam durynge theyr lyfe. And Roboam layde hym to slepe wyth hys fathers, and was buryed in the cptye of Dauid, and Abiah hys sonne rayg-ned in hys stede.

he raygned. iii. yeres in Ierusalem. His rael to David for ever: even to him, and to hys sonnes, wyth a salted covenant: But Jeroboam the sonne of Nabatte, the seruaunte of Salomon, the sonne of Dauid rebelled against the Lord. And ther yathered to hym fewde men and outbristes and preuayled agaynst Jeroboam the sonne of Salomon: for Jeroboam was ponge and te-der berred, and not strong ynough for the.

And now yet hyke to preuayle agaynst the kyngdome of the Lorde in the hande of the sonnes of Dauid, bycause ye be a great multytude, and haue wyth you the golden calues whych Jeroboam made you for god-des. And haue ye not caste oute the priestes of the Lorde the sonnes of Aaron, and the Leuites, and haue made you priestes lyke the nations of other landes: even whosoeuer cometh and consecrateth bys hande wyth an ore, and seuen rams, the same is made priest to them that are no gods.

But wyth vs is the Lord our God whom we haue not forsaken, and the priestes of the sonnes of Aaron mynystre vnto the Lord, & the Leuites in their office burnyng to the Lord euery mornynge and euery euen, burntofferings, and sweete incense: and the shewbread put in order vpon a pure table and the candel stycke of gold, wyth the lam-pes of the same, to be lyght euery euen. For we keepe the watche of the Lord our God.
But ye haue forsaken hym. Moreover, behold, God is wyth vs in the foreward, and his priestes and the sounge trompettes to crye alarum agaynst you. Ye chyldren of Israell fyght not wyth the Lord God of your fathers: for it wyl not prosper wyth you. But for al that, Jeroboam sente men pryuelpe aboute to come behynde vpon the and so they were before Juda, and the layers in wayte were behynde them. And whē Juda tourned and saw the battaile behynd and before they cryed vnto the Lord, and the priests blew the trompettes, and the mē of Juda gaue a shout. And as the men of Juda shouted, God smote Jeroboam and all Israell before Abia and Juda. And the chyldren of Israell fled before Juda & the lord deliuered the into the handes of Juda.
And Abia & his people slew a great slaughter of the: so that ther were styken downe of Israell: fyue hundred thousande chosen men. And so the chyldren of Israell were broughte vnder at that tyme, and the chyldren of Juda preuayled, bycause they leaned vnto the Lord God of their fathers.
And Abia folowed after Jeroboam, and wa-certayne cytyes from hym: Bethelle wyth townes belöpyng thereto, and Ephraim wyth her townes. And Jeroboam recovered not strenght again in the dayes of Abia. At last the Lord plagued hym that he dyed.

And Abia wared myghtye, and toke him fourtene wyues, and begatte two and twentye sonnes, and syretene doughters.
The rest of the actes of Abia, and his waies and doynges, are written in the hy storie of the prophete Asa. And when Abia was laid to slepe wyth his fathers, they buryed hym in the cytye of Dauid. And Asa hys sonne raygned in his steece. In whole dayes the lande was quyet ten yeres..

The xiiii. Chapter.

Abia dyeth, after whom succedeth Asa.

And Asa did that was good & righte in the eyes of the Lord hys God, and toke away the altars of strangers, and the hyll altars, and brake the images, and cut downe the groues, and commanded Juda to seke the Lord God of their fathers, and to do accordynge to the lawe and commaundemente. And he put a way out of al the cytyes of Juda, the hyll altars, and the idoles: for the kyngdome was quyet before hym. And he builde stronge cities in Juda, because the land was in rest, and he had no warre in those yeres. For the Lord hadde geuen hym reste.

And therfore he sayd to Juda: let vs buyld these cytyes, and compasse theym with walles and towres, gates and bars, whyle we haue the land quyet. For we haue sought the lord our god: & because we haue sought him, he hath geuen vs reste on euery syde.
And so they buyld and prospered. And Asa had an army that bare shild and speare, oue of Juda: thre hundred thousande, and oue of Beniamyn that bare shilde and drewe bowes, two hundred and foure scoze thousand, and were al strong men.

And there came oute agaynst them Zatab the Moorian, with an hooft of ten hundred thousande, and thre hundred chartes, and came as farre as Marcasa. And Asa went out to hym, and they put in aray to battaile in the valey of Zephatah besyde Marcasa. And Asa cryed vnto the Lord his god, and sayd: Lord it is all one wyth the,
to helpe the: I haue no power with fewe, or wyth manye: helpe vs O Lord our God, for we truste to the, and in thyne name wee be come agaynst this multytude. Thou art the Lord our God, let not men pre-uayle agaynst the. And the Lord smote the blacke Moores before Asa and Juda, that they fled. And Asa and the people that was wyth hym persued them as farre as Berer. And the blacke Moores were ouerthro-wen, that there remained none aloue of the but were destroyed of the Lord, and of hys host, they caried also a myghty great pray.
And they smote al the cytyes round about Berat. For the leare of the Lord came vpon them, and they robbed all the cytyes, for ther was excedynge muche to be robbed in them. Furthermoze they smote the tences of the cartell, and caried away plentye of shepe, and camelles, and so returned to Ierusalem.

The xv. Chapter.

Asa by the monytron of the prophete Azaria after he had put downe the idoles.

Asa. I. I. I.

Sacrificeth to the Lorde. He depyrueth hys mother of her domayon.

And the spirit of God came on Azaria the sonne of Obed. And he wente oute agaynst Asa, and sayed to hym: heare me Asa and al Juda, and Beniamin. The Lorde is wyth you whyle ye be wyth hym, and if ye shal seke hym, he wyl be folowd of you: but if ye shall forsake hym, he wyl forsake you.

There wyl come many dayes in Israel, in whiche there shall be no true God, nor priest that teacheth, nor anye lawe. And in theyr tribulacion they shall turne vnto the Lorde God of Israel, and shall seke hym, and hee shall be founde of them. And in those dayes there shall be no peace to the that goo oute and in. But greateser acyon on euery syde vpon the inhabytours of all landes. For one nacion shall destroye another, and one ctyte another: for God wyl bere them wyth all aduersyte. But plucke you vp your hertes, and let not your handes fayne, for your workes shall be rewarded. When Asa heard these words and the prophesy of Azaria the sonne of Obed the prophete, he roke courage and put awaye the abhominacions oute of all the land of Juda and Beniamyn, and oute of the cities which he wane in mounte Ephraim, and renued the altier of the Lorde, that was before the porche of the Lorde. And he gathered all Juda and Beniamyn and the strangers wyth them oute of Ephraim, Manasses, and Simeon. For theyr fell manye to hym oute of Israel, when they sawe that God was wyth hym. And they assembled at Jerusalem the thyrde moneth of the fyrst yere of the raygne of Asa. And they offered vnto the Lorde the same tyme of the spoyle whiche they had broughte, seven hundred oxen, and seven thousande shepe. Then they made a couenaunt to seke the Lorde God of their fathers, wyth all theyr hertes, and all their soules: so that all that sought not the Lord God of Israel, shoulde dye for it, whether they were smalle or greates, man or woman.

And they swaie vnto the Lorde wyth a loude voyce and shawtyng, and wyth trumpettes and hornes. And all Juda reioysed in the oth, for they had sworn wyth all their hertes, and soughte him wyth all theyr lust, and he was founde of them. And the Lorde gaue them rest roundabout. Furthermore kynge Asa put Maacah hys mother oute of authoryte, because she hadde made an ydol in a groue: and brake downe her ydol and stampit it and burnt it by the brake Cedron. But they put not the byllasters out of Israel: neuertheless the herte of Asa was pure all hys lyfe. And he broughte in to the house of God the dedicate gyfts whiche he and his father had dedicate, in gold, syluer, and other iewelless. And there was no more warre vnto the spye and thyrty yere of the raygne of Asa.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Asa for feare of Baasa kynge of Israel, maketh a couenaunt with Behadad kynge of Siria.

In the. xxxvi. yere of the raygne of Asa came Baasa kynge of Israel agaynst Juda, and buylte Ramah, to the entente he woulde let none that pertayneth to Asa kynge of Juda haue passage in and oute. Wherevpon Asa set syluer and golde forth of the treasures of the house of the Lorde, and of the kynges house, and sent it to Behadad kynge of Siria, that dwelte at Damascus, and sayed. Ther is a leage betwene the, and me, and so was betwene my father and thynne, wherfore I haue sente the syluer and golde, that thou goo and make thynne appoyntement wyth Baasa kynge of Israel, that he maye departe from me. And Behadad graunted vnto kynge Asa, and sent the captaynes of his army agaynst the ctytes of Israel. And they beate Aron, Dan, Abelmaim, and all the store ctytes of Nephtaly. But when Baasa heard thys, he lette buyldynge of Ramah and lette his worke cease. And then Asa the kynge toke all Juda, and caried awaye the stones and tymber of Ramah, wherwyth Baasa was a buyldynge: and he buylte therewyth Baaba and Gazphah.

At that same tyme Hanani, the sear, came to Asa kynge of Juda, and sayde to him: because thou trustest in the kynge of Siria, and trustest not in the Lorde thy God, therefore is the hooft of the kynge of Syria, escaped oute of thynne hande. Were not the blacke Mores and they of Libya a greates hoste, wyth exceeding manye charrettes and horsemen? And yet because thou trustedst in the Lorde, he deliuered them into thynne handes. For the eyes of the Lorde bebold al the earthe, to strengthe the hertes of them that are hole wyth hym. Were in thou haste done foly wyse, and therfore from henceforth thou shalt haue war. Wherevpon Asa was wroth wyth the sear, and put hym in pryson, for he was dyspleased wyth hym because of that. Moreover Asa oppressed certayne of the people the same season.

The deades of Asa bothe styll and laste are wyrtten in the booke of the kynges of Juda and Israel. And the. xxxix. yere of hys raygne, Asa fell speke of his feete, and that hys disease exceded. And besyde thys in hys spekenesse he asked no counsel of the Lorde, but of phisycons. And at the last Asa fell in slepe wyth hys fathers, and dyed whiche he had reigned one and forty yere. And they buried him in his owne sepulchre whiche he had made in the ctyte of Dauid, and layde him in the bed whiche he had filled wyth swete odours of dyuers kyndes, made by the crafte of the potecaryes. And they byd excedynge greates coste about buyldynge of hym.

seth the feare of the Lorde to be renewed among the people.

And Josaphat his son reigned in his stede, & became mightier then Israel. And he put souldiours in all the cityes of Juda, and set rulers both in the lande of Juda, and also in the cityes of Ephraim, which Asa his father had wonne. But the lord was with Josaphat, because he walcked in the olde wayes of his father David, and sought not Baals: But sought the Lorde God of his fathers, and walcked in hys commaundementes, and not after the doynges of Israel. Therefore the Lord stablished the kyngdome in hys hande, and all Judabroughte hym presentes, that he became excedyng ryche & gloriouse. And his herte was coragious in the wayes of the Lord, and he put downe yet mo of the hil aulters and groues oute of Juda.

In the thyrde yere of hys reygne he sent of his Lordes, Benhail, Abdiab, zachariah, Nathanael, and Mychaah to reache in the cityes of Juda: and with them Semetab, Nathanab, zabadiab, Asahell, Semiramoth, Jonathan, Adoniah, Thobysab, and Thobodonpah, Leuytes: and with theym Elisama and Joram prestes. And they taughte in Juda, and had the boke of the lawe with them, and wente about the towne coute all the cityes of Juda & taughte the people. And the feare of the Lorde fell upon all the kingdomes of the landes that were round about Juda, that they durste not warre with Josaphat. And the Philistynes broughte Josaphat gyftes and tribute sylver. And thereto the Arabians brought him of shepe, seven thousande and seven hundred Rammes, and seven thousande, and seven hundred he goates. And so Josaphat prospered and grewe up on hyghe. And he buylte in Juda castelles, and store cytyes, and had greate substance in the cytyes of Juda, and syghyng men, and men of myghte in Jerusalem.

And this is the order in the houses of these fathers of the captaynes ouer thousandes in Juda: Ednah the captayne, and with hym of syghyng men, three hundred thousand. And next to hym Johanan a captaine, and with him two hundred and four score thousande. And by hys syde Amazias the sonne of zechi wyllyng unto the Lord, and with him two hundred thousand myghy men. And of the chyldren of Ben Jamin, Eljada was a man of myghte, and had with hym armed with bowes and shylde two hundred thousande. And by hys syde Josabad, with whome were an hundred and foure score thousande turnysed for war. These wayted on the kyng, besydes those which the kyng had put in stronge cytyes to coute oute all Juda.

After Achab had asked counsell of the foure hundred prophets, he putteth Michas in prayson. He dyeth with the shote of an arrow.

And Josaphat became very ryche and glorious, and loyned a yauce with Achab. And after certayne yeres, he wente downe to Achab to Samaria. And Achab shewe shepe & oxen pleceously for hym, and for the people that came with hym, and intreated hym to go by unto Ramoth in Galaad. And Achab kyng of Israel sayd to Josaphat kyng of Juda: wilt thou go with me to Ramoth in Galaad? And he answered hym: I wyll be as thou, and my people shal be as thyne, and wee wyll bee with the in the warres. And so Josaphat sayd unto the kyng of Israel: aske I pray the, the worde of the Lorde. And the kyng of Israel gathered together of the prophetes. iiii. hundred men, and sayed unto them: shall we goo to Ramoth in Galaad to syghte, or shall I cease? And they sayed, goo: the Lord shal deliuer it into the kynges hande. And Josaphat sayed: Is there yet here neuer a prophet more of the Lord that wee myght aske of hym? And the kyng of Israel sayde to Josaphat: there is yet one, to aske the Lorde by hym: But I hate hym, for he neuer prophesyeth me good, but alwaye euill, one Mycheas the sonne of Jemla. And Josaphat sayed: let not the kyng say so. Then the kyng of Israel called one of his chaberbaines, & said: fetch hither quickly Mycheas the sonne of Jemla. And the kyng of Israel, and Josaphat kyng of Juda, sate eyther of them on hys seate on theyr apparelle, in a thershyng floure besyde the gate of Samaria, and all the prophetes prophesyng before them. And one Sedechias the sonne of Chanania, made hym hornes of syron, and sayde, thus sayeth the Lorde: with these thou shalt punish Siria, vntill thou hast broughte them to nought. And all the prophetes prophesied euen so, sayinge: go vp to Ramoth in Galaad and prosper, for the Lorde shal deliuer it into the hande of the kyng. And the messenger that went to call Mycheas, spake to hym, sayinge: beholde the wordes of the prophetes are pleasaunte to the kyng with one assente, let thy wordes I praye the, be lyke one of theys, and speke that which is pleasaunt. And Mycheas sayde: as trulpe as the Lord lyueth, euen what my God sayth, that wyll I speake. And when he was come to the kyng, the kyng sayed to hym: Mycheas, shall we go to Ramoth in Galaad to syghte, or shall I be in reste? And he answered: *go ye and prosper, for the Lord shal deliuer it into your handes. But the kyng sayed to hym: how often times shal I adiure thee thou say nothyng but truthe to me in the name of the Lorde.

Then he sayed: I see all Israel scattered in the mountaynes, as shepe that haue no shepherd. And the Lorde sayed: these haue kyng, as ye no master, let them retorne euerye man to his house in peace. Then sayde the kyng of Israell to Iosaphat: dyd I not tell the that he woulde not prophesye good vnto me, but euill? And he answered, therefore heare ye the woorde of the Lorde. I sawe the Lorde sytte vpon hys seate, and all the compaigne of heauen standynge on hys ryght hande and on his lefte. And the Lorde sayde: who shall deceyue Achab kynge of Israell, that he may go and bee ouerthrowen at Ramoth in Galaad? And whyle one sayde thus, and an other that, there came out a spirite and stode before the Lorde, and sayd: I will dysceyue hym. And the Lorde sayde vnto hym, how? And he sayde: I will go oute, and will be a lynginge spirite in the mouth of all the prophetes. And the Lorde sayde, thou shalt deceyue hym, and shalt preuaile, goo out and do euen so. And now beholde the Lorde hath put a lynginge spirite in all the mouthes of these thy prophetes, and yet the Lorde hath spoken euill against the. And Sedechias the sonne of Canana went and smote Mycheas vpon the cheke and sayd: by what waye wente the spirite of the Lorde frome me, to speake in the? And Mycheas sayde: Thou shalt see the daye when thou shalt runne from chamber to chambere for to hyde thy selfe. Then sayd the kynge of Israell: take ye Mycheas and deliuer hym to Amon the gouernoure of the cite, and to Hoas the kinges sonne, and saye, thus sayeth the kynge: put this felowe in pryson, and fede hym with bread of sorowe, and water of trouble, til I come agayne in peace. And Mycheas sayde: if thou come agayne in peace, then hath not the Lorde spoken in me. And Mycheas saied mozeouer: harken ye people euerie one of you. And so the kynge of Israell and Iosaphat the kynge of Iuda went vp to Ramoth in Galaad. Then sayd the kynge of Israell to Iosaphat: I will change my clothes and gette me to battayle, but se thou haue thine owne apparell vpon the. And the kynge of Israell chaunged hym selfe, and they wente to battaile. But the kinge of Siria commaunded the capytaynes of hys charrettes, sayinge: se ye fyghte not agaynst smalle or greate saue agaynst the kynge of Israell only.

And when the capytaynes of the charrets sawe Iosaphat, they had thoughte he had ben the kynge of Israell, and therefore compassed hym, to fyghte. But Iosaphat cryed oute, and the Lorde holpe hym, and God tourned them awaye from hym. For when the capytaynes of the charrettes perceyued that it was not the kynge of Israell, they tourned back againe fro hym. And a certain man drewe his bow at auenture, and smote the kinge of Israell betwene the ioyntes of hys habergeyne. And he sayde to the charret man, toune thine hande, and carpe me oute of the hooke, for I am hurte. And the battayle was sore that daye. Howebeit the kynge of Israell continued standing in hys charrettes agaynst the Syrians vnto tyll euen. And aboute the sunne goynge downe, he dyed.

The. xix. Chapter.

After Iosaphat was rebuked of the prophet Jehu, he called agayne the people to the honouringe of the Lorde God.

Then Iosaphat kynge of Iuda, returned to hys house safe and sound to Jerusalem. And Jehu the sonne of Baanani the sear, went out agaynst hym, and sayd to kynge Iosaphat: oughtest thou to helpe the wycked, and to loue the that hate the Lorde? For this cause is the wrath of the Lorde vpon the. Neuerthelesse ther are good thynges founde in the, in that thou haste put awaye the consecrate groues out of the lande, and hast prepared thine herte to seke God. And as Iosaphat dwelte at Jerusalem, he wente agayne amonge the people from Bersabe to mounte Ephraim, and broughte theym agayne vnto the Lorde God of theyr fathers. And he sette iudges in the land, thorowout al the stronge cities of Iuda, cite by cite, and saied to the iudges: take hede what ye do, for ye be not iudges in the law of man, but of God, whiche is with you in the wordes of the lawe. Wherefore let the feare of the Lorde be with you, & take hede and do it. For there is no vnpowrfulnesse in the Lorde our God. *nor regardynge of personnes, nor takynge of rewardes. Mozeouer in Jerusalem did Iosaphat appoynte certayne of the Leuites of the priestes, and of the auncient heades of Israell, ouer the customes of the Lorde, and causes of stryfe.

Whiche done, they returned to Jerusalem And he charged them, sayinge: doo euen so in the feare of the Lorde, wyth truth & pure hert. And what so euer come to you of your brethren that dwel in their cities, betwene bloude and bloude, lawe, commaundement ordynaunces and custumes: see ye warne theym that they trespase not agaynst the Lorde, leaste wrath come vpon you, and on your brethren. Thus doo, and ye shall not offende. And se here Amariah the pryeste, whiche is heade ouer you in al matters of the Lorde, and zababab, the sonne of Ismael, a ruler in the house of Iuda, he is ouer al causes concernynge the kynge, wyth officers of the Leuytes before you. Take courage to you, and go vpon it, and the Lorde shall be wyth the good.

The. xx. Chapter.

The meruelouse victorie that the Lorde gaue Iosaphat kynge of Iuda agaynst the Moabytes, and the chyldren of Ammon and them of Seir.

After this came the chyldren of Moab, and the chyldren of Ammon, and with the a company of the Ammonites agaynst Iosaphat to bataile. And ther came the tolde Iosaphat, sayinge: ther cometh a great multitude agaynst the from the other side of sea out of Siria. And se, they be in Basalon Thamar, which is Engad. Then

Then Josaphat feared, and sette hym selfe to seke the Lorde, and proclaymed fastinge thowhe out al Iuda. And Iuda gathered them selues togyther to aske counsel of the Lorde. Furthermoze there came oute of all the cytyes of Iuda to seke the Lorde. And Josaphat stode in the asseble of Iuda and Jerusalem in the house of the Lorde before the newe courte, and sayde: Lorde God of oure fathers, arte not thou God of heauen, and raygneste not thou ouer all the kyngdomes of I Danymes? And in thyne hande is power and myght, so that no man can stande before the? Arte not thou oure God, which dyddeste caste oute thyn habitaunces of this lande before thy people Isaacell, and gauest it to the seede of Abraham thy frende for euer? And they dwelte there in, and haue built for the a temple therein vnto thy name, and said: when euill cometh vpon vs, as the swerde of iudgement pestilence, or hunger: then if we stande before thys house, and before the (for thy name is in this house) and thal crye to the in our tribulaciō, thou shalt hear, and helpe. And now beholde, the chyldren of Ammon, and Moab, and mount Seir, by whych thou woldest not let Israel passe what time thei came forth of Egypt: but they departed fro the, & destroyed them not. And now marke how they reward vs, they come to caste vs out of thy possessiō whych thou hast geuen vs. O our God, wylte thou not iudge the? for we haue not so great puissance that we can make resystence agaynst thys greate compaignie that cometh agaynst vs, neyther wot we what to do, but oure eyes bee vnto the. And as all Iuda stode before the Lorde wyth their yonglynges, their wyues and their chyldren: the spirite of the Lorde came vpon Abaziel the sonne of zacharias, the sonne of Banai, the sonne of Iezel, the sonne of Mathanyah a Leuite of the sonnes of Asaph, euen as he was in the midst of the compaignie. And he sayde: harken all Iuda, and the inhabytours of Jerusalem, and also kynge Josaphat. Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto you, be not afearde or saynt harted by cause of thys greate multitude: for the warre is not poures but Gods. And to morow ye shal goo downe to them: se, they come vp at ziz, & ye shal mete them in the toppes of the brooke of the wilderness of Ieruell. For it shall not be you that shall fyghte in bys quarell but stande forth only, and behold the helpe of the Lord which is wyth you: feare not, nor let poure hertes sayle. O ye of Iuda and of Jerusalem To morow marche forthward, to them: for the Lord is wyth you.

And Josaphat bowed hym selfe with his face to the cyty, and al Iuda and the inhabytours of Jerusalem fel before the lorde and worshipped hym. And the Levites and the chyldren of the Cabathites and of the Corahites stode vp to prayse the Lord God of Israel wyth a loud voyce on bygh.

And so they arose early in the mornynge and gat them oute vnto the wilderness of Thekua. And when they went oute, Josaphat stode and sayde: heare me Iuda, and ye inhabytours of Jerusalem. Beleue in the Lorde poure God, and so shall ye continue, and beleue bys prophetes, and so shall ye prosper. And he gaue the people cōsell, and sette the syngers of the Lorde, and them that praysed in holly apparell, to goo oute before the armie and to saye: prayse the Lorde, for bys mercede lasteth euer. And what time they began to land and prayse, then the Lorde set their enemyes vpon their own selues, as many as were come to fight agaynst Iuda, euen the chyldren of Ammon and Moab and mount Seir, for the chyldren of Ammon and Moab arose agaynst the inhabytours of mount Seir, to destroy them vtterly, & to wipe the awai. And whē they had made an end of the inhabytours of Seir, then thei holp to destroy ech other.

And when Iuda came to Josaphat in the wilderness, they looked to the multitude. And behold, they were dead carkeless fallen to the earth, and none escaped. And Josaphat and his people wente to stryp & spoyle the dead, and found among the aboundance of goods and raymente and of pleasaunte iewelless, and caught from them moze then they coulde carpe awaye: so that thei were thre dayes in gatherynge of the spoyle, it was so muche. And the fourth day they assembled in the valley of blessing, for there they blessed the Lorde. And therefore they called the name of the sayde place, the valley of blessing vnto thys day. And so al the men of Iuda and Jerusalem returned, and Josaphat among the thickest of them; for to go agayne to Jerusalem wyth gladnes, for the Lorde had made them to reioyce of their enemies. And they came to Jerusalem wyth psalteryes & harpes and trompettes euen vnto the house of the Lorde, and the feare of God fell in the kyngdomes of all landes when they hadde hearde that the Lorde foughte agaynst the enemyes of Israel. And so the reigne of Josaphat was in tranquillite: for his God had geuen hym rest on euery syde. So Josaphat raygned vpon Iuda, and was .xxv. yere olde when he began to raygne and raygned .xxv. yere in Jerusalem, & bys mothers name was Iuba the doughter of Silhi. And he walked in the waye of Asa his father, & bowed not thēce but did that was plesant in the sighte of the lord. Howebeit they put not down the bilalters, neither did the people yet prepare their hertes vnto the god of their fathers. The rest of the acts of Josaphat first & last are wyrtē in the workes of Jehu the sōne of Banam, whiche noted the in the booke of the kynges of Israel.

After thys Josaphat kynge of Iuda layned hym selfe wyth Ochozab kynge of Israel, whych was a wycked doer. And he coupled hym selfe wyth hym to make Whypes to go to Tharlis. And they made Hypotes in Azton Gaber. And Elizer the the sonne of Dodanah of Marela, prophe-sed agaynst Josaphat, sayinge: because thou haite toynded thy selfe wyth Deho-ziab, the Lord hath broken thy works. And the hypotes were broken that they were not hable to go to Tharlys.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Josaphat dyeth and Joram succeedeth hym, whyche putteth to death hys brethren and is oppressed of the Philistynes, and dyeth of the dyre.

Josaphat layd hym to rest in his father, and was buryed wyth hys fathers in the citie of Dauid, and Joram hys sonne raygned in hys rowme: whyche Joram had other brethren sonnes of Josaphat: Azariah, Jehiel, zacharias, Azariah, Achaziel, and Sephorias. All these were the sonnes of Josaphat kinge of Juda. And their father gaue them many great gyftes in syluer, gold and other precious things: in strong citres in Juda: but the kyngdome he gaue to Jo-ram because he was the eldest. When Jo-ram was promoted vpon the kyngedome of his father and settled, he slew all hys other brethren wyth the swearde, and di-uers of the lordes of Israel also. * Joram was two and thyrtye yere olde when he beganne to raygne, and raygned eight yeres in Ierusalem. And he walcked in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, lyke as did the house of Achab (for a daughter of Achab was his wife) and he wrought euell in the eyes of the Lord. How be it the Lord wolde not destroy the house of Dauid, because of the couenaunte he had made wyth Dauid, and as he promysed to gyue a lyght to him and to his sonnes for euer.

In his dayes the Edomites rebelled because they would not be vnder the hand of Juda; and made them a kyng. And Joram wente forth wyth hys lordes and all hys charrettes wyth hym, and to se by nyghte and layd on the Edomites. Whyche com-passed hym in, and the Capytaynes of hys charrettes. And so Edom departed from the subiection of Juda vnto this daye. That same tyme also dyd Lobnah departe from Jehonadab vnder hys power, because he left the Lord God of hys fathers. Moreover he made bylalters in the mountaynes of Juda, and caused the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commytte adulterye, and he thruste Juda oute of the waye.

And there came a wyrtynge to hym from Eliaz the prophet of this tenoure.
Thus sayeth the Lord God of Dauid thy father: because thou walckedest not in the wayes of Josaphat thy father, and in the wayes of Asa kyng of Juda, but walckedest in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, and hast made Juda and the dwellers of Ierusalem go a whoringe, like to the whoringe of the house of Achab, and hast therfore layne thy brethren that were thy fathers house whyche were better then thou.

Beholde, the Lord will smyte the wyth a mighty plague in thy folke, in thy children, thy wyues, & in thy goods. And thou shalt haue much disease thorow infirmity in thy bowels, til thy bowels fall out by reason of thy sicknes day by day.

And the Lord stiered by agaynst Jo-ram the spirite of the Philistynes and the Arabians to border on the blacke mores, whyche came agaynst Juda and all to take the lande, and carped awaye all the substance that was found in the kyngs house and moreover hys sonnes and hys wyues, so that there was not one sonne lefte hym, saue Joachaz his yongest sonne. And after all this, the Lord smote hym in hys bowelles wyth an incurable disease. And in proces of tyme, euen aboute the ende of two yeres, hys guttes fell out by reason of hys syckenesse: and so he dyed of euill dysseases.
But they made hym no bonfyre lyke to bonfires of hys fathers. When he began to rayn he was. xxxii. yere olde, and raygned in Jerusalemyght yere. * And he walcked not ple-santly, & they buried him in the citie of Da-uid: but not in the sepulchre of the kynges.

The. xxii. Chapter.

Rehoziab raygneth in the rowme of Joram, Jehu kyng of Israel killith Rehoziab. & Jhaliah putteth to death all the kynges ly-nage only Joas escapeth.

And the inhabitants of Ierusalem made Rehoziab his yongest sonne kyng in hys stede. For men of warre that came wyth the Arabians in the hoste, had slayne all hys elder sonnes. And so Rehoziab the sonne of Joram kyng of Juda was made kyng. Two and fourty yere olde was he when he began to raygne, and ratgued one yere in Ierusalem. Hys mothers name was Athaliah the daughter of Amri.
And he walcked also in the wayes of the house of Achab, for hys mother was hys counseloure for to do euil. Wherefore he did that displeased the Lord, lyke to the house of Achab, for they were hys counsellours after the death of hys father, to his destruction, and he also walcked after their counsel. And Joram sonne of Achab kyng of Israel wente to fyght wyth Hazael kyng of Syria at Ramoth in Galaad, and they of Ramoth wounded hym. Wherefore he returned to be healed in Jezrael of the woundes whyche were gyuen hym at Ra-moth wher he fought w Hazael king of Si-ria. And Rehoziab the sonne of Joram king of Juda, went downe to se Joram the sonne of Achab at Jezreel, because he was diseased. * For it was thurst into Rehoziab of God to go to Joram, & that wher he was come he shulde go out wyth Joram agaynst Jehu the sonne of Namsi, whom the Lord had annoynted to destroye the house of Achab of Iehu. And as Jehu was executynge iustice vpon of Juda, and the sonnes of the brethren of Ochoziah, that wayted on Ochoziah, & he slewe them. And he soughte Ochoziah, and they caughte hym where he was hid in Samaria, and broughte hym to Jehu. And when they hadde slayne hym, they buryed hym: because (sayd they) he was the sonne of Josaphat whiche sought the Lord with al his hert. And ther was none of the house of Ochoziah that could obtene to be king.

D For Athaliah the mother of Ochoziah when she sawe her sonne was deade, arose and slewe al the seed of the kingdom of the house of Juda. But Josabeth the daughter of the kynge, toke Joas the sonne of Ochoziah and stole him from among the kynges sonnes that were slayne, and put hym and his nource in a sleppinge chamber. And so Josabeth the daughter of kyng Joram and wife of Joiada the prest (because she was the syster of Ochoziah) hyde hym fro Athaliah, & she slewe hym not. And he was with them hid in the house of God. vi. pere. And Athaliah raigned ouer the lande.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Joas the sonne of Ochoziah is made king, Athaliah is put to deathe.

A In the seventh pere Joiada toke hearte, and made a bonde wpth the captaynes of hundreds, Azariah the sonne of Jerohā, Ismaell the sonne of Johanan, Azariah the sonne of Obed, Maasiah the sonne of Adai, and Elisaphat the sonne of Zechi. And they wente aboute in Juda and gathered & Levites oute of all the cyties of Juda and the auncpente heades of Israell, and came to Jerusalem. And all the congregacion made a bonde wpth the kynge in the house of God. And Joiada saide to them: Behold the kynges sonne must raigne ouer the children of David, as the Lord hath sayde. Whys is it therefore that ye shall doo. The thirde part of you prestes and Levites whiche come in the Sabothe daye shall kepe & doores, and an other thirde parte shall be in the kings house, & an other thirde parte shall be in the gate of the foundation, & all the people shall be in the court of the house of the Lord, save the prestes and the Levites that minister. They shall go in, for they are holy, & al the people shall kepe & watch of the Lord. And the levites shall compass the king rounde aboute, everie man hys weapon in his hand: & what soever other man come into the house of the Lord, he shall dye for it, & thei shall be with the king, as he cometh in, and as he goeth oute.

And the Levites and all Juda dyd in all thynges as Joiada the prest commaunded, and toke every man his men, both the that came in, and them that wente oute the Sabothe day: for Joiada the prest dyd lette none of the companyes departe. And Joiada the prest delivred to the capitaynes of hundreds, speares and sheldes, and bucklers that pertayned to kyng David, and were in the house of God. And he set all the people and everie man his weapon in hys hande, from the righte corner of the house, to the lefte corner of the house, alonge by the aulter, and rounde aboute the kynge. And they broughte oute the kynges sonne, and putte on hym the crowne and the scepter, and made hym kyng. And Joiada, and hys sonnes annointed hym and saide: God save the kynge.

That is the law of god.

When Athaliah hearde the noyse of the people runnyng and prayyng the kynge she wente among the people into the house of the Lord. And when she saw the kynge, stand at his pylle in the enterynge, and the Lordes and trompettes aboute the kynge and all the people of the lande reioysyng and blowyng wpth trompettes, and the singers with instruments of musick teaching to praise: She rent her clothes and cried tre son treason. And Joiada the prest wente out with & captains of hundreds that were appointed to gouverne the host, and sayd to them: haue her oute wpthout the aray, and whosoever foloweth her, let hym be slayne wpth the swearde. For the prest sayde: sle her not in the house of the Lord. And they laid hands on her, and when she was come out to the enterynge of the horsagate in the kings house, they slew her ther. And Joiada made a bonde betwene him & al the people, and the king, to be the Lordes people.

And all the people went to the house of Baal, and destroyed it, and brake the alters and images, and slew Mathan the prest of Baal afore the aulters. And Joiada put the offices of the house of the Lord in the handes of the prestes, the Levites, whiche David had deuised in companies for the house of the Lord, to offer burnt offeringes vnto the Lord, as it is witten in the lawe of Moyses, wpth reioysyng and synnyng, as it was ordeined by David. And he set porters to the gates of the house of the Lord, that no vncleane person in anye popnte shulde enter in.

And he toke the capteines of hundreds, and the nobles & the gouerners of the people and al the folke of the land and brought the kynge downe oute of the house of the Lord, and they went thorow the hygh gate in the kings house, and set the kynge vpon the seate of the kingedome. And all the people of the land reioysed, and the cytye was in tranquility, but they slewe Athaliah wpth the swearde.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Joas durynge the lye of Joiada kepeth the law, but after hys deathe he regardeth it not. He killeth zacharias & prophet. Joas is killed of hys own seruantes, after whos raygneth Amazias.

Joas was vii. pere olde when he began to raygne, & raygned .xl. peres in Jerusalem. His mothers name was zebia of Bersabe. And Joas dyd & pleased the Lord al the daies of Joiada the prest. And Joiada gave him. ii. wiues, & he begat sons & daughters.

bone, and founde them thre hundred thousande yonge lustye men, able to go to battyle, and that coulde handle speare and shilde. And he hired therto an hundred thousande fightinge men out of Israell, for an hundred talentes of syluer.

But there came a manne of God to hym and sayde: Kynge let not the armie of Israel go with the, for the Lorde is not wpth Israell: neyther wpth anye of the house of Ephraim. Or els yf thou nedes wylte, then go and do it, and make thy selfe stronge to battyle: and thou shalt se, that God shall make the falle before thynne ennemyes.
For God hath the power to helpe or to caste downe. And Amazias sayde agayne to the manne of God what shall we doo then for the hundred talentes, whiche I haue geuen to the hoste of Israel? And the man of God sayde: the Lorde is able too geue the much more then that.

Then Amazias seuered the armie that was come to him oute of Ephraim, to goo home agayne. Wherefore they were exceadyng wrothe wpth Juda, and retourned home in greate anger.

And Amazias tooke hearte, and carped oute his hooste, and wente too Saldale.

iii. Reg.
xiii. 6.

Where he slewe of the chyldrene of Seir ten thousande. And other ten thousand of the chyldre of Juda he toke aliue, and cari-ed them to the top of a rocke, and cast them downe from the top of the rocke, that they all to burst: but the men of the armie whiche Amazias had turned backe and would not let go with his people to battyle, ran vpon the ctytes of Juda from Samaria vnto Bethhoron, and slew .iii. thousand of them, and wan much spoyl. And it chaun-ced, after that Amazias was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, and had brou-ghte the goddes of the chyldren of Seir, he set them vp to be his gods, and bowed hym selfe before them, and burned incense vnto them. Wherefore the Lorde was wroth with Amazias, And sente to hym a prophet, and sayde to hym: whye sekest thou the goddes of the people, whiche were not able to deli-uer theyr owne people oute of thynne han-des? And as the prophete spake to hym, he sayd to the prophet: haue menne made the of the kings counsel: cease, lest thou be beaten. And the prophet ceased and sayd: I am sure that God hath take counsel to destroy the, because thou haste done this, & obeyest not my counsell. Then Amazias kynge of Juda tooke aduise, & sent to Joas the son of Joachaz the sonne of Jehu kynge of Israel, and sayde: come and let vs se eyther other. And Joas kynge of Israell, sente a-gayne to Amazias kinge of Juda, saying: a-shysshell in Libanon sent to a Cedar tree of Lpbanon, sayinge: * geue thy doughter to my sonne too wyfe. But there came the wylde beastes of Libanon, and trode down the shysshell. Thou thinkest: loo, I haue beaten the Edomites, therefore thine heart tryseth to gloryfye thy selfe. Nowe abyde at home: what nedeth the to prouoke to e-uyl, that thou perishe and Juda wpth the?

But Amazias rested not: for it came of God, euen to deliuer them into the handes of theyr ennemyes, and that because they hadde soughte the goddes of the Edomites. And Joas kynge of Israell came vp: and they sawe eyther other, bothe he and A-mazias kynge of Juda at Bethlames in Juda. And Juda was put to the worste before Israell, and fled euery man to hys tent. And Joas king of Israell toke Amazias kynge of Juda the sonne of Joas, the sonne of Ohoziah at Bethlames, and broughte hym to Jerusalem, and tare the wal of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim, vnto the corner gate, foure hundred cubytes longe. And he toke al the golde and syluer, and all the iewelles that were founde in the house of God wpth Obed Edom, and the treasure of the kynge's house, and hostages and retourned to Samaria.

And Amazias the sonne of Joas kynge of Juda lyued after the deathe of Joas son of Joachaz kynge of Israell, fiftene yeres.
The reste of the actes of Amazias fyrst and laste, are wrytten in the booke of Kynge's of Juda & Israell. And after the time that Amazias dyd turn away from the lord, thei cōspired trefon against him in Jerusalem: & he fled to Lachis, whither they sent after him, and slew him ther, and broughte hym vp with horses, and buryed him with his fathers in the cite of Juda.

The.xvi. Chapter.

After the deathe of Amazias raigneth Oziah which is stricken with the leproie. And Joa-cham raigneth in his rowme.

Then all the people of Juda tooke Oziah whiche was .xvi. yere oulde, and made him king in the rowme of his father Amazias. And he buylte cloth & brou-ghte it agayne to Juda, after the king was layde to rest with his fathers. Sixtene yere old was Oziah when he begā to raign, and he raigned two and fiftie yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Iecaliah of Jerusalem. And he dyd that pleased the Lorde in all poyntes, as did his father Ama-zias. And he soughte God whyle zachary-ah the teacher to se God, liued: and as long as he soughte the Lorde, God made hym prosper. And he wente to battyle against the philistines, and brake downe the wals of Beth, and the wals of Jabneh, and the walles of Asdod, and buylte ctytes aboute Asdod, and among the philistins. And god holpe hym agaynst the philistines, and a-gaynst the Arabiens that dwelte in Surbaall, and agaynst the Meunites. And the Ammonites gaue tribute to Oziah, and his name spred abroad euen to Egypte: for he played the man, and exceded. Moreover Oziah buylte towres in Jerusalem ouer the corner gate, and ouer the balpe gate, and ouer other corners, and made them stronge.

And

ii. Chronicles.

And he buylte towres in the wildernes, and dygged many wels. For he had much catel both in the valey, & also in the plain, and plowmen & vinedressers in the mountains and in Chammell, for he loued husbandrye.

And Oziah hadde an hoste of fyghtynge men that wente oute to war in the armie, men were tolde and numbred by Jereim the scribe, and Maasiah an Officer, vnder the hande of Hananiah one of the kynges lordes. And the hole numbre of the aunciente heades of the men of myghte, were. ii. thousande and sixe hundred, and vnder the handes of them was the armie of the host. iii. C. and. vii. M. and. v. C. that made warre with myghte and strengthe, to helpe the kyng a gaigne hys ennemyes. And Oziah prouided them thorowoute all the hoste, shields, speres, helmets, haberginnes, bowes, and slynges for stones. And he made engynes in Jerusalem by the crafte of artificers, to be on the towres and corners, too shote arrowes & greate stones wth. And his name spred farre abrode, for he was wonderfyll holpe, vntyll he was become myghty. And in his greatenesse his herte arose, that he was marred, and transgressed agaynst the Lorde his God. For he wente into the temple of the Lorde to burne incense vpon the aulter of incense. But Azarias the priest wente in after hym wth foure score priests of the Lorde that were bold men. And they slepte to Oziah the kyng, and saide to him: it pertayneth not to Oziah to burne incense vnto the lord, but to the priests the children of Aaron that are consecrate for to burne incense. Come out of the sanctuary, for thou haste trespassed, and it shalbe no worshippe to the before the Lorde God.

iii. re. xv. a. And Oziah was wroth and had incense in his hande to offer, and in his indignatyon agaynst the ppeste, & the lepre sprang in hys foreheade, before the ppests in the house of the Lorde, euen besyde the incense aulter. And Azarias the chyefe ppeste wth al the other priests looked vpon hym: and beholde, he was a lepre in hys forehead: and they draue hym thence. And therto he was fayne to go oute, because the Lorde hadde plagued hym. And Oziah the kyng continued a lepre vnto the dape of hys deathe, and dwelte in an house at Iphertpe: howbeit he was cast out of the house of the lord. And Joatham hys sonne hadde the gouernaunce of the kyngs house and iudged the people of the lande.

The reste of the actes of Oziah bothe fyrste and laste, dyd Ihaia the prophete the sonne of Amos wyte. And when Oziah was layd to rest with his fathers, they buried him with his fathers in the sepulchre of the burpall of the kynges. For they sayde: hee is a leper. And Joatham hys sonne reigned in hys steade.

The. xxvii. Chapter.

Joatham reigned and ouercommeth the Amozites. Achaz his sonne reigned after hym.

The. xxvii. Chapter:

Joatham was. v. and. xx. yere olde when he began to reigne, and reigned sixtene yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Jerusah the daughter of Zadoc. And he dyd that pleased the Lorde in al pointes as did his father Oziah, saue that he came not to the temple of the Lorde, and that the people dyd yet corrupte them selues. He buylt the hye gate of the temple of the Lorde, and on the walle Ophell he buylt muche. Moreouer he buylt cities in the mountains of Iuda, and in the woode country he built castels and towres.

And he foughte wth the kyng of the chyldren of Ammon, and preuailed agaynst them. And the chyldre of Ammon gaue hym the same yere an hundred talentes of syluer, and tennethousandquarters of whete and as much barley. So muche also did the chyldren of Ammon geue him the. ii. yere, & the. iii. to. And Joatham became myghty, because he directed his way before the Lorde his God. The reste of the actes of Joatham and al his wars, and his waies are wyrtten in the booke of the kyngs of Israel and Iuda. He was. v. and. xx. yere olde, when he began to reigne, and reigned. xvi. yere in Jerusalem. And when Joatham was layd to rest with his fathers, they buried him in the cypse of Dauid: and Achaz hys sonne reigned in hys steade.

The. xxviii. Chapter.

Achaz was. xx. yere olde when he began to reigne, and reigned. xvi. yere in Jerusalem. And he did not that pleased the Lorde, as dyd hys father Dauid: but walked in the waies of the kynges of Israel, and made therto Baals of metal. And he offered incense in the vale of the chyldren of Bennon, and burnt his chyldren in fyre after the abhominatiō of the nacions, whiche the Lorde threwe out before the chyldren of Israel. And he offered burnt incense in hil aulters, and on mountaynes, and vnder euerye grene tree.

Wherefore the Lorde hys God delpyered hym into the hande of the kyng of the Sirians, whiche beate hym, and carped awaye a greate multytude of hys, captiue in to Damascōn. And further, he was delpyered into the hande of the kyng of Israel. whiche slewe of hys a myghty slaughter. For Ishakeh the sonne of Romeliah slewe in Iuda an hundred and twenty thousand in one dape, and all fyghtynge menne: and that because they had forsaken the Lorde God of theyr fathers. And Zechu a myghty man in mounte Ephraim slewe Maasiah the kynges sonne, and Africam the Lorde steward of houshoulde, and Eleanah that was nexte too the kyng. And the chyldren of Israel tooke the pyloners of theyr brethren two hundred thousand, wyues, sons & daughters, and therto caried away much spoile of them, and brought it to Samaria. But

But there was a prophete of the Lordes named Obed, whiche went out to the hoste that came to Samaria, and sayde to them: lo, because the Lord God of your fathers was wroth wth Juda, he deliuered them into your handes. And ye haue slayne them wth crueltie that reacheth vp to heaven. And now ye purpose to kepe vnder þe children of Juda, and Jerusalem, and to make them bondemen, and bondewomen. What other thyng do ye (ye vnhappye) then offend the Lord your God? But now heare me, and deliuer the prisoners agayne, whiche ye haue taken of your brethren, for the greates wraethe of the Lord is vpon you.

And certayne of the heades of the children of Ephraim: as Azarias the sonne of Iohanan, Barachiah the sonne of Meshelemoth, Jehezekiah the sonne of Selum, and Amasa the sonne of Hadalai stood vp against them that came from war, and saide vnto the: ye shal not bringe in the captiues hither. For wher we haue offended the lord already, ye intend to ad more to our synnes and trespase. For our trespase is great already, and there is scarce wraeth vpon Israel. Whereupon the men of arms left the captiues and the spoyle before the Lordes and al the congregation.

And there arose certayne appointed ther to by name, and tooke the prisoners, and clothed al that wer naked among them, of the spoyle, and arayed them and shooed the, and gaue them to eat and to drinke, and annointed them, and caried al that were feble of them vpon asses, and broughte them to Jericho the cytye of Paulme trees faste by thei brethren: and then retourned to Samaria agayne.

And at that same tyme kynge Achaz sent vnto the kinges of Assur to haue help. And the Edomites came yet agayne and slewe of Juda and caried awaye some captiues. And the Philistines inuaded the cities in þe lowe countrey, and the southe of Juda.

And toke Bethlames, Aialon, Baderoth, and Socoh: wth the townes belongynge thereto, and Timna with the townes of þe same. And Simso with her townes, and dwelt therein. For the Lord broughte Juda low, because of Achaz kynge of Juda, whiche made Juda naked and trasgressed against the Lord: And Thiglath phalneser kynge of Assur came vpon hym, and beseged him but preuailed not agaynst hym. For Achaz toke awaye oute of the house of the Lord, and oute of the kynges house and out of þe Lordes houses, and gaue vnto the kynge of Assur, though he holpe hym not. And thereto in the verpe tyme of hys tribulation dyd kynge Achaz trespase yet more agaynst the Lord. For he offered vnto the goddes of them of Damasco whych bette hym and sayde: because the Goddes of the Siriens help the, therefore wyl I offer to them, that they maye helpe me also. But they wer hys destructio, and the destruction of al Israel.

And Achaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God and brake them, and shut vp the doores of the house of the Lord, and made him aulters in all corners of Jerusalem. And in al the cities of Juda, cytye by cytye he made hyll aulters to burne incense vnto other goddes, and angered the Lord God of hys fathers. The reste of his Actes, and all hys wayes bothe fynde and laste are wyrtten in the booke of Kynges of Juda and Israel. And when Achaz was layd to reste with hys fathers, they buried him in the city of Jerusalem: but brought him not vnto the sepulchres of the kinges of Juda. And Ezechias his sonne reigned in hys steede.

The xxix. Chapter

Ezechias restoreth vnto the temple of the Lord, al the things that had not bene regarded of his predecessours.

Ezechias began to raygn when he was xrb. yere old, and reigned xxix. yere in Jerusalem. And his mothers name was Abia the daughter of zachary. And he dyd that was ryght in the syght of the lord in all pointes, as dyd David his father. He opened the doores of the house of the Lord in the fynde yere, and fynde moneth of hys raygne, and repayred them. And he broughte in the priestes and the Leuites, gathered them together into the east strete: and sayde vnto them.

Heare me ye Leuites: purghe your selues, and halowe the house of the Lord god of your fathers, and bringe oute the filthynesse oute of the holpe place. For oure fathers haue trespassed and done wyckedlye in the eyes of the Lord our God: and haue forsaken hym, and tourned awaye thei faces from the habitacion of the Lord, and tourned to thei backs. And helpe that they haue shutte vppe the doores of the porche and quenched the lampes, and haue neyther burned incense, nor offered burnt offeringes in the holpe place vnto the God of Israel.

Wherefore the wraethe of the Lord fell on Juda and Jerusalem, and he scattered them and made them so thynne that menne hysse at it, euen as you see wth your eyes. For lo, oure fathers wer ouerthrowen with the swearde, and oure sonnes, oure daughters and oure wiues were caried awaye prisoners for the same. Nowe haue I in my herte to styke a couenant wth the Lord God of Israel, that his wraeth may cease: Nowe therefore my sonnes be not neglygente, for the Lord hath chosen you to stand before him, and to minister and burne offeringes to hym.

Then the Leuites arose: Mahath the sonne of Amasa, and Joel the sonne of Asariah bringe of the children of the Cahathites: and the sonnes of Merari, Kis the sonne of Abdi, and Asariah the sonne of Jalaleel: and of the Bersonites, Joah the son of Simma, and Eden the sonne of Joah: of

of the sonnes of Elizaphan, Simi and Jeliell: and of the sonnes of Asaph, zachariah & mathaniah: and of the sonnes of Heman, Jehiel and Semei: and of the sonnes of Jeduthun, Semaiah and Oziel. And they gathered they brethren and purged theym selues, and then went at commaundement of the kyng by the worde of the Lorde for to cense the house of the Lorde. And the priestes wente into the house of the Lorde, to cense it, and broughte oute all the vncleennesse they founde in the temple of the Lorde, and in the courte of the house of the Lorde. And the Leuytes toke it, and caried it oute into the broke Cedron. They began the fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth to purghe, and came the eyghte daye to the porch of the Lorde, so that they hadde purged the house of the Lorde in eighte daies, and the xij. daye of the fyrste moneth they made an ende.

And then they wente in to Ezechias the kyng and sayd: we haue censed al the house of the Lorde, and the aulter of burnt offerings, with al his vessels and the shew breade table wpth all hys apparel: and ther to all the vessels whiche kyng Achaz dyd cast asyde when he ragged and transgressed, them we haue repayred and sanctified: and se, they are before the aultare of the Lorde. And Ezechias the kyng rose earlye and gathered the Lordes of the ctye and went vp to the house of the Lorde. And there were broughte .vii. oxen .vii. rammes, seven lambes, and seven kyddes to be a sinne offering for the kyngdome, for the sanctuary and for Juda. And he commaunded the priestes the sonnes of Aaron to offer them on the altar of the Lorde. And they slew the oxen: and the priestes receyued the bloude, and sprynkled it on the aultare: and they slewe the rammes and sprynkled the bloud vpon the aultar: and slewe the lambes and sprynkled the bloude vpon the aultar. And then they broughte forth the kyddes of the syn offerings before the kyng and the congregatyon, whiche put theyr handes vpon them. And the priestes slewe them, and offered the bloude of them vpon the aultare, to make satisfactiō for al Israel: for the kyng sayde: that the burnt offering and the syn offering shulde serue for all Israel. And then set the Leuytes in the house of the lord with Symbales, psalteries, and harpes accordyng to the commaundement of Dauid and of Bad the kynges sear of visions, and of Nathan the prophete. For so was the commaundement of the Lorde thowgh the hande of his prophetes. And so the Leuytes stode with the instrumentes of Dauid and the priestes wpth trompettes. And Ezechias commaunded to offer the burnt offering vpon the aultar. And when the burnt offering began, the songe of the Lorde began, and the trompettes wpth the instrumentes of Dauid kyng of Israel. And al the congregatyon bowed them selues and the syngers sange, and the trompets blew, and continued vntyll the burnt offering was synpshed.

And when they had made an ende of the burnt offering, the kyng and al that wer wpth hym kneeled downe, and bowed them selues, and gaue prayse and thanks. And Ezechias the kyng, and the Lordes bade the Leuytes too prayse the Lorde wpth the words of Dauid and of Asaph the sear of visions. And the Leuytes praysed that they reioyled againe, and the other stouped and bowed them selues.

And Ezechias answered and sayde: now that ye haue filled your handes to the lord, go to and byng in the sacrifices, and thank offerings into the house of the Lorde. And the congregacion broughte in the sacrifices and thanked offerings, and all that were wplyng broughte burnt offerings. And the numbze of the burnt offerings whiche the congregacion broughte in, was seuentye oxen, and an hundred rammes, and twoo hundred lambes: and all burnt offerings too the Lorde. And besyde that they dedycated syre hundred oxen, and thre thousande sheepe.

But the priestes were to fewe: and were not able to slepe all the burnt offerings. Wherefore they brethren the Leuytes holpe them tyll the worcke was ended, and vntyll the priestes were sanctified. For the Leuytes were purer hearted to sanctifye them selues then the priestes. And ther to the burnt offerings were many, with the fatte of the peace offerings, and the drynk offerings that belonged to the burnt offerings. And so the service pertaining to the house of the Lorde went forward. And Ezechias reioised, & al the people that God had made the folcke so ready, for the thing was sodenlye done.

The xxx. Chapter.

Ezechias reneweth the feast of passeouer.

And Ezechias sent to all Israel and Juda: and ther to wrot letters to Ephraim & Manasses that they should come to the house of the Lord at Ierusalem, to offer passeouer vnto the Lord God of Israel. And the kyng held a counsel wpth his Lordes and al the congregacion at Ierusalem to kepe the feast of passeouer in the .ii. month. For they could not kepe it at the first time for they wer not priestes inough sanctified, nether was the people gathered together to Ierusalem. And the thing pleased the kyng and al the congregacion. And they decreed it shuld be proclaimed thowgh out all Israel from Bersabe to Dan, that they shulde come and holde the feast of passeouer vnto the Lorde God of Israel at Ierusalem: for they had not often done it, as it is wyrtten how they shoulde.

And the messengers wente wpth letters of the hand of the kyng and of his Lordes thowgh oute all Israel and Juda, at the commaundecommaundement of the king, which sayd: chyliden of Israell, tourne againe vnto the Lorde God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and so wil he turne to the remnaunte of you that are escaped oute of the handes of the kynge of Assur.

B And be ye not lyke your fathers & your brethren which trespassed against the Lord of your fathers, which therfore gaue them vp that they are wasted as ye se. Wherfore be not styfnecked lyke vnto your fathers, but yeld your selues vnto the Lord, & come to hys holy place which he hath sanctified for euer, and serue the lord your God, that his wrath maye turne from you.

For if ye tourne vnto the Lord your brethren and your chyliden shall fynde compassion in the presence of them that houlde them captiue, that they may come agayne vnto thys lande: for the lord your God is ful of mercy and compassiō, & wil not turn his face from you, if ye turne againe to him.

And the postes went frome cyp to cyp thoroughout the land of Ephraim and Manasses and euen vnto zabulon.

But they laughed them to scorne, and mocked them. Neuerthelesse yet dyuers of Asser, Manasses and of zabulon meekened them selues and came to Jerusalem. And thereto the hand of God was in Juda to make them of one accord to do the commaundement of the kynge and the captaynes, whiche was accordyng to the word of the Lord. And so they assembled to Jerusalem muche people and a myghty great congregacyon, to holde the feast of swete breade in the second moneth.

C And they arose and put awaye the altars that were in Jerusalem. And all incense they dyd awaye and caste them in to the broke ledon. And they slewe passouer, the fourtene dai of the second moneth. And the priestes and Leuites sanctified the selues for shame, and brought in the burnt-offerynges into the house of the Lord. And they stode in theyr standyng after their maner accordyng to the lawe of Moyses the man of God. And the priestes sprynckled the bloude receauyng it of the handes of the Leuites. And because there were many in the congregacion that were not sanctified: therfore dyd the Leuites slewe passouer for all that were not cleane to sanctifye them to the Lord.

There was verie muche people oute of Ephraim, Manasses, Isachar and zabulon that were not cleane, and therfore dyd eate passouer other wyse then wrytyng specifyeth. But Ezechias prayed for them and sayde: the good Lord be mercifull to all that sette their heartes to seke the God þ is the Lord God of their fathers, though they do it not accordyng to the cleanness of the holpe place.

D And the Lord heard Ezechias, and healed the people. And so the chyliden of Israel that were found at Jerusalem helde the feast of swete bread seuen daies w gret gladnes, & the Leuites & the priestes praised the Lord day by day with lowd instrumentes.

And Ezechias spake vnto the Leuites that had good vnderstandyng of the Lord. And they did eate the feast, seuen dayes long, and offered peaceofferynges and thanked the Lord God of their fathers. And the hole assemble toke counsell to kepe seuen dayes moo: and they helde those seuen dayes wth gladnesse. For Ezechias kynge of Juda gaue for beaueofferynges to the congregacion a thousand oxen, and seuen thousand shepe. And the Lords gaue to the congregacyon for beaueofferynges a thousand oxen, and ten thousand shepe. And the priestes sanctified them selues, that they were ynowe.

And al the congregacyon of Juda wth the priestes and Leuites, and all the congregacyon that came oute of Israel and the straungers, both that came oute of the lande of Israel, and that dwelte in Juda, reioysed: and there was greate ioye in Jerusalem. For from the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid king of Israel it hapened not so in Jerusalem. And the priestes and the Leuites arose & blessed the people, & their voice was herd & their prayer wente vp vnto his holy dwelling place heuen.

The xxxi. Chapter.

E After Ezechias had called agayne the people vnto the way of the Lord, he ordeneth the priestes, vnto whom he commaundeth to gyue tythes.

A And when they had finyshe al thys, al Israel that were found in the cities of Juda wente oute, and brake the ymages and cut down the groues, and al to broke the hilalters and the other altars thoroughout Juda, and Beniamin, Ephraim & Manasses, tyll they had made an ende of them. And afterward al þ chyliden of Israel returned euery man to hys possession in theyr owne ctyes. And Ezechias set the priestes & the Leuites in their order to wayte by course, euerye man accordyng to hys offyce, whether prieste or Leuite: for the burnt-offerynges and peace offerynges, and to minister, and to thanke and to pray in the gates of the lodge of the Lord. And the kynge gaue a porcion of hys substance for burnt-offerynges at morninge and euen, and for burnt-offerynges on þ Saboth daies, & new mones, and other solemne feastes, accordyng as it is wrytten in the law of the Lord. And he hadde the people that dwelte in Jerusalem to gyue the part of the priestes & Leuites that they myghte be mayntayned in the lawe of the Lord. And as soone as the woorde came abroad, the chyliden of Israel broughte abundaunce of first fruits, of corne, wyne, oyle, & honny, & of all maner of frutes of the field: and the tythes of all maner of thynges brought they in plenteously. And the chyliden of Israel and Juda that dwelte

In the cities of Iuda, they also brought in the tythes of oren and shepe, and tythes of dedicat thyngs which were dedicate to the Lord their God, and put them on heapes. In the third moneth they began to lay the heapes and synghed them the seventh.

And when Ezechias and the lords came and saw the heapes, they blessed the Lord & his people Israel, and Ezechias questioned wyth the priestes and the Levites concerning the heapes. And Azarias the chyefe priest of the house of Sadoc answered hym and sayd: sythen they began to bring the heueofferings into the house of the Lord, we haue eaten and had ynough, & yet left abun-ouer whiche Thonanyah the Leuyte had the rule, wyth Semei his brother next to hym. And Jehiel, Asariab, Nabath, Asaell, Jerimoth, Josabad, Eliel, Jesmachyab, Abath and Banayah, were ouersers ordeyned by Thonanyah and Semei his brother, at the appoyntment of Ezechias the kynge, and Azarias the ruler of the house of God. And Thore the son of Iena the Leuite porter at the East doore had the ouersyght of the frewploughynges of God, to gyue heaveofferings vnto the Lord, and was ouer thyngs most holy. And vnto hym were Eden Miniamyn, Iesua, Semeiah, Amariab and Sechanyah in the cytyes of the priestes of theyr fydelytpe, to gyue to the brethren their porcyons, as well to the smal as to the greate.

And to the males also that were reckned from thre yere and aboue amonge all that went into the house of the Lord day by day to do seruite and waite by course.

And to the priestes that were reckened in the householdes of their fathers from thre yere and aboue, to waite when theyr courses came. And to them that were reckened thorow oute all their babes, wyues, sonnes and daughters thorow oute all the congregacion. For to the fidelty of them dyd men commyt their sanctyfyed gyftes. And therro among the chyldren of Aaron the priestes were men named by name in the fyeldes of the suburbs of all theyr cytyes, cytye by cytye, for to gyue porcyons to all the males of the priestes and to all that were reckned among the Leuytes.

And on this maner dyd Ezechias thorow out al Iuda, and did that was good, right and truth, before the Lord his God. And in all the workes that he began in the seruice of the house of God, to seke his god after the law and commandement, he dyd wyth al his hart, and prospered.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Jerusalem is streken of the Angel & zechias dieth, after whom succedeth Manasses

After these dedes & truth Sennacherib kynge of Assur came & entred into Iuda, & pytched against the strong cities, iii. re. viii. c. & thought to draw the to hym. But whē Ezechias saw that Sennacherib was come, and that he purposed to fyght agaynst Jerusalem: he toke counsel wyth his capytaynes and men of myght, to stop the water of the fountaynes that were wythout the cytye: and they were contente to helpe hym. And so there gathered muche people togyther, and stoppe al the welles and the broke that ran thorow the middes of the lande, entredynge that the kynge of Assur should not fynd much water, when they came. And he went to Iustelye and built vp the wal wher it was broke, and made towres aboue vpon, and yet an other wal wythout, and reparyed also the cytye of Dauid, & made manye barres and hyldes.

And he set Capytaynes of war ouer the people and gathered theym togyther into the large strete of the gate of the citie, and spake gentely to them, sayinge. iii. re. vi. c. Plucke vp your herres and be strong: be not afrayde or in any wyse discouraged for drede of the kynge of Assur, and of the greate multitude that is wyth hym: for ther is one greater wyth vs then wyth hym. Wyth hym is an arme of flesh: but wyth vs is the Lord our God for to helpe vs, and to fyghte our battles. And the people were wel couraged with the words of Ezechias kynge of Iuda.

After that Sennacherib kynge of Assur sente of his seruauntes to Jerusalem (he himselfe lying before Iachys and all his kyngdome wyth him) vnto Ezechias kynge of Iuda & vnto al Iuda that were at Jerusalem, sayinge. Thus sayeth Sennacherib kynge of Assur: iii. Reg. i. c. wherin do ye truste, O ye that are besieged in Jerusalem? Ezechias deceyueth you to deluyer you to death, he agre, and thurst, sayinge: the Lord our God shal ryd vs out of the hand of the kynge of Assur. Is it not that Ezechias hath put down his hyl aultars and his other aultars, and commaunded Iuda and Jerusalem, sayinge: before one aulter ye shall bow your selues, and vpon that offer also?

Moreouer haue ye not herd what I and my fathers haue done vnto the people of al landes: were the Gods of the people of other landes hable to saue theyr landes oute of my bonde? whiche of all the Goddes of those nacyns that my fathers destroyed was it, that could deluyer his people out of mine hand, that your God shuld be hable to deluyer you out of myne hand? Wherefore now let not Ezechias deceyue you ether perswade you on thys sacoun, nor yet beleue hym. For as no God amonge so many nacyns and kyngedomes, was hable to rydde his people oute of myne hande and the handes of my fathers: euen so muche lesse shal your God kepe you out of myne hande. And yet more byd his seruantes speake agaynste the Lorde god and agaynste his seruante Ezechias. Forthermore he wrote a letter to rayle on the Lorde God of Israell, and spake therein sayinge: as the Goddes of the nacpons of other landes haue not deliuered their people out of myne hande, no more shall the God of Ezechias deliuer his people out of myne hande. And they cried with a lowde voyce in the Jewes speech vnto the people of Ierusalem, that were on the walles, to feare them and to dismaye them, that they might haue taken the city. And they spake agaynste the god of Ierusalem, as agaynste the gods of the nacpons of the earth, which are the workes of the handes of men.

But Ezechias the kynge and the prophete Isay sonne of Amoz prayed concerning that thyng, and cryed vp to heauen. And the Lorde sent an aungel and destroyed al the men of war, and the Lordes Capitaynes of the host of the kynge of Assur, that he turned his face wyth shame toward his owne lande. And when he was come into his house of his God, he was there ouerthrowen wyth the swerde euen by the that issued oute of his bowels. And so the Lorde saued Ezechias and the inhabytors at Ierusalem oute of the handes of Sennacherib kynge of Assur and of all other and mayntained them on al sides.

In so much that many brought presentes vnto the Lorde to Ierusalem and precious gyftes to Ezechias kynge of Iuda: so that he was magnified in the sight of al nacpons from thence forth. * In those daies Ezechias was speke vnto the deathe and besought the Lorde: whych answered hym & shewed him a wonderfull myracle:

But Ezechias did not accordyng to cures: shewed hym, for his hert arose: & therefore came there wrath vpon hym and vpon Iuda and Ierusalem. Notwithstanding Ezechias mekened him selfe for the arising of his herte both he and the inhabytors of Ierusalem. Wherefore the wrath of the Lorde fell not vpon them in the daies of Ezechias.

And Ezechias had exceeding much riches and honoure. And he gathered him treasures of syluer, golde, precious stones, spyes, shildes, and all maner pleasaunte iewels: and made stozes beules for the frutes of corne, wyne and oyle, and stables for all maner beastes, and foldes for sheepe. And made hym townes, because he had carell of shepe and ore great abondance. For God had gyven him substance exceeding much. And the sayde Ezechias stopped the upper watersprings of Syhon, and brought them downe to the Westsyde of the citty of Dauid. And Ezechias prospered in al his workes. But when the Ambassadors of the Lordes of Babilon were set to him, to enquire of the wonder that chaunced in the lande, God lest he hym to tempte hym, that al that was in his herte myght be knowne.

The rest of the deedes of Ezechias and his goodnes are writen in the vision of Isay the prophete, the sonne of Amoz, in the booke of the kynge of Iuda and Israell. And then Ezechias laid him to rest with his fathers, and they buried him in the hyghest sepulchre of the sonnes of Dauid: and Iuda and the inhabitantes of Ierusalem, did hym worshippe at his deach. And Manasses his sonne reigned in his stede.

The xxxiii. Chapter.
Manasses is taken prisoner, and after destroyed the Idoles. He dieth. After him succeeded Amos. Amos was kylled of his owne people: Josiah his sone reigned for him.

Manasses was. xxi. yere old when he was made kynge, and reigned. lv. yere in Ierusalem. And he did wyckedlye in the sight of the Lorde, lyke vnto the abomynacions of the Danymys whiche the Lorde cast out before the children of Israell. For he wente and buylte agayne the highalters whiche Ezechias his father had broken downe.

And he reared vp alters vnto Baales, and made groues, and bowed hym selfe vnto all the host of heauen, and serued them. And he buylte alters in the house of the Lorde: Of whiche the Lorde had sayd: * in Ierusalem shall my name be for ever. And he made alters vnto all the host of heauen in the two courtes of the house of the Lorde. And he burnt his chyldren in fyre in the valley of the sonnes of Hennon.

And he obserued dismal dayes, and occupied wythcraft and sorcery, and mayntayned workes wyth spyes and sears of fortunes: and wroughte muche cupill in the sight of the Lorde, to anger hym wyth.

And he put the kerued Image of an Idole which he had made, in the house of god. Of which house God saied to Dauid & to Salomons his sonne, in this house here in Ierusalem which I haue chosen out of all the trybes, * I wyll put my name for ever: and no more bring the seat of Israell forth of the land whych I haue ordeyned for you fathers. In case they shalbe dilygente to do all I haue commaunded by Moyses in all the law, ordinances and maners. But Manasses made Iuda the inhabytors of Ierusalem to erre, and to do worse then the Heathen whych the Lorde destroyed before the chyldren of Israell. And when the Lorde spake to Manasses and to his people, they attended not to hym.

Wherefore the Lorde brought vpon the the Capytaines of the host of the king of Assur, which took Manasses in an hold and bound him with chaynes, and caried him to Babilon. And when he was in tribulacion he besought the Lorde his God and humbled hym selfe exceedinglye before the God of his fathers, & made intercession to hym: and he was entreated of him & herd his prayer, and brought him agayne to Ierusalem into his kingedome. When Manasses knewe howe that the Lorde was the verye God.

After

After that, he buylte a wal wythout the cyyte of Dauid on the westsyde of Syhon in the brake, and so forth to the fithgate & round about Ophel and broughte it vp of a verpe great heigh, and put Capytaynes of war in al the stronge citties of Iuda. And toke strange gods and the Idol out of the house of God, and all the aulters that he hadde buylte in the mounte of the house of God and in Ierusalem, and caste theym oute of the city. And he made an aulter to the Lord & sacrificed thereon peaceofferpynges & thankofferpynges, & charged Iuda to serue the Lord God of Israell. Neuer thelesse the people dyd offer still in the hylaulters, howe be it vnto the Lorde their God onelye.

D The rest of the actes of Manasse & his prayer vnto his God, and the words of the sears of visytors that spake to him in the name of the Lord God of Israell, are written among the deedes of the kinges of Israell.

And his prayer, and howe that he was herd, and al his synne and trespase, & the places where he made hylaulters and set by groues & kerued Images before he was mekened, are written amonge the deedes of the sears of visytors. And when Manasse was layde to rest wyth his fathers, they buryed him in his owne house, and Amon his sonner reigned in his rowme. Amon was. xxii. yeares old, when he began to reigne, & reigned two yeare in Ierusalem. And he did that displeased the Lord like vnto Manasse his father, for Amon sacrificed to al the kerued Images whiche Manasse his father made, and serued the, and mekened not hym self before the Lord, as Manasse his father had mekened hym selfe: But Amon trespassed greatlye. Wherefore his owne seruauntes conspyred agaynst hym, and slewe hym in his owne house.

And the people of the land slewe all that had conspyred agaynst king Amon. And thereto the people of the land made Josias his sonne kyng in his rowme.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

J Josias destroyeth the Idols and restoreth the temple in whiche is founde the booke of the lawe. He sendeth to Holdah the propheteesse for counsell.

J Josias was made king when he was. viii. yeare olde, and he reigned in Ierusalem. xlii. yeares. And he dyd that pleased the Lord and walked in the wayes of Dauid his father, bowing nerher to the ryght hand ne to the left. In so muche that the eyght yere of his reigne, when he was yet a lad, he beganne to seke after the God of Dauid his father. And in the. xii. yeare he beganne to purge Iuda and Ierusalem of hylaulters, groues, kerued Images, and Images of metall: so that they brake downe the aulters of Baals, euen in his presence, and the Idolles that were vpon them, he caused to be destroyed. And the groues carued Images, & Images of metall he brake & made dust of theym, and strowed it vpon the graues of them that had offced to them. And he burnt the bones of the priestes vpon the altars, and clenched Iuda and Ierusalem. And eue so did he in the cyytes of Manasse, Ephraim, Simeon, and of Reubeni. And in the wildernes of them rounde aboute he plucked a sondre the aultars and the groues, and dyd beat the & stamp the to poulder & beat downe the ydolles thorowout all the land of Israell: and then returned to Ierusalem.

In the. xvi. yeare of his reigne when he had purged the lande and the temple, he sent Saphan the sonne of Azalia, & Asaiah the gouernour of the cyyte, and Joah the sonne of Joachaz the recorder, to repaire the house of the Lord his God. And when they came to Helkiah the high priest, men deliuered theym the money that was brought into the house of God, whiche the Levites that kept the entrees had gathered of the handes of Manasse and Ephraim, and of all that yet remayned in Israell and of all Iuda, and Beniamin and of the enbasyters of Ierusalem. And they put it in the handes of the workemenne that had the ouersyght of the house of the Lord, whiche gaue it to the labourers that wrought on the house of the Lord, to repaire and mende it, and to masonnes and carpenters to hew stone and tymber, so to make couples and beames for the houses whiche the kinges of Iuda had destroyed: And the monee wroughte in the woorkes saythefullye.

And the ouerscars of theym to courage them were Jahath and Abadiah Leuytes of the children of Merari: and Secharya and Mesulam of the children of the Caba-tytes, & as manye other of the Levites as could skil of instrumentes of Musyke. And ouer the beateres of burchens & ouer al that wroughte, in whatso euer workemanshpy it were, wer ther scribes, offycers and porters of the Leuytes.

And as they broughte oute the monee that was broughte into the house, Helkiah the pryeste founde the booke of the lawe of the Lord, geuen by Moyses. And Elkyah answered and sayed to Saphan the scribe: I haue found the booke of the lawe in the house of the Lord, & gaue the booke to Saphan. And Saphan caried the booke to the kyng, and broughte the kyng word agayne sayinge: all that was committed to thy seruauntes, that do they. And they haue pottered oute the monee that was found in the house of the Lord, & haue deliuered it into the handes of the ouerscars of the workemen. And then Saphan the scribe shewed the kyng, sayinge: Helkiah the pryeste hath geuen me a booke, and he reade it before the kyng.

And when the kyng hadde hearde the wordes of the lawe, he tare his clothes and commaunded Helkiah and Abykam the sonne of Saphan, and Abadon the sonne of Micah, & the sayed Saphan the scribe, and

and Asaia a seruaunte of the kynges, sayinge: goo and enquire of the Lorde for me, and for them that are lefte in Israell and Juda, concernyng the wordes of the booke that is folowid. For great is the wrath of the Lorde that is fallen vpon vs, because oure fathers kepte not the worde of the Lorde, to do after al that is wrytten in thys boke.
And Helkias with them that pertained to the kyng wente to Holdab a prophetesse wife of Selum the sone of Thekohath the sonne of Asarah keper of the wardroppe (whiche prophetesse dwelte in Jerusalem in the .ii. ward) and they comuned so with her. And she sayde vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell, tell ye the man that sente you to me: euen thus sayeth the Lorde: lo, I wyll byynge euyl vpon thys place, and vpon the inhabiterstherof, euen al the curses that are wrytten in the boke whiche they haue reade before the kyng of Juda, bycause they haue forsaken me, and haue offered vnto other Gods to angre me wth all maner works of their han-des, therefore is my wrath sette on fire against this place, & shal not be quenched.

And as for the kyng of Juda whiche sente you to enquire of the Lorde, so shall ye sape vnto hym: thus sayth the lord God of Israel, concernyng the wordes whych thou haste hearde. Because thynne hert dyd melte and thou dyddeste meke thy selfe before God, when thou heardest his wordes against this place, & against the enhabiters thereof: and blybledst thy selfe before me, & tarest thy clothes and wepedst before me, that I heard also say the Lord. Beholde I wyll take the to thy fathers, & thou shalt be put in thy graue in peace, and thynne eyes shall not see all the myscheyse that I wyll byynge vpon thys place and vpon the inha-biters of the same. * And they brought the kyng worde agayne. Then the kyng sente and gathered togyther all the elders of Juda and Jerusalem. And the kyng went vp into the house of the Lorde, and all the men of Juda, and the inhabiteres of Ierusalem, & the prestes, and Leuytes, and all the people greete and smalle, & read al the wordes of the boke of the couenant that was found in the house of the Lorde. And the kyng stode at his standinge and made a couenaunt before the Lorde, to folowe the Lorde and to kepe hys commaundementes, hys witness-ses and hys statutes wth all hys herte, and wth all hys soule, and to fulfille the wordes of the appoyntemente wrytten in the sayde booke.

And he made to come forth al that were founded in Jerusalem and Beniamyn, and the inhabytours of Jerusalem pro-myssed to keepe the couenaunte of God whiche was the God of theyr fathers.
And Josias put awaye all maner abho-minacions out of al lands that pertayned to the children of Israell, & brought al that were founde in Israell to serue the lord theyr god, & they turned not a side from the Lord God of their fathers as longe as he lyued.

The xxxv. Chapter.

Josias holdeh passeouer. He fygtheth against the kyng of Egypt and dyeth. The people bewaple hym.

And Josias helde the feaste of passoe-uer vnto the Lorde in Jerusalem, & they flew passe ouer in the .xiiii. day of the .i. moneth. And he set the prestes in their offyses, and ayded them in the seruice of the house of the Lorde. And he sayde to the Leuytes that taughte thrououte all Israell, and were sanctified vnto the lord:
put the holy arke in the house whiche Salomon the sonne of Dauid kinge of Israell dyd buyde, ye nede not to beare it vpon your shoulders. Wherfor now we serue the Lord your God and hys people Israell. And prepare your selues by your auncent households and compaynes, accordyng to the wrytynge of Dauid kyng of Israell, and the wrytynge of Salomon hys sonne. And stand in þ holy place according to þ deuity-ons of the auncent households of your brethren the children of the people, & after the deuision of the auncent households of the Leuytes, & kil passeouer, sanctify & prepare your brethren þ they maye do accordyng to þ word of the lord by the hand of Moyses.

And Josias gaue to the common people in lambes and kyddes, for passeouer offerynges onelye, vnto all that were presente thys thousand by tale, and thre thousand oxen, euen of the kynges substance. And hys Lordes gaue wyllynge borth vnto the people, & vnto the prestes, and vnto the Leuytes. Helkia, zacharias, and Jehiell rulers of the house of God, gaue vnto the prestes for passouer offerynges, ii. thousand &
vi. hundred lambes and kyds, and .iiii. hundred oxen. And Conaniah Semetia, and Sa-thanaell his brethren, & Asabiah and Ja-iel, and Josabad, Lords of the leuytes, gaue vnto the Leuytes fyue thousande passeouer offerynges, and fyue hundred oxen.

And so the seruyce wente forward: & the prestes stode in theyr places, and the Leuytes in theyr compaynes at the kynges commaundment. And they offered passeouer: and the prestes sprynckled the bloude, receauyng it of the Leuytes, and the Leuytes strypte the beastes. And they set awaye the burnte offerynges, to geue them vnto the commune people as they were deuoyded by auncente houses, for to offer vnto the Lorde, as is wrytten in the booke of the Moyses. And so dyd they wth the oxen to.
And they dressed the passeouer with fyre, as the maner was. But the other halowed dedicare beastes they sod in pots, cauldernes & pannes, & dealed them quickly among all the commune people. And afterwarde they made readye for theym selues and for the prestes, and for the children of Aaron, whiche were busied in offerynge burnte offerynges and the fat, vntyll nyghte. And therefore the Leuytes prepared for them selues, and for the priestes the sonnes of Aaron. And the syngers the chyldren of Asaph stode in their standynge accordynge to the commaundemente of Dauid and Asaph Heman and Iduthun the kynges sear of visions: and the porters wayted at euery gate, and myghte not departe from their seruyce: But they brethren the Leuytes prepared for them. And so at the seruyce of the Lord went forward the sayd day, in offerynge passeouer of burnte offerynges vpon the aultare of the Lorde, accordynge to the commaundemente of kyng Josias. And so the chyldren of Israel that were found, offered passeouer the same tyme and kept the feast of sweete bread. vii. daies. And ther was no passeouer like to that kept in Israel from the tyme of Samuel the prophet: neyther did any of the kynges of Israel holde such a passeouer feast as dyd Josias, and the priestes and Leuytes and all Juda, and as muche of Israel as coulde be had, and the inhabiteres of Jerusalem. And this passeouer was holden in the eyghtene yere of the raygne of Josias.

D After all this, when Josias had synnified the temple, Necho kyng of Egypt, came vp to fyghte agaynst Carramus vpon Euphrates, & Josias went out agaynst hym. And the other sent messengers to hym, saying: what haue I to do wyth the þ kyng of Juda? I came not agaynst the nowe at this tyme, but agaynst an house wyth whome I haue war, & God had me haste. Leue therefore and meddle not wyth God which is wth me, lest he destroye the. Neuertheles Josias turned not hys face from hym, but made hym ready to fyghte wyth hym, & hearken not vnto the wordes of Necho out of the mouth of god. And when he was come to fyght in the valey of Megiddo, the shooters shotte agaynst the kyng Josias. And the kyng sayed to hys seruauntes: carpe me awaye, for I am sore hurt. And hys seruauntes had hym oute of that charer and put him in an other, and brought him to Jerusalem wher he died & was buried in the sepulchre of his fathers. And Jeremy lamented Josias, & al singynge me & singynge womē spake of Josias to this day, & made it an ordinaunce in Israel: & they be wyrtten in lamentaciōs. The rest of the actes of Josias and his goodnes in folowynge the wyrtynge of the law and his dedes first and last, are wyrtten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Juda.

salem. And Joachaz was. xlii. yere olde when he beganne to raygne, and raygned thre monethes in Jerusalem. For the kyng of Egypt put hym downe at Jerusalem, & ransomed the land in an hundred talents of syluer and a talent of gold. And the kyng of Egypt made Eliakim hys brother kyng vpon Juda and Jerusalem, and turned hys name vnto Joakim, but Necho toke Joachaz his brother, & caried him to Egypt. Joakim was. xxi. yere old when he began to raygne, & raygned. xi. yere in Jerusalem: & he dyd that dyspleased the Lorde his God. Against him came Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon & bound him in fetters to carpe hym to Babylon. Moreover the kyng Nabuchodonosor carped of the vesselles of the house of the Lorde to Babylon, and put the in his temple at Babylon. The reste of the actes of Joakim and his abominacions, and that was laid to his charge, are wyrtten in the boke of the kynges of Israel: and Joacin his sonne raygned in his steade. Joacin was. viii. yere olde when he beganne to raygne, & he raygned thre monethes & ten dayes in Jerusalem, and dyd that dyspleased the Lord. And when the yere was oute, kyng Nabuchodonosor sente, and fet hym to Babylon with the goodly vesselles of the house of the Lorde, and made Sedekias hys brother kyng ouer Juda and Jerusalem. And Sedekias was. xxi. yere olde whē he began to raygne, & raygned. xi. yere in Jerusalem. And he did that dyspleased the Lord his god, & humbled not hym selfe before Jeremy the prophet at the mouthe of the Lorde. And thereto he rebelled agaynst Nabuchodonosor whiche had receyued an othe of hym by God, and was styfnecked & to hard herted to turne vnto the Lord god of Israel. Furthermore all the rulers of priests w the people trespassed a pace after al maner of abominacions of the Danims and poluted the house of the lord, which he had halowed in Jerusalem. And the Lorde God of their fathers sente to them by hys messengers, sendynge them by tymes: for he had compassion on his people and on his dwelling place. But they mocked the messengers of God, & dyspyled they wordes, and mysused hys prophetes, vntyll the wrath of the Lorde so aroose agaynst hys people, þ it was paste remedye. And so he broughte vpon them the kyng of Caldey, and setwe they yonge men wth the sword in they holye temple, and neyther spared yonge man nor mayden, neither old man, nether so much as him, that stouped for age. But gaue all into hys hande.

And all the vesselles of the house of God both greate & small, & the treasures of the house of God, and the treasures of the kyng & his lordes, he carped to Babylon euerye whyle. And they burnt the house of God and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, and burnt al the palaces therof wth fyre, wth all the goodly stuffe therof, and marred it.

The buyldynge of the temple is hindered.

1. Esdras. i. a

At when the aduersaries of Juda and Benjamin hearde that the children of captiuitie builded the temple vnto the Lorde God of Israel, they came to 3020babbell and to the principall fathers, and sayde to them: We wyll buylde wpth you: for we seke the Lorde your God as ye do. And we haue done sacryfice vnto him, synthes that Asor Baddo king of Assur brought vs vppre hyther. But 3020babbell and Jesua and the other aunciente fathers of Israel answered them. It belongeth not too you but to vs to buylde the house vnto our God: for we our selues wyl buylde alone vnto the Lorde oure God of Israel as Cyrus kynge of Persia hath commaunded vs.

Rehum the chaunceler, and Samsai the scribe wrot also an epistle from Jerusalem, to Artaxarces the kynge, of this tenoure.

We Rehum the chauncelour, and Samsai the scribe, and other of the counsell of Dina, of Arphasath, of Tarparate, of Persia, of Arach, of Babilon, of Susan, of Debba, and of Elam, and other of the people, whome the greates and Noble Asenaphar broughte ouer, and sette it in the ctytes of Samaria, and other on this side the water and in Cenereth. (This is the summe of the letter that they sente vnto kynge Artaxarces) Thy seruantes the men on this syde the water, and in Cenereth to kynge Artaxarces, greting. Be it knowen vnto the king that the Jewes are come by from the vnto vs vnto Jerusalem a cite sedicious and frowarde, and buylde the same, and laye 3 foundation of the walles thereof: and repayre them. Know now therfore, O kynge, that if this ctyte be buylde and the wals made vppre againe, they shall not geue tribute, toll, ne perely custome, and so euen vnto the kynges shall this hurte redounde. But nowe synce we all are thereby, whiche destroyed that temple, we wol no longer se the kynges by honoure. Therfore we haue sente oute, and caused the kynge to be certyfied therof: that serche maye be made in the Chronicles of thy progenitours, and so shalte thou fynde in the same Chronicles, and perceiue that this ctyte is sedicious, and noysome vnto kynges and landes and that they cause others also to rebell of old, and for the same cause was this cite destroyed. Therfore we certify the king, that if this cite be builded, & the wals therof made vp, thou shalt kepe nothyng on this syde the water by reason of it.

Then sente the kynge an answer vnto Rehum the chaunceler, and Samsai the scribe and to the other of their counsel that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto the other beyonde 3 water. Peace and salutacion. The letters whiche ye haue sente vs, haue bene openly redde befoze me, and I haue commaunded to make searche: and it is founde, that this ctyte of olde hath made insurrectyon agaynst kynges, and how that sedition & rebellion hath bene commytted therein. Where haue bene myghty kynges also at Jerusalem, whiche haue raigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, and tol, tribute and perely custome was geuen them. Doe now after this commaundemente, for by the same men, that the ctyte be not builded.

ded, til I haue geuen you commaundment. Se nowe ye be not negligent herein, least the kinge haue harme by meanes of it.

When king Artaxerces letters were red before Nehum the chauncellour, and Samlai the scribe, and their counsell, they went vp in al hast to Ierusalem vnto the Jewes and forbad them with violence and power. Then ceased the worke of the house of god at Ierusalem, and continued so till the seconde pere of Darius king of Persia.

ceaseth.

The prophetes, Aggeus, and zacharye the son of Adu, prophesied vnto the Jewes that wer in Ierusalem, in the name of the God of Israell. Then gat vp zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, and beganne to builde the house of God at Ierusalem, and wpth them the prophetes of God whiche helped the. At the same time came to them Thathanai the Capitayn on thys syde the water, and Stharbazanai, & theyr felowes, and sayde thus vnto them. Who hath commaunded you to builde this house, and too make vp the walles therof? Then tolde we them the names of the men, that made this building. But vpo the elders of the Jewes came the eie of their God, so that they could not cause them to cease, til the matter was brought afore Darius, and til they had answered by letters therunto.

This is the copy of the letters that Thathanai Capitain on this side the water, and Stharbazanai and the adherentes of Apharsach (whiche were on this syde the water) sente vnto kynge Darius. The wordes they sente vnto him were these. Vnto Darius the kynge, all peace. Be it knowen to the kynge, that we came into Jewrye to the house of the greate God whiche is builded wpthrough stone, and beames are laid in the walles, and the worcke goeth faste forth, and prospereth in their handes. We asked the elders, and sayde vnto them:

Who hath commaunded you too buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? We asked theyr names also, that we myghte certifye the, and haue wyrtten the names of the men that were theyr rulers.

But they answered vs these wordes, and saide: We are the seruaunts of the God of heauen and earthe, and builde the house þ was buylded manye yeres ago, whiche a greate kynge of Israell buylded and sette vpp. And after our fathers had spured the God of heauen vnto wrathe, he gaue them ouer into the hande of Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babylon the Calde whiche ouerthrewe this house, and caried the people away vnto Babilon. Take these vessels, go thy waye, and brynge them vnto the temple at Ierusalem, and let the house of God be builded in his place. The same came the same Sabazar, and layde the foundation of the house of God at Ierusalem. Sithens that time hath it bene in buyldynge, and as yet is not fynished. Nowe therefore if it lyke the kynge, let searche be made in the kynges treasure house at Babylon, whether it was kynge Cyrus commaundemente, that the house of God at Ierusalem shuld be buylded: and sende vs the kynges pleasure in thys behalfe.

The. vi. Chapter.

At commaundemente of Darius, when the temple was builded and dedicate, the children of Israell kepte the feast of the vnleuened breade.

Then commaunded kynge Darius, searche to be made in the Librarie of the kinges bookes, whiche lay at Babilon. So at Egbathanis in a castel that lieth in the land of Medes, was found a booke, and in it was a record writte after thys maner: in the first pere of kynge Cyrus, commaunded king Cyrus to buylde the house of God at Ierusalem, in the place wher the sacrifice is made, and to lay a foundation of .lx. cubytes hyghe, and thre skore cubites brode, and thre wals of rough stones, and one wal of timber, and the expences shoulde be geuen of þ kinges house. And the gold & siluer vessels of the house of God (whiche Nabuchodonozor toke out of the temple at Ierusalem and brought vnto Babilon) shuld be restored agayne, that they mape be broughte vnto þ temple at Ierusalem to their place, into the house of God.

Nowe therefore thou Thathanai capptaine beyonde the water, and Stharbazanai, and your felowes which ar beyond the water, get ye awaye from them. Let them work in the house of God that the captain of the Jewes and theyr elders mape builde the house of God in his place. I haue commaunded also, what shalbe done to the elders of Iuda for the buylding of the house of God, that there shall diligently be taken of the kynges goodes, euen of the reuenues beyonde the water, and geuen vnto the men: and that they be not hindred.

That if they haue nede of calues, lambes, or gotes, for burnt offering vnto the god of heauen, wheate, salte, wyne and oyle, after the custome of the priestes at Ierusalem, be it geuen them dayly that no complainte be made herein. And let them offer sweete sauours vnto the God of heauen, & praye for the kings life, and for his childre. Thys commaundemente haue I geuen, & what man so euer uttereth these wordes, ther shall

Then Thathanai, the Capytayne beponde the water, and Stharbazanai wpth theyr felowes (to whome kynge Darius hadde sente) dōd their deuoure. And the elders of the Jewes builded, and thei prospered thowre the prophceinge of Aggeus the prophete and zacharie the sonne of Ado: and builded, and set vp the worke, accordyng to the commaundemente of the God of Israell, and after the commaundemente of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerces kynges of Persia. And they were in synshyng the house vnto the thyr dape of the moneth Adar, that was in the. vi. pere of þ rapgne of kynge Darius.

U. D And the chyldrene of captiuitie helde passeouer vpon the fourtenth dape, of the fyrst moneth: for the priestes and Leuites had purified them selues, so that they wer al as cleane as one man, and offered passeouer for all the children of captiuitie, and for theyr brethren the priestes, and for them selues. And the children of Israell, whyche wer returned out of captiuitie, and all such as had seuered them selues from the filthynes of the Danimes in the land, to seeke þ Lord God of Israell, eat and held the feast of vneleuened breade seven daies wpthiope: for the Lord had made them glad and turned the hert of the king of Assur vnto them so that theyr handes were strengthened in the worke of the house of God, whyche is the God of Israell.

The. vii. Chapter.

U By commaundemente of Artaxerces, Esdras taketh the children of Israell, and returneth to Ierusalem.

E After these thinges in the rapgne of Artaxerces kynge of Persia, there wente vp from Babilon, Esdras the sonne of Saraiah, the son of Azariah, the sonne of Helkia, the sonne of Selum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne of Maraioth, the sonne of Zarahiah, the sonne of Dsi, the sonne of Boki, the sonne of Abisua, the sonne of Ishinees, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the chiefe prieste. This Esdras was a quicke scribe in the lawe of Moses, * whiche the Lord god of Israel did geue. And the king gaue hym all he required, accordyng to the hande of the Lorde his God vpon him.

So wente vp certayne of the chyldrene of Israell, and of the priestes, and of the Leuites, of the fingers, of the porters, and of the Methinims vnto Ierusalem, in the seuenth pere of kynge Artaxerces. And they came to Ierusalem in the fythe moneth, that is the seuenth pere of the kynge. For vpon the fyrste dape of the fyfthe moneth, began he to go vppe from Babilon: and on the fyrste dape of the fyfthe moneth came he to Ierusalem accordyng to the good hande of God vpon him. For Esdras prepared his herte to seke the lawe of the Lord and doo it, and to teache the precepte and iudgement in Israell.

This is the coppe of the letter that king Artaxerces gaue vnto Esdras the prieste, the scribe, whiche was a teacher in the wordes of the Lord, & of his statutes ouer Israell. Vnto Esdras the prieste and scribe in the lawe of God of heauen, peace and gretynge. I haue commaunded that al they of the people of Israell, and of the priestes and Leuites in my realme, whiche ar minded to go vppe to Ierusalem, that they goo wpth the, beyng sente of the kinge and of the seuen Lordes of the counsel, to vpsyte Iuda and Ierusalem, accordyng to the lawe of God, whiche is in thy hande and þ thou take with the, siluer and gold, which the kinge and the Lordes of his counsell haue geuen of theyr good wil vnto the god of Israell (whose habitacion is at Ierusalem) and al the syluer and golde thou canst fynde in al the countrey of Babilon: wpth that also that the people and priestes giue of theyr good wyll vnto the house of God at Ierusalem. Take thou that same and bpe diligently wpth it, calues, lambes, gotes, and sacryfices, and dypke offeringes to be offred vpon the aulter of the house of pour God at Ierusalem. And loo what it lyketh the and thy brethren, to do wpth the reste of the monie, that do after the wil of pour God. And the vesselles that are geuenthe for the mynistratyon in the house of thy God, those deliuer thou before God at Ierusalem.

And whatsoeuer thyng moze shall be nedefull for the house of thy God, whyche is necessarye for the to spende, let the same be geuen oute of the kynges Chamber.

I kynge Artaxerces haue decreed and commaunded to all the keepers of oure treasure beyonde the water, that looke whatsoeuer Esdras the priest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heauen requyeth of pou, that ye fulfyll the same diligently vntil an hundred talentes of siluer, and vntil an. C. quarters ters of whete, and till an hundred Bathes of wine, and til an hundred Bathes of oyle and salte withoute measure. Whatsoever belongeth to the rites of the God of heauen let the same be done with diligence for the house of the God of heuen, that ther come no wrath thereof, vpon the kyngs realme and hys childzen.

And knowen be it vnto you, that ye shal haue no auctorite to requyre taxes and custome and perely rentes vppon anye of the Priestes, Leuites, singers, porters, Methinims, and Ministers in the house of thys God. But thou Esdras (after the wisdom of the God that is in thy hande) sette thou Judges and presidetes to iudge al the people that is beyond Jordan, euen all suche as know the law of thy God, and the that know it not, those see that ye teache. And whosoever wil not diligently fulfil þe lawe of thy God, and the kings lawe, shal haue his iudgement for the dede, whether it be vnto death or to be banished, or to be condemned in goodes or to be put in prison.

* Praise be the Lorde God of your fathers, which so hathe inspired the Kinges herte to garnishe the house of God at Jerusalem, and hathe enclyned hys mercye vnto me in the presence of the Kyng and hys counsellours, and before all the kynges byghthe estates. And I was comforted (accordynge to the hande of the Lorde my God ouer me) and so gathered I the heaues of Israell together, that they myghte goo by with me.

The. viii. Chapter.

The number of them that returned to Jerusalem with Esdras.

These are the heades of the fathers þe wer named, which wente by with me from Babilon: what tyme as king Artaxerces ragned.

Of the chyldren of phinees, Bersom: of the children of Jthamar Damel: of the children of Dauid, Batus, of the children of zecaniah, of the children of pharos, zachary wth hym were numbred an hundred and fyftie men: of the children of pahath, Agab, Elioenai the sonne of zarakiah, and wth hym two hundred men: of the chyldrene of zechaniah the sonne of Jahasiel, and with hym thre hundred men: of the chyldren of Adin, Abed, the sonne of Jonathan, and wth hym fyftie men: of the children of Elam Esaiiah the sonne of Athaliah, & wth hym seuentie men of the chyldren of Saphatia, zabadijah the sonne of Michael, and wth hym lxxx. men.

Of the children of Noab Obodiah the sonne of Jehiell and wth hym two hundred and xviij. men: of the children of Selo mith, the sonne of Josaphiah, and with him an l. and iii. men. Of the children of Bebai, zachari, & sonne of Bebai, & with him xviij. me. Of þe chyldre of Agad, Johanan the son of Bakatay, & with him an l. & ten me. Of the last chyldren of Adonias, & these were thei names, Eliphelet, Jehiell and Samaiah, and with them lvi. score men.

Of the chyldre of Begui, Uthai and zabud and wth them seuentie men. And I gathered them together by the water that renneth towarde Ahava, and there abode we iii. dayes. And when I looked amonge the people and the priestes, I founde no Leuites ther. Then sent I Eliezer, Ariel, Sememiah, Elathan, Jarib, Elathan, Pashan, zachary and Asollam the rulers, and Joarib and Elathan the teachers and those sent I vnto Edo & chiefest at Casphia, that they shuld fetch vs ministers for the house of our God, and I tolde them what they shuld say vnto Edo, and to his brethren the Methinims at Casphia.

And (accordynge to the good hande of oure God vpon vs) they brought vs a wise man from the chyldren of Agoli the son of Leui, the sonne of Israel, I meane Sarabia wth hys sonnes and brethren xviij. And Salabia, and wth him Esaiiah of the children of Merari with his brethren and thei sons. xx. And of the Methinims, whos David and the Princes gaue to mynister vnto the Leuites. ii. l. and twentye, al named by name.

And euen there at the water beside Ahava caused I a fastinge to be proclaymed, þe we myghte humble oure selues before oure God, to seke of him a right way for vs, and oure childzen, and al our substance.

For I was ashamed to requyre of the kyng, souldyours and horsemen, and to helpe vs agaynst the enemy in the way. For we had sayd vnto the kyng: The hand of our God is vpon al them that seke hym in goodnes, and his violence and wrath vpon al them that forsake him. So we fasted, and sought this at our God, and he heard vs. Then I toke out. xii. of the chiefe Priestes, Sarabia, and Salabia, and x. of the brethren with them, and weied them the syluer and golde, and vesselles for the offering vnto the house of our God, whiche the kyng and the Lorde of hys counsel and princes, and al Israel that wer at had had geuen to the offering: and there weied I them vnder thei hand, sixe hundred and fifty talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessell an hundred talentes, and in gold an hundred talentes, twenty cuppes of gold, a dramme, and two costely ornaments of good brasse, as cleare as gold, and said vnto them: Ye are holpe vnto the Lord, therefore are the vessels holpe also, and so is the syluer and goulde that is geuen of a good wyll vnto the Lorde God of your fathers: Watche ye therefore and kepe it, tye ye wey it down before the chiefe Priestes and Leuites, and auncpente fathers of Israell at Jerusalem in the Tresoury of the house of the Lorde. Then toke the Priestes and Leuites the weped syluer and golde and vessell, to bynge it to Jerusalem vnto the house of oure God. So we marched forward, ward, from the water of Abana, on the tweluth daye of the fyfte moneth, to goo vnto Iherusalem: and the hand of our god was vpon vs, and deliuered vs from the hand of the enemy & liers in await by the way. And we came to Iherusalem, and abode there thre daies. But on y fourth day was the syluer and gold, and vessel weyed in the house of our God vnder the hand of Meremoth the sonne of Uriah the Prieste, and wyth him Eleazer the sonne of Pharynes, and wyth hym Josabab the sonne of Jhesua, and Noadiah, the sonne of Benoi the Leuytes, accordynge to the number and weight of euery one. And the weight was al written at the same time.

And the chyldren of the captiuyty, whiche wer come out of pryson offered burnt-offerynges vnto the god of Israel, twelue bullockes for al Israel: nineti & sixe rams, seuentye and seuen lambes, and twelue goates for a synnec-offeryng, also the burnt-offeryng of the Lorde. And they deliuered the kynges commysson vnto the kynges offycers, and to the captaynes on this side the water. And they auauenced the people, and the house of God.

The reformed vnto me al such as feared the word of the Lord god of Israel, by cause of the greates transgression. And I sat mournyng til the euening sacrifice. And about the euening sacrifice, I rose vp fro my heuines, and rent my clothes and my raymente, and felle vpon my knees, and spred oute my handes vnto the Lord my God, and sayd: My God, I am ashamed, and dare not lyft up mine eyes to the my god: for our wyckednesses are growen ouer our head, and oure trespases are waxed great vnto the heauen: Sithes the tyme of our fathers, haue we bene in great trespase vnto this day, and because of oure wickednes haue we and oure kynges bene gyven vp into the hand of the kyngs of the nacjons, into the swerde, into bondage, into spoyle, and into confusyon of face, as it is come to passe thys daye.

And neuer beleffe we haue turned backe and haue let goo thy commaundementes, to make contracte with the people of these abominacions. Wilt thou then be wroth wyth vs, til we be vtterly consumed, so that notynge remayne and til ther be no deliuerance? O Lorde God of Israel thou arte rightuous, for we remayne yet escaped, as it is thys daye. Behold in thy presence are we in our trespase, for by cause of it ther is no standynge before the.

The people repente them, and put away theyr strange wyues.

While Esdrias prayed after thys manner and knowledged, wept and laye before the house of God, there resorted vnto hym out of Israel a very greates number of men and women, and chyldren: for the people wepte very sore. And Sechias the sonne of Iehiel one of the chyldren of Blam, answered and sayde vnto Esdrias: We haue trespassed against the lord our God, in that we haue strange wyues of al the people of the lande. Now is there hope yet in Israel concernyng this, therefore let vs make a couenaunte nowe wyth our God, to put away al the wyues, and such as are borne of them, according to the counsell of the Lord, and of them that feare the commaundemente of our God, that we maye do accordynge to the lawe. Get the vp therefore, for the matter belongeth vnto the. We wyl be wyth the, be of good conforte and doo it. Then rose Esdrias, and toke an oth of the rulers, priestes and Le-

When I heard these wordes, I fate me downe and wept, and mourned thre dayes and fasted and prayed before the God of heauen, and sayed: O Lord God of heauen thou greate and terrible God, *thou that keepst couenaunt and mercy for them that loue the, and obserue thy commaundementes. Let thine eares harken, and thine eyes be open that thou mayest heare the prayer of thy seruante, wherbye I praye now before the, daye and nyghte, for the childre of Israel thy seruantes, and knowledg the synnes of the children of Israel, which we haue comitted agaynst the. And I and my fathers house haue synned also. We haue ben corrupt vnto the, in that we haue not kepte the commaundementes, statutes and lawes, wherby thou commaundedst thy seruante Moyses. Yet call to remembrance the word that thou commaundedst thy seruante Moyses, and sayedest: If ye trasgresse, I wyl scatter you abrod among the nacjons. But if ye turne vnto me, and kepe my commaundementes and do them though ye wer cast out vnto the uttermost part of heauen, yet wyl I gather you thence and bypunge you euen vnto the place that I haue chosen for my name, to dwel there.

The.ii.chapter.

After Nehemy had obtayned letters of Artaxerxes, he cometh to Jerusalem, and builded the walles.

In the moneth of Nisan in the. xx. yere of kyng Artaxerxes when the wyne stode before him, I toke vp the wine and gaue it vnto the kyng, and I was heauye in hys presence. Then sayed the kyng vnto me: why lookest thou so sadlye? Thou art not speke, thy is not wrythoute cause, but there is somewhat not well in thyne herte. And I was sore afraid & said vnto the kyng: God saue the kynges lyfe for euer, shuld I not loke sadlye? the ctyte of my fathers burpall lyeth wast, and the gates therof are consumed with fire. The said the king to me: what is thy request? then made I my prayer to the God of heauen, and sayd vnto the kyng: if it please the kyng, and if thy seruante be fauoured in thy sight: I beseeche the send me into Iuda, vnto the cty of my fathers burial, that I may buyld it. And the king said vnto me and also his quene that sat by him: how longe shal thy iourney continue, & when wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased the kyng to send me, and I set hym a tyme, & sayed vnto the king: if it please thy king, let hym graue me letters to the captaynes beyond the water, that they may coney me ouer, til I come into Iuda: & letters vnto Asaph keeper of the kynges wood, that he may graue me wood for beames to the gates of the temple, for the towres of the house, for the walles of the ctyte, and for the house that I shal enter into.

And the kyng gaue me accordyng to the good hand of God vpon me. And when I came to the capitaynes beyond the water I deliuered them the kynges letters. And the kyng had sente captaynes and horse men wryth me. But when Sanabalat the Horonite, and Tobiah the seruante of the Ammonites heard thys, it greued the soze that ther was come a man which sought the welth of the children of Israel. And when I came to Jerusalem, and had bene there iii. dayes, I gat me vp in the nyght seco, & a few men wryth me: for I tolde no manne what God hadde grauen me in mine herte to do at Jerusalem, and ther was not one beast wryth me, saue that I rode vpon. And I rode by nyght to the valey gate before the dragon well, and to the donge gate, and considered the walles of Jerusalem that wer broken downe, and the gates therof consumed wryth the fyre. And I went ouer vnto the welgate and to the kynges condite and ther was no rowme for my beast, that it coude go vnder me. Then went I on in the nyght by the broke side, and considered the wall, and turned backe & came home as gayn to the valey gate. And the rulers knew not wherbye I went or what I dyd, for he therto had I not told the Jewes and the priestes, the counsellors and the rulers and the other that laboured in the worke. And I sayd vnto them: ye se the mystry that we are in: Jerusalem lieth wast, and the gates therof are brent wryth fire, come let vs build vpon the wals of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproch. And I told the of the good hand of my God, which was vpon me: and the kynges wordes that he had spokē vnto me. And they said: then let vs arise & build, & their hands wer strenghted to good. But when Sanabalat the Horonite, and Tobiah the seruante of the Ammonites, and Geslem the Arabian heard thys, they laughed vs to scozne, and despised vs, & said: what is this that ye do? Wyl ye sal away agayn fro the king? Then answered I the, & sayd: the god of heauen it is that causeth vs to prosper: and we be his seruantes. Let vs arise & build. As for you, ye haue no porcyon nor tyght, nor remembrance in Jerusalem.

and set on the dores lockes and barres of it. Next vnto hym buylded Marymoth, the sonne of Uriah, the sonne, Bakoz. Next vnto hym buylded Mosolam the sonne of Barachiah the sonne of Meselaheell. Next vnto hym buylded zador the sonne of Baana. Next vnto hym buylded they of Thekua. But they: greate menne put not their neckes to the seruice of their lordes.

The old gate buylded Notada the sonne of Paseah, and Mosolam the sonne of Besodiah, they couered it, and set on the dores lockes, and barres. Next vnto them buylded Malatiah of Babaon, and Fadon of Merano, men of Babaon, and of Maspha for the seate of the capitayne on thys syde the water. Next vnto hym buylded Aspell the sonne of Barachiah the goldsmith. Next to him buylded Hananiah the Apotecaries sonne, and they repayred Ierusalem vnto the broad walle. Next vnto hym buylded Rappaiab the sonne of Hur the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ierusalem. Next vnto him buylded Nedaiab the sonne of Harerah ouer againste his house. Next vnto hym buylded Hatus the sonne of Basaboniah. But Melchia the sonne of Barim, and Basub the sonne of Sabath Moab buylded the other pyce, & the towre besyde the forname. Next vnto hym buylded Selum the sonne of Balobes the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ierusalem, and his daughters.

The valei gate buylded Hanun, and the citezins of zanoh. They buylded it, and set on the dores, lockes, & barres, and a thousand cubytes on the wal, vnto donge gate. But donge gate buylded Melchiah the sonne of Rechab the ruler of the fourthe part of the vyneyardes: he buylded it, and sette on the dores, lockes and bars therof. But the wel gate buylded Selum the sonne of Chohasab, the ruler of the fourth part of Masphab. He buylded it, and couered it, and set on the dores, lockes, & barres, & the wall vnto the poole of Siloah by the kynges garde vnto the steps that go downe from the citty of Dauid. After him buylded Nehemyas the sonne of Azbok, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Bethzur, vnto the other side ouer against the sepulchres of Dauid, & the poole of Asala, and vnto the house of the myghtye.

After him buylded the Leuytes, Rehum the sonne of Bani. Next vnto hym buylded Basabiah the ruler of the halfe quarter of Keilah in his quarter. After hym buylded their brethren, Banai the sonne of Hanabad, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Keilah. After hym buylded Ezer the sonne of Hosua, the ruler of Masphab, the other piece hard ouer against the barnes corner. After him buylded Baruch the sonne of Zabai the other piece worshypfully and costly fro the corner vnto the doze of the house of Eliash the hygh priest. After him buylded Marimuth the sonne of Uriah, the sonne of Marcos the other piece from the doze of the house of Eliash, euē as longe as the house of Eliash extended. After him buylded the priestes the men of the country. After him buylded Beniamin & Basub ouer against they: house. After them Asariah the sonne of Maasiah, the sonne of Anantah, next vnto hys house. After him buylded Benut the sonne of Hanabad, the other pyce fro the house of Asaph, vnto the turnynge, and vnto the corner. After hym buylded Basal the sonne of Asat ouer agaynst the corner, and the hye towre, which lieth oute ouer from the kynges house, beside the court of the pylō. After him buylded Shadaiab the sonne of Sharos (as for the Perthinimes they dwelte in Dphel, vnto the watergate, toward the East wher the towre lieth oute.) After him buylded they of Thekua the other piece ouer against the gret towre & lieth outward, & vnto the wal of Dphel.

But from horse gate forth buylded the priestes, euery one ouer agaynst hys house. After them buylded zadocke the sonne of Emer ouer agaynst hys house. After hym buylded Semeiah the sonne of Sechanyah keeper of East gate. After hym buylded Hananyab sonne of Selemiah, and Hanan son of zalaph the syrt, the other piece. After hym buylded Mosolam the sonne of Barachiah ouer agaynst hys treasure. After hym buylded Melchiah the goldsmithes sonne, vntil the house of the Perthinimes, & of the merchantes ouer agaynst the counsell gate, and to the parloure in the corner. And betwene the parlour of the corner vnto the shepe gate buylded the goldsmithes and the marchauntes.

The.iii. Chapter.

The building of Ierusalem is hindered and let, but the Jewes build it being redy harneised lest their enemies shuld inuade them.

When Sanabalat heard that we buylded the wal, he was wroth, and toke greate indignacion, and mocked the Jewes, and sayde before hys brethren and the holte of Samaria: what do the weake Jewes? shal they be thus suffred? shal they offer? shal they perfourme it in one daye? shal they make the stones whole agayne that are brought to duste and brente? And Tobys the Ammonite beside hym sayd: let them buylde on, if a fore go vp he shal breake downe they: stoupe wall. Heare thou our God how we are despyled, turn they: shame vpon they: owne heade, that thou mayst geue them ouer into despylyng in the lande of they: captiuitie. Couer not they: wyckednesse, and put not oute they: spume from thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. Yet buylded we the walle, and ioyned it hole together vnto the halfe beygthe. And the people were well mynded to laboure. But when Sanabalat and Tobys, and the Arabians, and Ammonytes, and Asdodytes hearde that the walles of Ierusalem were made vp, and that they had begonne forthe it came to passe, that the halfe parte of the yonge men dyd the labour, and the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes bowes, and breaste plates: and the rulers stode behynde al the house of Iuda, which builded on the walle, and bare burtrumpeters stode besyde me. And I sayde vnto the pryncypall men and rulers, and to the other people: the worke is great and large, and we are deuised vpon the walle, one farre frō an other. Loke in what place nowe ye heare the noyse of the trompette, resorte ye thither vnto vs. Our God shal fghte for vs, and we wyl be labouryng in the worke. And the halfe part of the held the speares frome the morninge spryng, til the sters came forth. And at the same tyme sayed I vnto the people: euery one abyde wyth his seruante at Jerusalem, that in the nyght season, we may geue attendance to the watche, and to labour on the daye tyme. Surely I and my brethren and my

And ther arose a great complainte of the people: and of they: wyues a-gaynste they: brethren the Jewes.

And there were some that sayd: our sonnes and daughters are to manye, lette vs take corne for them and eate, that we may lyue.
Some sayde: let vs set our landes & vynea-pardes and houses to pledge, and take vp corne in the derth. But some sayd: lette vs borowe money of the kynges tribute for our landes and vyneyards. Now are our brethrens bodies as our owne bodies, and their childre as our childre: eis shoulde we subdue our sonnes & daughters to bōdage, and some of our daughters are subdued alredy, & no strength is ther in our hands, & other me shal haue our landes & vineyards.

But when I hearde they: complaynte and suche wordes, it dyspleased me sore, & I I reuolued so in my mind, that I rebuked the heads and rulers, and said vnto them: Deu. xlii. 6 *wyl ye requyre vsurpe one of another? vsurpe.
And I broughte a great congregacyon a-gaynste them, and saide vnto them: we (after our bablytpe) haue bought oute brethren the Jewes, whych wer solde to Sanimes. And wyl ye sel your brethren, whō we haue bought vnto vs? Then held they they: peace, and coulde synde nothyng to answer.

And I sayde: It is not good that ye do.
Oughte ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the heathen our enemies? I and my brethren, and my seruantes haue lentre them mony and corne, but as for vsurpe, lette vs leaue it.

Therfore this day, se ye restore them they:
landes agayne, they: vyneyards, oile gardens, and houses, yea, the hundred part of the mony, of the corne, wyne, and oyle, that ye haue won of them. Then sated they: we wyl restore them agayne, and wyl requyre nothyng of them, and wyl do as thou hast spoken. And I called the prestes, and toke an othe of them, that they shoulde do so.

And I shoke my lap and sayde: God shake out euery man after the same maner from his house and labour, that may at anye tyme not thys word: even thus be he shaken out and voyde. And al the congregacion sayd, Amen: and praysed the Lorde. And the people dyd so. And from the tyme that it was commytted vnto me to be a captaine in the lande of Iuda, namelye from the twentieth yere vnto the two and thirtieth yere of kyng Artaxerxes (that is threlue yere)
I & my brethren dyd not eate suche sustenance as was geuen to a capitaine. For the old captaynes that were before me, hadde bene chargeable vnto the people, and had taken of them bread and wyne, and four-tye syckles of syluer: yea and they: seruants hadde oppressed the people. But so dyd not I, and that because of the feare of God.
I laboured also in the woorkes vpon the walle, and bought no lande. And al my ser-uantes came thither together vnto the worke. Moreover there were at my table an hundred and fiftye of the Jewes and rulers.

The. vi. Chapter.

The bilding is yet agayne hindred and lette.

And when Sanabalat, Tobas, and Beseth the Arabian, & the other of our enemies herd that I had bullded the wal, and that ther wer no mo brekers ther in (howebeit at the same tyme I had not haged p doores vpo p gates) Sanabalat and Beseth sent vnto me, sayinge: come & let vs meete togither in the villages vpon the plaine of the cite Dno. Neuerthelesse they thought to do me euill. Notwithstanding I sent messengers vnto them sayinge: I haue a great busynes to doo, I can not come downe. The worke should stande stille if I were slacke and came downe to you. Howbeit they sent vnto me as good as four tymes after p same maner. And I gaue the same answer. Then set Sanabalat his seruaut vnto me the fyfthe tyme, with an open letter in his hand, wherein was wrytten: it was told p Heathen, & Beseth hath sayd it, that p and the Jewes thinke to rebel: for the whych cause thou buldest the wall, and wylt be the kyng in these matters, and haste ordeyned the prophetes to preache of the at Jerusalem, and to say he is kyng of Iuda. Nowe shall thys come to p kynges eares: come now therefore, & let vs take our counsell togither. Ne-uerthelesse I sent vnto hym, sayinge: there is no such thing done as thou sayest: thou hast sayned it oute of thine hearte. For they were al mynded to make vs a frayde, and thoughte: they shall withdraue theyr handes from the worke, that they shal not laboure. Howbeit I strenghted my hand the more. And I came vnto the house of Semeyah the sonne of Delayah the sonne of Mehetabel, and he had sette hym self wth in, & sayd: let vs come togither into the house of God, euen into the myddes of p temple, & shut the doores of p temple: for they wyl come to set the, yea, euen in the nyght wyl they come to put the to deathe. But I sayd: should any such man as I be? Who is that beyng as I am, that wyl go into the temple to saue hym self? I wil not go in. For I perceiued that God had not sente hym:
Yet spake the pophet vpon me, neuertheles Tobas & Sanabalat had byied hym for money. Therefore toke he the moneye, that through fear I shuld do so, & sin, that they myght haue an euill report of me, to blaspheme me. My God thinke thou vpon Tobias and Sanabalat, accordyng vnto to these their workes, and of the pophet

Roadiab, and of the other pophetes, that wold haue put me in feare. And the walle was fynished on the fyue and twenty daye of the moneth Elul, in two and fifty daies
And when all our enemyes herde thereof, all the Heathen that were about vs, were afrayde, and theyr courage fayled the, for they perceiued this their worke came of God. And at the same tyme were ther ma-nye of the chyese of Iuda, whose letters wente vnto Tobas, and from Tobas vnto them (for ther were many in Iuda that were sworen vnto him: for he was p sonne in law of Sechanyah, the sonne of Arab, & hys sonne Iohanan hadde the daughter of Mosolam the sonne of Barachyah, & they spake good of him before me, and told hym my wordes) and Tobas sente letters, to put me in feare.

The. vii. Chapter.

After the walle once buylded the watch is ap-poynted. They that returned from the cap-tivitye are numbred.

Vhen we had buylded the wal I haged on the doores, and the porters, singers, and Leuites were appoynted.
And I commaunded my brother Hanany, & Hananiah p ruler of p palace at Jerusalem (for he was a saythful man, & feared God more then did many other.) And I sayd vnto them: let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened till the sunne be hote. And whyle they are yet standyng in the watche the doores shal be shut & barred. And ther were certaine citizens of Jerusalem appoynted to be watchmen, euery one in his watche, and about his house. And the cite was large of rowme & great, but the people were fewe therin, and the houses were not buylded.
And my God did put in my herte that I gathered together the princypal men, and people to number them, and I founde a regyster of the number of them, whych came by a fore out of the captivity: and soold wrie te therin: * these are p sonnes of the land p went by from the captivity of the carryng awaye (whom Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon hadde broughte awaye) and came agayne to Jerusalem and Iuda, e-uerie one vnto hys cite, whych came wth zorobabell, Iesua, Nehemyas, Asa-riah, Raamiah, Rabamani, Gardocher, Beelsam, Gespharah, Beguai, Rahum, and Baanah.

Thys is the nuber of the men of the peodren of Agahida, the children of Barfa, the children of Berco, the children of Siffira, p children of Thamah: the children of Rezi-ah, the children of Batipha.

The children of Salomons seruants. The children of Socai, the children of Sophereth, the children of Shereda, the children of Jaala, the children of Darcon, the children of Bidell, the children of Saphatiah, the children of Batil, the children of Sochereth of Zabaim, the children of Amon. All the Bethinims and the children of Salomons seruantes, were three hundred ninety and two.

And there wente up also of Thellagela, Thell Barfa, Cherub, Adon and Emer.
but they could not shewe theyre fathers house, nor theyr seede, whether they were of Israell. The children of Dalaiah, the children of Tobia, and the children of Recoda were hundred and two and forty. And of the priests the children of Balaiah: the children of Bacos, the children of Bersilai, whiche tooke one of the daughters of Bersilai the Galaadite too wife, and was named after theyr name. These sought the register of theyr pedigree, and when they founde it not, they were putte from the priesthoode. And Bathirsatha sayde vnto them, that they shoulde not eate of the most holpe, till there came up a priest wth the lyghte and perfectnesse.

The hole congregacion as one manne was two and forty thousand, three hundred and three score, besyde theyr seruants and maydes, of whom there were seven thousand, three hundred and seven and thirty. And they hadde two hundred and seven and forty synginge men and womenne, seven hundred and xix and thirty horses, two hundred and five and four-ty mules, four hundred and. v. and thirty type Camelles: three thousand, seven hundred and twenty asses.

And certayne of the aunciente fathers gave vnto the worke. Bathirsatha gave to the treasure a thousand drammes, xix type basens, five hundred and thirty preistes garments. And some of the chiefe fathers gave vnto the treasure of the worke twenty thousand drammes, two thousand and two hundred pounde of syluer.
And the other people gave twenty thousand drammes, and two thousand pound of syluer, and three score and seven preistes garments. And the priests and Le-uites, the porters, the singers, and the other of the people, and the Bethinims, as al Israel dwelt in their cities.

The. viii. Chapter.

E Esdras gathereth the people and readeth to them the lawe. They keepe the feaste of tabernacles.

Vhen the seven moneth drew on, and the children of Israel were in theyr cities, al the people gathered together as one man vpon the strete before the water gate, and sayde vnto Esdras the scribe, that he shoulde fetch the booke of the lawe of

De. xxi. c.
iii. Reg.
xxiii. a.

The booke
of the lawe is read to the people.

Moses, which the Lorde commaunded to Israel. * And Edoas the preste broughte the lawe before the congregation, both of men and women, and of al that coulde vnderstande it, vpon the fyrste daye of the seuenth moneth, and read therein in þe strete that is before the water gate (from þe morninge vntill the none daye) before menne and women, and such as coulde vnderstand it: and the eares of all the people were enclined vnto the boke of the lawe. And Edoas the Scribe stode vppon an hyghe pulpit of woode, whiche they hadde made for the preachinge, and besyde hym stode Maathiah, Sema, Ananiah, Uriah, Belkiah, and Maasiah on his ryghte hande: and on hys leftte hand stode Shadaiah, Misael, Melchiah, Basum, Bassebadanah, Zacharye and Mosolam.

And Edoas opened the boke before all the people, for he stode aboue al the people, And when he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Edoas prayesed the Lorde þe grete God. And all the people answered: Amen, Amen, wth theyr hands vppre, and bowed them selues, and worshipped the Lorde wth theyr faces to the grounde. And Iesua, Bani, Serabiah, Jamin, Acuba, Sebathai, Hodaiiah, Maaseiah, Celita, Azariah, Josabab, Hanan, Shalaiah, and the Leuites caused the people to geue hede vnto þe lawe, and the people stode in theyr place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of God distinctlye and plainely, so that men vnderstode the thing that was red. And Nehemias (which is Bathisatha) and Edoas the preste and the Scribe, and the Leuites that caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: this daye is holpe vnto the Lorde your God: bee not ye sorre therefore, and weepe not, for all the people wepte when they heard the woordes of the lawe.

Therefore sayde he vnto them: goo your waye, and eate the fatte, and dryncke the swete, and sende part vnto them also that haue not prepared them selues, for this daye is holpe vnto oure Lorde, be not ye sorre therefore: for the iope of the Lorde is your strengthe. And the Leuites stilled the people, and sayde: houlde your peace, for the daye is holpe, beere not poure selues. And all the people went theyr waye to eate and dryncke, and sente parte vnto other, and to make grete myrthe, because they had vnderstande the woordes that were declared vnto them.

And on the nexte daye assembled the chiefe fathers amonge all the people, and the prestes and Leuits, vnto Edoas the Scribe, that he shoulde teache them the woordes of the lawe.

And they founde wyrtten in the lawe * howe the Lorde hadde commaunded by Moses, that the chyl dren of Israel shoulde dwel in bootes in the feast of the seuenth moneth. And so they caused it to be declared and proclaymed, in al theyr cyties, and at Jerusalem, saying: go vp vnto þe mozt, and fetch the Oliue braunches, þe hye braunches, þe myrt braunches, þe palme braunches, and braunches of thicke trees, to make bootes, as it is wyrtten.

And the people wente vp and fette, and made them bootes, euerye one vppon the rofe of his house, and in theyr courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, and in the strete by the water gate, and in þe strete by the gate Ephraim. And all the congregacion of theym that were come agayne oute of captiuyty, made bootes, & dwelte therein: for sythen the time of Josua the sonne of Nun vnto this daye, hadde not the chyl drene of Israel doone so, and thec was verpe grete gladnesse. And euery daye from the fyrste daye vnto the laste, redde he in the booke of the lawe of God. And seuen dayes helde they the feaste, and on the eyghte daye they made a gathering, accordyng to the manner.

The. ix. Chapter.

The people repēt and forsake theyr straung wyues. Edoas reciteth þe benifits of God and the synnes of the people.

In the foure and twenty daye of this moneth, came þe chyl dren of Israel together wth fastyng and sacke clothes, and earthe vpon them, and separated the seede of Israel from all the straunge chyl drene, and stode and knowleged theyr synnes, and the wickednesses of theyr fathers, and stode vp in theyr place, and red in the boke of the lawe of the Lorde theyr God, foure tymes on the daye, and they knowleged, & worshipped the Lorde theyr God. iiii. tymes on the daye. And the Leuites stode on hyghe, namely Iesua, Bani, Cadmiel, Sabaniah, Buni, Serebiah, Bani and Chani, and cryed loude vnto the Lorde theyr God. And the Leuites, Iesua, Cadmiel, Bani, Basabniah, Serebiah, Hodiah, Sebaniyah, Shathahiah, said: stand vp, prayse the Lorde your God for euer: and let thankes be geuen vnto the name of thy glorie, which excelleth al thankesgeuing & praise, Lorde, thou alone haste made heauen, and the heauen of all heuens, wth all theyr hooste, the earth & all that is therein: the sea, and all that is therein, thou geuest life vnto all, and the host of heauen bowe them selues vnto the.

Thou arte the Lorde God, that haste chosen Abram, and broughtest hym out of Chaldea, & calledst him Abraham, and foundest hys hearte faptheful before the, & madest a couenaunte with hym to geue vnto hys seede the land of the Canaanites, Hethites, Amorites, Iherosolimites, Jebusites, and Geragesites, and hast made good thy woordes: for thou art righteous, & haste consydered the myserye of oure fathers in Egypte, and heard theyr complaynt by the redde sea, and shewed to them signs and wonders vppon pharaon, and on all all hys seruauntes, and on al the people of hys lande: for thou knewest that they wer presumptuous and cruell agaynst theim, and so madest thou the name as it is thys dape. And the redde sea diddest thou deuide in sunder befoze theim, so they wente thowtwe the middes of the sea drye shoed: and they persecuters threwest thou into the depe as a stone, in the myghty waters, and leddest them on the dape tyme in a cloude ppyler, and on the nyght season in a ppyler of fyre, too shewe them lpyghte in the wape that they wente.

But oure fathers were proude and hard necked, so that they folowed not thy commaundementes, and refused to heare, and were not mindeful of þ wonders that thou dyddest for them: but became sturde, and heady, in so muche that they turned backe to theyr bondage in theyr dysobedience. But thou my God forgauest, and wast gracious, merciful, pacient, and of great goodnes, and forsokest them not.

Exo. xxi. a.

Num. xxi. c.

And thou gaueste them thy good spryte too enforme them, * and wythheldst not thy manna from theyr mouth, * and gauest them water when they were thyrsty. Fourty yeres longe madest thou prouysyon for them in the wylernes, so that they lacked nothynge * theyr clothes waxed not old, and theyr fete swelled not. And thou gauest them kynge domes and nacyns, and partedst them accordyng to theyr porcyons, so that they possessed the land of Sehon kynge of Hesebon, and the land of Ogge the kynge of Baasan. And theyr chyldren multipliedst thou as the sterres of heauen, and broughtest them into the land whereof thou haddest spoken vnto theyr fathers, that they shoulde goo into it, and haue it in possession.

Jos. ii. iii.
and. iii.

And the chyldren went in, and possessed the land, * and thou subduedst befoze them the inhabyters of the lande, euen the Cananites, and gauest them into theyr hand, and theyr kynge, and the people of the land that they myghte do wyth them what they woulde. And they wan theyr stronge cities and a fat land, and toke possession of houses that were full of all manner goodes, welles dygged oute, bynepardes, oyle gardens, and mani fruteful trees: and they eat and wer filled, and became fat and liued in welth thowowe thy greate goodnesse. Nevertheless they were disobedient, and rebelled agaynst the, and cast thy lawe behynde theyr backes, & slew thy prophetes (which exhorted them so earnestly that they shuld conuerste vnto the) and dyd greate blasphemys. Therefore gauest thou them ouer into the hand of theyr enemies þ vexed the.

Thys latte land syngteth a fruteful ground that aboundeth wyth all good thynges, as it is sayd of fat bread of Aler. Gen. xli. c.

And in the tyme of theyr trouble they cried vnto the, and thou herdest them from heauen, and throw thy great mercede, thou gaueste them Sauoures, whiche healed them oute of the hande of theyr enemies. But when they came to reste, they tourned backe agayne, to do euill befoze the: there fore leftest thou them in the hand of theyr enemies, so that they had the dompnion ouer them. So they conuerted, & cried vnto the, and thou heardest them from heauen, and many tymes hast thou deliuered them accordyng to thy greate mercede, and testifiedst vnto them, that they shoulde tourne agayne vnto the law.

Sauoures are here called the prynces or captaynes whiche saued þ people fro their enemies. And. iii. b.

Not wythstandynge they were proude, & and harkened not vnto thy commaundementes, but spynned in thy lawes, (* whyche a man shulde do, and lyue in them) and tourned the shoulder awaye, and wer styf necked, and woulde not heare. And manypes dyddest thou forbear them and dyddest wytnesse vnto them thowowethy spryte, euen by the offyce of thy prophetes, and yet woulde they not heare. Therefore gauest thou them into the hand of the nations in the landes. But for thy greate mercyes sake, thou haste not vtterly consumed them, neither forsaken them: for thou art a gracious and merciful God. * Now oure God, thou greate God, myghty and dreadful, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercede, regarde not a lytle al the trauaple that happened vnto vs, and oure kynge, prynces, priestes, prophetes, fathers, & al thy people, from the tyme of the kynge of Assur, vnto thys dape. Thou arte rpyghteous in all that thou haste broughte vpon vs: for thou haste done rpyght. As for vs, we haue bene vngodly, and oure kynge, prynces, priestes, and fathers haue not doone after thy lawe, nor regarded thy commaundementes, and thy earnestte exhortacyons, wherewyth thou haste exhorted them, and haue not serued the in theyr kingdom, and in thy greate goodes that thou gauest the, and in the large and plenteous lande whiche thou gaueste them, and haue not conuerted from theyr wycked woorkes. al maner of vitails to sel, that we wold not Leui. xxv. a. take it of them on the Sabbath and on the Deut. xv. a. holpe dayes. * And that we woulde lette the seu. nith yeare be free concernynge all manner of charge.

And we decreed a statute vpon oure sel ues, to geue yearly the. iii. parte of a sicke to the ministracion in the house of our God, namely to the shewbreed, to the daily meat offerpyng, to the daily burnt offering of the Sabbathes, of the newe mones, and feaste dayes, and to the thynges that were sanc tified, and to the synne offerpynges, to re concile Israel withal, and to al the busines in the house of oure God.

And we cast the lot amonge the priestes, Leuites, and the people, for offering of the woode to be brought into the house of our God from pere to pere, after the houses of oure fathers, that it myghte be brynte at ti mes appointed, vpon the aulter of the lord oure God, as it is witten in the lawe: and perely to bryng the fyrst borne of our land and the fyrst borne of oure frutes of all trees, yeare by yeare, vnto the house of the Lord: and the fyrst borne of oure sonnes, and of oure cattell, as it is witten in the lawe: and the fyrst borne of oure Oren and of oure shepe, that we shuld bryng al this to the house of our God, vnto the Priestes that mynister vnto the house of our God:
and that we shoulde bryng the fyrst borne of oure meates, and of oure drynckes, and the frutes of all maner trees, of wyne also and of oyle, vnto the priestes to the chestes of the house of oure God. And the tithes of oure lande vnto the Leuites, that the Le uites myghte haue the tithes in all the cy ties of oure ministracion.

And the pyeste the sonne of Aaron shal wth the Leuytes haue also of the tythes of the Leuytes, so that the Leuytes shal bryng vnto the tythes of they tythes vn to the house of our God, to the chest in the treasure house. For the chylrene of Isra ell and the chylrene of Leui shal bryng vnto the fyrst frutes of the corne, wyne and oyle vnto the chestes. And there shal be the vesselles of the Sanctuarie, and the Priestes that mynister, and the porters and syngers, that we forsake not the house of oure God.

The. xi. Chapter.

Who dwelled in Jerusalem after it was builded, and wthin the cities of Iuda.

And the rulers of the people, dwelte at Jerusalem. But the other people castelottes therfore, so that amonge ten one parte wente to Jerusalem into the holy city to dwel, and nine partes in the cy ties. And the people thanked al the menne that wer willynge to dwel in Jerusalem.

These are the heades of the lande that dwelte in Jerusalem, and in the cyties of Iuda. And euerye one dwelte in hys posses sion, & in they cities of Israel, the priestes

The. xii. Chapter.

The priestes and Levites which came with zorobabell to Jerusalem, are numbred and the wallis dedicate.

These are the priestes and Levites þ went vp with zorobabell the sonne of Salathiel and wyth Jesua: Saraiah, Jeremi, Esdas, Amariah, Meluch, Batus Sechaniah, Rehum, Merimoth, Ado, Bethoi, Abiah, Miamin, Maadia, Belga, Semaiah, Jaiorib, Jdaia, Salu, Amok, Helkia, and Jdaiah, these were the heades amonge the priestes and theyre brethren in the tyme of Jesua. The Levites wer these: Jesua, Benui, Cadmiel, Sarabiah, Juda and Machaniah, ouer the Offyce of thankesgeyunge, they and theyre brethren: Bachbukiah and Umi and their brethren, were aboute them in the watches.

Jesua begatte Joakim. Joakim begat Eliasib, Eliasib begatte Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathan. Jonathan begat Jadaua. And in the tyme of Joakym wer these the chief fathers amonge the priestes: vnder Saraiah, Araiah, vnder Jeremie, Hananiah: vnder Esdas, Mosolom: vnder Amariah, Hanani: vnder Amoziah, Joana: vnder Milico, Jonathan: vnder Sebaniah, Joseph: vnder Barim, Edna: vnder Araioth, Helcai: vnder Adia, zachari: vnder Bethon, Mosolam: vnder Abia, zechy: vnder Miamin & Maadia, Belta: vnder Belga, Samua: vnder Semeiah, Jonathan: vnder Joarib, Mathanai: vnder Jadaiah, Uli: vnder Selai, Kelai: vnder Amok, Eber: vnder Helkia, Basabiah: vnder Jadaiah, Rathanaell.

And in the tyme of Eliasib, Joiada, Jonathan and Jadaua, were the chiefe fathers amonge the Levites, and the priestes written vnder the raygne of Darius the persian. The chyldren of Levi the pryncypal fathers were wyrtten in the Chronicles, vntill the tyme of Jonathan the sonne of Eliasib.

iasib. And these were the chief among the Levites, Babeliah, Serebiah and Jesua the sonne of Cadmeil, and they brethren ouer agaynst them, to geue prayse & than- kes accordinge as Dauid the man of God had ordeined it, one watche ouer agaynst another: Mathania, Balbuckiah, Obadi- ah, Mosolam, Salmon, and Acub wer por- ters in the watch at the thresholdes of the gates. These were in the time of Joakym the sonne of Jesua the son of Josedec and in the time of Nehemias the capitain and of the priest Esdras the scribe.

D And in the dedication of the wal at Je- rusalem, were the Leuites soughte out of al they places, that they might be brought to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedycation and gladnesse, wpth thankesgeuyng, with syn- ginge, wpth Tymbales psalteries and har- pes, And the chyldrene of the syngers ga- thered them selues together from the plain countrey aboute Jerusalem, and from the byllages of Bethphathi, and from the house of Balgall, and oute of the fieldes of Beba and Asmaueth: for the Syngers hadde buylded them byllages aboute Je- rusalem. And the priestes and Leuites pu- rified them selues, and clensted the people, the gates, and the wall.

And I caused the Princes of Juda to go vpon the wall, and apointed two great quiers of thankesgeuyng, whiche wente on the right hande of the wall toward the Donge gate, and after hym wente Bosis- ah, and halfe of the prynces of Juda, and Asaria, Esdras, Mosolam, Juda, Ben Ja- min, Semeiah and Jeremy: and certain of the wyfettes chyldrene wpth trompettes, namelpe zacharye the sonne of Jonathan the sonne of Semeiah, the sonne of Matha- nyah the sonne of Michaiiah, the sonne of zecur, the sonne of Asaph, and his brethren Semeiah, Asarael, Melalai, Balalai, Ma- ai, Nathanaell and Juda, and Hanani, w the musycall instrume ntes of Dauid, the manne of God.

And Esdras the scribe before the, toward the Welgate, and they wet vpon ouer against them vpon the steps of the cytpe of Dauid at the going vpon of the wall to the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate eastwarde.

The other queer of thanckes geuyng wente ouer agaynst them, and I after the and the halfe parte of the people vpon the walle, toward the Fornacegate vponward, vnto the brode wal, and to the gate of Ephra- im, and to oldgate, and to the fishgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, and to the tow- er of Meah, vntil the pegate.

And in the prisongate stonde they still and so stode the two queres of thankesge- uing of the house of God, and I & the half of the rulers with me, & the priestes, name- ly Eliakim, Maasiah, Miniamin, Michai- ah, Eleonai, zachary, Hananiah with tro- pettes, and Maasiah, Semeiah, Eleasat, Urli, Johana, Melchiah, Elam and Ser.

And the syngers sange loude, and Jezraia was the ouerseer.

And the same daye were there great sa- crifices offered, and they reioised: for God had geuen them greate gladnes, so þ both the wiues and the chyldren wer ioiful, and the mirth of Jerusalem was heard far of. At the same tyme were me appoynted ouer the treasure chestes (wherein wer the offe- rynges, synne frutes, and the tythes) that they shoulde gather them out of the felde about the cities, to deal them vnto the prie- stes and Leuites, accordyng to the lawe: for Juda was gladde of the priestes, and Leuites, that they stode and wayted vpon the offyce of they God: and the office of þ clenysyng. And þ syngers and porters stode after the commaundmēt of Dauid and of Salomon his sonne: for in the tyme of Da- uid and of Asaph, were the cheife Syngers founded, and the songes of praise and tha- kesgeuyng vnto God. In the time of zo- robabel and Nehemias, did al Israel geue porcions vnto the syngers and porters, eue- ry day his porcion, and they gaue thynges halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuits gaue thynges that were sanctified, vnto the chyldren of Aaron.

The.iii. Chapter.

Deuteronye is redde, and when they haue heard it, they seuered frome theym all straungers.

And what time as the boke of Moses was redde in the eares of the people, there was found writen therein that the Ammonites and Moabites shulde ne- uer come into the congregacion of God be- cause they mette not the chyldren of Is- rael wpth breade and water, and byred Ba- laam agaynst them, that he shoulde curse them: neuerthelesse oure God tourned the curse into a blessing. Now when they herd the Lawe, they seuered from Israell eue- ry one that had myrte hym selfe therein. And before this had the prieste Eliasib de- lyuered the chest of the house of God vnto hys kynsman Tobiah: for he hadde made hym a greate chest and ther had they afore tyme layde the offerynges, frankinsence, vessell, and the tythes of corne, wyne and oil (accordyng to the commaundement ge- uen to the Leuits syngers and porters) and the first frutes of the priestes.

But in all thys was not I at Jerusale. for in the.ii. and thyrtye yere of Artaxerces kyng of Babylon came I vnto the kyng and after certayne dayes I got lycence of the king to come to Jerusalem. And I gat knowledge of the euil that Eliasib did vnto Tobiah, in that he had made him a chest in the court of the house of God, and it gre- ued me sore, & I cast forth all the vessells of þ house of Tobiah out of the chest, & com- manded them to clense the chest. And they broughte I againe the vesselles of the house of God, the sacrifice & the incense.

And I percepued, that the porcions of the the Levites were not gyven the, for whyche cause the Leuytes and spungers were fled, every one to his lande for to worke. Then reproveth he the rulers, and sayd: Why for sake we the house of God? But he gathered the together, & set them in their place. The brought al Juda the tithes of corne, wyne and oyle unto the treasure. And we ordeyned to be treasurours ouer the treasure, eue Selemitah the priest, & zadoc the scribe and of the Levites phadajah, and under their hand Hanan the sonne of zacut, the sonne of mathanah: for they were counted sayethfull, and their office was to by tribute unto their brethren. Thynke vpon me O my God herin, and wipe not out my mercy, that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the officers thereof.

1. Esdr. v. c.

At the same time saw I some treading wine presses on the Saboth, and bynyng in clusters, and asses laden with wine, grapes, figs, and bynyng all maner of burthens unto Ierusalem, vpon the Saboth daye, And I rebuked them earnestly the same day that they sold the vytails. Ther dwelte men of Tyre also therein, whyche broughte fyre, and al maner of ware, and solde on the Sabboth vnto the chyldren of Juda, & Ierusalem. Then reproveth he the rulers in Juda, and sayde vnto the: what euill thyng is this ye doo and breake the Saboth daye? Wyl not oure fathers euen thus, and our God brought all this plage vpon vs and vpon this cite? And ye make the wrath more yet vpon I scell, in that ye breake the Sabboth.

And it fortuneth, that when the gates of Ierusalem were touched with the euening shadow on the Sabboth, he commaunded to shut the gates, & charged they shulde not be opened tyl after the Saboth: and some of my seruauntes set I at the gates, that there shoulde no burthen be brought in on the Saboth day. Then remayned they chapmen and marchauntes ones or twyse ouer night without Ierusalem with al maner of wares. The reproveth he them soze, and sayd vnto them: why tarpe ye all nyght aboute the walle? Yf ye doo it ones agayne, I wyl lape handes vpon you. From that tyme forth came they no more on the Saboth. And he sayde vnto the Levites whyche were cleane, that they shoulde come and kepe the gates to halow the Sabboth day. Thynke vpon me (O my God) concerning this also, and spare me accordyng to thy greate mercy.

And at the same tyme saw I Iewes, that married wyues of Asdod, Ammon and of Moab, & their chyldren spake halfe in the spech of Asdod, and could not speke in the Iewes language, but by the rounge myght a man perceyue euerye people. And he reproveth them, and cursed them, and smote certayne men of them and plucke them vp, and toke on the of them, by God, ye shall not gyue your daughters vnto their sonnes, neyther shall ye take theyr daughters vnto your sonnes, or for your selues. Wyl not Salomon the kynge of I scell spake therein? and yet amonge manye Dauides was there no kynge lyke hym, and he was deate vnto his God, and God made hym kynge ouer al I scell, and yet neuer thelesse straunge women caused hym to synne? And shall we then obey vnto you to do all this greate euill, to halte before oure God, and make straunge wyues?

And one of the chyldren of Josada the sonne of Eliasib the high priest, had made a contract wth Sanabalat the Hozonite but he chaced him from me. O my god, thinke thou vpon them that desyle priesthode, & the law of the priesthode and of the Levites.

Thus cleansed I them from all such as were strangers, and apointed the courttes of the priestes and Levites, euerye one to his office, and to offer the wood at tymes appointed, and the fyrre frutes. Thynke thou vpon me (O my God) for the beste.

The .i. Chapter.

Kynge Asuerus, which is called Artaxerxes maketh a royall feaste, wherunto the queene Mithry wyl not come: for whyche cause she is dysposed.

In the tyme of Asuerus who reigned from Iuda vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seue and twenty landes, what tyme as he sat on his seate royal in the castell of Susan in the thirde yere of his raygne, he made a feaste vnto all his prynces and seruauntes, namely vnto the myghty men of Persia & Media, to the capytaines and rulers of his countreys, that he myght shew the noble ryches of his kyngedome, and the gloriouslye worshyppe of his power manye dayes longe, euen an hundred and foure score dayes.

And when these dayes were ended, the king made a feaste vnto al the people that were in the castell of Susa, both vnto great and smalle, seuen dayes longe in the courtte of the garden by the kynges palace: where they hanged white, red, and yelow clothes fastened with cordes of linnen & scarlet in siluer rings, vpon pillers of Marble stone.

The benches were of golde and syluer, made vpon a pavement of grene, whyte yelow and blacke Marble. And the drinke was caried in vessels of golde, & there was euer change of vessel. And the kings wyne

And shall we then obey vnto you to do all this greete euill, to halte before our God, and make straunge wyues?

And one of the chyldren of Josada the sonne of Eliasib the high priest, had made a contract wth Sanabalat the Hozonite but he chaced him from me. O my god, thinke thou vpon them that desyle priesthode, & the law of the priesthode and of the Levites.

Thus cleansed I them from all such as were strangers, and apointed the courttes of the priestes and Levites, euerye one to his office, and to offer the wood at tymes appointed, and the fyre frutes. Thynke thou vpon me (O my God) for the beste.

The .i. Chapter.

Kynge Asuerus, which is called Artaxerxes maketh a royall feaste, wherunto the queene Mithry wyl not come: for whyche cause she is dysposed.

In the tyme of Asuerus who reigned from Juda vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seue and twenty landes, what tyme as he sat on his seate royal in the castell of Susan in the thirde yere of his raygne, he made a feaste vnto all his prynces and seruauntes, namely vnto the myghty men of Persia & Media, to the capytaines and rulers of his countreys, that he myght shew the noble ryches of his kyngedome, and the gloriouslye worshyppe of his power manye dayes longe, euen an hundred and foure score dayes.

And when these dayes were ended, the king made a feaste vnto al the people that were in the castell of Susa, both vnto great and smalle, seuen dayes longe in the courtte of the garden by the kynges palace: where they hanged white, red, and yelow clothes fastened with cordes of linnen & scarlet in siluer rings, vpon pillers of Marble stone.

The benches were of golde and syluer, made vpon a pavement of grene, whyte yelow and blacke Marble. And the drinke was caried in vessels of golde, & there was euer change of vessel. And the kings wyne was exceeding much, according to the great power of the king. And no man was appointed what he should drink: for the king had commanded all the officers of his house, that every one should do as it liked him. And the queen Vashti made a feast also for the women in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seventh day when the king was merry of the wine he commanded Memucan, Balthaz, Harboda, Bagatha, Abagatha, Zathar & Carcas the chief chamberlains, that did service in the presence of king Ahasuerus, to fetch the queen Vashti with the crown regale, that he might show the people & princes her fairness: for she was beautiful. But the queen Vashti would not come at the kings word by his chamberlains. Then was the king very wroth, and his indignation kindled in him, and he spake to the wise men that had understanding in the ordinances of the land (for the kings matters must be handled before all such as have knowledge of the lawe and iudgement: and the next unto him were, Carsena, Sethar, Admatha, Tharsis, Mares, Masana and Mamucan the seven princes of the Persians, and Medes, which saw the kings face, and were wont to sit next him,) what lawe should be executed upon the queen Vashti, because she dyd not according to the word of the king by his chamberlains. Then sayde Mamucan before the king & the princes: the queen Vashti hath not only hurt the king, but also all princes, all the people in all provinces of king Ahasuerus: for this dede of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall despise their husbands before their eyes, and shall say: the king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to come before him, but she would not.

And by this example shall all the princes wives of Persia & Media sette at naught the commandment of their husbands when they heare of this dede of the queen, thus shall there arise despitfulnesse and wrath ynough. If it please the king let them go forth a proclamation from him & let it be written according to the law of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vashti come no more before king Ahasuerus, and let the king give the kingdom unto another that is better then she.

And that this writing of the king whiche shall be made, be published throughout all his empire whiche is great, that all wives may have their husbands in honour, both great and small. This pleased the king and the princes, and the king dyd according to the word of Mamucan. Then were letters sente forth into all the kings lands, into every land according to the writing thereof, & to every people after their language, that every man should be the Lord & chiefe in his owne house. And this caused he to be divulged amongs all people.

The queen put away certain goodly young damoselles are searched out amonges whome Ester pleased the king. Har docheus discloseth to the king those that would betray him.

These things done, when the displeasure of king Ahasuerus was alayed, he thought upon Vashti, what she had done, & was concluded concerning her. Then sayde the kings servants: Lette there be sayde young virgins sought for the king, and let the king appoint overseers in all the lands of his empire, that they may bring together all sayre young virgins unto the castle of Susan to the womens lodging, under the hand of Hagei the kings chamberlaine that keepeth the women, and let him give them their apparel. And loke which damosel pleased the king, let her be queen in Vashtis steede. This pleased the king & he dyd so.

In the castle of Susan ther was a Jew, whose name was Har docheus, the sonne of Jair the sonne of Semei, & sonne of Lys, the sonne of Memini, whiche was carped away from Jerusalem, when Nekonias the king of Juda was led away, whom Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon carped away, and he nourished Hadasab, otherwise called Esther, his uncles daughter: for she had neither father nor mother, and she was a sayre and beautiful damosel. And when her father and mother dyed Har docheus received her, as his owne daughter.

Nowe when the kings commandment was published, and according to it many damosels were brought together unto the castle of Susan under the hand of Hagei. Esther was taken also unto the kings house under the hand of Hagei, the keeper of the women: and the damoselle pleased him, and she founde grace in his sight. And he caused her ointments to be given her, and her gifts, and gave her seven notable gentill women of the kings house, and arrayed both her & her gentill women very richely in the house of the women. But Esther shewed not her people nor her kindred: for Har docheus had charged her, that she should not tel it. And Har docheus walked euery day before the court of the womens building, that he might knowe howe Esther dyd, & what should become of her. And when the appointed time of euery damsel came that she should come to the king Ahasuerus, after that she had ben. xii. moneths in the decking of the women (for their decking muste haue so much time: namely. vi. moneths with balme and myrrour, and. vi. moneths with good spices, so were the women bewtyfied) then wente there one damosell unto the king, and what so euer she required that muste be given her to go with her out of the womens building unto the kings palace. And when one came in the evening, the same wente from him on the morowe in

Esther.

In the kynges gate, that had sacke clothe on. And in all landes and places, as far as the kynges worde and commandemente extended, there was greete lamentacyon among the Jewes, & many fasted, wepte, mourned, and laye in sacke clothes and in ashes. So Esthers Damofelles, and her chamberlaynes came and tolde it her.

The Jewes were fyrste called by the byes of her, the son of Sale son of Arpharat, as it appeareth. Gene. xi. b. x. i. pa. 1. r. after were they called Israel of Jacob after Jews of one of the sons of Jacob, that is to wete of Juda.

When was the quene exceedinglye astounded. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shuld put them on, and lay the sackcloth from hym. But Mardocheus woulde not take them. Then called Esther Barthab one of the kynges chamberlaynes (which stode before her) and gaue hym a commandement unto Mardocheus, that he myght knowe what it were, and wherefore he dyd so. So Barthab went forth to Mardocheus unto the streete of the ctyte, whych was before the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde hym of al þ had happened unto hym, and of the summe of syluer that Haman had promysed to wepe downe in the kynges chamber because of the Jewes for to destroye them: and he gaue hym the coppie of the commaundement, that was deuised at Susa to destroye them, that he myghte shew it unto Esther, and to speke to her and charge her that she shuld go into the kinge, & make her prayer & supplicacion unto him for her people.

And when Barthab came in, & tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus, Esther spake unto Barthab, & commaunded hym to sape unto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruantes, & the people in the landes of the kyng knowe, þ whoso euer comethe wyth in the courte unto the kyng whether it be man or woman, whych is not called, the commandemente is that the same shall dre immediately, onles the king hold oute the golden scepter vnto him, in token of clemency þ he may lyeue. As for me, I haue not ben called to come into the kyng now this thyrtye dayes.

And when Mardocheus was certyfyed of Esthers wordes, Mardocheus had sape agayne unto Esther: thyncke not to saue thyne owne lyfe, while thou art in the kynges house, before al Jewes: for if thou holdest thy peace at this tyme, then shal the Jewes haue help & deliuerance oute of another place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed, and whoe knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngedome for this tyme sake? Esther had geue Mardocheus this aunswere: go thou thy waye and gather together all the Jewes that are founde at Susa, and fast ye for me, þ ye eate and dryncke not in. iij. dayes neyther day nor nyghte, I and my Damofelles wyll faste lykewyse: and so wyll I go into the kyng, contrary to þ commaundement: if I perishe, I perishe. So Mardocheus went this waye, and dyd all that Esther had commaunded hym.

The. v. Chapter.

The. v. Chapter.

Esther entereth in to the kyng, and biddeth him and Haman to a feast. Haman prepareth a galowse for Mardocheus.

On the thyrtye daye put Esther on her royal apparel, and stode in the court of the kynges palace wythin, ouer against the kynges lodgyng. And the kyng sat vpon his royall seate in his palace ouer against the gate of the house. And when the kyng saw Esther the quene standinge in the courte, she founde grace in his sight. And the kyng helde oute the golden scepter in his hande toward Esther. So Esther kept forth, and touched the top of the scepter. Then said the kinge vnto her: What wilt thou quene Esther? and what requierest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empyre and it shalbe geuen the. Esther said: Yf it please the kyng, let the kyng and Haman come this day vnto the bakete, that I haue prepared. The king said: Cause Haman to make haste: that he maye doo as Esther hath sayde.

Now when the kyng and Haman came to the bakete that Esther had prepared, the kyng sayde vnto Esther after he had largelye drunke of the wyne: Esther, what is thy petition? and it shalbe geue the. And what requierest thou? Yf it be eue the halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.

Then answered Esther & said: my petition & desier is, if I haue founde grace in þ syghte of the king, & if it please þ kyng to geue me my petition, & to fulfill my request, the let the kinge and Haman come to the bakete that I shal prepare for them, and so wyll I do to morowe as the kyng hath sayde.

Then went Haman for the the same daye forful and mery in his mynde. And when he saw Mardocheus in the kynges gate, that he stode not by and kneled before him he was full of indygnacion at Mardocheus. Neuerthelesse he refrayned byn selfe: and when he came home he sent, and called for his frendes, and zares his wyfe, and tolde them of the glorie of his ryche, and the multytude of his children all togeher, how þ king had promoted him so greatly, and how that he was taken aboue all the prynces and seruants of the king. Haman sayd moreouer: Yea, and Esther the quene let no man come wyth the kyng vnto the bakete that she hadde prepared, excepte me, and to morowe am I bydden vnto her also wyth the kyng. But in all this I am not satisfysed as longe as I se Mardocheus the Jewe sittinge at the kynges gate. The sayd zares his wyfe & al his frendes vnto hym: Let them make a galowse of fifty cubites high, and to morowe speake thou vnto the kyng, that Mardocheus may be hanged thereon, and so thou shalte go merely wyth the kyng vnto the bakete. Haman was wel contente herewith, and caused a galowse to be made readye.

The. vi. Chapter.

The

to the seconde house of women, vnder the hande of Salsagas the kynges chamberlayne, whiche kepte the concubynes. And she must come vnto the kyng no more, vntill it pleased the kyng, and that he caused her to be called by name.

Now when the time came of Esther the daughter of Abihail Marдохеus vncle (whom he had receiued as his own daughter) that she shoulde come to the kyng, she despayred nothyng but what Hagei the kynges chamberlaine the keeper of the women said. And Esther found fauoure in the sight of al that looked vpon her. So Esther was taken into king Asuerus into the house to all, in the tenth moneth which is called Tebeth in the vii. yere of his reigne.

And the kyng loued Esther aboue all women, and she founde grace and mercye in his sight, before al the virgins: and he sette the quenes crowne vpon her head, & made her quene in stede of Vashti. And the kyng made a great feast vnto al his princes and seruauntes (whiche feast was because of Esther:) and he gaue rest to al the landes, and gaue to all gyfts accordinge to a kynges magnificence.

And when the vyrgyns were gathered together the seconde tyme, Marдохеus sat in the kynges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kintred and her people accordinge as Marдохеus had bydden her: for Esther did after the word of Marдохеus, lyke as when he was her tutor. At the same tyme whyle Marдохеus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chamberlaynes Bagathan and Thares whiche kepte the doore were wroth, & sought to lay handes on the kyng Asuerus: wherof Marдохеus gat knowledge, and tolde it vnto quene Esther, & Esther certified the kyng therof in Marдохеus name. And when in quyre was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tree: and it was writte in the Chronicles, before the kinge.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Haman obtained of the kyng that all Jewes shoulde be put to death bycause Marдохеus had not gyven hym worshipp, as other had.

After this the kyng promoted Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, and set hym hygh, & set his seate aboue all the princes that were with hym. And al the kings seruauntes that were in the gate bowed their knees, and did reverence vnto Haman, for the kyng had so commanded. But Marдохеus bowed not the knee, & worshipped hym not. Then the kings seruauntes which were in the kynges gate, sayde vnto Marдохеus: why breakest thou the kynges commaundement?

And when they spake this dayly vnto hym, and he obeyed them not, they tolde Haman, that they might see whether Marдохеus matters would endure, for he had tolde them that he was a Jew. And when Haman sawe that Marдохеus bowed not the knee vnto hym, nor worshipped hym, he was full of indignacyon, and thoughte it to litle to lay handes onelye on Marдохеus: for they hadde shewed hym the nation of Marдохеus, but he soughte to destroye all the Jewes, the nation of Marдохеus, that were in the hole empyre of Asuerus. In the fyrste moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the xii. yere of kyng Asuerus, they cast pur (which is a lot) before Haman, on what daye and what moneth this shoulde be done: and ther came out the xii. moneth that is the moneth Adar. And Haman sayde vnto king Asuerus: There is a people scattered abroad & disperpled from themselves amonge all people in the landes of thyne empyre, and theyre lawe is contrarye vnto all people, and they do not after the kynges lawes, neyther is it the kings profit to suffre the after this maner. If it please the kyng, let him enact, that they be destroyed, and so wyll I weye downe ten thousande talentes of siluer, vnder the handes of the workemen, to be brought in to the kynges chamber. Then toke the kyng his ringe from his hand, and gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, the Jewes enemye. And the kyng sayd vnto Haman: Let the siluer be geuen the, and that people also, to doo wryth all what please the.

Then were the kynges scribes called on the xiii. daye of the fyrste moneth, and there was wrytten (accordinge as Haman commaunded) vnto the kynges princes, & to the captayns euery where in the landes, and to the rulers of euery people in the countreys on euery side, accordinge to the wryttinge of euery nation, and after theyre language in the name of kyng Asuerus, and sealed with the kynges ring. And the wryttinges were sent by pursuauntes into al the kynges landes, to rote oute, to kyll and to destroye al Jewes, both young and olde, chyldren, & women in one daye, that is to wryt vpon the thirtenth daye of the twelveth moneth, whiche is the moneth Adar, and to spoyle theyre goodes.

This was the sum of the letters, that ther shoulde be a commaundement geuen in al landes, to be published vnto all people, that they shoulde be ready agaynst the same daye. And the pursuauntes went in al the haste accordinge to the kynges commaundement. And in the castell of Susan was the commaundement deuysed. And the kyng and Haman sate and dranke. But the cytye of Susan was disquetered.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Marдохеus geueth the quene knowledge of the cruel decree of the kyng agaynst the Jewes.

When Marдохеus perceyued all that was done, he rente his clothes and put on sacke cloth & ashes, & wote out into the middes of the cite, and cryed loud & lamentably, & came before the kyngs gate: for there myghte no man entre wryth

The kyng turnethe ouer the Chronicles & syndeith the synclerpe of Mardocheus: and the is the confusyon of Haman, he commaundeth Mardocheus to be had in honoure.

The same nyghte coulde not the kyng slepe, and he commaunded to byrge the Chronicles and bystoyres, whych when they were read before the kyng, they happened on the place where it was wyrtten how Mardocheus had tolde that the kynges two chamberlaynes (whych kept the thresholdes) sought to lay hands on kinge Asuerus. And the kyng said: what worshipp and good haue we done to Mardocheus therfore? Then sayde the kynges seruantes that ministered vnto hym: Ther is nothyng done for hym. And the kyng sayde: Who is in the court? (for Haman was gone into the court wythoute before the kyngs house that he myght speake vnto the kyng to hange Mardocheus on the tree, that he had prepared for hym.) And the kyngs seruantes said to him: behold, Haman standeth in the court. The kyng said let hym come in. And when Haman came in, the kyng sayde vnto hym: what shalbe done vnto the man, whom the kyng wold fayne byrge vnto worshyppe? But Haman thought in his herte: Whom shulde the kynges els be glad to byrge vnto worshyp, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kyng: Let the man vnto whom the kyng wolde be glad to do worshyp, be broughte hither, that he may be arayed with the roiall garmentes whych the kyng vseth to weare: and the horse that the kyng rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royal may be set vpon his heade. And let this raiment and horse be deliuered vnder the hande of one of the kynges prynces, that he may carrye the man wythall (whome the kyng wolde fayne honoure) and carie hym vpon the horse thorow the streete of the cytye, and cause it to be proclaymed before hym: thus shal it be done to euerye man, whom the kyng wold fayne honoure.

The kyng sayde: make hast, and take as thou hast sayde the raiment and the horse, and do euen so wyth Mardocheus & Iet what sytteth before the kynges gate, and let nothyng sayle of al that I hast spoken. Then toke Haman the raiment & the horse and arayed hym, and broughte hym on horse backe, thorow the streete of the cytye, and proclaymed before him: Euen thus shal it be done to euerye man, whom the kyng is dysposed to honoure. And Mardocheus came agayne to the kynges gate. But Haman gatte hym home in al the, hast mourninge with bare head, and tolde zares his wyfe and all hys frendes, euerye thyng that had happened hym. Then sayed hys wyse men of hys counsaile, and zares hys wyfe vnto hym: If it be Mardocheus of the seide of the Jewes, before whom thou haste begon to falle, thou canst do nothing vnto hym, but shalte falle before hym.

Whyle they were yet talkyng with hym, came the kynges chamberlaynes, and caused Haman to make hast to come vnto the banquet that Esther had prepared.

The.vii. Chapter.

The quene byddeth the kyng and Haman agayne, and prayeth for her selfe and her people. He accuseth Haman: and he is hanged on the house, whych he had prepared for Mardocheus.

And whethe kyng and Haman came to the banquet that quene Esther had prepared, the kyng said vnto Esther on the second day at the bankette of wyne what is thy petition quene Esther, that it may be geue thee? and what requierest thou? Yea aske euen halfe of the empyre, & it shalbe done. Esther the quene answered & sayd: If I haue founde grace in thy syghte (O kyng) and it please the the kyng, the grace me my life at my desyre, and my people for for my peticions sake: for we are solde both I & my people to be destroyed, to be slayne and to perishe. And woulde God we were solde to be bondmen and bondwomen, then wold I hold my tong, & so shulde not the enemye be so hygh to the kynges batme. The kyng Asuerus spake, and said vnto quene Esther: Who is this? Or wher is he that dare presume in hys mynde to do suche a thyng after I maner? Esther sayd: the enemye & aduersary is this wycked Haman. Which thyng when Haman herde he was exceedingly afrayed before the kyng and the quene. And the kyng arose from the banquet and from the wyne in his dyspleasure, and wente into the palace garden. And Haman stode by, and besoughte quene Esther for hys lyfe: for he saw ther was a myscheyse prepared for hym of the kyng allready.

And whett the kyng came agayne oute of the palace garden into the parlar wher they had eaten, Haman had layd hym vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon. Then said the kyng: wyl be force the quene also be side me in the house? As lone as the worde went out of the kynges mouth, they covered Hamans face. And Harbonah one of the chamberlaynes that stode before the kyng sayed: Beholde, there standeth a galowes in Hamans house sytye cubites hye which he had made for Mardocheus that spake good for the kyng. The kyng sayed: hang him thereon. So they hanged Haman on the galowes that he had made for Mardocheus. So was the kynges wrath apeced.

The.viii. Chapter.

After the death of Haman, Mardocheus is promoted the are comfortable letters sent vnto the Jewes.

The same daye kyng Asuerus gaue the house of Haman the Jewes enemye, vnto quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before the kyng: for Esther told how he belonged vnto her. And the kyng toke the kyng of hys synger, whych he hadde taken from Haman, and gaue it Mardocheus. Mordecai Esther set Mardocheus ouer the house of Haman. And she spake yet more before the kynge, and fell downe at his fete, and besought him, that he wold put awaye the malice of Haman the Agagite, and by a mooste vngarrouse deuyces that he hadde ymagyned against the Jewes. And the kynge helde out the golden scepter vnto Esther. Then rose Esther, and stode before the kynge, and sayd: if it please the kynge, and if I haue found grace in hys syght, and if it be conuenient for the kynge, and if it be accepted in hys syght, then let it be wyrtten, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite, may be called agayne: whiche letters he wrote, to destroye the Jewes in all the kynges landes.

For howe can I se the euyl that shall happen vnto my people? & howe can I loke vpon the destruction of my kyn?

Then said the king Asuerus vnto quene Esther, and to Mardocheus the Jew: Beholde I haue gyue Esther the house of Haman, & hym haue they hanged vpon a tree, because he layed hande vpon the Jewes. Wryte ye now therefore for the Jewes, as it lyketh you in the kynges name, and sele it with the kynges ring (for the wyrttyngs that were wyrtten in the kynges name, and sealed with the kyngs ring, durst no man discanulle.) Then were the kynges scribes called at the same tyme in the iii. moneth, that is the month Suan, on the thre and twentye daye.

And it was wyrtten accordyng as Mardocheus commaunded, vnto the Jewes and to the prynces, to the deputies and tapynes in the landes, from Jnd vntyll Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seuen and twenty landes, vnto euery one accordyng to the wyrttyng therof, vnto euery people after theyr speach, and to the Jewes accordyng to theyr wyrttyng and language. And it was wyrtten in the kynge Asuerus name, and sealed with the kynges ringe. And by wyrtte messengers, sent be the wyrttynges, wherein the kynge graunted the Jewes (in what cities so euer they were) to gather theym selues togyther, and to stande for theyr lyfe, and for to roote out, to slay, and to destroye all the power of the people and lande that woulde trouble them, with chyldren and womenne, and to spoyle theyr good vpon one day in all the landes of kynge Asuerus, namely vpon the thre and twentye daye of the twelue moneth, which is the moneth Adar.

The summe of the wyrttyng was, howe ther was a commaundement geuen in all landes to be publyshed vnto all the people that the Jewes shoulde be redye agaynst that daye to auenge theym selues on theyr enemyes. And the messengers that bare the wyrttynges wente for the wyrt al speede accordyng to the kynges worde: and the commaundement was deuised in the castell of Susan.

And Mardocheus wente oute from the king in royall apparell of yelow & white and with a greate crowne of golde, arrayed with a garment of lynne & purple, & the citty of Susa reioysed & was glad: but vnto the Jewes there was come light and gladnes and ioy and worship. And in all landes and ctyes, into what places soeuer the kynges word and commaundement reached, ther was ioy and much prosperyty & good dayes among the Jewes: in so muche that many of the people in the lande became of the Jewes belefe, for the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

The ix. Chapter.

At commaundement of the kynge, the Jewes put theyr foes to deathe. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Jewes kepe a feastful daye in remembrance of theyr deliuerie.

In the twelue moneth (that is the moneth Adar) the thirtene day, whiche the kynges word and commaundement had appoynted, that the enemyes shoulde haue destroyed the Jewes, it tourned contrarie wise, that the Jewes shuld subdue their enemyes. The assembled the Jewes to gyther in theyr ctyes in al the lads of king Asuerus, to lay hand on such as woulde haue done them euil, and no man could withstand therfor the feare of them was come ouer al people. And al the rulers in the landes, & prynces and deputies, and officers of the kynge promoted the Jewes: for the feare of Mardocheus came vpon them. For Mardocheus was greate in the kyngs house, and the report of hym was bruted in all landes how he encreased and grew.

Thus the Jewes smote all theyr enemyes with a soore slaughtre, and slew, and destroyed, and dyd after theyr wyll vnto such as were theyr aduersaries. And at the castell Susan the Jewes slew and destroyed syue hundred men, and slew Sharisanda tha, Delphon, Aspathar, Shorathar, Adalia, Aridathar, Sharmasthar, Arisoi, Aridai, Maiathar, the tenne sonnes of Haman, the sonne of Amadatha the enemye of the Jewes: but on hys Gooddes they woulde take no botyes. At the same tyme was the kynge certifyed of the number of those that were slayne at the castelle Susan. And the kynge sayed vnto quene Esther: The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed syue hundred men at the castelle of Susan, and the tenne sonnes of Haman: What shall they do in the other landes of the kynge? What is thy requeste, that it maye be gyuen the? and what requyeste thou more to be done? Esther sayde: Yf it please the kynge, lette hym suffer the Jewes to morowe also to do accordyng vnto theys dayes commaundement, that they hange Hamans ten sonnes vpon the tree. And the kynge charged to doo so, and the commaundement was deuised at Susan, and

But the Jewes at Susan wer come together both on the .xiii. daye and on the .xiiii. and on the xv. daye they reasted, and the same day ordeined they to be a daye of feasting & gladnes. And the Jewes receiued al that thei had begon to do, and that Mardocheus hadde wytten vnto them: howe that Haman the sonne of Hamadatha ennemye to all the Jewes, hadde deuised too destroye all the Jewes & caused to cast shur (that is a Lot) for to put them in feare, and to bring them too naughte: and howe Hester wente and spake to the kynge, that thowowe letters hys wycked deuise, whiche he pmagined a gainste the Jewes, myghte be tourned vpon hys owne heade, and howe he and hys sonnes were hanged on the tree. For whiche cause they called thys daye shurim after the name of shur, accordyng to al the wordes of thys wytyng: and what they the selues had seene, and what had happened to them. And the Jewes set it vp, and toke it vpon them and theyr seede, and vpon all such as ioined them selues vnto them, that they woulde not mysse to keepe these two dayes perylve, accordyng as they wer wryten and appointed, how these daies ar not to be forgotten, but to be kept of childrens chyldren amonge all kynredes in all landes and ctytes. dape. Howe vpon a tyme when the (a) seruauntes of God (b) came and stode before the Lorde, Satan came also among them.
And the Lorde saide vnto Satan: whence comest thou? Sathan answered the Lorde and sayde: I haue compassed the land and walked thorowe it. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: hast thou not considered my seruaunte Job, howe that he is a perfecte and vpryghte manne: suche one as feareth God, and eschueth euyl, and that there is none lyke hym in the lande? Satan answered, and sayde vnto the Lorde: Dothe Job feare God for naughte? haste thou not preserued hym, his house and al his substance on euerye syde, haste thou not blessed the workes of hys handes? Is not his possession encreased in the lande. But lay thine hande vppon hym a lytle, and touche once all that he hath, and yf he curse the not too thy face, I maruayle. And the Lorde sayde vnto Sathan, loo all that he hath, bee in thy power: onlpe vppon hym selfe se thou sape not thine hande. Then wente Satan forthe from the Lorde.

So vppon a certayne dape when hys sonnes and daughters were eatynge, and drynkyng wyne in the eldeste brothers house, there came a messenger vnto Job, and sayde: Whyle the oxen were plowynge and the asses goynge in the pasture besyde them, the Sabees came in with force, and toke them all awaye: yea they haue slaine thy seruauntes wth the swerd, and I on-lye haue escaped, to tell the.

And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other, and sayde: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, it hath consumed and brente vp al thy shepe and seruauntes, and I onlpe ranne awaye, too bynng the tydynge. In the meane season whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other, and sayde: The Caldees made .iii. armys, and rushed vpon thy Camels, whiche they haue carped awaye, yea and slayne thy seruauntes wth the swerde: and I onlpe am gotten awaye, to bynng tydynge. While he was speakinge, there came yet a fourth and sayd: Thy sonnes and daughters wer eatynge and drynkyng wyne in the el-deste brothers house, and sodenly ther came a myghty greete wynde out of the South, and smote the .iiii. corners of the house, whiche fell vpon thy childrene, so that they are deade: and I am gotten awaye alone too bynng tydynge.

Then Job stode vppe, and rente hys clothes and shaued hys heade, fell downe vppon the ground, worshipped, and sayde: Naked came I oute of my mothers womb and naked shall I retorne thither againe.
The Lorde gaue, and the Lorde hath taken awaye: * nowe blessed be the name of the Lorde. In all these thynges, dyd Job not offende, * ne murmured folowelye a-gaynste God.

The Notes.

(a) By the seruantes of God, here vnderstande, not onely angels, by whom he ordreth & course and workes of the world: but also the godly and chosen, whom he continually careth and proudeth for. Job. ii. a.

(b) Came and stode before the lord. Thinke not that God somtyme appeareth to the angels, and somtyme not, for the good angels do alwayes se the face of God. Neither cometh God either wth the angels or wth the Deuyl wth bodily speache, but the holy gost in the scriptures speaketh many thynges vnto vs accordynge to our feelyng, and vseth a maner of speakynge familiar to vs, attributing aparyng, speakynge, enquiryng, answerynge, to God, and to angels, whych thyng man only vseth, to the intent that we thereby may the easier perceiue his meaning.
The comynge of the angels is no nother thing, then to geue accomptes of the office toynded the:
which they geue, knowynge that God seeth wth what trust they dyd it: and to geue thanks and wayte for theyr reward. They came (sayth Di-gen) honoryng, magnifyng, praylynge, geuyng thanks. Of Satan also he wyrteth thus. He came neyther wth goynge to, or comynge in, but he came in thought, counsel, and most wicked de-syre to accuse the ryghteous before God. Hys thought and desyre, are taken as a comynge.
The Deuill then is counted to haue come in to the sight of God, not that the most wicked came in deede in the syght of the good God, but because hys cruel and most wycked thoughts came in to the syght of God. And thus euen nowe a dapes also cometh the deuyl wth them in to the sight of God, in y he daily accuseth, findeth fault, de. eth, persecuteth, & troubleth the godly.

The.ii. Chapter.

Job is plagued wth sore byles, and afterwarde is mocked of hys wyfe. His frends visite hym, and haue compassion on hym.

It happened also vpon a tyme, that whē the seruauntes of God came and stode before the Lorde, Satan came amonge the, and stode before hym. (a) And the lorde sayde vnto Satan: whence comest thou?
Satan answered and sayd: I haue circui-ted the lande, and walcked thorowe it.
Then sayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: haste thou not considered my seruaunt Job, how that he is an innocent and vertuous man suche one as feareth God, and eschueth euyll, and that there is none lyke him in the lande? But thou mouedest me agaynst him to punishe hym: yet is it in vayne, for he continueth styll in hys godlynesse. Satan answered the Lorde, and sayde: Skynne for skynne, and all that euer a manne hath, he wyl geue for his life. But lay thine hande vppon him, touch hym ones vpon the bone and fleche, and then thou shalt see he shall curse the to thy face. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Satan: lo, he is in thy power, but spare hys lyfe. So wente Satan forthe from the Lorde, and smote Job wth maruelous soore byles, from the sole of the foote vnto the croune: so that he late vpon the ground in the ashes, and scraped of the fylth of his soores wth a potsherde. Then sayde hys wyfe vnto him. Dost thou continue in thy perfectnesse? curse God and dye. But Job sayde vnto her: Thou speakest like a folish woman.

woman. Seynge we haue receyued prosperite at the hande of God, wherfore shuld we not be content with aduersitie also? In al these thinges dyd not Job syn wth hys lpps. Now when Jobs frendes heard of al the trouble, that happened vnto him, there came. iij. of them, euerye one from his own place: Eliphaz the Themanite: Baladad the Suhite, & zophar the Naamathite.

For they were agreed together to come to shewe theyr compassion vpon hym, and to comforte hym. So when they lifte vpp the eyes a farre of, they knewe hym not. Then they cryed, and wepte: then euerye one of them rente his clothes, and sprinckled duste vpon theyr heades in the ayre. They sat them down by him also vpon the grounde seuen dayes, and seuen nightes. Neither was ther anye of them that spake one worde vnto him, for they saw that his payne was verie greate.

The Notes.

(a) God is here described as synge and demaundynge, not that he vnto whome all thynges are knowne shulde thereby learne anye thyng: but that the deceates and rancour ofathan whiche alwayes lyeth in wayte, myghte be vnto vs the better knowne, to thetente that we shoulde walke the more warlye.

The.iii. Chapter.

The wordes of Job, wherin he declareth that this presente lyfe is myserable, and the deathe of the ryghteous, ioyous and fortunable.

After this Job opened hys mouth (a) and cursed hys daye, and sayde: losse be that daye, wherein I was borne, and the nyghte in which it was said there is a man chyld conceiued. The same daye be touned to darckenes, and not regarded of God aboue, neither be shined vpon wth lyghte, but be couered with darckenes, and the shadowe of deathe. Lette the dyminne cloude fall vpon it, and lette it be wrapped in sorow. Lette the darck storme ouercome that night, let it not be reckened amonge the dayes of the yere, ne counted in the monethes. Despyed be that night, and discommended: (b) let them that curse that day, those I saye that be readye too rapse vpp leuiathan, gyue it also theyr curse. Lette the starres be dyminne thowre darckenesse of it. Lette it looke for lighte, but se none, neyther the rpyngge vpp of the mornynge, because it shutte not vp the wombe that bare me, ne hys these sorowes from myne epen.

Alas, whye dyed I not in the matrice? whye did not I perishe, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe? Why set they me vpon theyr knees? Why gaue they me sucke vpon theyr breasts? For now I shuld haue lien still, I shoulde haue slepte, & ben at rest: lyke as the kynge and Lordes of the earth, whiche buyde them selues so lytarge places: or the Prynces that haue greate substance of golde, and theyr houses full of syluer. O that I bitterlye hadde no beyng, or were as a thyng borne oute of tyme (that is put a syde) eyther as possibyl children, whiche neuer sawe the lyghte. There the wycked do cease from theyr tyrannye, there suche as are ouerlaboured be at rest: there are those let oute fre, whiche haue bene in pryson, so that they heare no more the voyce of the oppressoure. Ther are small and greate: the bondman is free from hys master.

Wherfore is the lyghte geuen hym that is in wretchednes? and life them that haue heuie hertes? Whyche longe for deathe, if it come not: and search for it more then for treasure, and woulde be excedynge glad, and reioyce if they founde theyre graue? That shoulde be ioye to the manne whose waye is hydde, which God kepeth backe to deathe, so frome hym. For my syghes come before I that he can eate, and my torynges fall oute lyke flowynge water. For the thyng I feared is come vpon me: and the thyng that I was afrayed of, is happened vnto me. Was I not happye? Had I not quietnes? Was I not in reaste? And nowe cometh indignacyon vpon me.

The Notes.

(a) Cursed his day. Like as a man hauing an impostume (sayth Crisostome) if he be cut of by a surgeon, hauing nothyng wherewith he maye relye, during the tyme of his cutting, holdeth fast the thynges that be nye hym, and is redy to byte them that stand by hym, & yet can do nothyng vnto them: euen so Job fearynge the greuouesnesse of blasphemynge and cursynge, dothe wronge to vniuersally thynges, and speakynge after the maner of the common people whiche impute their misery to the influence of the starres, and to the daye of theyr byrth, curseth hys daye: that is, testifieth wth cursynge, howe bytter a lyfe he lyueth, and vnto how great misery he was borne (as we comenly saye) in an unhappy houre, euen as though nowe adapes a man repentyng hys synnes, shulde saye: Wo is me wretch. In an unhappy houre was I borne, which by my deedes haue denyed my maker, wo worth it. &c.

(b) They that curse the daye, are those that are werpe of theyr lyfe, in somuche that they fall in dede to cursynge.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Job is by Eliphaz reprimed of impacience and iniustice, & of the presumption of hys owne rightuousnes.

Then answered Eliphaz the Themanite and sayd vnto hym. If we begin too comen wth the, peradventure thou wylte be discontente, but who canne wythhold hym selfe from speakynge? Beholde thou haste bene a teacher of many, & haste comforted the werpe handes.

Thy wordes haue sette vp those that were fallen, thou hast refreshed the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon the, thou shynkest awaye: nowe that it hath touched thy selfe, thou arte fainte harted. Where is thy awe, thy stedfastnes, thy patience, and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Consydre (I pray the) who euer perished beinge an innocent? Or when were the Godly destroyed? As I haue sene them that that plowe wyckednes, and sowe malice, reape the same. Wp̄th the blast of God did they per̄she, and w̄th the breathe of hys anger consumed they awape. The (a) roaringe of the Lyon, the voyce of the Lyons helpe, and the teeth of the Lyons whelpes are broken. The Lyon per̄peth, for lacke of praye, and the Lyons whelpes are scattered abroad.

And vnto me was the worde hidde, and myne eare hath receyued a litle therof. In the phantasies and thoughtes of the visions of the nyghte, when sleepe commeth vpon men, feare came vpon me and dreed, and made my bones to shake. And whē the wind passed by before my presence, it made the heares of my fleshe stande vp. He stood there, and I knewe not hys face, an image there was before me, and there was stilnes so that I hearde thys voyce (b). Shal man be more iust then God? Or shal manne be purer then hys maker? (c) Beholde ther is no trust to hys seruantes, and in hys angels hath he found crokednes. How much more in them that dwell in houses of clape, whose foundacyon is but earth: whiche shall be consumed by the mothe. They shal be smitten from the morninge vnto the euenynge: they shal per̄she euerlastynge, and no man thynke thereon. Is not the (d) dignitie taken away w̄th them? they shal dye and that ere they be ware.

The Notes.

(a) By the roaringe, the voyce, and the teeth, are vnderstand the blasphemies and backbitynages that are vsed agaynst the innocent, as it is said Psal. xxi. b. By the similitude of the Lyon, he meaneth that the wycked shall per̄she, howe great or myghtye so euer they be.

(b) Shal man be more iust? &c. Of this principle wyl Eliphaz reason thus agaynst Job. If god wolde destroy an innocent, it shuld folowe that man were more ryghteous and pure then God, but thys is impossible, for the contrary is shewed vnto me by reuelacion.

(c) Behold there is no truste. &c. He laboureth in confirmynge that whych he had before propounded. The summe of the reason is. Angels are not purer then God, ergo not men.

(d) Dignitie signifieth here what soeuer they haue wherein they excelle other, whether it be riches or honour, power or conning. &c. For none of these shall redeme them from death.

The.ii. Chapter.

The ende of a foole. The rightuousnes of God. The Lord chasteneth hys, and deliuereth them agayne.

All men els, if thou canst finde any peake loke aboute the, vpon any of the holp men. As for the folp̄she man, displeasure kylleth him, and anger slayth the ignorant. I haue sene my self, when the folp̄she was deeperoted, that hys bewtye was sodenlye destroyed, that hys chyldren were w̄thoute prosperitie or health: that they were slayne in the doore, and no man to delp̄uer them: that hys haruest was eaten v̄ppe of the hungrye, that the weapened manne had spoyled it, and that the thurstie had dronke v̄p his ryches. It is not the earth that byrgeth forth trauayle, nether commeth sorowe oute of the grounde: but it is man, that is borne vnto myserye, like as the byrd to flyghte.

But nowe wyl I speake of the Lorde, and talke of God: whiche dothe thynges that are vnsearchable, and marueles withoute numbze: whych geueth raygne vpon the earth, and powreth water vpon all thynges: whych setteth v̄p them of lowe degre, and sendeth prosperite, to those that are in heuynesse. Whych destroyeth the thoughtes of the wycked, so that they are not able too perfourme the thynges that they take in hande: whych compasseth the wyle in theyr owne craftines, & ouerthroweth the counsell of the wycked. In so muche that they run into darcknes by fayre daye, and grope about them at the noone daye, lyke as in the nyghte.

And so he deliuereth the poore from the swearde, from the mouthe, and from the hand of the cruel, that the poore may haue hope, and that the mouthe of the oppres- soure may be stopped.

Beholde, happy is the man whome God punisheth: therefore despyse not thou the chastenynge of the almighty. For though he make a wounde he geueth a medicine agayne: though he smyte, hys hande maketh hole agayne.

(a) He deliuereth the out of sixe troubles, so that in the. vii. there can no harme touch the. In the myddest of hunger he saueyth the from deathe: and when it is war, from the power of the swearde.

He shall kepe y from the scourge of the tongue, so that when trouble cometh, thou shalt not nede to feare. In hauock & derth thou shalt be merce, and shalt not be afrayed of the beastes of the pearthe: But the stonnes in the lande shall be confederate w̄th the, and the beastes of the field shall geue the peace.

Yea thou shalt know that thy dwelling place shall be in reaste: thou shalt beholde thy substance, and be no more punished for sinne. Thou shalt see also, that thy sede shall encrease, and that thy progenye shall be as the grasse vpon the earth. Thou shalt come too thy graue in a fayre age, lyke as corne sheues are broughte into the barn in due season: Loo, thys is the thyng that we oure selues haue proued by experience. Therefore nowe that thou hearest it, take better hede to thy selfe.

The Notes.

(a) He deliuereth the. &c. Thys sentence propounded after the maner of a Prophecie, signifieth al one w̄th that of Psal. i. Cor. x. c. God is saythful whych shall not suffer you to be tempted aboue your strengthe, but that in the myddeste of temptation make a waye to escape oute. Eliphaz meaneth, he hath verely w̄raped the in many myseryes, but when the cruelth cometh, and when it shall seeme to hym that the offence is sufficientely punished, and that thou hast sette thynne impacience (for that layeth he to Job, though vnjustly) then wil he prosper the w̄th

The. v. Chapter.

Job answereth, that his payne is moze greuous then his faute, yet not wythstandyng he delitteth therein.

Job answered, and ſayd: O that my my-ſerpe were weped, and my punyſhment layde in the balaunces: for then ſhulde it be heuier then the ſande of the ſea. This is the cauſe that my wordes are ſo ſorrowful

(a) For the arrowes of the almyghty are in me, whoſe indignation hath droncke vp my ſpyte, and the terrible feares of God ſpyghte agaynſte me. Dothe the wylde aſſe roare when he hath the graſſe. Or crieth the ore, when he hath the fodder ynough? That whyche is vnſauere, ſhall it be eaten with oute ſalte, or is there any taſte in the white of an egge? The thynges that ſome time I might not away with, are now my meate for very ſorrowe. O I might haue my de-ſyre: O God wold graunt me ſomething that I long for, that he wold begyn & ſmite me, that he wold let his hand go and hewe me downe. Then ſhulde I haue ſome comfort yea I wolde deſyre him in my pain, that he ſhulde not ſpare, for I wil not be agaynſte the wordes of the holpe one.

What power haue I to endure. Or what is myne ende, that my ſoule myghte be parepente? Is my ſtrength the ſtrength of ſtones? Or, is my fleſhe made of braſſe? Is it not ſo that there is in me no helpe: and that (b) my ſubſtaunce is taken from me?
That is in tribulation oughte to be comforted of hys neyghboure: but (c) the feare of the Lorde is cleane awape: Myne owne brethren paſſe ouer by me as ſ water broke that haſtelye runneth thowowe the valeyes But thei that feare the hore froſt, the ſnow ſhall fall vpon them.

When they tyme commeth, they ſhall be deſtroyed and perſh: and when they be ſet on fyre, they ſhall be remoued out of their place, for the pathes that they go in, are cro-ked: they haſte after vayne thynges, & ſhall perſhe. Conſidre the pathes of the man, and the wayes of Saba, wherein they haue put theyr truſt. Confounded are they that put any confidence in them. For wher they came to obtayne the thynges they looked for they were broughte to confuſion.

Euen ſo are ye alſo come vnto me: but nowe that ye ſemy myſerpe, ye are aſtraied did I deſyre you too come hyther? Or, too geue me anye of your ſubſtaunce? To de-liuer me from the enemyes hande, or to ſaue me from the power of the myghty? Teache me and I wyl hold my tongue: and if I do erre, ſhewe me wherein.

Wherefore blame ye then the wordes, that are well and trulye ſpoken? whyche of you can reprove them? Hauyng onelye that ye are ſotiſh to checke mennes ſayings and canne ſpeake manye wordes in the wynde. Ye fall vpon the fatherles, and goo aboute to ouerthrowe your owne frende.

Wherefore loke not onelye vpon me, but vpon your ſelues: whether I lye or no. Turne into your owne ſelues (I praye you) be in differente iudges, and conſydre myne vngyltynneſſe: whether there be anye vnryghteouſneſſe in my tongue, or vayne wordes in my mouth.

The Notes.

(a) The arrowes of the almyghty after ſome mens opinion, are the ſozenes of hys iudgement, and his wrath: after ſome other, they are the trouble whych the law moueth in the hertes of men, whyle they therby are ſtirred to hate them ſelues, and ſo are healthfulllye kylled, as it is ſayd. Iſal xxxvii. a. Some agayne expounde them to be the croſſe of miſery and wretchedneſſe wherein God had now wrapped hym. For the ſayntes (ſay they) receyue theyr croſſe of the hand of God. The ſame wyl, that thys ſentence be an increaſyng and amplifying of that, whyche hys aduerſarie had fiercely layd agaynſt hym. Elyphas in the begynnyng of the fourth chapter had ſayde that the plage was come vpon hym, and had touched hym, wyth thys (ſay they) mea-teth he now. Beholde, it not onelye toucheth me, but woundeth me wyth arrowes, and thoſe venomed wyth venome, happely wyth the gall of Dragons, wyth which touching, both my blood wareth woode, and all my ſpīte is ſupped vp.
Moreover, God hath not onelye thowen theſe dartes vpon me, but alſo hys dreadfull feares, that is, what ſoever he hath that is terrible, lay-eth he on me.

(b) That my ſubſtaunce is taken from me. The Chalde interprete. hath: My ſubſtaunce is departed from me. And that after Iſa. Moles the wiſe dome of dyſuſyng iudgements & tryng of thyngges. As though he ſhuld ſay, ſo ſore is my grieve ſyth my helpe is taken from me, that I am not permitted to breath ſo longe, tyll I maye call to remembraunce what is moſt acceptable to god.
Some reade: Is not all the ſtrength of myne in forcement gone from me?

(c) But the feare of the Lorde. &c. As though he ſayd: but alas now adayes, there is no feare of the Lorde left: & therfore it is no meruell if charitie alſo whych is loyned to the feare of God, be not in vſe.

The. vii. Chapter.

Job ſheweth that this lyfe is but a battail or warrefare.

A Warrefare is the life of manne vpon earth, and his daies are like ſ daies of an hyred ſeruaunte. For like as a bonde ſeruaunte deſpyeth the ſhadow, and as an hyredlinge wolde fayne haue an ende of his worke: euen ſo haue I laboured hole monethes longe, (but in vayne) and many a carefull nyghte haue I tolde. When I layde me downe to ſlepe, I ſayde: When ſhall I ariſe? Agayne, I longed ſore for the nyghte. Thus am I replete with ſorrowes, tyll it be darcke. My fleſhe is clothed with wormes, fylthynes and duſt: my ſkinne is withered and crompted together, my daies paſſeouer more haſtely, then a weauer can weave oute his web: and are gone or I am ware. Remember, that my life is but a wind and that mine eye ſhall no more ſe the plea-ſures thereof, and that none other man ſhall ſee

eye shall see me any more. For if thou fasten thine eyes upon me, I come to nought, like as a cloude is consumed and vanisshed away: even so he that goeth downe to hell, cometh no more up, ne turneth agayn in to his house, neyther shall his place know hym any more.

Therefore I will not spare my mouth, but will speake in the trouble of my spirit in the bytternes of my minde wil I talke: Am I a sea or a Whale fysh, that thou kepest me so in prison? When I saie: my bed shall comforte me, I shall haue some restesinge by talking by my self vpon my couch, then troublest thou me with dreames, and makest me so afraide thowow visions, that my life wiseth rather to be strangled, and my bones be deade.

I can see no remedy. I shall lye no more. Spare me then for my dayes are but vaine. What is manne, that thou haste hym in such regarde, and settest so much by him. Thou takest diligent care for hym, and so denyest doest thou tye hym.

Why goest thou not fro me, ne letttest me alone, so longe tyll I swallowe downe my spittle? I haue offended, what shall I do vnto the, o thou preseruer of men. Whi haste thou made me to stande in thy waye, and am so heauye a burthen vnto my selfe. Why doest thou not forgeue me my sinne? Wherefore takest thou not awaye my wickednes? Behold, now I muste sleepe in the dust: and if thou sekest me to morow in the morninge, I shall be gone.

The. viii. Chapter.

Job is reprehended and noted to haue deserved his payne. A description of hypocrite.

When answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayde: Howe longe wylt thou talke of such thynges? howe longe shall thy mouth speake so proud wordes? Doth God peruert þ thing that is lawful? Or doth he the almyghtye destroy the thing that is ryghte? When thy sonnes spinned agaynst hym, did not he punyssh them for wickednes? If thou woldest now resort vnto God by tymes and make thine humble prayer to the almyghtye: if thou wouldest lye a pure and a godly lye: shulde he not wake vp vnto the forthewyth, and giue the the beute of righteousnes agayne? In so much, that wherein soeuer thou hadst a litle afore, thou shuldest now haue a great aboundance. Enquire of the that haue ben before the, searche diligently amonge thy forefathers. (For we are but of yester day, and we knowe not that oure dayes vpon earth are but a verpe shadowe.) They shall shewe the, they shall tell the, yea they shall gladly confesse the same.

Make a rushe be grene withoute moisture: make the grasse growe wthout water? No, but it or euer it be shot forth, and or euer it be gathered, it wthhereth, before any other herbe. Euen so goeth it with all them that forget God, and euen thus also shall the hypocrites hope come to nought. Hypocrite. His confidence shall be destroyed, for he trusteth in a Spiders webbe. He leaneth hym vpon his house, but he shall not stande: he holdeth hym selfe faste by it, yet shall he not endure. Ofte tyme a thyng dothe flourish, and men thinke that it maye abide the sun shining: it shouteth forth braunches in his garden, it take th many rootes, in so much that it is like an house of stones.

But if it be taken out of his place, every manne denieth it, saying: I know the not. Loo, thus is it wth hym that reioysseth in his owne deynge: and agayn other growe oute of the earth.

Behoulde, God wyl not caste awaye an vpryghte manne, neyther wyl he helpe the vngodlye. Thy mouth shall he fille wth laughing, and thy lippes wth gladnesse. They that hate the, shall be confounded, and the dwellnges of the vngodlye shall come to nought.

The. ix. Chapter.

Job declareth the benefites of God, & howe mannes eyghtuousnes is nothinge.

Job answered and sayd: Certes I knowe it is so of a truthe, that a man compared vnto God, canne not be iustified: If he wyl argu wth hym, he shall not be able to aunswere him one among a thousand. He is wyle of heart, and myghtye in strength. Who euer prospered, þ toke parte agaynst hym? (a) He translateth the mountaynes, or euer they be aware, and ouerthroweth them in his wrath. He remoueth the earth oute of her place, and her pylles, he all to shaketh. He commaundeth the sunne, and it ryseth not: he closeth by the sterres, as it were vnder a signet. He him self alone spredeth out the heauens, and goeth vpon the waues of þ sea. He maketh the waines of heauen, the Orions the seven sters, and the secrete places of the south: He doth great things such as are vnsearcheable, yea and wonders wthoute number.

If he came by me, I myghte not looke vpon him: if he wente his way, I shuld not perceyue it. If he be hasty too take any thyng away, who shall make him restore it agayn? Who shall saie vnto hym: what doest thou? He is God, whose wrath no man can withstand: but the proudest of all must stoupe vnder him. Howe shulde I then answer him, or what words shuld I finde out agaynst him? Yea, though he be righteous yet wil I not geue him one word agayne, but mekely submit my selfe to my iudge. Albeit that I call vpon him, and he heare me, yet am I not sure that he hath heard my voice he shall trouble me so with the tempest, and wound me out of measure without cause. He shall not let my spirit be in rest, but filleth me with bitternesse.

If men wyl speake of strengthe, he is the strongeste of all: if men wyl speake of ryghteousnesse, who dare be my recorder?

(b) If

(b) If I wil iustify myself, in owne mouth shal condemne me: If I wyl put forth my selfe for a perfecte man, he shall proue me a wycked doer: For that I shoulde be an innocente, my conscience knoweth it not:
yea I my selfe am wery of my life.

This one thing wil I say: He destroyeth bothe the ryghteous and vngodlye. And though he slep sodapnly w the scourge, yet laugher he at the punishment of the in-nocēt. As for the world, he giueth it ouer in to the power of the wicked, such as the rulers be, wherof all lāds are ful. Is it not so?
wher is ther any but he is such one?

My dayes haue ben more swifte then a pursuait: they are gone sodenly, and haue sene no good thyng. They are passed as may, as the thynnes that are good vnder sayle, and as the Egle that hasteth to her praye. When I am purposed to forget my complaynynges, to chaunge my countenaunce, and to comforte my selfe: then am I afraide of all my workes. I know thou fauoureste not an euill doer. If I bee then a wycked one, why haue I laboured in vaine? Though I washed my selfe with snowe water, and made myne handes neuer so cleane, yet shouldest thou dryppe me in the myer, and mine owne clothes shuld defile me. For he that I muste gyue answer to, & wyth whom I go to law, is not a man as I am. Neither is there any dayes men to reprove both the partes, or to laye hys hand bitwen vs. Let him take his rod away fro me, yea let him make me more afraid of hym, & then shall I answer hym wythout feare. For as lōg as I am in such fearefulnesse, I can, make no answer. And why? it greuet my soule to lye.

The Notes.

(a) God translateth the mountaynes: not onely these of the earth, but also the arrogant & proud tyrantes, and the greates realmes of the worlde whiche by a borrowed speache are often times in the scripture signified by mountaynes & hylles So translated he Pharaos Exodi. xiii. g. and hynge Sennacherib. Esaye. xxxvii. g.

*(b) Here is it good to se that Job presumeth not of hys owne ryghteousnes: nor magnifyeth hym selfe of hys owne good workes, though they wer many, as it appeareth in the chapters bothe before and after, but playnely confelleth hym selfe vnyghteous and a sinner before god, althoughe before the worlde he had luyed blame-lesse. God loketh on the harte though men loke but onely on the outward apperaunce. Hys ad-uersaries thoughte that he shoulde neuer haue had suche a crosse layde on hym, vnlesse then he had outwardely and openly luyed in wyckednesse. To that answereth Job in dyuerse places, that he therein was not culpable, and therefore accuseth as it were after the maner of me, the iudgement of God, concernyng such as are outwardely ryghteous, and standpoule to lye vertuoussly: namelpe suche as lye wythoute blame amonge men, and that bothe entende, and do wel to all men, and yet are wraped in manye myseryes and wretchednes, often tyme ouer cruell. And herein lieth, the chiefe of the controuersey betwixt Job and hys aduersaries, that Job defendeth hym selfe not to haue deserued hys punishment by hys outwardely luyng: where as hys aduersaries armed only wyth mannelye and fleshy wit, thoughte God to be vnyghtous if he woulde so greuously punishe hym that had not bene an outward synner agaynst hym.

Job, hys conscience bearyng hym wytnes, had luyed innocentely and straptely, and hurte no manne, had alwayes feared God and worshypped hym onely, hys chyldren also had he noue-red to the feare of God, and hadde harboured the strangers, and bene lyberalle to the needye, and coulde of no man be accused of wyckednes.
Yet witnesseth he iustly here (as all the godlye do) that he was not vterly wythoute sinne, for otherwyle had he bene a lyar. i. John i. If we saye, we haue no synne, we deceaue our sel-ues, and truche is not in vs. Wherefore in the places where he sayeth that he hath not des-erued hys punishment, and that shoulde seme to shewe hym blamelesse knowe that he speaketh of hys outward maner of luyng, not of the inward thoughtes and desyers of the hert, wherein, he was vndoubted an offender.

The .x. Chapter.

Job is weary of hys lyfe, and setteth out of his fragyltye before God. He despyeth tyme to repente. A descriptyon of deathe.

N Euer thelesse, nowe wyl I put forth my wordes: I wyl speake out of the berpe beaupnesse of my soule, and wyl say vnto God: Ah doo not condemne me, but shewe me the cause why thou iudgeste me on this maner? Thynkest thou it well done to oppresse me, to caste me of (beyng a worke of thy handes) and to maynetayne the counsell of the vngodlye?
Hast thou sheld thy euen, or doeste thou loke as a man loketh? Are thy peres as mannes peres, that thou makeste suche inqurtye for my wyckednes, and searcheste oute my synne? wher as thou knowest I am no wycked person, and that there is no man hable to rescoume me out of thyne hād. Thynke handes haue made me, and sacroued me al together roundabout, wylte thou then destroye me sodeynlye? Remember (I besech the) that thou madest me of the molde of earthe, and shalt brynge me to earth again. Hast thou not milked me like milke, and pressed me lyke cheese? Thou hast couered me wyth skynne and fleshe, and ioyued me together wyth bones and synowes. Thou hast graunted me lyfe, and done me good:
and the diligente hede that thou takest vp on me, hath preserued my spirite.

Thoughe thou hydest these thynges in thyne herte: yet am I sure that thou reme-berest them all. Wherefore dyddest thou kepe me, when I synned, and hast not cleansed me fro myne offence? If I do wyckedlye, wo is me therefore: If I be ryghteous, yet date I not lyfte vp my my heade: so ful am I of confusyon, and semre owne misery.

Thou huntreste me oute, oppressed wyth heupnesse, as it were a Lyon, and troublest me beyonde all measure. Thou bryngeste freshe witness agaynst me, thy warthe increased thou upon me: full many are the plages that I am in. Wherefore haste thou brought me out of my mothers wombe?

That I had perished, and that no eye had sene me. Yf they had carped me to my grauē, as sone as I was borne, they should I be nowe as though I had neuer bene.

Shall not my short lyfe come sone to an ende? holde the fro me, let me alone that I may ease my selfe a lytle afore I go thither, whence I shal not returne. Namelye to that land of darknes & shadow of death: yea into the darke cloudy lande and deadly shadow, where as is no order, but terrible feare continuallye abydeth.

The. xi. Chapter.

Job is vniustly reprobued of Sophar. God is not reprobable. He is merciful to & repeat

The answered Sophar & Ramathite and saide: should not he that maketh many wordes be answered? Should he that babbleth muche be commended the in? Shuld me giue eare vnto & only? Thou wylt laugh other men to scorne, & shal no body mocke the agayne? Wylt thou say vnto God: the thyng that I take in hande is perfecte, and I am cleane in thy syghte?
That God woulde speake, and open his lips against & that he myght shew the out of his secret wisdom how manyfolde his law is, then shouldest thou know that god had forgotten the bycause of thy synnes.

Wylt thou finde out God with thy sekyng? wylt thou attayne to the perfecte nesse of the almyghty? He is hygher then heauen, what wylt thou doo? Deper then the helle, howe wylt thou then knowe him? His length exceedeth the length of the earth, and his bredth the breadth of & sea.
Though he turne al thyngs vp set downe, close them in, or thrust them together, who dare checke him therfore?

For it is he that knoweth & vanity of me, beseecheth their wyckednes also, shuld he not then consider it? A vayne bodye vaunteth him selfe, and the sonne of man is lyke a wyld asses foale. Yf thou haddest nowe a ryght bert, and lyftedst vp thyne handes towards hym: if thou wouldest put awaye the wyckednes whych thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlynes dwelte in thy house then myghtest thou lyfte vp thy face with out shame, then shouldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.

Then shouldest thou forget thy mysery, and thynke no more of it then of the waters that runne by. Then shoulde thy lyfe be as cleare as the noone daye, and spryng forth as the morning. Then mightest thou haue comforte in the hope that thou hast:
and sleepe quyetelye when thou arte layed in. Then shouldest thou take thy reste, & no man to make the a frayd, yea manye one should sette muche by the. But the eyes of the vngodlye shal be consumed and not escape: they hope shall be mysery and so-rowe of mynde.

The. xii. Chapter.

Job in shewing his patience declareth & might and power of god.

So Job answered & sayd: Now vndoustedly I se ye are only men, and shal wyldome dye wyth you? But I haue vnderstandyng as wel as ye, and am no lesse theye. Yea who knoweth not those thyngs Thus he & calleth vpon God, & who God heareth, is mocked of his neyghboure: the godly and gyltes man: s laughed to scorn Godlines is the lampe despyed in the her-res of the ryche, and is set for them to stom-ble vpon. The houses of robbers are in wealthe and prosperyty, and they that ma-liciouslye meddle agaynst God dwell without feare: yea God gyueth al thyngs richly wyth his hande. For aske the cattelle, & they shal enforme the: the foules of & ayre, and they shal tel the: Speake to the earth, and it shal shew the: Or to the fishes of the sea, and they shal certifye the.

Who is he that knoweth not that the hand of the Lord made all these? In whose hande is the soule of euery lyuyng thing and the breathe of all men? Haue not the eares pleasure in hearyng, and the mouth in tastyng the thyng that it eateth? Amonge olde personnes there is wysdome, amonge the aged is vnderstandyng. Yea with God is wysdome, and strength, it is he that hath counsell and foreknowledge Yf he breake downe a thyng, who ca set it vp agayne? If he shutte a thyng, who wyl open it? If he wyth hold the waters they dry vp: If he let them go, they destroy the earth. Wyth him is strength and wise-dome: he knoweth both the desceiuer and him that is dysceyued. He carpech awaye the wyse men, as it were a spoyle, & byn-geth the iudges out of their wits: He looseth the handes of kyniges, & gyrdeth their loynes wyth a bande.

He leadech away & pryestis into capty-uety, & turneth the myghty vp set downe He taketh & truth out of the mouth, & disa-pointeth the aged of their wysdō. He poureth out confusion vpon princes, & comforteth the that haue be oppressed. Loke what lyeth hid in darknes, he declareth it open ly: and the very shadow of death bringeth he to lyght. He both increaseth the people, and destroyeth the. He maketh the to multiple, & dyueth the awaye.

He changeth the hert of the prynces and kyniges of the earthe, and dysappointeth them: so that they go wanderyng out of the way, & grope in the darcke without lighte raggering to and fro like drunken men.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Job reprobuech his frendes wyth theyr owne sayynges, and condemneth hypocrisy.

Let al this haue I sene wyth mine eye, hearde wyth myne eare, and vnderstande it. Looke what ye knowe, that same I knowe also, neither am I inferior vnto you. Neuertheles I am purposed to talke with the almighty, and my desire is to comen with God. As for you, ye are workemasters of lyes, and vnprofitable phisicians altogether. Would God ye kept your tounge, that ye myghte be taken for wyle me. Therefore heare my wordes, and ponder the sentence of my lippes: Wylle ye make answer for God wyth lyes, and mapnetayne hym wyth dysceyte? Wylle ye accept the person of God, and intreate for hym? Shall that he alpe you, when he calleth you to accomptes? Thyncke ye to be gyde hym, as a manne is begyled? He shall punyssh you, and reprove you, if ye doo se-cretely accepte anye person. Shall he not make you a scapde, when he sheweth hym selfe? Shall not his terribyle feare fall vpon you? your remembraunce shal be lyke duste, and pryde shal be touned to claye. Holde your tounge nowe, and let me speake, for there is somethynge come into my mynde.
 (a) Wherefore do I beare my fleche in my teeth, and my soule in mine hands? Lo ther is neither comfort or hope for me, if he wil slep me. But if I bitter & reprove mine own wayes in his syghte, he is euen the same that maketh me hole: and why? ther maye no dyssembler come before hym. Heare my wordes, and ponder my sayings wyth your eares. (b) Beholde nowe haue I prepared my iudgemente and knowe that I shall be founde ryghtous. What is he that wyl go to lawe wyth me? For if I holde my tounge, I shall dye. Neuerthelesse grante me two thynges, and then wylle I not hyde my selfe from the.

Wythdrawe thyne hande from me, & let not the ferful dread of the, make me afraid.
 And then sende for me to the lawe, that I may answer for my self, or els let me speake and gyue thou the answer.

Howe greete are my mysdoedes and synnes? Let me knowe my transgressions and offences. Wherefore hydeste thou thy face, and holdest me for thine enemy? Wilt thou be so cruel and extreme vnto a dying lease, and solow vpon dry stuble, that thou layest so sharply to my charge, and wilt vtterly vndo me for the synnes of my yowthe?
 Thou hast put my feete in the stocks, thou lokest narrowly vnto al my pathes, & mar-kest the steppes of my fete: wher I must co-sume lyke a foule carpon, and as cloth that is mothe eaten.

The Notes.

(a) Wherefore. &c. These bothe are prouerbyal-ly spokē, of the that offer theyr luyes to Jeopardy, and spare not theym selues. For he spareth not hym selfe that feareth his flech wth his teeth, & agayne he that bereth his soule in his hand, carieth it as a thing redy to be sold, cut as though he wold streyght leaue it, and cast it of.

(b) Behold. &c. this is his meanyng. The sum of my contention was this, thus dyd I order & defend my cause agaynst your reasons, that my hope is to be iustified. Armed wyth this sayth, I come wythout feare vnto iudgement. He wyl not pronounce him vnrighteous & so vnfained ly hoth trusted to his mercy. Hypocrites, the more they are to iudgement, the more they fear: I & nuer I am to deatly the more strong is my hope.
 (c) Wherefore hydest thou thy face. What & hiding of his face meaneth, looke Deut. xxxi. d.

The.xiiii.Chapter.

God describeth the lyfe of man, and prophessyeth of the resurrection. Hope susteyneth the Goddelge, till they haue that they looke for.

Man that is borne of a woman, hath but a short tyme to lyue, and is full of dyuers miseries. He cometh be-vp, and falleth away lyke a floure. Hee fleeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer contueneth in one state. Thynkeste thou it now wel done, to open thine eyes vpon such one and to byngme before the iudgement?
 Why can make that cleane, that cometh of vnclene seede? No body. The dayes of ma-are short, the number of his monethes are knowen onely vnto the. Thou hast appointed hym his bondes, he cannot go beyond theim. Good from hym, that he may taste a lytle, vntill his daye come which he loketh for, lyke as an hyrlinge doth.

Yf a tree be cut downe, ther is some hope yet that it wil sprout & shat forth the braches agayne. For though a tote be waken olde and dead in the ground, yet when the stocke getteth the sent of water, it wyl bud and byngme for the boughes, lyke as when it was fyrste planted. But man when he is dead, perished and consumed away, what becommeth of hym? The foudes wher they be dyed vpon, and the ryuers when they be emptye, are filled agayne thow the flow-ynge waters of the sea: but when man sle-peth, he ryseth not agayne: vntill the heauen perceyue, he shall not vponerise oute of his sleepe. O that thou wouldest kepe me, & hyde me in the hel, vntill thy wrath were stilled: and to appoynt me a tyme, wher in thou myghtest remeber me. May a deade man lyue agayne? All the dayes of this my pylgrimage, am I loking wher my chaungyng shal come. Yf thou wouldest but cal me, I should obey the: onelye despise not & worke of thine owne handes.

For thou hast numbred al my goynge, yet be not thou extreme vpon my synnes.
 Thou hast sealed vpon myne offences, as it were in a bagge: but be merciful vnto my wyckednesse. The mountaynes falle a waye at the laste, the rockes are moued out of theyr place, the waters pearse tho-rowe the very stones by lytle and lytle, the foudes washe awaye the grauell and earth: Euen so destroyest thou the hope of man. Thou preuaplest agaynst hym, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungest his state, and puttest him forth. Whether his children come to worshipp or no, he can not tell: And if they be men of lowe degree, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth, his flesh must haue trauaile: and while the soule is in hym, he must be in sorow.

The. xv. Chapter.

Eliphaz reproveth Job because he ascribeth wisdom and purenes to hym selfe. He desireth the curse that falleth on the wycked, rekenyng Job to be one of the number.

Then answered Eliphaz the Themanite, and sayd: (a) Shuld a wise mā answer as the sentence of the wynd, and sylpys help wryth the wynd of the East? Thou reprovest wryth wordes that are no thyng worth: and speakest thynges whiche can do no good. As for shame thou hast set asyde, els wouldest thou not make so manye wordes before God: but thy wyckednes teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a craftye tounge. Thyne owne mouth condemneth the, and not I: yea thyne owne lippes shalpe the an answer, Art thou the fyrst mā that euer was borne? Or wast thou made before the hills? Hast thou hearde the secrete counselle of God, that all wysdome is to lytle for the? What knowest thou that we knowe not? What understandest thou, but we canne the same? Wryth vs are olde and aged men yea suche as haue lyued longer then thy fore fathers.

I thinkest thou it a smal thyng of consolation of God: and art thou wryth the a (b) lpyng word? Whyp doth thyne herte make the so proude? Why standest thou so greatly in thyne owne conceyte? Where vnto looke thine eyes, that thy mynde is so puffed up agaynst God, and lettest suche wordes go oute of thy mouth? What is man, that he shoulde be cleane? what hath he (whiche is borne of a woman) wherby he might be knowne to be ryghtuous? Behold there is no truste to his sayntes: yea the verpe (c) heauens are not cleane in hys sight. How much more then an abhominable & byle man, whiche (d) drynkerth wyckednes lyke water? I wil tel the, heare me: I wil shew the a thyng that I knowe, whiche wyse men haue tolde, and hath bene bydded from the fathers, vnto whom onely the lande was gauen, that no strainger shoulde come amonge them.

The vngodlye dyspayreth all the dares of his life, and the number of a tyrantes peres are vnknewen. A fearefull sound is euer in hys eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction: He beleueth neuer to be deliuered out of darknes, the sword is alwaye before his eyes. When he goeth forth to get hys lpyng, he thynketh plainly that the daie of darknes is at hande. Sorowe and carefalsnes make hym afraid and compassed by a rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge wryth hys hoste readye to the battaile. For he hath stretched out hys hande agaynst God, and armed hym selfe agaynst the almyghtye. He runneth proudly vpon hym, and wryth a styffe necke fyghteth he agaynst hym: where as he couereth his face wryth fatnes, and maketh hys bodye well lpyng. Therefore shal his dwellynge be in desolat cyties, and in houses which no man inhabyteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shal not be ryche, neyther shal hys substance contynue, nor encrease vpon earth. He shal neuer come out of darknes, the flame shal drye vp hys branches: wryth the blast of the mouth of God shal he be taken awaye. He wyl neyther applye hym selfe to saythfulnes ne truthe, so sore is he desceyued wryth vanyte.

He shal perishe afore hys tyme be worne oute, and hys hande shal not be grene. He shal be plucked of as an vntymelye grape from the vyne, and shal lette hys floure fall as the olyue dothe. For the congregacyon of hypocrytes is vnfeythfull, and the fyre shal consume the houses of such as are greedy to receyue gyftes. He conceyuetrauaile, he beareth myschance, and hys bodye dryngeth for the disceyte.

The Notes

(a) That is, Shoulde a wise man speake vayne wordes, and shoulde he hym selfe be vayne and vult vpon wryth vnproffitable and tryfelinge doctryne? The east wynd dryeth vp al thynges, & therfore by a belly fylled with it, is signified by a borrowed speech, a stomache of hert, out of whiche procedeth suche false doctryne as dryeth vp the moistnes of the soule in triffing out of truthe.

(b) Some read, secrete. The whole sentence doeth Rab. Moyles thus expounde. God can yet comfort the agayne in thys lyfe, regardest thou so lyttell hys comforte, and takest them for a lye? Other thus: Heame the comfortes of men of gravity Beldad and Sophar vnworthy for the, and seme they to the lyes.

(c) Under the name of the heauens, vnderstandeth he the angelles.

(d) To drynke wyckednes lyke water, is, to be fylled w wyckednes: it is a maner of spekyng of the heuies. So to drynke scornfulnes signifieth to be fylled therwryth, as after in the. xxi. a.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Job repentyng his misery, saith that he suffereth more then hys wyckednes hath deserued.

Job answered and said: I haue oft tymes hearde such thynges, miserable geuerys of comfort are ye al the sort of you. Shal not thy vayne wordes come yet to an end? Or hast thou anye more to saye? I coulde speake as ye do also, But would God that your soule were in my soules steade: then shoulde I heape vp wordes agaynst you, and shake my heade at you. I shoulde comfort you wryth my mouth, and release your payne w the talking of my lips. But what shal I do? For al my wordes, my sorowe wil not cease: and though I hold my tounge yet wil it not depart from me. And now that I am ful of paine, and al I haue desceyued (whereof my wyngles beare wytnesse) there standeth by a dyssembler to make me me answereth with lies to my face. He is angry at me, he hateth me, and gnaweth upon me with his teeth. Myne enemy scouleteth upon me with his eyes.

They haue (a) opened theyr mouthes wyde vpon me, and smitten me vpon the cheeke despytfully: they haue eased theyr selues thowtow mine aduersity. God hath giuen me ouer to the vngodly, and deliuered me into the handes of the wycked. I was sometyme in wealthe, but sodayne he hath brought me to noughte. He hath takē me by the necke, he hath rent me, and set me as it were a marcke for him to shote at: he hath compassed me round about with his darts, he hath wounded my loynes, and not spared. My bowels hath he poured vpon the ground. He hath giuen me one wounde vpon an other, and is fallen vpon me lyke a gaunte. I haue sowed a sacke cloth vpon my skynne, and lye with my strength in the duste.

My face is swollen with weapynge, and myne eyes are waxed bymme. Howe be it ther is no wyckednesse in my handes, and my prayer is cleane. (b) O earth couer not my bloude, and let my crying fynd no rouse. For loo, my wrenesse is in heauen, and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the height. My frends laugh me to scorne but mine eye pouereth out teares vnto god. Though a bodye myghte pleade with God as one man doeth with another, yet the number of my yeares are come, and I muste goo the waye, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

The Notes.

(a) To open theyr mouthes, spaketh to threetyen with most extreme and cruell punishment, and to reprove with shamefull and spitefull wordes, as in the 13. l. xxi. c.

(b) O earth couer not my bloude, that is, as a be Abraham expoundeth it: hyde not my bloude but that it be auenged, let not the auengement therof be vnknewen, but open vnto all mennes eyes, as was the auengment of Dathan & Abiram, whom the earth swallowed. Nu. xvi. c. Ye maye also expound it thus: hyde not my blood, but let it testify and witness mine innocency, as did the bloude of Abel, of whom we reade that his blood cryed from the earth. Gene. in the. iiii. b.

The .xvii. Chapter.

Job sayth that he consumeth away, and yet doth patiently abyde it.

My breath sayleth, my daies are thowred. I am harde at deathes doore, I haue deceyued no manne, yet muste mine eye continue in heuyness. O deliuer me, & set me by: who shall the be able to thrust my handes together? Thou hast withholdeu theyr herres frome vnderstandynge. therefore shall they not be set vp on hye. He promyseth his frendes parte of his good, but his owne children spende it. He hath made me as it were a byword of the comune people. I am his gestynge stocke amonge them. My countenance is heauye for heuy anger, and the members of my body are become lyke a shadowe. Vertuous me therefore shall wel consider this, & the innocent shall take part against the hypocrite.

The righteous wyll kepe his waye, and be that hath cleane handes, wyll euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, touch you and get you vence, for I can not se one wyse man among you. My daies are past, my thoughtes are vanyshed away, whych haue vered mine hert, changynge the night into daye, and the lycht into darknesse. Though I say neuer so much, yet I graue is my house, and I muste make my bedde in the darke. I call corruption my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my syster. What helpeth then my longe tarynge? Or who wyll fulfyll the thinge that I loke for? All that I haue shall go downe into the pit, & lye with me in the duste.

The .xviii. Chapter.

Baldad reherseth the paynes of the vnfaithfull and wycked.

The answered Baldad the Subit, and sayd: when wyll ye make an ende of your wordes? Marke well and consider, we wyll speake also. Wherefore are wee counted as beasts, and reputed so vile in youre syghte? Why destoyeste thou thy selfe with anger? Shall the earth be forsaken, or the stones remoued out of theyr place because of the? Shall not the lycht of the vngodlye be put oute? yea the flame of his fyre shall not burne. The lycht shall be darke in his dwellynge, and his candle shall be put out w him. His presumptuous goings shall be kept in, and his owne counsel shall caste him downe. For his fete shall he taken in the net, and he shall walcke in the snare. His fete shall be holden in the trap and the chysse shall catch him. The snare is layed for hym in the grounde, and a pit falle in the waye.

Fearefulness shall make hym astrayd on euerye syde, that hee shall not knowe to bere to get oute. Hunger shall be his substance, and misfortune shall hange vpon hym. He shall eate the strength of his skynne (a) the fyre borne of deathe shall eate his members. All his comforte and hope shall be red out of his dwellynge, very fearefulness shall bringe him to the kynge.

(b) Other men shall dwel in his house (whiche now is none of his) and bymestone shall be scattered vpon his habitacon. His rotes shall be dryed vnderneath, and aboue shall his harueste be cutte downe. His remembraunce shall perishe from the earth, & his name shall not be prayled in the streets: he shall be dryuen from the lycht into the darknesse, and be cast elene out of the worlde, he shall neyther haue children nor kynfolke among his people, no, ne anye posterity in his country: younge and olde shall be astonished at his death. Such are now the dwellings of the wycked, & this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

The Notes.

(a) That is, an horrible and sodayne death. I. iii. Some

Some reade the pynce of death.

(b) *Q*ue the shal dwell: that is to saye to hys wyfe wythoute hym.

The. xix. Chapter.

*J*ob recypteth his myseries, & greuous paynes
He prophesyeth of the generall resurrection.

*J*ob answered and sayde: how long wyl ye bere my mynde, and trouble me wth wordes? Too ten tymes haue ye repro-ued me: are ye not ashamed to laughe me to scorn? if I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe. But if ye enhaunce your selues a-gaynst me, and accuse me to be a wycked person because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God whiche hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me aboute wth his scourges. Behold, though I crye, yet vpolace is done vnto me, I can not be heard: Though I complayne, ther is none to geue sentence wth me. He hath hedged vth my parhe, I can not get away, he hath set darknes in my gate. He hath spoyled me of mine honour & taken (a) the crowne away from my heade.
He hath destroyed me on euerye syde, & I am vndon: My hope hath he taken awaye from me, as it were a tre plucked vth by rote.
His wrath is kyndled agaynst me, he taketh me as though I were his ennemye.

His men of war came together, whiche made theyr way ouer me, and besieged my dwellynge rounde about. He hath put my brethren far away from me, and such as were of myne acquaintance, are become stragers vnto me. Myne owne kinsfolks haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembraunce. The seruantes and maidens of mine own house, take me for a stranger, and I am become as an aleaunt in their syghte.

When I call vpon my seruaunte, he geueth me no answer: no thoughte I praye hym wth my mouth. Myne owne wyfe mape not abyde my breath, I am fayne to speake say: vnto the chyldren of mine own body. Yea the verie foolles despyse me, and when I am gone from them, they speake euyl vpon me. All such as were my most familiars abhorre me: and they whom I loued best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hanger to my skyn, and my flesh is away, onely ther is left me the skynne about my teeth. Haue p<sup>tye</sup> vpon me, haue p<sup>tye</sup> vpon me (O ye my frendes) for the hande of the Lord hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me (b) as God and (c) are not satisfied of my flesh?

That my wordes were wyrtten, & that they were put in a booke: woulde God they were grauen wth an yron penne in leed or in stone. For I am sure that my resurrection. demer lyueth, and that I shall ryse oute of the earth in the later daye: that I shall be clothed agayne wth this skin, and se god in my flesh. Yea I my selfe shal behold him not wth other, but wth these same eyes.
My paynes are consumed within me, when ye say: Why do not we persecute hym? we haue founde an occasion agaynst him. But beware of the swerde, for the swerde wyl be auenged of wyckednesse, and be sure that there is a iudgement.

The Notes.

(a) Rabbi Abraham vnderstandeth by the crowne the dignitie that cometh to the ryche by the menes of theyr ryches: for al men haue the ryche in honoure: althoughe some vnderstande thereby his chyldren, as in the p<sup>ro</sup>uerbe. The crown of oulde men are theyr chyldrens chyldren. Other some vnderstande the dygnitye that came vnto hym of hys wysdome and cunnyng. So Jobs meanynge is, that of a worshipful & riche man, he is become poore & despised.

(b) The heabynes reade as they doo, meanynge the cruell whiche are not satisfied wth hys flesh: suche woulde he not that hys frendes shoulde counterfete.

(c) Are not satisfied of my flesh. To eate and be satisfied of a mans flesh, is a borrowed spech taken both in the good and euyl parte. In the good parte it sygnifyeth to loue, to iudge friendly, and then at length to fal to praysyng. In the euyl part, it is cruelly & beastly to mis-say, & (as it were) to feare wth spiteful & haynouse wordes.

The. xx. Chapter.

Sophar sayeth, that the vnfaithfull, the couerouse and the wicked, shal haue a short end.

*T*hen answered Sophar the Naamathyte, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes compelle me to an-swere. And why? my mynde is tossed here & ther. I haue sufficiently herd thy checking and reprove, therefore am I purposed to make answer after myne vnderstandynge.
Knowest thou not this, namely that from the beginning (euer sithens the creatyng of man vpon erth) the praise of the vngodlye hath bene short, and that the toy of hypocrites continued but the twinklinge of an eye? Though he be magnified vth to he-uen, so that his head reacheth vnto the cloudes, yet he perissheth at the last lyke dong:
in so much that they which haue sene him, say: Where is he? He vanissheth as a dreame so he ca no more be found, & passeth away as a vision in the nyghte. So that the eye which sawe hym before, getteth now no syght of him, & hys place knoweth hym no more. Hys chyldren goo a begginge, their hads bring them to sorow and heauynesse.

From hys yowth hys bones are full of vice, which shal lie downe wth him in the earth. When wyckednesse is swete in hys mouth, he hideth it vnder his tonge. That he fauoureth that wyl be not forsake, but keepeth it close in hys throte.

The meate that he eateth shal be touned to the poyson of serpentis within hys body. The ryches that he deuoureth, shal be perbake agayne, for God shal draw them out of hys bellye. (a) He shal sucke the serpentes head, and the adders tounge shal sley him: so that he shal no more se the riuers and brokes of honye and butter: But laboure shal be, and yet haue nothyng to eate. Greate trouaile shal he make for rychelle, but he shal not enioye them.

And

And whype? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoiled, and not builded them. His helpe coulde neuer be fylled, therefore shall he perishe in hys couetyse. He deuoured so greedely that he lefte nothyng behynde, therefore hys goodes shall not prospeare. Though he hadde forson of euery thyng, yet was he poore, and therfore he was but a wretch on euery syde.

For though he the wycked haue neuer so muche to fyll hys bellye, yet God shall sende hys wraethe vpon hym, and cause his battayle to ragne ouer hym: so that yf he fynde the yron weapon, he shall be shotte wth the steale bowe. The arrowe shall be taken forth, and go oute at his backe, and a glysteringe swearde thorowe the gall of hym, feare shall come vpon hym. <sup>(b)</sup> There shall no darcknesse be hable to hyde hym. And vnkynndled fyre shall consume hym, & loke what remaineth in his house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wickednesse, and the earth shall take parte agaynst hym. The substaunce that he hath in hys house, shall be taken awaye and perishe, in the dape of the Lordes wraethe. This is the porcyon that the wycked shall haue of God, and the heritage that he mai loke for of the Lorde.

The Notes.

(a) He shall sucke the serpent's heade, that is, he shall be subject to al cursednes, and suffer al manner sorowes. It is such a manner of speech as is before in the fiftene <sup>(b)</sup> of drinking wickednes.

(b) That is, he cannot hide hym from perilles.

The.xxi.Chapter.

Job recytleth the prosperytye of the wicked and after describeth theyr sodayne ruyne and destruction.

Iob answered and sayd: O heare my wordes and amende your selues. Suffer me a litle, that I may speake also, and then laughe my wordes to scorn if ye wil. Is it with a man that I make this disputacion? Whiche if it were so, shoulde not my spirit be then in sore trouble? Marke me wel, be abashed, and laye your hande vpon your mouthe. For when I ponde and consyder this, I am afrayd and my fleche is smitten with feare. Wherfore do wicked men lyue in healthe and prosperytye come too theyr old age, and encrease in riches? Their childrens children liue in their sight, and their generation before theyr eyes. Their houses are safe from al feare, for the rod of God doth not smite them. Their bullocke gendereth, & that not oute of tyme: their cowe calueth, and is not vnfruteful.

They sende forth theyr children by flockes, and their sonnes leade the daunce. They beare wth the tabrettes and harps and haue instrumentes of musike at theyr pleasure. They spend theyr dayes in welth but sodenly they go downe to hell. They saye vnto God: go from vs, we desyre not the knowledge of thy wayes. What manner felowe is the almyghty, that we shuld erue him? What profite shoulde we haue to submit oure selues vnto him? Loon there is vtterlye no goodnesse in them, therefore wyll not I haue to do with the counsell of the vngodly. Howe ofte shall the candle of the wicked be put oute? howe oft cometh their destruction vpon them? What sorowe shall God geue them for theyr parte in hys wraethe? Yea they shall be as chaffe before the wynde, and as duste that the storme carpeeth awaye.

And though he God saue theyr children from suche sorowe, yet will he so rewarde them selues that they shall knowe it. Their owne destruction and myserye shall they se wth theyr eyes, and drynke of the fearful wraethe of the almyghty. For what careth he what becommeth of hys household after hys death, whose moneths passe away swifter then an arrowe. In as muche then as God hath the hyste power of all, who can teache him anye knowledge? One dyeth nowe when he is myghty, and at his best, rych, and in prosperiti: euen when his bowelles are at the fattest, * and hys bones full of marpe. An other dyeth in sorow and heynynes, and neuer hadde good dayes. Now slepe they bothe alpyke in the earth and the wormes couer them. But I know what ye thynke, yea and what ye ymagin agaynst me vnrightrouslye. For ye saye: where is the Synces palace? Wher is the dwelling of the vngodly? Aske anye manne that goeth by the waye, and (if he wyll not regard theyr tokens and dedes) he shall tell you, that the wicked is kepte vnto the dape of destruction, and that the vngodlye shall be broughte forth in the day of wraath. Who dare reprove hym for his waies to his face, who rewardeyth him for the vngaciousnes that he dothe? Yet shall he be broughte too hys graue, and wathe amonge the heape of the deade. Then shall he be fayne too be buried among the stones by the broke side. All menne muste folowe him, and there are innumerable gone before hym. O howe bayne is the comforte that ye geue me? Are not your aunsweres clene contrary to ryghte and truthe.

* After the greke, some reade pappe.

The.xxi.Chapter.

Eliphaz reprehendeth Job of vnmerecyfulnesse.

So Eliphaz the Temanite gaue answere and sayde: May a man be compared vnto God in wysdom, though he seme to hym selfe for to be lyke hym? What pleasure hath God in that thou art righteous? Or what dothe it profytte hym, that thy wayes are perfect? Is he afrayd to reprove the, and to stepp forth with the into iudgement? Commeth not this for thy greates wickednes, and for thine vngacious dedes whiche are innumerable? Thou hast taken the pledge from thy brethren for noughte, and robbed the naked of theyr clothinge. To suche as were weare, haste thou geue no water to dryncke: thou hast withdrawn bread from the hungry: Should such one then as doeth violence, wronge & oppression (doing all thing of parcialtie, & hauing respect of persons) dwell in the land? Thou hast sent widowes away emptye, and oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

B Therefore arte thou compassed aboute wth snares on euerye side, and sodeynlye vexed wth feare. Shouldest thou then see no darkenesse? Shuld not the water floud runne ouer thee? Howe because that God is hier then the heauens, and because thou seest that the sterres are so hye, wylte thou therefore saye: Tushe howe shoulde God knowe? Dothe hys dominion reache beyond the cloudes? Tushe the cloudes couer hym that he may not see, for he dwelleth in heauen. Well thou wylte kepe the old way that all wicked men haue gone, bothe olde and yong, whose foundation is a running water, whiche saye vnto God: go from vs. A and after this manner: Tushe, what wyl the almyghty do vnto vs? Where as he (not withstandinge) fylleth theyr houses wth all good. Whych meanynge of the vngodly be far from me. For wth ioye shall the godlye, and wth gladnesse shall the innocent see, that theyr encrease shall be hewen downe, and theyr posteritye consumed wth fyre.

Therefore reconcile the vnto God, and be contente, so shall all thynges prospere with the righte well. Receiue the lawe at hys mouth, and lay by his words in thyne herte. For if thou wylt turne to the almyghty, thou shalt stande faste, and all vnrighteousnesse shall be farre from thy dwelling: He shall geue thee as haruest which in plentie and aboundaunce shall exceede the dust of the earth, and the golde of Ophir lyke riuier stones. Yea the almyghty hys owne selfe shall be thine haruest, and the heape of thy monye. When shalt thou haue thy desypte in the almyghty, and lyfte vpp thy face vnto God. When shalt thou make thy prayer vnto him, and he shall heare thee, and thou shalt keepe thy promises. Then loke what thou takest in hande, he shall make it to prospere with thee, and the lyghte shall shine in thy wayes. For who so humbleth hym selfe, hym shall he sette vpp: and who so looketh mekelye, shall be healed. If thou be innocent, he shall saue thee, and thorow the vngodlynesse of thine hands, shalt thou be deliuered.

The. xlii. Chapter.

A Job sayeth that he bothe knoweth and feareth the power and sentence of the iudge and sayeth that he hath walked in his righteousness.

A Job answered and sayde: Appoyning is yet this daye in bytternes, and my hand heuie amonge my gronnynges. That I myghte see hym and finde hym: That I myghte come before hys seate to pleade my cause before hym, and to fyll my mouth wth argumentes, that I myghte knowe what answer he wolde geue me: and that I myghte vnderstande what he would say vnto me. Will he pleade againste me wth hys greafe power and strengthe, or wyl he leane hym selfe vnto me? Oh no, let hym not do so wth me. But lette hym geue me lyke power to go to the law, then am I sure to win my matter. For though he go before, I finde hym not: If I come be hynde I can gette no knowledge of hym. If I goo on the lefte syde too ponder hys worckes, I can not atteine vnto them. Agayne if I goo on the righte side, he hideth hym selfe that I cannot see hym: but as for my waye he knoweth it, and trieth me as golde in the fyre.

Reuerthelesse my fete keene hys pathe, hys hygh streete haue I holden, and not gone oute of it: I haue not forsaken the commandemente of his lippes, but loke what he charged me wth hys mouth, that haue I shut in my herte. It is he hym selfe alone, who shall turne him backe: He doth as him lusteth, and bringeth to passe what he wil. He rewardeth me into my bosome, and manye other thynges dothe he, as he may by hys power. This is the cause that I shrinke at hys presence, so that when I consider him, I am a frayde of hym. For in so muche as he is God, he maketh my hert softe: and seinge that he is almyghty, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I gette oute of darkenesse: the cloude hath couered my face.

The. xlii. Chapter.

A Job describeth the wickednesse of menne, and sheweth what curse belongeth to the wicked.

C Onspyderyng then there is no time hid from the almyghty, howe happeneth it that they whiche knowe hym wyl not regarde his dayes: For some there be that remoue other mennes lande markes: that robbe them of theyr cattel, and kepe the same for theyr owne: that dyspue awaye the asse of the fatherles, that take the widows ore for a pledge: that thrust the pore out of the waye, and oppresse the symple of the wolde together.

Beholde, the wilde asses in the desert go by tymes, as theyr manner is, to spople. Yea the verbe wyldecnes multiplyeth fode for theyr chyliden. They reape the corne felde that is not theyr own: and gather the grapes oute of hys vyneyard, whome they haue oppressed by violence. They are the cause that so manye menne are naked and bare, hauinge no clothes too couer them and kepe them from coude. So that when the showers in the mountaynes haue rained vppon them, and they be all wet, they haue none other succour, but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

They spople the suckynge fatherlesse chyliden, and putte the poore in prison: in so much that they let them go naked wthoute clothynge, and yet the hungrye beare the the sheues. The poore are faine to labour in thei oyle presses, pea and too treade in thei wine presses, and yet to suffer thirst. The hole cypre cryeth vnto the Lorde with syghynge, the soules of the flayne make thei complaynt: But God destroyeth thei not for al this, wher as thei (not withstanding) are rebellious and disobedient enemies, which seke not his lighte & waye, ne turne again into his path. Timeli in þ morning do they arise to murder the simple & poore, & in þ night they go a stealyng,

The eye of the vngodlye is lyke the aduouterer, that wapeth for the darckenesse and sayth thus in hym selfe: Tushe, there shal no man se me, and so he disguiseth his face. In the nyghte season they search the houses, and hyde them selues in the dape tyme, but wyl not knowe the lychte. For as soone as the day breaketh, the shadowe of death cometh vpon them, and they go in horrible darckenesse. The vngodlye is verye swifte, & that his porcion also vpon earthe wyl swifter then the runnyng water, which suffereth not the shyppe manne to behoulde the fayne and pleasaunte vineyardes. & that they (for the wyckednesse whiche they haue doone) were drawn to the hell soner then snowe melteth at the heate. & that all compassyon vpon them were forgotten, that they dainties were wormes, that they were cleane put oute of mynde and vnterlye hewen downe like an vntrufetull tre: For they maynetayne the baren and make them that they canne not beate, and vnto widowes they do no good. They plucke down the mighty wpth their power, and when they them selues are gotten vppon, they are neuer withoute feare, as longe as they liue. And though they might be safe, yet they wil not receiue it, for their eyes loke vpon their owne waies. They are exalted for a litle: but shortlye are they gon broughte to extreme pouerty and take out of the waye, pea and vnterlye plucke of, as the eares of come. Is it not so? Who wyl then reprove me as a liar, and say that my wordes are nothinge worthe?

The. xxv. Chapter.

Baldad proueth that no man is cleane, and wythoute synne before God.

Then answered Baldad the Subite, and sayd: Power & fear is with hym a boue, that maketh peace, sitting in his highnes, whose menne of war are innumerable: and whose lighte ariseth ouer all. But howe may a man compared vnto god be iustified. Or how can he be cleane, that is borne of a woman? Behoulde, the moone synneth nothyng in comparyson to hym, and the sterres are vncleane in hys syghte. Howe muche more then manne that is but corrupcion: and the sonne of manne, whiche is but a worme?

The. xxvi. Chapter.

Job sheweth that man can not helpe God, and proueth it by his miracle.

Job answered and saide: O howe helpest thou the weake? what comforte geueste thou vnto hym that hath no strengthe, where is the counsell that thou shouldeste giue him whiche hath no wisdome? Wylt thou that so shewe thynne excellente ryghtuousnes: before whome hast thou spoken those wordes, who made the breathe to come out of the mouth? The giauntes and worthie that are flayne, and lye vnder the worlde wpth their companions, pea and all they whiche dwel beneth in the hell are not hyd from hym, and the verbe destruction selfe can not be kepte oute of his sight. He stretcheth oute the North ouer the empty, and hangeth the earthe vpon nothinge. He byndeth the water in hys cloudes, & they fal not downe together. He holdeth backe his steele, that can not be seene, and spreadeth his cloudes before it.

He hath compassed the waters wpth certayn boundes, vntill the day and night come to an end. The very pillars of heauen (a) tremble and quake at hys reprofe. He filleth the sea with his power, and thorow his wisdome hath he set forth the worlde. With his spyrte hath he garnished the heauen, and wpth hys hand hath he wounded the rebellious Serpente. This is now a short summe of his doinges. But who is hable sufficient to reherse hys workes? Who can perceiue and vnderstand the thowght of hys power.

The Notes.

(a) Heauen and earthe haue properlye no pillars nor anye thyng to leane too that shoulde sustayne and bear them by, as it appereth of the earthe aboue in this c. apier: But Job taketh hys synplytude of oure earthelye buyldynges, he cause hys hearers shoulde so the soner vnderstande hym.

The. xxvii. Chapter.

The constancy and perfectnes of Job, and the parte of the vnfaythful with God.

And Job wente forth in his communication, saying: as truly as God liueth (whiche hath taken awaye my power from me) and the almyghty, that hath beread my minde: my lippes shal talke of no vantage, and my tonge shal speake no discepte, whyle my breath is in me, and as longe as the wynde (that God hath geuen me) is in my nostrils.

God forbyd I shulde graunt your cause to be ryghte. As for me, vntill myne ende come, wyl I neuer go from myne innocence. My ryghteous dealinge kepe I faste, whiche I wyl not forsake: my herte shal not reprove me of my (a) dayes. Therefore myne enemye shal be founde as the vngodlye, and he that taketh parte agaynst me, as the vnrightheous. What hope hath the hypocrite, though he haue great good and though he God gaue hym ryches after hys hertes desyre? Dothe God heare hym the soner, when he cryeth vnto hym in his nede? Hath he suche pleasure and delpte in the almyghty, that he dare alwaye call vpon

ders of god

Upon God? I will teache you in the name of God, and the thing that I haue of the almyghty will I not kepe from you. Holde ye stande in your owne conceyte as though ye knewe all thynges: Wherefore then do ye goo about wth such vaine wordes? sayinge: This is the porcion that the wicked shall haue of God, and heritage that tyrantes shall receiue of the almyghty. If he get manie children they shall perishe wth the swerde, and his posteritie shall haue scarcenesse of breade. Like whō he leaueth behind him, they shall die and be buried, and no man shall haue pitie of hys widowes. Though he haue as muche monye as the dust of the earth, and raymente as readye as the clape, he may wel prepare it: but the godlye shall put it vpon hym, and the innocent shall deale oute the monye.

His house shall endure as a mothe, and as a booth that a watchman maketh. When the ryche man dyeth, he carryeth nothyng wth hym: he is gone wth a twinklynge of an eye. Destruction taketh hold vpon him as a water floude, and the tempest stealeth hym awaye in the nyghte season. A vehement wynde carryeth him hence and departeth: a storm plucketh him out of his place. It rusheth in vpon hym and spareth hym not, he may not escape fro the power thereof. Then clappe menne theyre handes at hym, yea and ieste of hym when they looke vpon hys place.

The Notes.

(a) Understande my selfe. He meaneth that he will not suffer that his conscience be faulty and that he will not haue an euill conscience for my selfe pendinge of hys lyfe tyme, in whyche he had liued most innocentlye.

The xxviii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that the wysdome of God is vnsearcheable.

There are places where siluer is molten and where golde is tryed: where pyron is dygged out of the ground, & stones resoluēd to metall. The darckenesse shall come to an ende, he can seke oute the grounde of all thynges: the stones, & darke and the horrible shadowe. Wth the ryuer of water parteth he a sūder the straunge people, that knoweth no good neyghbourheade: suche as are rude, vnmannerly, and boysteous. He byngeth foode oute of the earth, and that whyche is vnder consumption he wthlyfeth. There is founde a place whose stones are cleue Saphires: and wher the clottes of the earth are golde. There is a wape also that the byrdes knowe not, that no vulturs eye hath seene: wherin the proude and hye mynded walcke not, and wher no Lyon cometh. There putteth he his hande vpon the stonye rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaynes. He puer flowe oute of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaunte, his eye seeth it. Oute of drops byngeth he greates floudes together, and the thyng that is hid, byngeth he to light. Howe cometh a man then by wysdome?

Where is the place that menne fynde vnderstandynge? Merelye no manne can tell howe worthie a thing he is, neyther is she founde in the land of the lypynge. The depe saythe: she is not in me. The sea saythe: she is not wth me. She can not be gotten for the moste fyne golde, neither may the price of her be boughte wth anye monye. No wedges of golde of Ophir, no precyous Dynir stones, no Saphires, may be compared vnto her. No neyther golde, ne chrystal, neither swete odoures, ne golden plate. Ther is nothyng so worthye, or so excellent, as is once to be named vnto her: for perfecte wysdome goeth far beyonde them all. The Topas that cometh oute of Inde, maye in no wyle be lykened vnto her, yea no manner apparel, howe pleasaunte and fayre so euer it be. Whence then cometh wysdome? and where is the place of vnderstandynge? She is hid from the eien of al men, yea and from the foules of the ayre. Destruction & death saye, we haue hearde tell of her with oure eares. But God seeth her wape, and knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the ends of the world: and loketh vpon al that is vnder heauen. When he weped the wyndes, and measured the waters: when he set the rayne in order, and gaue the myghty floudes a lawe, then dyd he se her, then declared he her, prepared her, and knew her. And vnto man he sayd: Behold to feare the Lorde is wysdome: and to forsake euill, is vnderstandynge.

The xxix. Chapter.

Job complayneth of the prosperitie of the tyme past, subtelly reproouynge his frendes of iniury, because they said that Job suffered as cōdyng to hys deservynge.

Job proceeded and went forth in his communication, saying: O that I wer as I was in the monethes paste, and in the dayes when God preserued me, when his lychte shined vpon my heade, when I wente after the same lychte, and shynynge, euen thowhe the darckenesse. As it stode wth me, when I was welthe and hadde ynoughe: when God prospered my house: when my wapes ranne ouer wth butter, and when the stonye rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I wente thowhe the cite vnto the gate, and when they sette me a chaire in the strete: when the younge men (as sone as they sawe me) hidde them selues, and when the aged arose, and stode by vnto me: when the princes left of their talkynge, and layde theyr hande to theyr mouthe: when the myghty kepte still their voice, and when theyr tounge cleaued to the rofe of theyr mouthes. When all they that heard me, called me happye: and when al they that sawe me, wished me good. For I deliuered the poore when he cryed, and I fatherles that wanted help. He that shuld haue bene losse, gaue me a good word, and the wydowes herte praysed me. And why? I put vpon me (a) righteousenesse, whyche coue-couered me as a garment, and equitie was my crowne: I was an eye vnto the blynde, and a fote to the lame: I was a father vnto the poore, & when I knew not theyr causes, I sought it out diligently. I brake the crannes of the vnrighteous, and pluckt & spoile oute of theyr teethe. Therefore I thought vnto my selfe, that I shulde haue dyed in my nest, and that my daies shoulde haue bene as mannyng as the sandes of the sea. For my roote was sprede out by the watersyde, and the dewe laye vppon my corne. Myne honoure encreased more and more, and my bow was euer the stronger in my hand. Vnto me me gaue eare, me they regarded, and wpth silence they tarped for my counsel. If I had spokē, they wold haue it none other waies: my wordes were so well taken amonges them. They wayted for me as the earth doeth for the raine: and gaped for me as the ground doth to receiue the (b) later showre. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest: and thys testimonie of my countenance fell not to the earth. When I agreed vnto theyr waie, I was the cheife, and safe as a kynge amonge hys seruauntes: Or as one that comforteth such as be in heauynesse.

The Notes.

(a) Thys ryghteousnes is no other thyng, then to lyue iustlye amongste men: hurtynge no man, and geuyng vnto euerye manne that whiche he longeth vnto hym. Gene. xxx. e. and Psal. xv. a.
(b) By the latter showre is vnderstand wholsom doctrine, which causeth iustice and iudgemente to sprynge.

The. xxx. Chapter.

The greates despyrnyng of men and curse of God that Job suffereth.

But nowe they that are myne inferyours & ponger then I, haue me in derision: yea euen they, whose fathers I wolde haue thoughte scorned to haue sette wpth the dogges of my cattell. The power and strengthe of theyr handes myghte do me no good, and as for their age, it is spent and paste awaye wpthoute anye profyte. For verpe myserpe and hunger, they went aboute in the wilderness like wretches and beggers, pluckynge by herbes among the bushes and the Junipers roote was theyr meate. And when they were dyspued for the men cryed after them as it had bene after a thiefe. Theyr dwellynge was beside foul brokes, yea in the caues and demmes of the earth. Vpon the dyke heth wente they aboute cryng, and in the brome hilles they gathered them together. They wer the childe of fooles and bylaines, whiche are deade, awaye from the worlde. Now am I theyr songe, and am become theyr iestynge stocke: they abhorre me, they fye far from me, and stayne my face wpth spettle. For the Lorde hath opened hys quier, he hath hit me, & put my brydle in my mouth. Vpon my ryghte hand they rose together against me, they haue hurte my feete, made a way to destroy me, and my path haue they clene marred. It was so easpe for them too doo me harme that they neded no man to helpe them. They fell vppon me, as it hadde bene the breakynge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearefulnes is turned agaynst me.

Myne honoure banissheth awaye more swiftly then wynde, and my prosperyte departeth hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therefore is my mynde poured full of heuines, and the daies of my trouble haue taken hould vpon me. My bones are pearced thorowe in the nyghte season, and my synowes take noo reaste. Wpth all theyr power haue they chaunged my garmente and gyrded me therewyth as it were with a cote. I am euen as it were claye, and am become lyke ashes and duste. When I cry vnto the, thou dost not heare me: and though I stande before the, yet thou regardeste me not. Thou arte become myne enemy, and with thy vpolente hande, thou takest parte agaynst me. In tymes past thou diddest sette me vppe on hye, as it wer aboute the wynde, but nowe haste thou geuen me a verpe soze fall. Sure I am that I wylt de lyuer me vnto death: where as a lodging is prepared for all thyngge lyuyng. Now vse not men to do violence vnto them that are destroyed alredi: but wher hurt is done, ther vse they to helpe. Wpd not I weepe in the time of trouble? Had not my soul compassid vpon the poore? Yet neuertheles, wher as I looked for good, euill happened vnto me: & wher as I wayted for lychte, there came darckenes. My bowelles seth wpthin me, and take no reste, for the dapes of my trouble are come vpon me. My kelype and lowly came I in, yea and withoute anye displeasure: I stode vp in the congregation and communed wpth them. But nowe, I am a companion of Dragons, and a felowe of Estriches. My skynne vppon me is touned to blacke, and my bones are brent with heat, my harpe is touned to sorow, and my pipe to weppynge.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

Job recypteth the innocency of hys lyuing, and numbre of his vertues.

I made a (a) couenaunte with mine eyes, that I wold not loke vpon a Damosell. For howe greates porcion shall I haue, of God from aboue? & what inheritaunce from the almyghty on hye? As for the vngodlye, and he that ioineth hym selfe to the company of wicked doers, shal not destruction and myserpe come vppon hym? Doth not he se my wayes, and tel all my goings? If I haue cleued vnto vaniti, or if my fete haue runne to discepyue: let me be weped in an euen balaunce, that God maye se myne innocency. If so be that I haue wpthdrawen my foote oute of the righte way: if mine herte hath folowed mine eye sighte, if I haue stained or defiled my handes: & then is it reason that I sowe, and an other eate, yea that my generation and of spring be cleane roted oute. If myne herte hathe lusted after my neighbours wife; or if I haue sayde wapte at his doze: Or then lette my wife be an other mannes harlotte, and let other lye wpth her. For this is a wicked nesse and synne that is worthe to be punished, yea a fyre that vtterlye shoulde consume me, and roote oute al my substance.

Dyd I euer thynke scozne to do righte vnto my seruantes and maidens when they had anye matter agaynste me? But seynge that God wil not sit in iudgmet, what shal I doe? And for as muche as he wyl nedes visit me, what answere shal I geue hym? He that fastponed me in my mothers wombe; made he not hym also? were we not bothe shapen a like in our mothers bodies? Whethe poore despered anye thyng at me, haue I denied it them? Haue I caused the widowe to stande waitynge for me in bayne?
Haue I sene anye man perpe the thorow nanednesse and wante of clothyng. Or anye poore manne for lacke of rayment, whose sydes thanked me not because he was warmed wpth the wolfe of my shepe.

Dyd I euer lifte vp my hande to hurte the fatherlesse? yea in the gate where I sawe my self to be in authoritie: then lette myne arme fall from my shoulder, & myne arme holes be broken from the ioyntes.
For I haue euer feared the vengaunce and punishment of God, and knew very wel that I was not hable to beare his burthen.
Haue I put my truste in golde? Or haue I sayde to the fyneste golde of all: thou arte my confydence? Haue I reioysed because my substance was grete, and because my hande gat so muche? Dyd I euer greatlye regarde the (b) ryng of the sonne?
Or had I the gonyng downe of the Moone in grete reputation? Hathe my herte medled pryuelye wpth anye disceyte? Or did I euer kysse myne owne hande? that were a wyckednesse worthe too be punished, for then shoulde I haue denyed the God that is aboue. Haue I euer reioysed at the hurt of myne enemye? Or was I euer gladd that anye harme hapned vnto hym? Oh no I neuer suffered my mouth to do such a synne as to wyshe hym euill. Yet they of myne owne houshold saye: who shal lette vs to haue oure bellie full of hys fleshe? I haue not suffered a straunger too lye wpth oute, but opened my dozes vnto him. Haue I euer done anye wycked dede, where thorow I shamed my selfe before menne, or anye abhominacion, that I was fayne to hyde it? For if I hadde feared anye great multitude of people: if I had ben despised of the simple: Or then shoulde I haue bene a fayde. Thus haue I quietly spent my life and not gon out at the doze. Or that I had one whiche woulde heare me. Loo, this is my cause: Lette the almyghty geue me an swere: and lette hym that is my contraye partye, sue me wpth a lybell. Then shall I take it vpon my shoulder, and as a garlad about my head. I haue told the number of my goynges, and deliuered them vnto him as to a pryce. But if case be so (c) my land crye agaynst me, or that the forowes there of make anye complaynte: If I haue eaten the frutes thereof vnpaid for, yea if I haue greued any of the plowmen: then let thistles growe in stede of my wheate, and thornes for my barlye.

Here ende the wordes of Job.

The Notes.

(a) To make a couenaunte wpth hys eyes, is to mortyfy the concupiscence of the hert that commeth by the meanes of the eye: which is to pluck oute the eye, as is sayde. Math. v. c.

(b) To regarde the ryng of the sonne and the gonyng downe of the moone is, to be gloryous in prosperyte, and too vble the thynges of this worlde to pleasure. Jeremi. xxi. c. For on them that be in prosperite is the Sonne counted too myne, and the Moone to goo downe pcepoulye and pleasauntlye, and on the contrary part, to them that be in tribulacion, are bothe the Sonne and the Moone counted cloude, and darksome.

(c) The lande cryeth agaynste hym, when the husbände menne defrauded of theyr wages crye therfore agaynste hym: so that the hyze of the workemenn cryeth. Jacob. v. a. And the forowes make lamentation, when they that plow the grounde and make the forowes, are depreued of theyr dutye.

The. xxxii. Chapter.

Elu after the other hadde synned theyre communicacion, reproveth them of folynes. Age maketh not a manne wysse, but the spryde of God.

These. iii. men woulde stryue no more wpth Job, because he helde him selfe a righteous man. But (a) Eliu the sonne of Barachel the Bussite of the kinredde of Ram, was verpe sore displeased at Job, that he called hym selfe iust before God.
And with Jobs. iii. frendes he was angry also, because they had founde no reasonable answere to ouercome him. Now taried Eliu til they had ended theyr communica-cion wpth Job, for why they wer elder the
he. So when Eliu the son of Barachel the Bussite saw that these. iii. men were not able to make Job answer: he was miscōtēt, so that he gaue answer himselfe, and sayd:

Consyderynge that I am yonge, and ye be men of age, I was afrayde, and durste not shewe forth my mynde, for I thought thus wpthin my selfe: It becommeth olde men to speake, and the aged to teache wis-dome: Euery man (no doubt) hath a minde but it is the inspiration of the almyghty that geueth vnderstandynge. All men are not wysse, neyther doth euery aged manne vnderstande the thyng that is lawefull.
Therefore wyl I speake also (in so farre as I maye bee hearde) and wyl shewe you myne opinion. For when I hadde waped tyll ye made an ende of your talkinge, and hearde your wisdom, what argumentes ye made in your communicacion: yea when I had diligently pondred what ye sayde:

I founde not one of you that made anye good argumente agaynst Job, or that dyrectly could make answer vnto his wordes: lest ye shoulde prayse your selues to haue founde oute wysdome: because it is god that hath cast him out, and no manne. Neuerthelesse seing he hath not spokē vnto me, therfore wil not I answer hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make answer, nor speake one word) but sythe ye wyll not speake, standynge still lyke dumme men, and makynge no answer: I haue a good hope for my parte to shewe hym an answer and to shewe hym my meanynge. For I am full of wordes, and the spirite that is with in me, compellerh me.

Beholde, I am as the newe wyne, which hath no veyl, and bursteth the newe vessels in sunder. Therefore wyll I speake that I maye haue a vent: I will open my lips and make answer. I wyll regard no manner of person, no man wyll I spare. For if I woulde go aboute to please men, I knowe not howe sone my maker woulde take me awaye.

The Notes.

(a). S. Hierome in hys treatise of the tradycions of the Hebrewes vpon Genesys sayeth, that this Eliu was that Balaam, of whome is spoken. Numeri. xxi.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Eliu sheweth wherein Job offendeth. Whyth God may we not stryue, nor curiously serche out hys workes.

Vherfore heare my wordes (O Job) and herken vnto me all that I wyll say: Behold, I wyll open my mouth, and my tong shall speke out of my chawes. My herte shall order my wordes a righte, and my lippes shall talke of pure wisdom. The spirite of God hath made me, and the breath of the almyghty hath gyuen me my life. Yf thou canst then gyue me answer: prepare thy selfe to stande before me face to face. Beholde before God am I euen as thou, for I am fashioned and made euen of the same mould. Therefore thou nedest not be afrayed of me, nether nedest thou to feare, for my authoryte shall be as beaue for the: now haste thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herde the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane wythout any faute. I am innocent, and there is no wyckednes in me. But lo, he hath pyked a quarelle agaynst me, and takerh me for hys enemye: he hath put my fote in the stocks, and looketh narrowly vnto all my pathes. Beholde, vnto these vntreasonable wordes of thyn wyll I make answer.

Should God be repproued of man? Why doest thou then stryue agaynst him because he giueth the no accomptes of all hys doynge? For when God doth once commaund a thyng, there shoulde no man be curious, to serche whether it be righte. In dreames and visions of the nyght season (wherfrom byng cometh byd men that they sal asleepe in their beddes) he rowneth them in peaces, he infourmeth them, and sheweth the playnely that it is he which wyrdiawerh man from euyl, deliuereth him from pryde, keperh hys soule from destruction, and vislyse from the swearde. He chasteneth him wyth syckenesse, and byngeth hym to hys bedde: he layeth soore punishment vpon hys bones, so that hys lyfe maye awaye wyth no breade, and hys soule abhorreth to eate anye danyerous meate: in so muche that hys bodye is cleane consumed awaye, and hys bones appeare no more. Hys soule draweth on to destruction, and hys lyfe to deathe.

Now if ther be a messenger (one among a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe him the ryght waye: the Lord is mercifull vnto hym, and sayeth: He shall be deliuered, that he sal not downe to destruction, for I am suffycientely reconcyled. Then hys fleshe (whiche hath bene in myserye and trouble) shall be as it was in hys yowthe. For if he yelde hym selfe vnto God, he is gracious, and sheweth hym hys countenance ioyfullye, and rewardeth man for hys ryghteousnesse: Suche a respecte hath he vnto men. Therefore let a man confesse (and saye) I offended, but he hath not chastened and refourmed me: I dyd vnrighthouse, neuer theles he hath not reppenced me thereafter. Yea he hath deliuered my soule fro destruction, and my lyfe that it seeth the lyghte. Lo thus worketh God alwaie with man, that he keperh hys soule fro peryshinge and letteth hym to see the lyghte of the lyuinge. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the stille, vntyl I haue spoken. But if thou haste anye thyng to saye, then answer me. If thou haste nothyng, then heare, and holde thy tonge, so shall I teache the wysdome.

The xxxiiii. Chapter.

Eliu prayseth the iustyce of God whiche iudgeth the worlde, & gouerneth all.

Eliu proceedynge forth in hys communion, sayeth: heare my wordes (O ye wyse men) herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge. For lyke as the mouth tasteth the meates, so the eare reppoueth & discerneth the wordes. As for I iudge ment, let vs seke it oute amonge our selues, for we may know what is righte. And why Job hath sayed: I am ryghtous but God doth me wronge. I must nedes be a lyer, though my cause be right, and violently I am plagued where as I made no faute: where is ther such one as Job that dyngeth by scornfulnes lyke water, which goeth in the company of wycked doers, and walketh with vngodly men? For he saith: Though a man be good, yet is he nought before God. Therefore herken vnto me ye that haue vnderstandynge.

Farre be it from God, that he shoulde

That is, an instructour with the worde of God.

Job. xxxv.

U. t. melle

medle wyth wickednes: and sarre be it for the almyghty, that he should medle with vnrightrous dealing: but he rewardeth the wozkes of man, and causeth euery manne to synde accordyng to hys wales. For sure it is that God codemnerh no man wrongfully, and the iudgemente of the almyghty is not vnrightrous.

Who ruleth the earth in hys steede? Or whō hath he set to gouern & whole world?
To whome hath he gyuen hys verte, for to drame hys spirite, and bzeathe vnto hym?
Al flesh shall come together to naught, and al mē shall turne again vnto earth. If thou now haue vnderstandynge, heare what I say, and harkē to the voyce of my wordes.

May he be made whole, that loueth no ryghte? If thou were a verpe innocent man shouldest thou then be punished? For he is euen the same, that knoweth the rebellious kynge, and sayth to princes: Un-godly men are ye. He hath no respect vnto the personnes of the Lordelye, and regardeth not the ryche more then the poore. For they be al the wozke of his handes. In the twinkling of an eye shall they be slaine: and at midnyght, when the people and the ty-rantes rage, then shall they perishe and be taken away without bads. And why? hys eyes loke vpon the wales of mā, and he seerh al his goynge. There is no darckenes nor thicke shadow that can hyde the wycked doers fro him. For no man shall be suffered to go into iudgement wyth God.

Many one, yea innumerable doth he pu-nysh, and setteth other in their steades, for he knoweth they: euyl and darke wozkes therfore shall they be destroyed. They that were in the steede of Seers, dwelte lyke vngodly men. Therfore turned they backe trayterously and vnsaythfullpe fro him, and woulde not receyue his wapes. In so muche that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, and now he heareth the complainte of suche as are in necessyte. If he delpyer and graunte pardon, who wil iudge or condemne? But if he hyde away hys countenance, who wyl turne it about agayne, whether it be to the people or to anye mane? For the wickednes and synne of the people he maketh an hypocrite to raigne ouer them. For so much as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wil not hynder the. Yf I haue gone amysse, enfourme me: if I haue done woznge, I wyl leue of. Wylte thou not gyue a reasonable answere? Art thou afayed of any thyng, seyng thou beganest fyrst to speake, and not I? For els the men of vnderstandynge and wysdome, that haue herd me, myghte saie: What causest thou speake? As for Job he hath euer spoken to the purpose:

nor wysely. O father, let Job be wel tryed because he hath turned hym selfe to the wycked: yea aboue hys synnes he hath blasphemed, whych offence he hath done euen before vs, in that he stryuethe agaynst

God wyth hys wordes.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

Neither doth godlynesse profyt, or vngodlynes harte to God, but to man.

Elu spake mozeouer, and saide: Thinkest thou it ryghte that thou sayest: I am ryghteous before God? seyng thou sayest so, how dost thou knowe it? What thyng hast thou more excellent then I, that am a sinner? Therfore wyl I giue an swer vnto the and thy frendes: looke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: cōsyder the cloudes, howe they are hygher then thou. If thou synnest, what doste thou vnto hym?
If thine offences be many, how gettest thou hys fauoure? If thou be ryghteous: what guyest thou hym? Or what receiuethe he of thy handes? Of such an vngodly personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is ryghteous as thou pretendest to be? Ther is a greate crye and complaynte made by them that are oppressed wiche violence, yea euerye man complayneth vpon the cruelle arme of tyrauntes. For such one neuer saterh: What is God that made me, and what shinerh vpon vs, that we might praise him in the nyght? Whych gyueth vs moze vnderstandynge then he doeth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs. moze then the soules of heauen.

If any such complayne, no man gyueth answere, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But if a man cal vpon God, doth not he hear him? Doth not the almyghty accept hys crye. When thou speakest then shouldest not be pardoned the? If thou open thy selfe before hym, and put thy truste in hym. When vseth he no vyolence in hys wrath, neither hath he pleasure in curious and depe questyons.

Therfore hath Job opened his mouthe but in vayne, and solylyly hath he made so manye wordes.

The. xxxvi. Chapter.

Elu sheweth wherfore god punissheth and correcteth.

Elu proceeded forth in hys talking and saide: Holde the styll a litle, and I shall shewe the what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe, I wyl open vnto the yet moze of myne vnderstandynge, and proue my maker ryghteous. True are my wodes, and no lye, and the knowledge, wherwyth I argue agaynst the, is perfect. Be-holde, God casteth not away the myghty, for he hym selfe is myghty in power and wysdome.

As for the vngodly, he preserueth them not, but healeth the poore to their ryght.
He turneth not hys eyes away from the ryghteous, he setteth vp kynge in the trone, and setteth them, so that they alway sytt therein. But if they be layed in pry-son and cheynes, or bounde wyth the bon-des of pouertye, then sheweth he the myghte

they: workes and deedes, and the synnes wherewith they haue vsed cruel violence.

(a) He wyth punynginge and nurynginge of them considereth them in the cares, warneth them to leaue of from their wyckednesse: and to amende. Yf they nowe wyll take hede and be obediente, they shal weare out they: dayes in prosperytie, and their yeres in pleasure and ioye. But if they wyll not obey, they shal go thorow þe swerde, and perishe, or they be ware. As for suche as be fained dissemblers, and hypocrites, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they cal not vpon hym, though he they be his prisoners. Thus they: soule perissheth in folie and they: life wyth the condemned. The poore deliuereth he out of his straighnes and comforteth such as be in necessity and trouble. Euen so shal he kepe the (if thou wyll be content) fro the bottoomelesse pyt þe is beneth: and if thou wyll hold the quier, he shal fyll thy: table wyth plenty.

Neuerthelesse thou haste condēned the iudgement of the vngodly, yea euen suche a iudgemente and sentence shalte thou suffer. For then shal not thy cause be stylled wyth cruelte, nor pacysed wyth manye gyftes. Hath God ordeyned that the glorious lyfe of the, and al suche myghty men, should not be put downe? Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyll ther come a nyghte for the, to set other people in thy stede. But beware that thou turne not asyde to wyckednesse and synne, whiche byther to thou haste chosen more then mekenesse. Behold God is of a myghty bygh power: Where is such a guyde and law giuer as he? Who shal reprove hym of his waye? Who wyll saye vnto hym: thou haste donne wronge.

Consider howe greate and excellent his workes be, whome all men loue and prayse: yea and wonder at hym, and yet they se him but afar of. Beholde, so greate is God, that he passeth our knowledge, nei ther are we able to come to the experience of his peates. He turneth the water to smalle droppes, he dryueth his cloudes together for to rayne, so that they poure downe a drop vpon me. He can spred out the cloudes (a coueryng of his tabernacle) and cause his light to shine vpon them, and to couer the bottom of the sea. By these thinges gouerneth he his people, & gyueth the abundaunce of meate. In the turnyng of an hande he bydeth the light, and at his commaundement it cometh agayne. The ry synge vpon thereof sheweth he to his fren- des, and to the cattell.

The Notes.

(a) Wyth punynginge and nurynginge to roude them in the cares, is to byng them to the knowledge of they: synnes, and to cause theym to be perswaded in them selues that they be punyshed for them.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

It is proueth that the wysedome of God is vnsearcheable.

At this, my hert is astoyned, and mo- ued out of his place. Heare then the sound of his voyce, and the noyse that goeth oute of his mouthe. He gouerneth euery thyng vnder the heauen, and his light reacheth vnto the ende of the world. A royinge voyce foloweth hym: for his glorious maiestye gyueth suche a thounder clappe, that (though he a man heare it) yet maye he not perceyue it afterward. It gy ueth an horryble sounde, when God sendeth oute his voyce: greate thynges do- eth he, whiche we canne not compyse. When he commaundeth the snowe it fall- leth vpon the earthe.

As sone as he gyueth þe rayne a charge, forwyth the showers haue they: strength, and falle downe. He sendeth feare vpon e- uerie man, that they myghte knowe they: owne workes. The beastes creepe into they: dens, and take their rest. Out of the Southe, cometh the tempeste, and colde out of the Northe.

At the breathe of God, the froste com- meth, and the waters are shedde abrode. The cloudes doo they: labour in giuyng moystnes, the cloudes poure downe their rayne. He destroyeth also on euery side, accordyng as it pleaseth him to deale out his workes, that they maye do what so e- uer he commaundeth them thorow the hole worlde, whether it be to punysh anye lande, or to doo good vnto theym, that seeke him.

Hearken vnto this (O Job) stande still, and consider the wonders workes of God. Arte thou of counsell wyth God, when he doth these thynges? When he causeth the lyght to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his counsel whiche spredeth oute þe cloudes? Hast thou þe perfect knoweledge of his wondrous? and howe thy clothes are warme, when the land is still thorow the south wind? Hast thou helped hym to spredde out the heauen, whiche is to loke vpon, as it were cast of cleare metal? Tych vs what we shal saye vnto hym, for we are vnmete because of darknes.

Shall it be told hym what I say? Shuld a man speake, or shoulde he kepe it backe? For euery man seeth not the lyght that he kepeth clere in the cloudes, whiche he clen- seth whiche he maketh þe wind to blow. Gold is brought out of the Northe, but the praise and honoure of Goddes feate cometh from God hym selfe.

It is not we that can fynde oute the al- myghty: for in power, equitye, and rygh- teousnesse, he is higher then can by expre- sed. Seynge then that euery body feareth hym, why shuld not al wysemen also stand in feare of hym?

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The wonders that the Lord hath done from the begynnyng.

W. II. Then

The breath of god, here signifieth a strong wind as is the north wind

Then spake the Lorde vnto Job oute of the storme, and sayde: what is he that hydech bys minde wth folyshe woordes? Wyde vp thy lopnes lyke a man: for I wyl question wth the, se thou gyue me a dyrect answer: Wber wast thou (a) when I layed the foundacyons of the earth. Tel playnely if thou hast vnderstandynge? Who hath measured it, knoweste thou? Or who hath spread the lyne vpon it? Or who layde the corner stone? Wber wast thou when the mornynge stars praysed me together, and all the chyldre of god reioyced triumphantly? Who shut the sea wth doores, when it brake forth as a childe out of his mothers wombe? Wher I made the cloudes to bee a couerynge for it, and swaddled it wth the darcke? When I gaue it my commandment, makynge doores and barres for it, sayinge: Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further, and here shalt thou laye downe thy proude and byghe waues. Haste thou gyuen the mornynge his charge, (as sone as thou wast borne) and shewed the daye sprynge bys place, that it myghte take hold of the corners of the earth, and that the vngodly myght be shaken oute? They tokens and weapons, haste thou turned lyke claye, and set them by agayne as the changynge of a garment? Yea haste thou spoyled the vngodlye of theyr lyghte, and broken the arme of the proude? Camest thou euer into the groud of the sea? Or hast thou walked in the lowe corners of the deepe? Haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the? Or haste thou sene the doore of euerlastynge treasure? Haste thou also perceyued howe broade the earthe is? Nowe if thou haste knowledge of all, then shewe me where lyght dwelleth, and where darckenesse is: that thou mayeste bynge vs vnto theyr quarters, if thou canste telle the waye to theyr houses.

I knowest thou (when thou wast borne) how olde thou shouldest be? Wentest thou euer into the treasures of the snowe? Or hast thou sene the secrete places of the hayle, whych I haue prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble, agaynst the tyme of battayle and warre? By what waye is the lyghte parted, and the heate dealete oute vpon the earthe? Whoe deuydeth the aboundaundance of waters into cyuers, or who maketh a waye for the storme whether, that it watreth and moystureth þ dry and baren groud: to make the grasse grow in places where no bodye dwelleth, and in the wyldernesse where no man remaineth? Whoe is the father of rayne? Or whoe hath begotten the droppes of dewe? Oute of whose wombe came the yse? Whoe hath gendered the coldenesse of the ayre? that the waters are as harde as stones, and yce congeled aboue the deepe. Haste thou broughte the seven starrs to-gyther? Or art thou able to breake the circle of heauen? Canst thou bynge forth the mornynge starre, or the euenynge starre at conuenient tyme, and coueie theym home agayne? Knoweste thou the course of heauen, that thou mayeste sette vp the ordynance therof vpon the earthe? More ouer, canst thou lyft vp thy voice to þ cloudes, that they may pwayne downe a greate rayne vpon the? Canste thou thondre also that they may go theyr waye, and be obedyente vnto the, sayinge: Lo here are wee. Whoe geneth sure wysdome or stedfast vnderstandynge? Whoe numbryth the cloudes in wysdome? Whoe stylleth the vehement waters of the heauen? Whoe turneth the clottes to duste, and then to be clottes agayne? Huntteste thou the prape from the Lyon? Or seabeste thou bys whelpes lying in theyr dennes, and luryng in theyr couches? Whoe putteyth meate for the rauens when bys younge cpe vnto God, & sticker aboute for wante of meate.

The Notes.

(a) He sayeth not that heauen was made before the earth, but when bys godlye wysdome made them, he saith he had a dwelling place, & that he needed no earthly mansyon: for then was he praysed of the angels, whych here are called the chyldre of god. He meneth also that there was no man by, or helped him, wher he made þ stars & created the intellectuall and spiryтуal natures.

God speaketh vnto Job, shewynge hym by the examples of his workes, that bys ryghte onnes is vnsearchable.

Knoweste thou the tyme when þ wild goates bringe forth the young among the stony rockes? Or laist thou waite wher the bindes vse to fawne? Reknest thou the monethes after thei engedre, that thou knowest the tyme of theyr bearyng or wher they lie down, wher they cast theyr younge, and wher they are deliuered of theyr trauail and paine? How their young grow vp, and ware great thorow good fedynge. Whoe leeteth þ wild asse goo fre? Or who lewseth the bodes of the mule? Vnto wher I haue genen þ wyldernes to be theyr house, and the vntylled lande to be theyr dwelling place. That they maye geue no force for the multitude of people in þ cities, neyther regard the cryng of the dyuer: but seke theyr pasture aboute the mountaynes, and folowe the grene grasse.

Wyl the Unycorne be so tame as to do þ seruice, or to abyde styll by thy crib? Canst thou bind the yocke aboute hym in thy sorowes, to make hym plow after the in the baleies? Maist thou trust him, bycause he is strong, or commit thy labour vnto him? Maist thou beleue him, þ he wil bring home the corn: or to cart any thing vnto þ barn?

So harde is he vnto hys pounge, as though he they were not hys, and labourerth in vayne wpthout feare. And that because God hath taken wisdom from hym, and hath not geuen him vnderstanding. When his time is, he mounteth vpon high, and careteth nether for horse ne man.

Hast thou geuen the horse his strength, or learned hym too bowe downe his necke wpth feare, that he letteth hym selfe be driuen forthe lyke a grasshopper, where as the stout neynging that he maketh, is fearful? He breaketh the grounde wpth the hofes of his feete chearefullpe in hys strengthe, and runneth to mete the harnessed menne. He laythe asyde all feare, his stomacke is not abated, neyther starteth he abacke for any swearde. Though the quipers ratttle vpon hym, though the speare and shield glyste: petruseth he in fearcelpe, and beareth vpon the ground. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, tushe (sayeth he) for he smelleth the battaile a far of, the noyse, the capptaynes and the shouting.

When the Boshaue flieth toward the Southe? The Eagle. Doth y Egle mount vp, and make his nest on hye at thy commaundement? He abideth in the stonperockes, and vpon the highe toppes of harde mountaines: wher no man can come. Frome thence maye he behoulde hys praye, and loke farre aboute wpth hys eyes. Hys pounge are fedde wpt i bloude, and where anye deade bodpe lyeth, there is he forthe wpth.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job & sayd: Can he that strueth with the almighty, be at rest? Shoulde not he whiche disputeth with God, geue him an answer? Job answered the Lorde, sayinge: Beholde, I am to vile a personne, to answer the: therfore wpll I (a) laye my hande vpon my mouthe. Once or twyse haue I spoken, but I wpll saye no more.

Job. xxxviii. Then spake the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, and sayde: Bygd vpp thy lopnes like a man, and tel me the thinges that I wpll aske the. Wilt thou defete my iudgement? Or wylte thou condemne me, that thou thy selfe mayst be made righteouse? Is thyne arme then lyke the arme of God? Maketh thy voyce suche a sounde as hys dothe? Then arme thy selfe wpth thyne owne power, aryse, decke the in thy iopelpe arape, powre oute the indignacion of thy wrath: see that thou caste downe all the prowde, looke thou makeste all suche as be stubbourn, to obey: Treade all the vngodlie vnder thy feete, caste them downe into the myre, and couer theyre faces wpth darckenesse: Then wpll I confesse also, that thyne owne ryghte hande hath saued the.

He spreadeth oute hys taylor like a Cedre tree, all hys baynes are styrre. Hys synnes are lyke pyres of brasse, hys rigges bones are lyke stauces of yron. Firste when God made him, he ordained the wylernes for hym, that the mountaynes shulde geue hym graspe, where al the bestes of the feld take theyr pastyme. He lyeth amonge the redes in the Mosses, the fennes hidde hym wpth theyr shadowe, and the wylowes of the brooke couer hym rounde aboute, Loo, wpthout anye labour maye he dryncke oute of the hole floude, and suppe of Jordan wpthout anye trauayle. Whoe darre laye hande vpon hym openly, and undertake to catche hym? Or, who darre putte a hooke throuwe hys nose, and laye a snare for hym.

Canste thou fyll the net wpth hys skyn, or the fishe pannier wpth hys heade? Darrest thou laye hande vpon him? It is better for the to confidre what harm might happen the there throuwe, and not touche hym. For when thou thinkest to haue hold vpon hym, he shall beguilde the: Euerpe manne also that seeth hym, shall go backe. And whye? there darre none be so bolde, as to rapse him vppe.

Who is able to stande before me? Or who hath geuen me any thing afoze hand, that I am bounde too rewarde hym agayne? All thinges vnder heauen are myne: I feare hym not, whether he threath or speake fayre. Who lyfteth him vp, and stryppeth him oute of hys clothes? Or whoo taketh hym by the bit of hys bydle? Whoo openeth the doore of hys face? for he hath horrible teth rounde aboute. Hys bodpe is couered with scales, as it were wth shildes lockte in, kepte, and well compacte together.

ther. One is so ioynded to an other, that no aie canne come in: Yea one hangeth so pon an other, and stycketh so together, that they can not be sundered. Hys neling is lyke a glysternge fyre, and his eies like the moynynge shyne. Oute of hys mouthe goe torches and fyre brandes, oute of hys nostrilles there goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hotte sethyng potte. Hys bryethmakethe the coles burne, the flamme goethe oute of hys mouthe. In hys necke remayneth strengthe, and before hys face sorowe is tourned too gladnesse. The members of his body are ioynded so strait one to another, cleue so faste toogether, that he canne not be moued.

Hys hearte is as harde as a stone, and as faste as the stythpe that the hammer mā smyteth vpon. When he goeth, the myghtyest of all are afraid: and the waues heui.
If he drawe oute the swearde, there maye neither speare, ne breste plate, abyde hym.
He setteth as much by a strawe as by yron and as muche by a rotten stocke as by metal. He starteth not away fro him that bendeth the bowe: and as for flying stones, he careth as much for stubble as for them. He counteth the hammer no better then a straw, he laugheth him to scozne that shaketh the speare. He treadeth þ gold in the myre like the sharpe potsherd. He maketh the depe to seth and boyle lyke a pot, and stereth þ sea together lyke as oymtmente. The way is lpyght after hym, the depe is his walking place. Upon earth is there no power lyke vnto hys, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man wyl conspyre al hygh thin-ged, thys same is a kynge ouer all the chyldren of pryde.

The xlii. Chapter.

The repentance of Job. He prayeth for hys frendes, and hys goodes are restored double vnto hym.

Esa. xlviii. c.
1. Reg. xvi.
Then Job answered the Lorde, & said: I know that thou hast power ouer al things, and that there is no thoughte hid vnto the. For who can keepe his owne counsell so secret, but it shal be knowen. Therfore haue I spoken so vnwysely, & seynge these things are so hye, and passe myne vnderstandynge. O hearken thou vnto me al so, and lette me speake: aunswere vnto the thyng that I wyl aske the. I haue geuen diligent eare vnto the, and now I se the with mine eies. Wherefore I geue mine own self the blame, and take repentaunce in the dust and ashes.

Now when the Lorde had spoken these woordes vnto Job, he sayde vnto Eliphas the Themanite: I am displeased wth the and thy twoo freindes, for ye haue not spoken the thyng that is ryghte before me, lyke as my seruaunte Job hath doone.
Wherefore take .vii. oxen. and .vii. rammes, and go to my seruaunte Job: offer vp also for your selues a burnt offering: and let my seruaunte Job praye for you. Hym wyl I accept, and not deale wth you after your folynesse: in that ye haue not spoken the thyng whych is right, like as my seruaunt Job hath done.

So Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad the Suhyte, and Sophar the Naamathite wente theyr waye, and dyd accordynge as the Lorde commaunded them. The Lorde also accepted the personne of Job, and the Lorde turned hym vnto Job, when he prayed for hys frendes. Yea the Lorde gaue Job twise as muche as he hadde afore.

And then came there vnto hym all hys bryethren, all hys systers, with all them that had bene of hys acquaintaunce afore, and eate breade wth hym in his house, wonderynge at hym, and comfortynge hym ouer all the trouble that the Lorde hadde brought vpon hym. Euerie man gaue hym a shepe, and a Jewell of Golde.

And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was before: for he had fourtene thousande sheepe, syxe thousande Camelles, a thousand pokes of Oxen, and a thousande asses. He had chylidren also, seuen sonnes, and thre daughters. The fyrste called Dabe: the seconde, Nouette: the thyrde, All plenteousnesse. In all the lande were none founde so fayre, as the daughters of Job, and theyr father gaue them enheritaunce amonge theyr bryethren. After thys lpyed Job
fourtye yea-
res, so that he sawe hys chylidrene, and hys chylidrenes chylidren to the fourth generation. And so he dyed, beinge olde and of a perfect

age.

The firste psalme.

Those that forsake the counsailes and traditions of the wycked, and wholy geue them selles to know the lawe of God, and to shew it in their lyuinge, doeth this psalme pronounce blessed, both here and in þe worlde to come: and the contrary parte in both þe worldes, miserable and wyretched.

Blessed is the mā, that geth not in the counsaill of the vngodlye: that abiderth not in (a) the way of sinners, (b) and sitteth not in þe seate of þe scornefull.

But, deliuereth in the lawe of the Lorde, and exercyseth hym selfe in hys law, both daye and nyght.

Suche a man is lyke a tree planted by the watersyde, that bryngeth forth the hys frute in due season.

Hys leaues shall not fall of, and loke whatsoeuer he doth, it shall prospere.

As for the vngodlye, it is not so wyth the: but they are lyke the duste, whych the wynde scattereth away from the ground.

Therefore the vngodly shall not be able (c) to stand in the iudgement, neither the sinners in the cōgregation of the righteous.

For the Lorde sloweth the way of the ryghteous, but the waye of the vngodlye shall perishe.

The Notes.

(a) The maners and ordynaunces of synners whercon they walche as it were in a waye, are called the waye of sinners. And in the scrip-tures, it is commūn to take this way for what soeuer we do or go aboute, be it good or euell. As in the last verse of this psalme.

(b) He sitteth in the seate of the scornefull, that conspireth wyth them, and becommeth fellowe of theyr myscheyfe, as in the psalme. xlv. b.

(c) He standeth in iudgement, that wynteth the processe, and hath sentence pronounced on hys syde, as he that letteth the processe and hath sentence pronounced agaynst ryght and trueth, rob-beth iudgement. As in Ecl. x. a. So then this text meaneth no more here, but that the wycked haue so terrible a sentence geuen vpon them, that they shall not be able to abide when the Lorde shall come to the generall iudgement. It meaneth not that the wycked shall not appeare in iudgement.

The.ii. psalme.

They þe know not God are moued agaynst the kyngdome of Christ wyth wonderfull intentes, but in vaine: yet rāneth their rage thowoe the whole worlde. The only way to health is to commit thy selfe to Christ.

Thou shalt rule them wyth a (b) rodde of yron, and breake them in peces lyke an earthen vessel.

*We wyl now therfore, O ye kynges, be warned, ye that are iudges of þe earth.

The Notes.

(a) As some wyll, this worde signifyeth an exercise that is a paynfull and heauy tentaciō of Dauid. Other interprete it an ignorance, because he knewe not the faure that was laide vnto hym. Some saye that it was one of the instrumētes wherāt al the psalmes were songe, before whiche it was set. Some thynke that it is a certen kinde of melodie. Moreover that whiche is here called Lūs, in the place of the hinges aboue reherled, is called Senet.

Almuth.

(a) As some men thynke Almuth laben sygnify-eth a certayn instrumente of musike. Some say that Almuth sygnifyeth: of the death, whiche some vnderstande by laben Goliath, or some other idyllistines. Some reade the tittle thus.
An often made, and vehemente exhortacion of a secrete and folp the sonne. They vnderstande thereby, the ryghteous, whose by faythe is the sonne of God, and the same is to the worlde folyme, because hee is continuallye in death and sorowes, for his lyfe is hyd in Christe till the thynges be shewed agayne in the iudgement of God. Then shall they perceyue that the death of this worlde is glorie. Felix readeth the tittle thus: vnto the victoure ouercome of the death of a foole. Whiche you maye well vnderstande of the death of folp Antichrist, and of the fall of his kyngdome. Howe be it this tittle should scue more couenient for the next Psalm, which after the Hebrewes, is a dyspuncte Psalm from this, where as the Latinistes make this & the next boeth one.

The complaint of the poze.

(b) The complaint of the poze, is the seruente despise and burning affection, wher with they crie vnto the Lorde, and be heard. By the poze is vn-derstand in the scripture the afflicted, who fele theyr nede and tentation, and do sorow and lament & the truth is ouertrode, puttyng no trust in any thyng that is in this world. Yea these be they that be despised & forsaken of the world, and cleaue vnto the lyuinge God onely, assured that at his hande they shall fynde helpe, though the world be neuer so extreme against them. As in the next Psalm.

The gates of death.

(c) The gates of death, are the iudgements to death, the counsellies of the wycked, the congregations of Satan, the doctrines of falsenes, and whatsoeuer leadech to death.

Voices of Sion.

(d) The voices of Sion, are the companies of the good and faythfull, where in are recited & true the of god, and all that leadech to lyfe. As Psalm. lxxvii. a.

that he maye pryuelly murder the inno-cente, his eyes are set vpon the poore.

He lyeth wayfynge secretly, as it wer

He lurketh that hee maye rauyn the poore, yea to rauyn the poore, when he hath gotten hym into his net.

Then smyteth he, then oppresseth he,
and casteth downe the poore wyth his au-thorite.

For he sayeth in his herte: Tushe, God hath forgotton, he hath turned away his face, so that he wyll neuer se it.

Arise Lorde God, lyfte vp thyne hand, and forget not the poore.

Wherefore shoulde I wycked blaspheme God, and saye in his herte: tushe, he carech not for it.

Thys thou seest, for thou consyderest the mysery and sorowe.

The poore geneth hym selfe ouer into thy hand, and commytteth hym vnto the,
for thou art the helper of the scendelle.

Breake thou the arme of the vngodly & malycious, searche oute the wyckednes whych he hath done, that he maye perishe.

The Lorde is kyng for euer, the Heathen shall perishe out of his laude.

Lorde, thou hearest the despyous longinge of the poore: theyr herte is sure that thyne care hekeneth thereto.

Helpe the fatherlesse & poore vnto theyr ryght, that the vngodly be no more exalted vpon earth.

The.xi. Psalm.

He reasoneth his wronge wyth them that thrust hym forth of all the dominion of Israell, so that he founde no place to abyde in.
Hee praiseth his confidence to God warde, and the iudgemente of God both towarde the good and euill.

To the chaunter, of David.

At the Lorde put I my trust: howe wyll he resawe to my soule, that he should flye as a byrd vpon your hyll?

For lo. (a) the vngod-
ly haue bent theyr bowes, & made ready theyr arrowes in & quiuer, that they maye pryuelly shote at them, whiche are true of herte.

The verye foundation haue they caste down, what ca the ryghteous then dowall?

But the Lorde is in his holpe temple, & the Lordes seate is in beauen: He consy-dereth it wyth his eyes, his eye lyddes

The .xii. and .xiii. Psalme.

The Lord seeth both the righteuous and vngodly, but who so delieth in wickednes, hym his soule abhorreth.

Upon the vngodly he shal cast snares, fyre, byrmstone, storme, and tempest: thys reward shal they haue to dyvne.

For the lord is righteous, and he loueth righteousnes: his countenance beholderth the thyng that is iust.

The Notes.

(a) Thys is a borrowed speche, by whiche is signified that the wyched enemyes of Dauid were most prest and ready to destroye hym. For thys psalme, as some suppose, was made when he fled from Saule, and had hymselfe in dyuers and sundry places, as ye reade i. Regum frome the .xii. chapter, to the .xvii. wher his persecucion was so greates, that at the lengthe he was fayne to flye out of the coast of Israel vnto the Philistines. After lyke maner doo oure Saules persecute the christen. psalme .xxvii. b.

The .xii. psalme.

The complayneth that righteousness and faith are euery wher decayed, and that wylle and gylefull flatterers rule all, and prayeth the Lord to haue compassio on the afflicte, which they cruelly bere: and also to helpe them accordynge to his worde, whiche onely can not deceyue, and to deliuer hym from the fylthy company of the wyched.

To the chaunter vpon Sheminith, a psalme of Dauid.

Elpe Lord, for there is not one saynt more: very fewe sayntfull are there amonge the chyldren of menne.

Euerye man telleth lyes to his neyghbour, they do but flatter wth theyr lyes, and dyssemble in theyr hearte.

Now for the trouble sake of the oppressed, and because of the complaynte of the poore, I wil vp (saith the Lord) I wil help them, and set them at rest.

That is often tymes.

Consyder, and heare me, O Lord my God: (b) lighte myne eyes, (c) that I slepe not in death.

Least mine enemy say: I haue preuailed agaynst him: for if I be caste downe, they that trouble me wyl reioyse at it.

But my truste is in thy mercye, and my heart is ioyfull in thy sayng health.

I wyl syng of the Lord, that dealeth so louingly wth me.

Yea, I wyl praise the name of the Lord the most hyest.

The Notes.

(a) We are sayd to seeke counsaile in our troubles: when we take deliberacion.

To seeke counsaile. To lighte the eyes.

(b) God lyghteth our eyes, when he maketh vs circumspete and dyligente, that we neyther let light to do that which ought to be done: neither folishly attempt that which ought to be eschewed, and so come vniwytely into the hands of our enemyes, and be oppressed of them. And therefore do some read, kepe me awake, for that whiche is here, lyghten myne eyes.

(c) It is sayd that we slepe in death, whiche we dye or be slaine of our enemyes, wherfore it foloweth least myne enemy say: I haue preuailed, &c.

To slepe is death.

The .xiii. psalme.

He bewayleth that al places are ful of wyched and open synners, and describeth theyr most corrupt, fylthy, and vyolēt condicion: and farther, he prophesieyth vengeance to them, and saluacion to the innocent, whom they oppresse and deuoure.

To the chaunter of Dauid.

The folish bedies say in theyr heart: A res: tushe, ther is no God.

They are corrupt, and become abhominable in theyr doynges, there is not one that doth good.

The Lord looketh downe from heauen vpon the chyldren of men, to se if ther wer any that wold vnderstand and seke after God.

But (a) they are al gone out of the waye, they are al together become vniuersallye, ther is none that doth good, no not one.

How can they haue vnderstanding, that worke myschiese, eatyng vpon my people, as it wer breade, and cal not vpon the Lord.

Therefore shal they be brought in greate feare, for God standeth by the (b) generation of the righteuous.

(c) As for youe haue made a moeke at the counsaile of the poore, because he putteth his trust in the Lord.

O that the sayng health were geuen Israel out of Syon.

O that the Lord wold deliuer his people out of captiuitie.

Then shoulde (d) Iacob reioyse, and Israel shoulde be ryght glad.

He that setteth not by the vngodly, but maketh much of them that fear the Lord: he that sweareth vnto his neighbour, and dysapoynteth hym not.

He that geueth not his money vpon vsurpe, and taketh no rewarde agaynst the innocent.

Who so doeth these thynges, shal neuer be remoued.

The .xvi. psalme.

Therefore did my heart reioyce, & my ryg was glad my flesh also shal rest in hope.

For whye? (d) thou shalt not leane my soule in hel, neyther shalt thou suffer thy saynte to se corrupcion.

Thou hast shewed me the wayes of lyfe: thou shalt make me full of ioye wyth thy countenance.

The .xvii. psalme.

At thy ryght hand ther is pleasure and ioye for euermore.

The Notes.

(a) That is nobilitie, or honoure of chivalry, or an instrument of musycke.

(b) Here and in many other places, the scripture calleth the saythful, sayntes, as psalm. xli. a, and the Apostle in many of his epistles.

(c) God is on the ryght hand, when he helpeth, aideth, and succoureth vs, and is prest and ready thereto, psalm. cxi. d.

(d) God leueth not our soules in hel, when he suffereth them not to dye: neyther forsaketh vs nor taketh his assyduous grace fro vs, And that whych foloweth, neyther shalt thou suffer thy saynte to se corrupcion, sygnifyeth, Thou shalt not suffer my body to abyde in the graue, and so to corrupt. So doth Peter expound this place of Christ, Act. ii. Paul. Act. xiii.

The .xvii. psalme.

A vehement and feruent prayer of David, that he myght be deliuered from the persecutions of Saul. He innocently prayeth his own innocency, as he dyd in the. vii. psalm. He crieth for helpe, describeth the proude condicions and vayne intencions of his persecuters, and confesseth that his felicity consisteth in the knowledge of God.

A prayer of David.

Wate the ryght (O Lord) consider my complaynt, hearken vnto my prayer, that goeth not oute of a faryned mouth.

Let my sentence come forth fro thy presence: & loke vpon the thyng that is equall.

Thou hast proued & visited myne hert in the night season: þu hast tried me in þe fire, & hast found no wickednes in me: for I vtterly purposed þe my mouth shuld not offend. Because of the wordes of thy lypes, I haue kepte me from the workes of men, in the way of the murderer.

Order thou my goynges in thy pathes: that my fore steppes dyspyce not.

For vnto þe I cry, hear me O god: encline thine eares to me: & hearken vnto my words.

Shew thy maruelous louing kyndnes, thou that sauest the whych put theyr trust in the, from such as resyst thy ryght hand.

Kepe me as an apple of an eye, defende me vnder the (a) shadow of thy wynges.

Fro the vngodly þe trouble me, fro mine enemies which copas my soul round about.

Which mayntayne theyr own welthy: nelle wyth oppresyon, and theyr mouth speake proude thynges.

They lie waiting in our way ouer euerie side, turning theyr eyes down to þe ground.

Like as a Lion þe is greedy of his pray, & as it met a Lions whelp larking in his denne.

Up lord, disaioyne him, & cast him down: deliuer my soul wth thy sword fro þe vngodly.

Fro the me of thy hand (O lord) fro þe me of þe world, which haue theyr porcion in this life, whose bellies þe fillest wth thy treasure.

They haue chyldre at their desire, & leaue the rest of their substance for their babes.

But as for me, I wyl beholde thy presence in righteousness: and when thy glory appeareth, I shal be satisfyed.

Shadowe of wynges, (a) Here doth the shadow of the wynges signify that protection & unspeakable goodnes of god, by which only we stand in safety. It is a borrowed speche of the nature of an hen, who nourisheth, feedeth and defendeth her chickens vnder her wynges, yea, fyghteth for them, and despyseth her own life to saue them. Christ borroweth a lyke speche. Math. xxiii. d.

The. xviij. Psalme.

First he describeth the great and feruent confidence whiche he had in God, and then the euyls wherewith he was overladen, after that the power of God, and good wyll toward hym. Then sheweth he hys own deliuerance, hys innocency, and the iudgement of God toward al men. And after these, the great victorie obtained of hys most myghty enemy, and that the coastes of his kingdome were meruelously enlarged, and hys power confirmed for euer: at the last he endeth the Psalme with prayles, and with a prophesy of Christ.

To the chaunter of Dauid, seruaunt of the Lorde, whiche sayde vnto the Lorde the wordes of this songe, on the day in which the Lorde deliuered hym from the hande of all hys enemyes, and from the hande of Saule, and sayde.

A Wyl loue thee (O Lorde) my strength.

The Lorde is my succoure, my refuge, my saupoure, my God, my helper in whome I trust: my buckler (a) the horne of my helth, and my protection.

I wyl prayse the Lorde, and cal vpon him so shal I be safe from myne enemyes.

(b) The sorowes of death compassed me and the brokes of vngodlynes made me afraied.

The paynes of hell came aboute me, the snares of death toke hold vpon me.

Yet in my trouble I called vpon the lord, and complained vnto my God.

So he hearde my voyce oute of his holy temple, and my complaint came before him, yea euen into hys eares.

Then the earthe trembled and quaked, the very foundations of hys hyls shoke, and wer remoued, because he was wroth.

Ther went a smoke out of hys nostrils, and a consuming fyre out of hys mouth: so that coales were kyndled at it.

He bowed the heauens and came down and it was darke vnder hys feete.

He rode vpon the Cherubyns and dyd flye: he came flyinge with the wynges of the wynde.

He made darknesse hys pavilion round about him, with darcke water and thicke cloudes to couer hym.

At the brightenes of hys presence the cloudes remoued, with hayle stones and coales of fyre.

The Lorde also thundred out of the heauen and the hygh gaue hys thundet with hayle stones and coales of fyre.

He sent out hys arrowes and scattered them, he cast soze lyghtenynge, and destroyed them.

The springs of waters were reue, and foundations of the round worldes wer discovered at thy chiding (O Lorde) at thy blaspheming and byeth of the dyspleasures.

He sent downe fro the heigh to fetch me, and toke me out of great waters.

He deliuered me from my strong enemyes, and from my foes whiche were to myghte for me.

They persecut me in the tyme of my trouble, but the Lorde was my defence.

He brought me forth also into liberty: and deliuer me, because he had a fauoure vnto me.

The lord shal reward me after my righteous dealing, & according to the clenness of my handes shal he recompence me.

For I haue kept the wayes of the Lorde: and haue not behaued my selfe wyckedlye agaynst my God.

I haue an eye vnto al his lawes, & cast not out hys commaundementes from me.

Uncorrupte wyl I be before hym, and wyl schewe myne owne wyckednes.

Therfore shal the Lorde reward me after my righteous dealing, and according vnto the clenness of my handes in his eye syght.

With the holy thou shalt be holpe, and with the innocent thou shalt be innocent.

With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde.

For thou shalt saue the poore oppressed, and bynne downe the hye lokes of the proude.

Thou lyghtest my candell, O Lorde my god: thou makest my darcknes to be light.

For in the I can discryt an host of me: yea in my God I can leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is a perfecte waye: the wordes of the Lorde are tryed in the fyre: he is a shyld of defence, for al them that trust in hym.

For who is God, but the Lorde? Or who hath any strength, but our God?

It is God that girded me with strength, and made my waye vncorrupt.

He hath made my fete lyke hartys fete, and set me vpon hye.

He teacheth mynde handes to fight, and maketh mine armes to breake euen a bow of Steele.

Thou hast geuen me the defence of thy health, thy right hand vpholdeth me, and thy louing correccion maketh me great.

Thou hast made troume ynoughe vnder me for to gooe, that my foote steypes should not slide.

I wyl folowe vpon myne enemyes, and take them: I wyl not turne tyll they be dyscomforted.

I wyl smite them, they shal not be able to stand, but fall vnder my feete.

Thou hast gyrded me with strength vnto the battayl, thou hast throwen them all downe

Thou haste made myne ennemyes to turne theyr backes vpon me. thou hast destroyed them that hated me.

They cryed, but there was none to help them: yea euen vnto the Lorde, but he herd them not.

I wyl beate them as small as the duste in the wynde, I wyl caste them out as the clay in the stretes.

For my father and my mother haue forsaken me, but the Lord hath taken me vpon.

Shew me thy way O Lord and lead me in þ ryght path, because of mine ennemyes.

Deliuer me not into þ twils of mine aduersaries, for they are false wytnesses risen vp agaynst me, and they ymagin mischise.

Reuerbelasse I beleue verely to see the goodnesse of the Lord, in the *land of the luyng.

O (a) tarye thou the Lordes leasure, be strong, let thyne hert be of good comforte, and wayte thou styl for the Lord.

The Notes.

(a) He taryeth the Lordes leasure that appoynteth not God a tyme to heale hym, but patiently abydeth being assured that God wyl heale hym at such tyme as he hath appointed. As in the xxvii. psalme. &c.

The. xvii. psalme.

He prayeth the Lord, not to forsake hym in hys great necessitie. He despyeth that he beinge innocent, be not aunged wth the wycked: and wytheth that euen they also may not haue suche iudgement as they haue deserued: Then geueth he thanks to God for the victorie, and prayeth for the people.

Of Dauid.

The. xxix. Psalme.

Hear the voyce of my humble petition, when I cry vnto the, and hold vp my handes toward thy holy temple.

O plucke me not awaye among the vngodlye and wycked doers, whyche speake frendly to ther: neyghboure, but ymagyn myschefe in theyr hartes.

B Reward the according to theyr dedes, & wyckednesse of theyr swynne inuencions.

Recourence the after the works of their hands, pay them that they haue deserued.

For they regard not the woorkes of the Lorde, nor the operacion of hys handes: therefore shall he breake them downe, and not bylde them vp.

Praised be the Lorde, for he hath hearde the voyce of myne humble petition.

L The Lorde is my strengt hand my shyld, my heart hoped in hym, and I am helped:
therefore my hearte daunteth for loye, and I wyl syng prayles vnto hym.

The Lorde is the strength of hys people, he is y defender & sauour of his anointed.

O healte thy people, geue thy blessinge vnto thyne inheritaunce: feede them, and set them vp for euer.

The. xxx. Psalme.

L He prayseth God by the power that he sheweth in thunder and other tempestes, & reioyseth of hys goodnes toward the people of Israel.

A Psalme of David.

A Serpbe vnto the Lorde, O ye mighty, ascribe vnto the Lorde woorthyp and strength.

Geue the Lorde the honoure of hys name, bow your selues to the holy magesty of the Lorde.

It is the Lorde that commaunded the waters: It is the glorious God y maketh the thunder: it is the Lorde y ruleth the sea,

B The * voyce of the Lorde is myghty in operacion, the voyce of the Lorde is a glorious voyce.

L The voyce of the Lorde breaketh the Cedre trees: yea the Lorde breaketh the Ceders of Libanus.

He maketh them to skip like a calfe: Li-banus and Sirion like a ponge Unicorne.

The voyce of the Lorde deuydeth the flames of fyre: the voyce of the Lorde * shaketh the wyldernes, yea the Lorde shaketh the wylderneesse of Cades.

L The voice of the Lorde moueth y hundes, and discovereth the thicke bushes: in his re-ple shal euery man speake of hys honoure.

The Lorde styllt the water foud, and the Lorde remaineth a kyng for euer.

The Lorde shal geue power vnto hys people, the Lorde shal geue hys people the blessyng of peace.

The. xxxi. Psalme.

L He geueth thanks for the obtaining of helth, he greatly prayseth the goodnes of God, which sendeth not aduersitye vnto hys people but for the best, and protesteth that he despyeth not the lengthenynge of hys lyfe for anye other cause then to restore and set forth the thynges that make for the glorie of God, and profyte of the sayntes.

The. xxx. Psalme.

L A Psalme and songe of the dedicacion of the house of * David.

Myl magnifye the, O Lorde, for thou hast set me vp, and not suffered my foes to tryumpehe ouer me.

O Lorde my God, I * cryed vnto the, and thou hast healed me.

Thou Lorde hast brought my soule oute of (a) hel: thou hast kepte my lyfe, wher as they go downe to the pyt.

Syng prayles vnto the Lorde (O yefaltes of hys) geue thanks vnto hym for a remembraunce of hys holynesse.

For hys wrath endureth but the twinklyng of an eye, and hys pleasure is in life: heynesse may wel endure for a nyght, but loye commeth in the mornynge.

As for me, when I was in prosperytye,
I sayd: Tush I shal neuer fal more.

And whye? thou Lorde of thy goodnesse haddest made my hyl so strong.

But as soone as thou turnedest thy face fro me, I was brought in feare.

Then cryed I vnto the, O Lorde, yea vnto the Lorde made I my prayer.

What profyt is ther in my bloude, if I go downe to corrupcion?

May the dust geue thanks vnto the? O shal it declare thy saythfulnesse?

Hear, O Lorde, and haue merce vpon me: Lorde be thou my helper.

And so thou hast turned my heynesse in to loye: thou hast put of my (b) sacke cloth, and gyrded me wth gladnesse.

That myne honour myght syng prailes vnto the without ceasing: O Lorde my god
I wyl geue thanks vnto the for euer.

The Notes.

(a) Here is it manifest, that hel is taken for the estate of the dead, as wel of the good, as of the e-uyl. As it is sayd. Gene. xxv. 29.

(b) He putteth of sackcloth, that putteth away sannes from hys harte, for it was the maner of the Jewes to weare sackcloth when they were sadden in sadnes by any myffortune, or when they bewayled theyr wyckednes, as yse in Eches, and many other places.

The. xxxi. Psalme.

L He sheweth wherwith he strengthened his hope, what he despyed for, what he complayned of, in what case he was, and how he was mynded when he and hys wer beset round about in the wyldernes of Arab, and sought a meane to escape. He prayseth the great goodnes of God toward al such as fear him. And moueth me to fearre and loue of God, whyche can not forsake them that leane vnto hym.

L To the chaunter, a Psalme of David.

In the o lord, is my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion, but deliuer me in thy * righteousness.

Bow downe thine eare to me, make hast to deliuer me: be thou my strong rock and a house of defence, that y maifest saue me.

For thou arte my stronge holde and my castell: O be thou my gyde, and lead me for thy names sake.

Into thy hands I comēd my spirit: thou hast knowen my soule in aduersity.

Thou haste not deliuered me ouer into

My lyfe is waken old wth heauynes, and my peaces wth mournyng.

My strength faileth me because of myne aduersitie, and my bones are corrupt.

I am become a very reprove among all

Thys thou seest, O Lord: holde not thy tong then, go not far fro me, O Lord.

Awake Lord, and stand vp: auenge thou my cause, my God, and my Lord.

Judge me, o lord my god, according to thy ryghteousnes, & theyr triumphe not ouer me.

O let them not say in theyr bertes: ther, ther, so woulde we haue it: O let them not say, we haue overcome hym.

Let them be put to confusio and shame, that reioyse at my trouble: let them be clothed wth rebuke and dishonour, that boast them selues agaynst me.

Let the also be glad and reioyce, that fauour my ryghteous dealing: yea, let them say alway: blessed be the Lord, whych hath pleasure in the prosperitie of hys seruaut.

And as for my tonge, it shal be talkyng of thy ryghteousnes and of thy prayse, all the day long.

Thy mercy, O Lord, reacheth vnto the heauen, & thy faithfulness vnto the clouds.

Thy rightousnes staderth like a strong mountaine, & thy iudgemēt like a great deepe.

Thou Lord preteruest both mē & beasts.

How precious is thy mercy, o god, that the children of men may put theyr trust vnder the shadow of thy wynges?

He shal make thy ryghteousnesse as cleare as the lyght, and thy iuste dealinge as the noone dape.

Hold the styl in the Lord, & abide patiently vpon him: but greue not thy selfe at one & hath prosperitie, & liueth in abhominatio.

Leaue of thy wrath, let go displeasure, let not thy gelousy moue the also to do euyl.

For wycked doers shal be rooted oute, but they that patiently abyde the Lord, shal enherit the lande.

Suffer yet a lytle whyle, and the vngodly shal be cleane gone: thou shalt loke after hys place, and he shal be away.

The. xxxvii. Psalme.

But shall I have longer
then they desyre ven-
geaunce.
That is ar-
ready bent prepared.

But the Lord laugheth hym to scorn, for he seeth that bys day is cummyng.

The vngodly shall drawe oute the sword, and bende theyr bowe, to caste downe the simple and poore, and to slay such as go the ryght waye.

Neuerthelesse, theyr swerde shall goo thorow theyr owne heart, and theyr bowe shal be broken.

A smal thyng that the righteous hath, is better then great ryches of the vngodlye.

Armes syg-nifyeth power.

For the armes of the vngodlye shal be broken, but the lord upholdeth the righteous.

The Lord knoweth the dayes of the Godlye, and theyr inheritaunce endu-reth for ever.

They shal not be confounded in the perilous tyme, and in the dayes of death they shal haue ynoughe.

As for the vngodly, they shal perishe: and when the enemies of the Lord are in theyr flowers, they shal consume, yea euen as the smoke shal they consume awaye.

I Some red
thus. The vngodly le-
deth vpon
surge
and not for-nought,

The vngodlye shall borrowe and payeth not agayne, but the ryghteous is mercyfull and lybterall.

Such as be blessed of hym, shall possesse the land: and they whom he curseth, shall be rooted out.

The Lord ordreth a good mans goyng, and hath pleasure in bys waye.

Ecclesiast. ii. c.

Though he fall, he shall not be hurte, for the Lord upholdeth hym wyth bys hand.

I haue bene yonge, and now am old: yet sawe I neuer the ryghteous forsaken, nor hys sede to seke theyr breade.

The ryghteous is euer mercyfull, and lenderth gentlye, therefore shall bys seede be blessed.

Flye from euyl, and do the thyng that good, so shalt thou dwel for ever.

For the Lord loueth the thyng that is ryghte, he forsaketh not bys sayntes: but they shal be preserued for euermore: as for the sede of the vngodly it shal be rooted out.

Yea, the ryghteous shal possesse the land, and dwel therein for ever.

Ecclesiast. ii. c.

The mouth of the ryghteous is erect:
cylced in wysdome, and bys tounge talketh of iudgement.

The law of his God is in his hert, therfore shal not bys footesteppes slide.

The vngodlye seeth the ryghteous, and goeth aboute to slay hym.

But the Lord wyl not leaue him in bys hands, nor cōdempne him whē he is iudged.

Hope thou in the Lord, and kepe his way, and he shal so promote thee, that thou shalt haue the land by inheritaunce, and se whē the vngodly shal perishe.

I my self haue sene the vngodly in great power and flourishyng like a grene bay tre: but when I went by, lo he was gonne: I sought him, but he could no wher be found.

Kepe innocency, and take hede vnto the thyng that is ryght, for that shall byng a man peace at last,

The. xxxviii. Psalme.

As for the transgressours, they shall perish together, and the vngodly shal be rooted out at the last.

The help of the ryghteous cometh of the Lord, he is theyr strength in the tyme of trouble.

The Lord shal stand by them, and saue them: he shall deliuer them from the vngodlye, and heaue them, because they put theyr trust in hym. The. xxxviii. Psalme.

David taketh wyth a seruēt dyscase, desirith to be ryd therof, although bys synnes haue de-serued to be chastened. He complayneth wōderfully of the intollerable vyolence of bys sycke-nes, of the fayntnes of bys frendes, whych forsoke hym, and of the cruelties of bys enemyes.
Then requyeth he the helpe of God, vnto whō he wholly commytted hym selfe.

To the chaunter to byng to remembraunce. (a)

(b) Dē me not to rebuke (O Lord) in thyne anger: O Lord chasten me not in thy beaue dyspleasure.

For thyne arrowes stycke fast in me, and thy hand presseth me sore.

There is no whole part in my bodye, because of thy dyspleasure: there is no reaste in my bones, by reason of my synnes.

For my wyckednesse are gonne ouer my heade, and are lyke a sore burthen, to beaue for me to beare.

My woundes stycke and are corrupte, thorow me my fooly shewes.

I am broughte into so greate trouble and myserye, that I goo mournyng all the daye longe.

For my lynes are cleane dyed by, and there is no whole parte in my body.

I am feble and sore smitten, I roare for the very dysquyetnes of my herte.

Lord, thou knowest al my desyre, and my groyning is not hyd from the.

My bearte panteth, my strengthe hath fayled me, and the lyghte of myne eyes is gonne from me.

My louers and frendes stande lookyng vpon my trouble, and my kynsemen are gonne a farre of.

They that sought after my lyfe, and to dooe me euyl, spake lyes, and ymagyned dysceate all the daye longe.

As for me, I was lyke a deafe man and hearde not: and as one that were domme, not openyng bys mouth.

I am become as a manne that heareth not: and that can make no resistance wyth bys mouth.

For in thee, O Lord, is my truste, thou shalt heare me, O Lord my God.

My desyre is, that myne enemyes try-umphe not ouer me: for if my foote slippe, they reioyse greatly agaynst me.

I am ready to suffer trouble, and my beyngnesse is euer in my syght.

For I confesse my wyckednesse, and my synne greuethe me.

The xxxix. Psalm.

But myne enemies lue, and are myghty: & they that hate me wpythout a cause, are many in number.

They that rewarde me euell for good, speake euell of me, because I folowe the thyng that good is.

Forake me not (O Lord my God) I go not farre fro me.

Haste the to helpe me, O Lord my succour.

The Notes.

(a) Understand, the benefite of God into the heretes of the people, because he had deliuered hym from so paynfull disease, and restored hym to hys health. Howe be it some thynke þ this whole psalme entreateth of the sickness of the soule, that is, of the synnes wherein Dauid was exercised. And they vnderstande the title thus:
To byng to remembraunce, and to knowe oure corruption and frailnes, taken awaye by Christ, to as many as repente and beleue.

(b) Some suppose that this psalme, and the
vi. & the xxx. and xxxi. do bel. rpe some greate and feruent sickness where wpyth Dauid was soze troubled and vered. And that he in this, & the other aboue reherfed psalmes, cōplayneth vpon the greuous paynes whiche he suffered by the meanes of that sickness. Whych paynes (saye they) he here calleth a chastenyng in anger and heauye dyspleasure. The arrowes and hande, that is the plague of God. Loke before in the vi. psalme. a.

The xxxix. Psalm.

He sheweth that although he were vered wpyth the greuous paynes of hys sickness, yet he kept hym selfe so wpythin his boundes, that he let no vnfittinge wordes escape hym in the tyme of hys complayninge, chieselye whyle the wyched hearde hym.

To the chaunter for (a) Aduthu, a psalme
of Dauid.

Sayd: I wyll kepe my wayes that I offed not in my tonge.

And so I shutte my

I belde my tonge, I was dombe, I kept silence, yea euen from good wordes, but it was payne and grese to me.

My heart was bore within me, & whyle
I was thus musynge, the fyre kyndled: so that I spake wpyth my tonge.

Lord, let me knowe mine ende, and the number of my dayes: that I may be certified what I want.

hande.

Whē thou punyhest mā for sinne, thou chastenest hym: so that hys betwye consumeth awaye, lyke as it were a morbe: O how bayne are al men? Selah.

Hear my prayer O Lord, and consy-der my callynge: shewe not thy selfe as though thou sawest not my teares. For I am a straunger and pylgrimme wpyth the,
as all my forefathers were.

O spare me a litle, that I may refresh my selfe, before I go vce, and be no more sene.

The Notes.

(a) Aduthun is the name of a chaunter. f. Pa-ralip. vi. d. x. r. b. a. Rymh thinketh þ Dauid made this psalme, and that it was wont to be song of the kind of singers, ouer whom Aduthun bare rule. Some thynke it to be a certen tune after whiche the psalme was song.

The xl. Psalm.

He retyeth that he is ridde forthe of hys great leopardy by the helpe of God, and wondereth at his vnspcakable goodnes toward the that fear hym: and for it, lth he setteth not by sacrifices, but requirerh the whole man, he cōmitteth hym selfe vnto hym: and saierh that he will praise his rightuousnes and goodnes continually: Then sheweth he the greuousnes of þ leopardie wherein he was, and the cause ther-of, which was his synne. At þ last he beseecheth God to ouerthrow his ennemis, and to glabbe the heretes of the good.

To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

Wayted patiently þ Lord, which enclined him selfe vnto me: and herd my callynge.

He brought me out of the bozypble pit, out of the myre and claye: he set my fere vpon the rocke, & ordered my goinges.

He hath put a netwe song in my mouth, euen a thankefgeupnge vnto our God.

Many men seynge this shal feare the Lord, and put theyr trust in hym.

Blessed is the mā that setteth hys hope in the Lord, & turneth not vnto the proud, and to suche as go about with lyes.

O Lord my God, greate are thy won-derous workes whych thou hast done, &

I do not hyde thy ryghtuousnes in my hart, my talkynge is of thy truth and sayynge health: I keepe not thy lounge mercy and faythfulnesse backe from the greates congregacion.

Turne not thou thy mercede from me O Lorde, but let thy lounge kyndnesse and truth alwaye preserue me.

For innumerable troubles are come about me: my synnes haue taken suche hold vpon me that I am not able to loke vp: pea they are mo in number then þ beates of my head, and my hart hath sayled me.

Let them soone be brought to shame, þ crye ouer me, there there.

But let al those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the: and let al suche as desire in theyr sauynge health, say alwaye: the Lorde be praysed.

As for me, I am poore and in miserie, but the Lorde careth for me.

Thou art my healeper & redemer, make no long tarynge, O my God.

The.xli.Psalme.

In this psalme also speaketh he of a dyscase wherin while he was holden, his enemies were greatly reioyced, hopinge that he shoulde be made awaye wyth the violence of his dyscase. And in which also his frendes had forsaken hym, but God holpe hym whyche alwayes woulde preserue hym: And therfore in the begynnyng, he pronounceth hym happye whyche perceaueth the counsell of God concernynge hym.

The.xlii.Psalme.

The sheweth howe sorrowful he was because he was let from the holy assemble and feaste of the Lorde, by the conspiracye of his sonne Absalon, and howe he was disquieted wyth the voyces of the wicked, which blasphemed the desire of Godlynes, wherunto he was geuen, for a vaine and vnprofitable thyng.

To the chaunter, a monition of the sonnes of Corah.

Like as the hart desireth the water brookes, so longeth my soule after the, O God.

My soule is a thurstie for God, pea euen for the lounge God: when shall I come, and beholde the face of God?

My teares are my meate daye & nyght whyle it is daye sayed vnto me: wher is now thy God?

Nowe whē I thynke ther vpon, I poure oute my herte by my selfe: for I woulde saye go hence wyth the multitude, and passe ouer wyth them vnto the house of God, in the voyce of prayse and thanksgyvinge, among such as kepe holy daye.

Why art thou so full of heynnes, (O my soule) and why art thou so vnquiete wythin me?

O put thy trust in God, for I wyl yet geue hym thanks, for the healepe of his countenance.

O my God, my soule is vexed wythin me: therfore I remēber the lade of Moabate, and the lytle hyl of Hermonim.

One deepe calleth another wyth þ voyce of thy wyssles, all thy waues and water cloudes are gone ouer me.

The Lorde hath promysed his lounge kyndnesse dayly, therfore wyl I prayse hym in the nyghte season, and make my prayer vnto the God of my lyfe.

I wyl say vnto God my stony rocke: why hast þ forgotten me? why go I thus heuely, whyle the enemye oppresseth me?

Whyle my bones are broke, while mine enemyes cast me in the teeth, dayly saying vnto me: wher is now thy God?

Why art thou so heyn (O my soule) & why art thou so disquieted wythin me?

O put thy trust in God, for I wyl yet geue hym thanks thanke hym for the helpe of hys countenance, and because he is my God.

The. xliii. Psalm.

He desyret to be deliuered from the conspirers wth Absalon, & he may worthele prayse God in hys holy temple.

O sende out thy lyght and thy truth, that they maye leade me, and brynge me vnto thy holy hyl, and to thy dwellynge.

That I maye goo vnto I altar of God, euen vnto the God whych is my ioye and pleasure, and vpon the harpe to geue thankes vnto the, O God, my God.

Why art thou so heuie (O my soule) & why art thou so dysquieted within me?

O put thy truste in God, for I wyl yet geue hym thanckes for the dealue of hys countenance, and because he is my God.

The. xliiii. Psalm.

He complayneth that Israell suffereth so greuous persecution for the honour of God, & holy liuinges sake, and that yet God is not present wth the in miracles doing, as he in times past was. And prayeth him to put forth his power, and delpue hys from the iniuries of the wyched.

To the chaunter an instruccyon of the sonnes of Lozah.

We haue herde with our ears (O God) our fathers haue told vs, what thou haste done in theyr tyme of olde.

How thou hast dryuen out the Heathen wth thy hand, and planted the in: how thou hast destroyed the nacjons and cast them out.

For they gat not the land in possession thow their owne swerd, neyther was it theyr owne arme that helped them.

But thy ryght hande, thyne arme and the lyghte of thy countenance, because I hadde a fauoure vnto them.

Thou arte the kynge and my God, I sendest helpe vnto Iacob.

Thow we the, wyl we ouerthrow oure enemyes: and in thy name wyl we tread them vnder, that ryle by agaynst vs.

For I wyl not trust in my bowe, it is not my swerd that shal helpe me.

But it is thou that sauest vs from oure enemyes: and putteste them to confusyon that hate vs.

But now thou forsakest vs, and puttest vs to confusyon, and goest not forth wth oure Hostes.

Thou makest vs to turne oure backs vpon oure enemyes, so that they wyche hate vs, spoyle our goodes.

Thou lettest vs be eate by lyke shepe, & scatterest vs amonge the Heathen.

Thou sellest thy people for noughte, & takest no money for them.

Thou makest vs to be rebuked of oure neyghbours, to be laughed to scorn & had in derision of them that are rounde about vs.

Thou hast made vs a very byworde amonge the Heathen, and that the people shake theyr beddes at vs.

My confusyon is dayly before me, and the shame of my face couereth me.

For the voyce of I schlanderer and blasphemmer, for the enemye and auenger.

All this is come vpon vs, and yet haue we not forgottē the, nor behaued oure selues vnfaithfully in thy couenaunt.

Oure hert is not turned backe, neyther oure steppes gone out of thy waye.

For thou hast (a) smitten vs in I place of draggones, and couered vs wth the shadowe of death.

If we had forgottē the name of oure God, and holden by oure handes to any straunge God.

Shoulde not God fynde it oute? for he knoweth the bette secretes of the herte.

But for thy sake we are kylled all the day long, and are couēted as sheepe appointed to be slayne.

O Lord, why sleepest thou, wake, and cast vs not of for euer.

Wherefore (b) hidest thou thy face? wylt thou cleane forget oure mysery and oppression.

For oure soule is broughte lowe euen vnto the dust, and oure bely cleucth vnto the grounde.

Arise O Lord, helpe vs and delpue vs for thy mercy sake.

The Notes.

(a) God smiteth vs in the place of dragons wher he condemneth vs to the place of dragons. That is to be in the captiuitie and bondage to oure enemyes, bringe heathen, who, for cruclenes may be called dragons. The same callēth he the shadowe of death, for it is worse then death, & more to be fered, to be put in all thynges to the arbitrement & pleasure of the vngodly, to hear the name of God continually blasphemed, all Godlines despised, and all maner of iniures & wronges done to the fauourers therof. Therefore sayth he. Thou hast couered vs wth the shadowe of death, that is wth the verpe darkness of death.

Selah.

Hearc, O my people, let me speake, let me testyfy amonge you, O Israell: I am God, euen thy God.

I reprove the not because of thy sacryfyce: thy burnt offerynges are alway before me.

I wyll take no bullockes oute of thy house, nor goates out of thy foldes.

For all the bestes of the felde are myne, and thousandes of cattell vpon the hilles.

I knowe all the foules vpon the moun-taynes, and the wyld beasts of the felde are in my syght.

If I be hungry, I wyll not tel the: for the whole worlde is myne, and all that therin is.

Thynkest thou, that I wyll eate the flesh of oxen, or drinke the bloud of goates?

geuyng, and paye thy (a) vowes vnto the most hyst.

And call vpon me in the tyme of trouble, so wyll I heare the, that thou shalt thanke me.

But vnto the vngodlye sayeth god: Why doest thou preache my lawes, and takest terers.

Thou lettest thy mouth speake wickednes, and thy tonge paynteth dysceate.

Thou syttest and speakest agaynst thy brother, yea, and sleaundest thynne owne mothers sonne.

Thys thou doest, whyle I holde my tounge, and thynkest me to be euen suebe hym. Yet foloweth it not by thys that we may continue in the purpose of a wycked vowe (for God abhorreth both the makinge and performaunce of such vowes) but thys is rather to be goddess glay, and then we muste in no wyse be slacke in the perfoymaunce.

came vnto hym after he (a) was gone in to Bethsabe.

Mercy vpon me (O God) after thy goodnes, & accordyng vnto thy greate mercyes, do awaye myne offences.

Wathe me well fro my wyckednesse, & cleuse me fro my synne.

synne is euer before me.

Agaynst the only, agaynst the haue I synned, and done euell in thy sight, that thou myghtest be iustified in thy sayin-ges, and shouldest ouercome when thou art iudged.

Behold, I was borne in wyckednesse, & in synne hath my mother conceived me.

But lo, thou hast a pleasure in the truth, & and haste shewed me secrete wysdome.

O purge me wyth (b) flope, and I shall be cleane: wathe thou me, & I shall be whiter then snow. Oh let me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that the bones whych thou hast broken, maye reioyse.

Turne thy face from my synnes, & put oute all my mysdoes.

Make me a cleane herte, O God, and renue a ryght spyte wythin me.

Last me not awaye from thy presence, and take not thy holy spyte from me.

O geue me the comfozte of thy helpe as

For if thou haddest pleasure in sacryfyce, in burnt offerynges.

The sacryfyce of God is a troubled spi-

O be fauourable gracious vnto Sion, that the walles of Ierusalem maye be bu-

But thou, O Lorde, shalt haue them in derision, thou shalt laugh all Heathen to scoorne.

My strength do I ascribe vnto the, for thou (O God) art my defender.

God sheweth me bys goodnes plente- ously, God letteth me se my despye vpon myne enemyes.

Slaye them not, lest my people forgett: but scatte them abroad w thy power, and put them doune, O Lorde my defence.

For the synne of theyr mouthes, for the words of theyr lippes, & because of theyr pryde, let them be taken: and why: theyr preachynge is of cursynge and lyes.

Consume them in thy wrath, consume them that they may perishe, & knowe that it is God, whych ruleth in Jacob, and in all the worlde. Selah.

Let them go to and fro, & runne aboute the cite, houlynge lyke dogges.

Let them runne here and ther for meat, and grudge when they haue not ynough.

As for me, I wyl synge of thy power, and prayse thy mercy by times in the mor- nyng: for thou arte my defence and re- fuge in the tyme of my trouble.

Vnto the (O my strength) wyl I sing, for thou (O God) art my defence, and my mercyfull God.

Go not farre fro me, O God: my God, haste the to helpe me.

Lette them be confounded and perthe, that are agaynst my soule: let them be covered wryth shame and dyshonoure, that seke to do me euyl.

As for me, I wyl paciently abyde alwaye, and wyl euer encrease thy prayse.

The. lxxii. Psalme.

My mouthe shal speake of thy ryghteousnes and sayng health * al the daye longe, for I know no ende therof.

Let me goin (O Lord God) and I will make mencyon of thy power and ryghteousnesse onely.

Thou, O God, haste learned me fro my pouth vntyl now, therfore wyl I tel of thy wonderous workes.

For sake me not, O God, in myne olde age, whē I am gray headed: but I haue shewed thyne arme vnto chyldrens chyldren, and thy power to all them that are yet for to come.

Thy ryghteousnes, O God, is very hie, thou that doest great thinges, O god, who is lyke vnto the?

D What great troubles and aduersities hast thou shewed me? and yet diddest thou turne and refresh me: pea, and broughtest me from the depe of the earth agayne.

Thou hast brought me to great honour, and comforted me on euery syde.

The. lxxiii. psalme.

Lo, these are the vngodlye, these prosper in the world, these haue riches in possession.

Wherefore should I be thus punished dayly, and he chastened euery morning?

Yea, I had almost also said euē as they: but lo, then shoulde I haue condempned the generation of thy chyldren.

Then thought I to vnderstand this, but it was to hard for me.

Untyl I went into the sanctuary of god, and consydered the ende of these men.

Namely, how thou hast set the in a slippery place, that thou maiest cast the downe headlonges, and destroy them.

O how sodely they do consume, perishe, and come to a feareful ende.

Yea, euē lyke as a dreame when one awaketh, so makest thou their ymage to banyshe out of the cypre.

Thus my heart was greued, and it went euē thorow my reynes.

The Notes.

(a) He that putteth any part of his full trust and hope in any other then in God only: committeth fornication agaynst God. For the matter standeth betwene god and the that professe his name, as it doth betwene a man and his wyfe.

Men may se the axes glyster aboue, like as those that hewe in the wood.

They cut downe al the feeling worke of the Sanctuary wyth byls and axes.

They haue set fyre vpon the Sanctuary, they haue defyled the dwelling place of thy name, euē vnto the ground.

Yea, they sai in their hearts: let vs spoyle them al together, thus haue thy brent vp al the houses of God in the land.

We se our tokens no more, there is not one prophet more, no nor one that vnderstandeth any more.

O God, how longe shall the aduersarye do thus dyshonour? how longe shall the enemy blaspheme thy name for euer?

Why wythdrawest thou thyne hand? why pluckest thou not thy ryght hand out?

But God is my kynge of olde, the helpe that is done vpon earth, he doth it him selfe.

Thou deuydest the sea thorow the power, thou breakest the heades of the dragons in the waters.

Thou smyttest the heades of Leviathan in pieces, and geuest hym to be meate for people in the wyldernes.

Thou diggest by welles and brookes, thou dyrest vpon myghty waters.

The day is thine, and the night is thine, thou hast prepared thy lightes & the Sunne.

Thou hast set al the borders of the earth, thou hast made both sommer and winter.

Remember this, O Lord, how the enemy rebuketh, and how the fooly the people blaspheme thy name.

O deliuer not the soule of thy turtle doue vnto the beasts, and forget not the congregation of the poore for euer.

Take vpon the couenant, for the darke houses of the earth are full of wickednes.

O let not thy temple go away ashamed: for thy poore & needy geue praises vnto thy name.

Arise, O God, and maintaine thine own cause, remember how the fooly thy blasphemeth the dayly.

Thou heldest mine eyes waking, I was so feble that I could not speake.

Then remembred I the tymes of olde, and the yeaeres that were past.

I called to remembraunce my songe in the nyght, I communed wyth myne owne hert and sought out my spirite.

Wyl the Lorde cast out for euer? wyl he be no more intreated?

Is his mercye cleane gonne? Is his promyse come vnto an ende for e-

Hath the Lorde forgotten to be grac-

And after that, when they were destroyed which came forth of Egypt, for theyr wickednes: yet brought he theyr sonnes (although they folowed theyr fathers unfaithfulness, and despyled the wonders done in the wilderness for theyr fathers) in to the land promysed, and drove out the inhabitants: In which, although he often punished them greuously, wher they prouoked and tempted hym, and at the last in token of a great feruent wrath, besyde theyr greate slaughter, suffered also the Ark to be taken from them in the tyme of Ely the Priest: yet behelde he them fauourably agayne, geuyng them Dauid to theyr kynge, and restoringe godlynes agayne at Jerusalem. In which thyng he also prophesieth of Christ vnder the shadow of Dauid.

An instruction of Asaph.

Eat my law, o my people, en-clyn your eares vnto y<sup>e</sup> wor-des of my mouth.

I wyl open my mouth in parables, and speake of thyng-

Wherch we haue heard and knowe, and suche as our fathers haue told vs.

That we should not hide them from the chyl dren of the generacions to come: but to shew the honour of the Lord, his might and wonderfull workes that he hath done.

He made a couenant wth Jacob, and gaue Israel a law, whiche he commaunded our fathers to teach theyr chyl dren.

That theyr posteritie might knowe it, and the chyl dren whiche wer yet vnborne.

To the intent that when they came vp they myght shew theyr chyl dren the same.

That they also myght put theyr trust in God, and not to forget what he had done, but to kepe his commaundementes.

And not to be as theyr forefathers, *a froward & ouerthwarre generacion, a ge-neracion y<sup>e</sup> set not theyr hert a righte, and whose spirite was not true toward God.

Lyke as the chyl dre of *Ephraim, which being barnessed and carynge bowes, turned them selues backe in tyme of bataille.

They kept not the couenant of god, and would not walke in his law.

They forgat what he had done, & the won-derfull workes y<sup>e</sup> he had shewed for them.

Maruelous thynges dyd he in the syght of our fathers in the land of Egypt, euen in the spelde of zoan.

He deuided the sea, and lette them goo thorowe it, and made the waters to stande lyke a wall.

In the daye tyme he ledde them wth a cloude, and all the nyght thorowe wth a lycht of fyre.

He cloued the hard rockes in the wildernes, and gaue the drynke thercof, as it had bene out of the great deapth.

He brought waters out of y<sup>e</sup> stony rock, so that they gushed out lyke the ryuers.

The. lxxviii. Psalm.

Yet for all thys they spynned agaynst hym, and prouoked the mooste hyst in the wyldernesse.

They tempted God in theyr hartes, and requyred meate for theyr lust.

For they spoke agaynst God, and sayde yea yea God shall prepare *a table in the wyldernesse, shal he?

Lo, he smote the stony rock, that the water streames gushed out, and the streames flowed wth bal: but how can he geue bread and prouyde flesh for his people?

When y<sup>e</sup> Lord herd this, he was wroth, so the fyre was kindled in Jacob, and becayn dysspleasure agaynst Israel.

Because they beleued not in God, & put not theyr trust in his helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes aboue, and opened the doores of heauen.

He rayned downe Manna vpon them for to eat, & gaue them breade fro heauen.

Then ate they *angels foode, for he set them meate ynough.

Because the East wynde to blow v<sup>nto</sup> der the heauen, and thorowe his power he brought in the South wynde.

He made flesh to rayne vpon them as theyr as dust, and fethered foules lyke as the sand of the sea.

He let it fall among theyr tentes, round about theyr habitacions.

So they eat, and were filled, for he gaue them theyr owne desyre.

They wer not disapointed of theyr lust.
But whyle the meate was yet in theyr mouthes: the heauy wrath of god came vp on them, slew the *welchpest of them, and smote downe the chosen men of Israel.

But for all thys they spynned yet more, & beleued not his wonderous workes.

Therefore theyr dayes were consumed in vanitie, and sodenly theyr yeres wer gone.

When he slew them, they soughte hym:
and turned them early vnto God.

They thought then that god was their succour, and that the hys God was their redemer.

Neuer thelesse they dyd but flatter hym in theyr mouthes, and dyssembled wth hym in theyr tounge.

For theyr herte was not whole wth hym, neither continued they in his couenant.

But he was so merciful, that he forgave theyr misdoedes, and destroyed them not.

Yea, many a tyme turned he his wrath away, and would not suffer his whole displeasure to arys.

For he considered that they were but *fleshe: euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and cometh not agayne.

O howe ofte haue they grieved hym in the wyldernesse?

Howe many a tyme haue they prouoked

The. xcii. & xciii. Psalme.

They shall beare the in theyr handes, & thou hurt not thy fore agaynst a stone.

Thou shalt go vpon the Lyon & Adder, the younge Lyon and the Dragon shalt thou treade vnder thy fete.

Because he hath set his loue vpon me, I shall despue hym: I shall defende hym, for he hath knowen my name.

When he callerh vpon me, I shall beare hym: yea, I am with hym in his trouble, whereout I wyll despue hym, and bring hym to honoure.

With longe lyfe wyl I satisfye hym, & shewe hym my saluacion.

The Notes.

(a) This snare signifieth all naughty doctrine, whether it be taken of the scripture euyl expounded, or of the euyl inuentions of men, as it is sayde before in the psalme. lxxix. e. and. cxix. d.

The. xcii. psalme.

The sabboth daye is a mete and conuenient tyme to prayse the Lorde, because there is then leasure to thynke of his benefytes, and to geue hym thanks therfore.

A psalme of the songe for the sabboth daye.

It is a good thyng to geue thanks vnto the Lorde, & to synge praises vnto thy name, O most hyest.

To tell of thy louing kyndnesse earlye in the morning, and of thy truse in the nyght season.

Vpon an instrumente of ten stringes, vpon the lute, and with a songe vpon the harpe.

For the Lord hath made me glad thorow thy workes, and I wyll reioyse ouer the operation of thy handes.

O Lord, how glorious are thy workes, thy thoughtes are very depe.

An vnwysse man wyll not know this, and a foole wyll not vnderstande it.

That the vngodly are grene as grass, and that all the workes of wyckednes do decaye to be destroyed for euer.

But thou Lorde, O most hyest, abidest worlde without ende.

For so, thyne enemies, O Lord, lo, thyne enemies shall perishe, & all the workers of wickednes shalbe scattered abroad.

But my borne shalbe exalted lyke the borne of an unicorn, and shalbe anointed with fresh oyle.

Myne eye also shall see his lust of mine enemies, and myne eare shall heare his desyre of the wycked that rise vp agaynst me.

The righteous shal flourish lyke a palme tre, and growe lyke a Cedre of Libanus.

Suche as be planted in the house of the Lorde, be frutesfull, plenteous and grene.

That they maye shewe, howe true the Lorde my strength is, and that ther is no vngodly counsel in hym.

The. xciii. psalme.

The. xciii. psalme. Fol. xciii.

He prayseth the maiesty of God for the creation of the worlde, and ouerthrowing of fearful and mightye people.

The Lorde is kynge, and hath put on glorious apparel, the Lorde hath put on his apparelle, & girded hym selfe with strenght: he hath made the round worlde so sure, that it can not be moued.

From that tyme forth hath thy seate bene prepared, thou art fro euyl lastyng.

The floudes arysse (O Lorde) the floudes lyft vp their noyse, the flouds lyft vp theyr waues.

The waues of the sea are myghty, and rage boisterously: but yet the Lord that dwelleth on hye, is mightier.

Thy testimonies (O Lorde) are very sure, holynesse becometh thyne house for euer.

The. xciiii. psalme.

He calleth for the iudgement of god against the wycked oppressours of the innocent & afflicte persones.

Lorde God, to whos vengeance thou God to whom vengeance belongeth, shewe thy selfe.

Aryse thou iudge of the worlde, and rewarde the proude after theyr deservinge.

Lorde how long shall the vngodly, how long shall the vngodly triumphe?

How long shall al wycked doers speake so dysdaynfully, and make suche proude boastynge?

They smyte downe thy people, O lord, and trouble thyne heretage.

They murder the wydow & the straunger, and put the fatherlesse to death.

And yet they say: Tush, the Lorde seeth not, the God of Jacob regardeth it not.

Take hede, ye vnwysse among people: O ye fooles, when wyll ye vnderstande?

He that planted the eare, shall hee not heare? he that made the eye, shall not he see?

He that nutureth the heachen, and teacheth a man knowledge, shall not hee punishe?

The Lorde knoweth the thoughtes of men, that they are but vayne.

Blessed is the man, whome thou leasnest (O Lorde) and teachest hym in thy lawe.

That thou mayste geue hym patience in tyme of aduersityte, vntyll the pyt bee dygged vp for the vngodly.

For the Lorde wyll not sayle his people, neyther wyll he forsake his inheritance.

And why? iudgemente shall be turned agayn vnto vngodlynesse, and all suche as be true of hert shall solow it.

Who riseth vp with me agaynst the wycked? who taketh my part agaynst the euill doers?

An vnwysse man, is hee that is vnfaithfull on his pcepte, or one that mistrusteth God.

In the scripture, unicorn is allowed & praysed, as in the. lxxviii. & sometime displayed, as in the. psal. xciii.

In the scripture, they are called fatherlesse, & are destitute of all thinges, & have noo mā to leane vnto, or any to care for the.

The. xcvi. psalme.

If  $\text{p}$  Lord had not helped me, my soule had almost bene put to spence.

When I sayde: my foote hath slippyed, thy mercy ( $\text{O}$  Lord) held me vp.

D In the multitude of the sorowes that I had in my hert, thy comfortes haue refreshed my soule.

Wylt thou haue any thyng to do wth the stoole of wyckednesse, whych ymagyneth myschiese in the lawe?

They gather them together agaynst the soule of the ryghteous, and condempne the innocent bloude.

But the Lord is my refuge, my God is the strength of my confidence.

He shall recompence them theyr wyckednes, and destroie them in theyr owne malice: yea, the Lord our God shall destroie them.

The. xcvi. psalme.

An exhortation to the earnest praysonge of God.

Come let vs prayse the Lord, let vs hartly reioyce in the strength of our saluacion.

Lette vs come before hys presence wth thankesgeyunge, & shewe our selves glad in hym wth psalmes.

For the Lord is a greete God, and a great kynge aboue al Gods.

In hys hand are all the corners of the earth, and the strength of  $\text{p}$  hys is hys also.

The sea is his, for he made it, and hys handes prepared the drye lande.

O come, let vs worshyppe and bowe downe oure selues: Let vs kneele before the Lord our maker.

For he is our God, & we are the people of hys pasture, & the shepe of hys bandes.

To day if ye wyl heare his voice, harde not your hertes, as when ye prouoked in tyme of * temptation in the wyldernes.

Wher your fathers tempted me, proued me, and saw my workes.

Fortye yeres longe was I greued wth this generation, and sayed: they enter not in theyr hertes, they verely haue not knowen my wayes.

Therefore I said vnto the in my wrath, that they shoulde not enter into my rest.

The. xcvi. psalme.

He moueth al creatures to the praise of god. A prophesy of the kyngdome of Christ and of the increase thereof.

Sing vnto  $\text{p}$  Lord a new songe, synge vnto the Lord all  $\text{p}$  whole earth.

Sing vnto the Lord, & prayse hys name, be tellinge of hys saluacion from daye to daye.

Declare his honour among  $\text{p}$  Heathen, and hys wonders among al people.

* For the Lord is great, and can not worthely be praised: he is more to be feared, then al Goddes.

As for all the Goddes of the Heathen, they be but ydols, but it is the Lord that made the beaueus.

Thankesgeyunge and worshyppe are before hym, power and honour are in his Sanctuary.

Ascribe vnto the Lord ( $\text{O}$  ye kynredes of the Heathen) Ascribe vnto the Lord worshyp and strength.

Ascribe vnto the Lord the honour of hys name, bring presentes, and come into hys court.

O worshyppe the Lord in the betwixt of holynes, lette the whole earth stande in awe of hym.

Tel it out among the Heathen, that the Lord is kynge: and that it is he whych hath made the rounde world so fast, that it can not be moued, and howe  $\text{p}$  he shall iudge the people ryghteously.

Let  $\text{p}$  beaues reioyce, and let the earth be glad: let the sea make a noyse, yea, and al that therein is.

Let the fildes be ioyfull and all that is in it, lette all the trees of the woode leape for ioye.

Before the Lord, for he commeth: for he commeth to iudge the earth: yea, wth rightousnes shall he iudge the worlde, & the peoole wth hys truth.

The. xcvi. psalme.

Here propheseth he also of Christ, in whos God wonderfully shewed hys power vnto the saluacion of hys chosen, & to the ouerthrowing of theyr enemies, and of vain superstitions: vnto the knowledgyng of whom he also exhorteth.

The Lord is kynge,  $\text{p}$  earth may be glad therof: yea, the multitude of the Isles maye be glad therof.

Cloudes and darkenesse are rounde about hym, ryghtuousnesse and iudgement are the habitation of his seate.

Ther goeth a fyre before hym, to burne vp hys enemyes on euery syde.

Hys lightynnges geue shyne vnto the worlde, the earth seeth it, and is afrayd.

The hylls melt lyke waxe at the presence of the Lord of the whole earth.

The very beaueus declare hys ryghteousnes, and al the people se hys glory.

Confounded be al they that worshyppe ymages, and delite in theyr Idols: worshyp hym al ye Goddes.

Ston heareth of it, and reioysed: yea, and al the \* daughters of Iuda are glad because of thy iudgements,  $\text{O}$  Lord.

For thou Lord art the most hest ouer al the earth, thou art exalted far aboue al Goddes.

O ye that loue the Lord, se that ye hate the thyng whych is euyl: the Lord preferueth the soules of hys sayntes, he shall deliuer them from the had of the vngodly.

There is sprong vp a lyght for  $\text{p}$  ryghteous, and a ioyful gladnesse for suche as be \* true hertes.

The. xcviij. Psalme.

He here declareth the same that he dyd in y<sup>e</sup> Psalme next before in the. cxvi.

A Psalme.

Syng vnto the Lorde a newe song, for he hath done marue- lous thynges.

With hys own right hand & wyth hys holy arme hath he gotten the victorie.

The Lorde hath declared hys sauynge health, and hys rightuousnes hath he openly shewed in the sight of the heathen.

He hath remembred hys mercye and truth toward y<sup>e</sup> house of Israell: so that all the endes of the worlde, se the sauynge health of our God.

Shewe youre selues ioyfull vnto the Lorde all ye landes, syng, reioyce, & geue thanckes.

Prayse the Lorde vpon the harpe, sing to the harpe wyth a Psalme of thankes- geuynge.

With trompettes also and shawmes, shewe youre selues ioyfull before the Lorde the kyng.

Let the sea make a noyse and al y<sup>e</sup> therin is, pea the whole worlde, & all that dwell therein.

Let the floudes clappe their hands, and let al the hylls be ioyful together.

Before the Lord, for he is come to iudge the earth.

Yea wyth rightuousnes shall he iudge the worlde, and the people wyth equitie.

The. xcix. Psalme.

This Psalme declareth the goodnes and power of God, for the benefites and wonders doone to Israell.

A

The Lorde is kyng, be the peo- ple neuer so vnpatient: he syt- teth vpon the Cherubyns, be the earth neuer so vnquiet.

The Lorde is great in Sidon, and hye aboue al people.

O let me geue thanckes vnto thy great and wonderful name, for it is holy.

The kynges power loueth iudgement, thou preparest equitie, y<sup>e</sup> executest iudge- ment and rightuousnes in y<sup>e</sup> Jacob.

He rebuked the read sea, and it was Thus he saued them from the hand of

* As for those that troubled them, the waters ouerwhelmed the, there was not one of them left.

Then beleued they in hys worde, and sang prayse vnto hym.

But within a whyle they forgat hys works, and would not abyde hys counsell.

A luste came vpon them in the wyldernes, so that they tēpted God in the desert.

Yet he gaue them their desire, and sent them ynough at their wylles.

They angered Moyses in the tentes, & Aaron the saynt of the Lorde.

So the earth opened and swalowed vp Dathan, and couered the cōgregation of Abiram.

The fyre was kindled in their cōpany, the flame brent vp the vngodly.

They made a calse in Horeb, and worshipped the molten ymage.

Exo. xxxi. a

Thus they turned theyr * gloire into a similitude of a calse, that eateth hay.

God, who was their gloire.

They forgat God their sauour, whych had done so greates thynges in Egypte.

Wonderous workes in the land of * Egipt, and fearful thynges in the read sea.

That is egypt.

So he sayde he would haue destroyed them, had not Moyses hys chosen stande before hym in that gape. His turne away hys wrathfull indignacyon, lest he shulde destroye them.

Yea, they thought some of that pleasaunt lande, & gaue no credence vnto hys worde.

But murmured in their tentes, & heck-ned not vnto the voyce of the Lorde.

Then lyft he vp his hand agaynst them to ouerthrowe them in the wyldernes.

To caste oute their sede among the nations, and to scatter them in the landes.

They toynded them selues vnto Baal
Peor, and ate the offeriūgs of the dead.

Thus they prouoked hym vnto anger with their owne inuencions, and p plage was great amonge them.

* Num. xx.
s.

* Then stode vp Balaan, and executed iustice, and so the plage ceased.

And that was counted vnto hym for righteousnesse, amonge all posterities for euermore.

They angered hym also at the waters of strife, so that Moyses was punished for theyr sakes.

Because they prouoked hys spirite, & he toide them playnly with hys lippes.

Neither destroyed they the Heathē, as the Lorde commaunded them.

But were myngled amonge the Heathen, and learned theyr workes.

In so much p they worshipped their images, whych turned to their owne decaye.

ges, whych turned to their owne decaye.

Yea they offered theyr sonnes and their daughters vnto deuils.

And shed the innocent bloude of theyr sonnes and of their daughters, whō they offered vnto the ymages of Canaan, so p the land was despoiled with bloude.

Thus were they stayned with theyr own workes, and went a whorpyge with theyr owne inuencions.

Therefore was the wrath of the Lorde kindled agaynst hys people, in so muche that he abhorred his owne inheritaunce.

And gaue them ouer into the bande of the Heathen, and they that hated them, were Lordes ouer them.

Theyr enemies oppressed them, and had them in subsecion.

Many a tyme dyd he deliuer the, but they prouoked hym with theyr owne in-uencions, and were broughte downe for theyr wyckednes.

Neuerthelesse when he saue theyr ad-uersitye, he heard their complaint.

He thought vpon hys couenaunt, and pytied them, accordyng vnto the multitude of hys mercyes.

Yea he made all those that had led the away captyue, to pittie them.

Deliuer vs, O Lord oure God, and gather vs from amonge p Heathen: that we maye geue thanckes to thy holpe name, & make our boast of thy prayse.

Blessed be the Lorde God of Israell from euerlastyng, and worlde withoute ende, and let al people say: Amen. Amen.

Prayse the euerlasting.

So they crye vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble, and he deliuereth them oute of their dystresse.

* The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wysdome, a good vnderstanding haue all they that do thereafter: the prayse of it endureth for euer.

The. cxii. psalme.

He declareth the perpetuall prosperitie of them whiche feare and do worship God, and counterfet hys goodnes.

Prayse the euerlastynge.

Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord, & hath greate delite in his commaundementes.

Hys sede shall be myghty vpon earth, the generacyon of the saythfull shall be blessed.

Ryches and plenteousnesse shall be in hys house, and hys ryghteousnesse endureth for euer.

Vnto þe godly there aryseth by lycht in the darknesse: he is mercyfull, lounge and ryghteous.

Well is he that is mercyfull, and lengeth gladly, and pondereth hys wordes wvth discrecion.

For he shall neuer be moued, the ryghteous shall be hadde in an euerlastynge remembrance.

He wvll not be ascaied for anye euill trybunes, hys herte standeth fast, and be- leueth in the Lorde.

Hys herte is stablyshed, hee wvll not shyrike, vntyll he se hys * desyre vpon hys enemyes.

This des- tier is ven- geance & destruccio.

Hee hath be sparred abrode, & geuen to þe poore, hys ryghteousnesse remapneth for euer, hys hoine shall be exalted in honoure.

The. cxiii. & cxiiii. psalme.

The vngodly shall se it, & it shall greue them: he shall gnashe wvth hys teeth, and consume awaye, and the desyre of the vni- godly shall perishe.

The. cxiii. psalme.

He moueth to the prayse of God, because he seeth all thynges, and ruleth and gouerneth the after hys wvll and pleasure.

Prayse the euerlastynge.

Prayse þe Lord (O ye seruantes)

O prayse the * name of the Lord.

Blessed bee þe name of þe Lord, from thys tyme forth euermore.

The Lords name is worthy to be pray- sed, from the rysynge vp of the Sun vnto the goynge downe of the same.

The Lorde is hys above all Heathen, & hys glory above the heauens.

Who is lyke vnto the Lorde our God, that hath his dwellynge so hys, whych humblerh hym selfe, to beholde that is in heauen and earth.

Whych takerh vp the simple out of the dust, and lysteth the pore out of the myre.

That he maye set hym amonge the prin- ces, euen among þe prynces of his people.

Whiche maketh the baren woman (a) to kepe house, & to be a sayfull mother of chyldren. Prayse the euerlastynge.

The Notes.

(a) That is, to be fruytfull, & to haue a whole household of the fruyt of her bodye, where as in þe tyme of her barrennes, she sate alone. It signi- fiesh not to holde an house of her own, for that do many barren that neuer haue chyldren.

The. cxiiii. psalme.

He briefly reciteth the greatest and chiefe miracles whych the Lord dyd for Israel, when he brought them out of Egypt.

When Israel came oute of Egypt and the (a) house of Jacob from amonge the straunge people,

(b) Iuda was (c) hys Sanctuar- ry, Israel hys dominion.

The sea saw that and fled, Jordan tur- ned backe.

The mountayns skyped lyke rames, & the hylles lyke younge shepe.

What ayled the, O thou sea, that thou fleddest? O thou Jordan, that thou tur- nedst backe?

(d) Ye mountaynes that ye skyped lyke rammes: & ye litle hylles, like yonge shepe?

The earth trebled at the presence of þe Lorde, at the presence of þe God of Jacob.

* Whych he turned the harde rocke into a standynge water, and the drynt stone into a spynge well.

The Notes.

The. cxv. Psalm.

He praiseth God for þe gloire of hys names sake, to further his people, to thintete þe it maye bee euidentlye knowne that hee alone is God, & the Idoles of the Heathen but vaine thynges.

Psalm. cxv.

Of vnto vs, O Lord not vnto vs, but vnto thy * name geue þe prayse, for thy leaping mercy & saythfulness.

Wherefore shall the Heathen say: where is nowe theyr God?

As for our God, he is in heauē, he doeth whatsoeuer it pleaseth hym.

Psalm. cxv. c. & c. d. Sap. xv. d. Baruch. vi * Theyr ymagēs are but syluer & gold, euen the workes of mens handes.

They haue mouthes, and speake not: eyes haue they, but they se not.

They haue eares, and heare not: noses haue they, but they smell not.

They haue hands, and handle not, sette haue they, but they cannot go, neyther can they speake thowme theyr thore.

They that made them, are lyke vnto them, and so are all suche as putte theyr truste in them.

But let Israell truste in the Lord, for hee is theyr succour and defence.

Let the house of Aaron put theyr trust in the Lord, for he is theyr succour & defence.

They that feare the Lord, lette them put theyr trust in the Lord, for he is their succour and defence.

The Lord is myndefull of vs, & * blesseth vs: he blesseth the house of Israell, he blesseth the house of Aaron.

Yea he blesseth all them that feare the Lord, both small and great.

The Lord encrease you more & more: you, and your children.

For ye are the blessed of the Lord, which made heauen and earth.

All the whole heauens are the Lordes, but the earth hath he geuen vnto the children of men.

(a) The dead prayse not the (O Lord) neyther all they that go down into spliche.

But wee will prayse the Lord, from this tyme forth for euermore.

Prayse the euertlasting.

The Notes.

The. cxvi. Psalm.

A thākel geuyng for the helpe of the Lord wherby he escaped when he was compassed aboute wpth the hoste of Saul. Hee recypteth the great leopordie and strait wher in he then was, and prayseth the goodnes of God, by whose besesite he was preserued.

The. cxvii. Psalm. Fol. cxviii.

Am pleased, that the Lord hath heard the voyce of my prayer.

That he hath enclined hys eare vnto me, therefore will I call vpon hym as longe as I lyue.

* The snates of deatch compassed me round aboute, the paynes of hell gat holde vpon me, I founde trouble and heuynesse.

Then called I vpo the name of þe Lord, O Lord, deliuer my soule.

Gracious is the Lord, and ryghteous, pea our God is mercysfull.

The Lord preseruethe þe synple, I was brought downe, and he helped me.

Turne agayn then vnto thy rest, O my soule, for þe Lord hath geue the thy desire.

And why, thou haste deliuered my soul from deatch, myne eyes from teares, & my fete from fallynge.

I will walke before the Lord, in the * lande of the lyuynge.

I beleued, and therfore haue I spoken, but I was soze troubled.

I sayde in my harte: All men are lyers.

What rewarde shall I geue vnto the Lord, for all the benefytes that he hath done vnto me?

I will receyue the * cup of saluacion, and call vpon the name of the Lord.

I will paye my vowe in þe presence of all hys people, ryght deare in the sygh of the Lord is the deatch of hys sainctes.

O Lord, I am thy seruant, I am thy seruant, and the son of theyr hand mayde, thou hast broken my bondes in sonder.

I will offere to the sacryfice of thankes geuyng, and will call vpon the name of the Lord.

I will paye my vowe vnto the Lord, in the syghte of al hys people, in the courtes of the Lordes house, euen in the myddest of the Jerusaleme.

Prayse the euertlasting.

The. cxviii. Psalm.

He prophesieth that the benefyte of the gospel shall come vnto the Gentyles and Heathen.

Prayse the Lord all ye (a) Gentyles, laude hym all ye people.

For hys mercysfull kyndnes is euermore and more toward vs, & the feuerth of the Lord endureth for euer.

Prayse the euertlasting.

All hearken compassed me rounde about, but in the name of the Lorde will I destroye them.

They kepe me in on euery syde, but in the name of the Lorde, I will destroye them.

They came aboute me lyke bees, & were as hore as the thorne in the thornes, but in the name of the Lorde I will destroye them.

They thrust at me, that I myght fall, but the Lorde was my helpe.

Thou hast geuen strait charge to kepe thy commaundementes.

O that my wayes were stablished to kepe thy statutes.

So shoulde I not be confounded, whyle I haue respecte vnto all thy commaundementes.

I will thanke the with an vnsayned herte, because I am learned in the iudgements of thy ryghteousnes.

I will kepe thy statutes, O forsake me not vntill.

Spout wonderful thynges in thy law.

I am a straunger vpon earthe, & hyde not thy commaundement from me.

My soule breaketh out, for the very feruent desyre that I haue alwaye vnto thy iudgements.

Thou rebukest the proude, cursed at they that depart from thy commaundements.

Turne from me shame and rebuke, for I kepe thy testimonies.

*Princes also sit and speake agaynst me, but thy seruante is occupied in thy statutes.

In thy testimonies is my dellyte, they are my counsellors.

Dauid.

My soule cleaueth to the dust, & quicken thou me accordyng to thy word.

I knowledged my wates, and thou berdest me, & teach me then thy statutes.

Make me to understad þ way of thy commaundementes, and so shal I talke of thy wonderful workes.

My soule melteth away for very heuines, & set me vp accordyng vnto thy woorde.

Take from me the wape of lynges, and graunt me thy law.

I haue chosen the waye of truthe, thy iudgements haue I laied before me.

I stycke vnto thy testimonies, O Lord, confound me not.

I wyl run the way of thy commaundementes, when thou hast comforted my heert.

De.

Teache me O Lorde the way of thy statutes, and I shal kepe it vnto the end.

*Geue me vnderstandyng, and I shal kepe thy lawe, yea I shal kepe it wth my whole hearte.

My handes also wyl I lyft vp vnto thy commaundementes whych I loue, and my talkyng shal be of thy statutes.

Dauid.

O thouke vpon thy seruante as euer thyng thy woord, when in thou hast caused me to put my trust.

For it is my comfort in my trouble, yea thy woordes quickeneth me.

The proude haue me greatly in derisio, yet thouke not I from thy law.

I remember thyne euertlastyng iudgements, O Lord, and am comforted.

I am horribly afrayed for the vngodly that forsake thy law.

Thy statutes are my songs in the house of my pylgremage.

I thinke vpon thy name, O Lord, in the nyght season, and kepe thy law.

It is myne owne, for I kepe thy commaundementes.

De.

Thou art my portid, O Lord, I am poised to kepe thy law.

I make myne humble petition in thy presence wth my whole hart, & be merciful vnto me accordyng vnto thy word.

I call myne owne wates to remembrance, and turne my sete into thy testimonies.

I make haste, and prolong not the time, to kepe thy commaundementes.

The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I forget not thy law.

At mydnyght stand I vp, to geue thanks vnto thee, for the iudgements of thy ryghtousnes.

I am a companion of al them that feare the, and kepe thy commaundementes.

*The earth, O Lord, is ful of thy mercy, & teache me thy statutes.

De.

O Lorde, thou hast dealt frendlye wth thy seruant, accordyng vnto thy woorde.

I learne me thy kyndnesse, nouer tyme, and knowledg, for I beleue thy commaundementes.

Before I was troubled, I went wryng, but now I kepe thy woordes.

Thou art good and frendlye, & teache me thy statutes.

The proude ynragyn lyen vpon me, but I kepe thy commaundementes wth my whole hearte.

O let thy merciful kyndnes be my com-forte, accordyng to the promys that thou hast made vnto thy seruante.

O let thy louing mercies come vnto me, that I may lyue, for thy law is my delecte.

Let the proude be confounded, whiche handle me so falsly.

But let such as feare the, and know thy testimonies, be turned vnto me.

O let myne hearte be vnderpiled in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed.

Caph.

My soule longeth for thy sauing healthe,

They draw nye that of malice persecute me, and are far from thy law.

Be thou nye at hande also, O Lord, for thy promises are saythful.

As concernyng thy testimonies, I haue knowe euery sens the beginning, that thou hast grounded them for euer.

Kes.

O consider myne aduersitie, and deliuer me, for I do not forget thy law.

Maintaine thou my cause, and defende me, quicken me accordyng vnto thy word.

Healeth is far from the vngodly, for they regard not thy statutes.

Great is thy mercye, O Lord, quicken me as thou art wont.

Psal. cx. c.
Joan. ii. b.

Manye there are that trouble me, and persecute me, yet dooe not I swerue from thy testimonies.

It greuech me, when I se, that the trasgressours kepe not thy law.

Consyder, O Lord, how I loue thy commaundementes, O quicken me with thy louyng kyndnesse.

Thy worde is true from euerlastyng, al the iudgementes of thy ryghteousnes endure for euer.

The princes persecute me without cause, & but in vbert standerth in awe of thy words.

I am as glad of thy worde, as one that spyderth great spoyle.

As for lyes I hate and abhorre the, but thy law do I loue.

Seuen tymes a day do I prayse the, because of thy righteous iudgementes.

Great is the peace that they haue which loue thy law, & they are not offended at it.

Lord, I looke for thy sauing health, and do after thy commaundementes.

My soule keepeth thy testimonies, and loueth them exceedingly.

I kepe thy commaundements and testimonies, for al my wayes ar before the.

Thau.

Let my complaynte come before the, O Lord, geue me vnderstandyng, accordyng vnto thy worde.

Oh let my supplicacion come before the, deliuer me accordyng to thy promes.

My lippes shal speake of thy prayse, sayyng thou hast taught me thy statutes.

Yea, my rounge shal syng of thy worde, for al thy commaundementes are ryghte.

Let thyn hand help me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes.

I long for thy sauyng health, O Lord, and in thy lawe is my delyte.

Oh let my soule liue and prasse the, that thy iudgementes may helpe me.

I go astray, lyke a shepe that is lost: Oh seke thy seruaunte, for I do not forget thy commaundementes.

The. cxix. Psalme.

An affectionous complaynte of the Prophete heynge dyuen out of the lande, and abydyng among the wycked, that dyd al thynges by fraude and vyolence.

The song of the sheares.

In Hebray Mabeloth, Abz. Ezra, thinketh it to be the begynnyng of some songe, after whose tune the Psalmes that haue thys tytle wer song. Other expound it to sygnifye in a hygh place. Some ther be whych saye that the Leu. tes sang all these Psalmes in Dauids house, vpon the sheares whiche wente from the chamber, where the men assembled to the chamber wher the women commonly abode.

When I am in trouble, I call vpon the Lord, and he answereth me.

Deliuer my soule, O Lord from syng lippes, and from a dyscreetful rounge.

Then shal they call vpon me, but I wyl not heare: they shal seke me early, but they shal not fynde me: And p because they hated knowledge, and receiued not the feare of the Lord, but abhorred my counsaile, and despyled my correcciō. Therefore shal they eat the frutes of theyr own way, and be fylled with thei- owne counsailes: for the turnynge awaye of the vnwise shal leaue them: and the pros- perity of foolles shal be theyr owne des- truction. But who so hath ener vnto me, shal dwell safely, and haue ynough with- out any feare of euyl.

The. ii. Chapter.

The. ii. Chapter.

Wisdom is to be embraced and set by. An adulterous woman is to be eschewed.

A Sonne, if thou wylte receyue my wordes, and keepe my com-mandementes by the, that thine care may verken unto wisdom,

Hearke in perceyue in manye places of the scriptures.

applye thynne heart then to understanding,
For if thou crepest after wysdome, and cal-lest for knowledge: if thou sekest after her is after monye. and diggest for her as for treasure: then shalt thou understande the feare of the Lord, and fynde the knowledge of god. For it is the Lord that geueth wisdom, out of hys mouth cometh knowledge and understandinge. He preserveth the wellfare of the ryghteous, and defendeth them that walke innocently: he kepeth the in the ryght path, and preserveth the way of hys sayntes. Then shalt thou understand ryghteousnes, iudgement and equitye, yea and euerye good path. If wysdome enter into thynne heart, and thy soule desyre in knowledge, then shall counsaile preserue thee, and understandinge shall keepe the.

That thou mayest be deliuered from the euyl waye, and from the man that speaketh froward thynges. From such as leaue the hye strete, and walke in the wayes of dark-nesse: whiche reioyse in doyng euyl, and desyre in wycked thynges: whose wayes are crooked, and theyr pathes sclaunderous. That thou mayest be deliuered also from the straunge woman, and from her that is not thynne owne, whiche geueth fweete wordes, forsaketh the housbande of her yowthe, and forgetteth the covenante of her God.

That is why thyn
heart is pro-
uoked to bee
offenders.

For her house is enclined vnto death, and her pathes vnto hel. Al they that go in vnto to her, come not agayne, neyther take they hold of the way of lyfe. That thou mayest walke in the good way, & keepe the pathes of the ryghteous. For the iust shall dwel in the lande, and the innocentes shall re-maine in it: but the vngodly shall be rooted out of the land, and the wycked doers shall be taken out of it.

The. iii. Chapter.

The commandementes of God must be distinctly regarded and obserued.

A Sonne, forget not my lawe, but se that thynne heart keepe my commandementes. For they shall prolonge the dayes and peaces of thy lyfe, and byynge thee peace.

Let mercy and faythfulnes neuer go from the: bynde them about thy necke, & write them in the tables of thynne heart. So shalt thou fynde sauoure and good vnderstandyng in the syght of God and me. Put thy trust in the Lord wth all thynne herte, and leane not vnto thynne own understandinge.

In all thy wayes haue respecte vnto him, and he shall order thy goynges. * Be not wyle in thynne owne conceyte, but feare the LORD, and departe from euyl.

and obtaieth understandinge, for þ getting of it is better then any marchandise of siluer, & the profit of it is better then golde.
Wisdom is more worth then precious stones:
and al thynges that thou canst desyre, are not to be compared vnto her. Wth her ryght hand is long lyfe, & vpon her left hand is

Wth wysdome hath the Lord layed þ foundacio of the earth, and thorow vnderstandyng hath he stablyshed the heauens.
Thorow hys wisdom the depthes breake vp, & the claudes drop downe of the dewe.
My sonne, let not these thynges depart fro thine eyes, but kepe my law and my councel: so shall it be lyfe vnto thy soule, & grace vnto thy mouth. Then shalt þ walke safesly in thy way, and thy fote shall not stoble.
If thou sleepest, thou shalt not be afrayed, but shalt take thy rest and sleepe sweetely.
Thou needest not to be afrayed of any sodain feare, neyther for the vyolent rushynge in of the vngodly, when it cometh. For the Lord shall besiege the, and keepe thy fote that þ be not taken. Refuse not to do good vnto hym that shoulde haue it, so longe as thynne hand is able to do it. Sape not vnto thy neyghboure: go thy waye and come as gayne, to morow wyl I geue the: wher as thou haste nowe to geue hym. Intende no harm vnto thy neyghboure, sayng he boperth to dwel in rest by the. Strive not lightly wth any man, wher as he hath done thee harme. Follow not a wycked man, & chuse none of hys wayes: for the Lord abhorreth the froward, but hys secret is amonge the ryghteous. The curse of the Lord is in the house of the vngodly, but he blesseth the dwellynge of the ryghteous. As for the scorneful, he shall laughe the to scorne, but he shall geue grace vnto þ lowly. The wise shall haue honour in possession, but shame is the promotion that foolles shall haue.

The. iii. Chapter.

Wysdome and her frutes and wayes oughte to be searched.

Care, O ye chyldren, the fatherly exhortacion, and take good hede, that ye maye learne wyldome. Yea I shall geue you a good rewarde, yf ye wyl not forsake my lawe. For when I my selfe was my fathers

thers deare son, and tenderlye beloued of my mother, he taught me also saying: Let thyne herte receaue my wordes, kepe my commaundementes, and thou shalt lyue. Set the wysdome, get the vnderstanding, forget not þ wordes of my mouth, & shrink not from them. Forsake her not, she shall preserve the: loue her, & she shall kepe the. W The chiefe poynte of wysdō is, that thou be wylling to obtrayne wysdome, and before all thy goodes to get the vnderstanding. Make much of her and she shall promote the: Yea, yf thou embrace her, shee shall hyngre the vnto honoure.

That is to say and garyshe the with a crowne of glorye. Hear my son, and receyue my wordes, that the peares of thy lyfe maye bee made. I will shewe the the waye of wysdom, and leade the in the ryghte pathes. So that if thou goest therein, thou shalt not straytenesse hynder the, and when thou runnest thou shalt not fal. Take fast holde of doctrine, let her not go: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe. Come not in the pathes of the vngodlye, and walke not in the waye of the wycked. Eschue it, and go not therein: departe asyde, and passe ouer by it. For they can not slepe, except they haue fyrste done some mischese: neyther take they anye rest, except they haue fyrst done some harme. For they eate the breade of wyckednesse, and drynke the wyne of robberye. The pathes of the ryghteous shyneth as the lyghte, and is euer bryghter and bryghter vnto the perfecte daye. But the waye of the vngodly is as the darkenes, wherein men fall, or they be aware.

W My sonne, make my wordes, and enclayne thyne eare vnto my sayynges. Lette them not departe from thyne eyes, kepe them euen in the myddest of thyne herte. For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynd them, and healeth vnto all theyre bodyes. Kepe thyne hert w all diligence, for there vpon hangeth lyfe. Put awaye from the a frowarde mouth, and let the lippes of sclander be farre from the. Let thyne eyes beholde the thyng that is ryghte, and let thyne eye liddes loke straight before the. Wondre the pathes of thy fere, so shall all thy wayes be sure. Turne not asyde, neyther to the (a) ryghte hande nor to the left, but wythholde thy fore from euill.

The Notes.

(a) By the ryghte hande is vnderstande the false and wycked confidence in workes, and by the left, desperatio. To turne asyde or adde to the right hand is to ad þ to the word of god which God neuer commaunded. To turne asyde or bowe to the left hande, is to take away from the worde of God, or do that whiche is forbidden. As it is wyrtten in Deutero. xxviii. b. and Iosue. xxiii. b.

The. v. Chapter.

W He warneth to eschue and fye whoredome, he forbyddeth prodigalitye and wastful spendyng. He wylleth vs to lyue of oure owne laboures. Men must loue their wyues.

O My son, geue hede vnto my wysdō, and bowe thyne eare vnto my prudence: þ thou mayste regarde good counsell, and that thy lippes maye kepe nourtoure. For þ lippes of an harlot are a dropping hony cōbe, & her throte is softer then oyle. But at the laste she is as bytter as wormewood, and as sharpe as a two edged sword. Her fete go downe vnto death, and her steps pearse thoroowe vnto hel. She regardeth not the paye of lyfe, so vnstedfast are her wales, that thou caste not knowe them. Heare me therefore (O my son) and departe not from the wordes of my mouth: kepe thy maye farre from her, & come not nye þ doores of her house. That thou geue not thyne honoure vnto another, & thy peares to the cruel. That other men be not fylled wyth thy goodes, & that thy labours come not in a straunge house. Yea that thou mourne not at þ last (when thou hast spent thy bodie & goods), and the say: Alas why hated I nourtour? why dyd my hert despise correccio? Wherefore was not I obediēte vnto the voyce of my teachers, and hekened not vnto the that infortuned me? I am come almoste into all misfortune, in the myddeste of the multitude and congregacion. W Drynke of the water of thyne owne well, and of the ryuers that runne oute of thyne owne springes. W Let thy welles flowe oute a broad, that ther maye be ryuers of water in the strectes: but let them be only thyne owne, and not straungers wyth the.

Let thy well be blessed, & be glad wyth the wyse of thy youth. Louing is the bind, and frendlye is the koo: let her bresses alwaye satisfye the, and holde the euer content wyth her loue. W My sonne, why wylt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace þ bosome of another woman? W For Ioh. xxi. v. every mannes wayes are opē in the syght of the Lorde, and he pondereth all theyre goynges. The wyckednesse of the vngodly shall catch hym selfe, and wyth the snares of his owne synnes shal he be trapped. Because he wolde not be reformed, he shall dye: and for his greate folyshnes, he shall be destroyed.

The. vi. Chapter.

W The slothfull and slougysh is pycked and stirred to worke. The scismatyke is reprovied. Aduoutry ought to be earnestlye auoyded.

M Y son, yf þ be suerty for thy neighbour, thou hast fastened thyne hand wyth another man: yea thou arte bounde wyth thyne owne wordes, & take w thyne own speach. Therefore my sonne, do this: discharge thy selfe, for thou arte come into thy neyghbours daunger. Do thy waye then soone, and increate thyne neyghbour: let not thyne eyes slepe, nor thyne eye liddes slumber. Saue thy selfe as a doo from the hand, and as a byrde from the

(thou fowler) consider her ways, and lerne to be wise. She hath no gurdy, no teacher, no leader: yet in the summer she prouideth her meate, and gathereth her foode together in the harvest. * Howelonge wylt thou slepe, thou slougy man?
When wylt thou aryse oute of thy slepe?
Yea slepe on still a lytle, slomber a lytle, folde thyne handes together yet a lytle, þ thou maist slepe: so shall pouertie come vnto the, as one þ traualleth by the waye, and necessitie lyke a weapened man. A dissembling person, a wycked man goeth wa frowarde mouth, he wynteth wth his eyes, he tokeneth wth his fete, he poyneth wth his fingers, he is euer vimaginyng myschiese and frowardnesse in his herte, and caueth discorde. Therefore shal his destruction come hastely vpon hym, sodenly he shall be all to broken, and not

There be fyre thynges whiche the Lorde hateth, and the seuenth he utterly abhor-hands that shedde innocent blood, an hert that goeth about w wycked ymaginaci-ons, feet þ he swyft in running to do mys-chiese, a false wytnes þ byngeth vpon lyes, and suche one as soweth discorde amonge brethren. My son kepe thy fathers commaundementes, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother. Put them vpon together in thyne herte, & brnd them about thy neck.

That they may leade þ where thou goest, preserue the when thou art a slepe, & that when thou awakeste, thou maist talke of them. * For the commaundement is a lanterne, & the lawe a lyghte, a chastenynge, & noultoure is the waye of lyfe: that they may kepe the from the euill woman, and from the flatterynge tonge of the harlot:
þ thou lust not after her bewte in thyne hert, & lest thou be taken wth her fawne lokes. An harlot wyl make a man to beg his bread, but a maryed womā wyl hunte for the precious lyfe. May a mā take fyre in his bosome & his clothes not be brent?
Or can one go vpon hote coales, and his fete not be hurt? Eue so, whosoever goeth into his neyghbours wyfe, & toucheth her, can not be vngiltye. Men do not beterly despyse a thefe that stealeth to satisfy his soule, when he is hungry: but yf he may be gotten, he restoreth agayne seven times as much, or els he maketh recōpense wth all the good of his house: But who so committeth aduouty wth a woman, he is a sole, and byngeth his lyfe to destruction. He getteth hym self also shame & dishonour, such as shall neuer be put out. For the gelousy & wrath of þ man wyl not be strange woman, and fro the harlot which getteth swete words. For oute of the winmonge other younge folkes, I spyed one yong sole going ouer the stretes, by þ cor-

in the twilight of the euening, when it behaue deckte my bedde wth couerynges and clothes of Egypte. My bedde house I made to smell of myrrre, Aloes, and Cyna-mon. Come lette vs lye together, and take oure pleasure tyl it be daye lyghte. For þ good mā is not at home, hee is gone farre hym: whoe can tell when hee cometh home? Thus wth manye swete wordes she ouercame hym, and wth her flatterynge lippes she wanne hym.

Immediatly hee folowed her, as it were an ore led to the slaughter (and lyke as it were to the stockes, where foules are punished) so longe tyl she had wounded his lyuer wth her darte: lyke as yf a byrd hasted to the snare, not knowynge that the pawell of his lyfe lyethe therevpon.

Heare me nowe therefore (O my son) and marke the wordes of my mouth. Let not thyne hert wandre in her waies, and be not thou disceaued in her pathes. For manye one hath shee wounded and caste

Take hede vnto knowlege o ye ignorant, be wyse in herte o ye fooles. Geue eare, for I wyll speake of greate matters, and open my lippes to tell thynges that bee ryghte. For my throte shalbe talkynge of the trouth, & my lippes abhorre vngodlynesse. All the woordes of my mouthe are ryghteous, there is no frowardnesse nor falschod therein. They are all plain to such as wyll vnderstande, and ryghte to them that synde knowledge. Receyue my doctrine therfore, and not syluer: & my knowledge, more then synne golde. For wysdome is more worth then precious stones, yea, all the thynges that thou canst desyre, are not to be compared vnto it.

In wysdome haue my dwellynge wyth knowledge, and prudent counsaill is mine owne. Wyth me is the feare of the Lorde, and the eschuyng of euyll. As for pryde, dysdayne, and euell waye, and a mouthe that speaketh wycked thynges, I utterly abhorre them. I can geue counsaill, and be a gyde: I haue vnderstandynge, I haue strength. Thow to me kynge reygner: thow to me, princes make iust lawes. Thow to me, lordes beare rule, and all iudges of the earth execute iudgement. I am louinge vnto those that loue me, and they that seke me early, shall synde me. Ryches and honoure are wyth me, yea, excellent goodes and ryghteousnesse. Before the foundations of the mountaynes were layed, yea, before all hylles was I bozne. The earth and all that is vpon the earth was not yet made, no not þ ground it selfe. For when hee made the heauens, I was presente: when he set vp the depthes in ordie: when hee hanged the cloudes aboue: whē he fastened the sprynges of the depe: When he shut þ sea wythin certain boundes, that þ waters should not go ouer theyr markes. When he layed the foundations of the earth I was w hym, ordering all thynges, delytynge dayly, and reioysinge alwaye before hym.

As for the round compass of this world, I make it to full, for my delyte is to bee amonge the chyldren of men. Therefore hearken vnto me, o ye chyldren, for blessed are they that kepe my wayes. O geue eare vnto nourtour, be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that heareth me, wat- chynge daylye at my gates, and genynge attendaunce at the postes of my dozes. For who so fyndeth me, fyndeth lyfe, and shall obayne sauoure of the Lorde. But who so offendeth against me, butteth his owne soule. All they that hate me, are the louers of death.

If thou be wyse, thy wysdom shall do thy selfe good, but if thou thynkest scorner therof, it shalbe thyne owne harme. A foolish restless woman, full of wordes, & such one as hath no knowledge, stteth in the dozes of her house vpon a stole, aboue in the cite, to call such as go by, and walke streyght in theyr wayes. Who so is ignorant (sayeth she) let hym come hyther, & to the vnwyse she saith: stollen waters are swete, and the bread that is pryuelly eat, hath a good taste. Eccl. xiii.

¶ 1. Det.
iii. b.
1. Cor. xiii.

* He that wyndeth wyth hys eye, wyll do some harme: but he that hath a foliſhe mouth shalbe beaten. The mouth of a righteous man is a well of lyfe, but the mouth of the vngodlye is past shame, and presumptuous. Euyll wyll stereth up strife, but loue couereth the multitude of synnes. In the lippes of hym that hath vnderstandynge, a man shall fynde wysdom, but the rodd belongeth to the backe of the foliſh. Wyse men laye up knowledge, but the mouth of the foliſh is nye destruction. The ryche mans goodes are hys strange hold, but pouerty oppreſſeth the pore. The right wyse labourerth to do good, but the vngodly vseth hys encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto the chastenynge of nature, is the way of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reſourmed, goeth wronge. Dissembling lippes kepe harred secretly, and he that speaketh any ſclaunder, is a foole. Wher muche bablinge is, there must nedes be offence: he that refraineth his lippes is wisest of all. An innocent tounge is a noble treasure, but the bert of the vngodly is nothyng worth. The lippes of the righteous fede a whol multitude, but folles shal die in their owne foliſy. The blessing of the Lord maketh riſe men, as for carefull trauayle it doth nothyng thereto. A ſole doth wickedly and maketh but a ſport of it: neuertheleſſe it is wiſdome for a man to beware of ſuche.

The thyng that the vngodly are aſcared of, shall come vpon them, but the righteous shall haue their deſire. The vngodly is like a tempeſt that paſſeth ouer, and is no more ſene, but the righteous remaineth ſure for euer. As vineger is to the teth, and as ſmoke is vnto the eyes, euen ſo is a ſongthiſh perſon to them that ſend him forth. The feare of the Lord maketh a long lyfe, but the peares of the vngodly shalbe ſhortened. The patient abydinge of the righteous shalbe turned to gladneſſe, but the hope of the vngodly shal periſhe. The waye of the Lord geueth a courage vnto the godly, but it is a feare for wicked doers. The righteous shal neuer be ouerthrowen, but the vngodlye shall not remaine in the land. The mouth of the iuſte wilbe talkynge of wiſdome, but the tong of the ſroward shal periſh. The lippes of the righteous are occupied in acceptable thyngs, but the mouth of the vngodly take them to the woſt.

The. xi. Chapter.

The Proverbes

A False balance is an abhominacyon vnto the Lord, but a true weyght pleaſeth hym. Where pride is, ther is ſhame alſo and confuſion: but wher as is lowlyneſſe, there is wiſdome. The innocent dealinge of the iuſte shall leade them, but the vnfaiſtfulneſſe of the deſoilers shalbe their owne deſtruction. * Riches helpe not in the day of vengeance, but rightuouſneſſe deliuereth from death. The rightuouſneſſe of the innocent ordreth his way, but the vngodly shal fal in his owne wyckedneſſe. The rightuouſneſſe of the iuſte shal deliuer them, but the deſpylers shall be taken in their owne vngodlyneſſe.

* When an vngodly man dieth, his hope is gone, the confidence of riches shall periſhe. The righteous shalbe deliuered out of trouble, and the vngodly shal come in his ſteade. Thorough the mouth of the diſſemblers is hys neighbour deſtroyed, but thorough knowledge shal the iuſte be deliuered. When it goeth well with the righteous, the cytie is merre: and when the vngodly periſhe, ther is gladneſſe. When the iuſte are in wealthe, the cytie proſpereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule, it decayeth. A foole bringeth up a ſclaunder of hys neyghboure, but a wyſe man wyll kepe it ſecret. A diſſemblinge perſon wyll diſcouer many thynges, but he that is of a faythful bert, wyll kepe counſayle. Wher no good counſaile is, there the people decaye: but wher as many are that can geue counſaile, there is wealthe. He that is ſuretye for a ſtraunger, butteth hym ſelfe: but he that medleth not wyth ſuretyſhpye, is ſure. A gracious woman mainteyneth honeſty, as for the myghy, they maintayne ryches. He that hath a gentle liberal ſtomacke is merciful: but who ſo butteth hys neyghboure, is a tyrante. The labour of the vngodly proſpereth not, but he that ſoweth rightuouſneſſe, shal receyue a ſure rewarde.

Lyke as rightuouſneſſe bringeth lyfe: euen ſo to cleaue vnto euyl: bringeth death. The Lord abhorreth a ſayned harte, but he hath pleaſure in them that are vndeſiled.

It shal not helpe the wycked, though they lay al theyr handes together, but the ſeede of the righteous shalbe preſerued. A ſayre woman wythout diſcrete manners, is lyke a ryng of golde in a ſwynes ſnowte.

The iuſte labour for peace and tranquyltie, but the vngodly for diſquietneſſe.

Some man geueth oute hys goodes, and is the richer, but the nygarde (hauynge ynough) wil depart from nothyng, and yet is euer in pouerty. He that is liberal in geuyng, shal haue plenty: and he that watereth, shalbe watered alſo hym ſelfe. Who ſo hoordeth up hys corne, shal be curſed among the people: but bleſſynge shall shall lpght vpon hys head that selleth it. He that labourerth for honestye, fyndeth hys desyre: but who so seeketh after myschiese, it shall happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in hys riches shall haue a fall, but a righteous shall florish as a grene lease.

Who so maketh bysquternesse in hys owne house, he shall haue wynde for hys herprage, and the foole shall be struuant to the wyse.

1. Pe. iiii. d. The fruite of the ryghteous is as the tree of lyfe, a wyse mā also wyuneth mēsoules. * If the ryghteous be recompensed vpon earth, how muche more then the vngodly and the synner?

The. xii. Chapter.

Vho so loueth wysdome, wyl be content to be reformed: but he that hateth to be reformed, is a foole. A good mā is acceptable vnto the Lord, but the wycked wyl be cōdemone. A man can not endure in vngodlynesse, but the roote of a ryghteous shall not be moued. A stedfast woman is a crowne vnto her husbāde: but she that behaueth her selfe vntrustworthily, is a corruptiō in hys bones. The thoughtes of the ryghteous are right, but the imaginations of the vngodly are disceitfull. The talking of the vngodly is, howe they may lay wayte for bloude, but the mouth of the ryghteous wyl deliuer them. O euer thou canst turne the about, the vngodly shall be ouerthrowen: but the house of the ryghteous shall stand. A man shall be commended for hys wysdome, but a foole shall be despised. * A symple man whiche labourerth and woorkerth, is better then one that is gorgeous and wanteth bread. A righteous mā regardeth the lyfe of his cattell, but the vngodly haue cruell herres. * He that tyllerth hys lande, shall haue plēteousnes of breade: but he that foloweth idleness, is a very foole. The desyre of the vngodly hunterth after myschiese, but the roote of the ryghteous bringerth forth fruite. The wycked falleth into the snare thowhe the malice of hys owne mouth, but the iust shall escape out of peril.

Euerie man shall enioye good, accordyng to the innocēcy of hys mouth, and after the workes of hys handes shall he be rewarded. Loke what a foole taketh in hande, he thynkerth it well done: but he that is wyse, wyl be counsayled.

1. Co. xiii. d. A foole vttereth hys wrath in all the hāte, but a discrete man forgoeth wronge. A iust man wyl tel the truth, and sheweth the thynge that is right: but a false wyman disceynerth. A sclauderous person pryncerth lyke a sword, but a wise mans tonge is wholsome. A true mouth is euer constant, but a dissemblinge tounge is soone chaunged. They that ymagyn euill in theyr mynde, wyl disceyue: but the counsaylers of peace shall haue ioy folowynge them. Ther shall no mysfortune happen vnto the iust, but the vngodly shall be spl-led wth mysery.

The Lord abhorreth disceitfull lpps, but they that labour for trithe, please hym. He that hath vnderstandynge, can hyde hys wysdom: but an vndiscrete hert telleth out hys folysheues. A diligent hand shall beare rule, but the tole shall be vnder tribute. Deuynesse discouragerth the hert of man, but a good worde maketh it glad agayne. The ryghteous is liberall vnto hys neyghboure, but the waye of the vngodly wyl disceyue them selues. A disceitfull man shall fynde no vantage, but he that is content wth that he hath, is more worthe then golde. In the waye of ryghteousnes ther is lyfe, as for any other way it is the path vnto death.

The. xiii. Chapter.

A wise sonne wil receaue his fathers warning, but he that is scornful, wil not heare when he is reformed. * A good man shall enioye the fruite of hys mouth, but he that hath a froward mynde shall be spoiled. He that keperth his mouth, keperth hys lyfe: but who so speaketh vnadvised, fynderth harme. The souldier would faine haue, and can not get hys desyre: but the soule of the diligēt shall haue plenty. A ryghteous man abhorreth lyes, but the vngodly shall haue both other and hym selfe. Ryghteousnesse keperth the innocent in the way, but vngodlynes shall ouerthrow the sinner.

Some men are riche, thowhe they haue nothynge: agayn some men are poore vntinge great riches. Wth goods euerie man deliuereth hys lyfe, & the poore wyl not be reformed. The lpght of the ryghteous maketh ioyful, but the candle of the vngodly shall be put out. Among the proude ther is euer stryfe, but amonge those that do all thynges wth aduiseinent, ther is wysdome. Hastly gottē goodes are soone spent, but they that be gathered together wth the hand, shall increase. Long taryng for a thing that is deferred greuethe the hert: but when the desyre cometh, it is a tre of lyfe. Who so despyseth the worde, destroyeth hym selfe: but he that feareth the commandemente, shall haue peace. The lawe is a wel of lyfe vnto the wyse, that is maye kept hym from the snares of death. Good vnderstandinge geueth fauour, but harde is the waye of the dispisers. A wyse man doth all thynges wth discretion, but a foole wyl declare hys folly. An vngodly meTanger bringerth myschiese, but a faithfull embassoure is wholsome. He that thynkerth scorn to be reformed, cometh to pouertie & shame, but who so receaueth correccion, shall come to honoure.

When a desire is broughte to passe, it deliuereth the soule: but foolcs abhorre hym that eschueeth euill. He that goeth in the company of wyse men, shall be wyse: but who so is a companion of foolcs, shall be hurt. Myschiese foloweth vpon synners, but the ryghteous shall have a good reward. Whiche the children of the world shall have in possession, for the riches of the sinners is laid up for the fall. There is plenteousness of food in the fields of the poor, and shall be increased out of measure. He that spareth his rodde, hateth his sonne: but who so loveth him, holdeth him ever in nurture. The righteous eateth, & is satisfied: but the belly of the ungodly hath never enough.

The xlii. Chapter.

Job. xli. a.

A Wyle womanne upholdeth her house, but a * foolyshe wyfe plucketh it downe. Who so feareth the Lorde, walketh in the righte path: and regardeth not hym that abhorreth the wayes of the Lorde. In the mouth of the foolyshe, is the boastynge of lordshipp, but the lippes of the wyle wyll beware of such. When no * oxen are, then the cribbe is empty: but when the oxen labour then is much fruite. A faithfull wylnesse wyll not dissemble, but a false record wyll make a lye. A scornfull body seeketh wysdome, and findeth it not: but knowledge is easy to come by unto hym that wyll understad. Se that thou meddle not with a fool, and do as though thou haddest no knowledge. The wysdome of hym that hath understandinge, is to take heed unto his waye: but the folyshenes of the unwyse, dysceaueth. Fools make but a sporte of synne, but there is favourable love amonge the righteous. The herte of hym that hath understandinge wyll neither dyspaine for anye sorowe, nor be to presumptuous for anye sayne ioye.

By the ore are signified preachers, as in 1. Cor. ix. 7 by the cribbe church.

Way signifieth a manner of livinge.

The houses of the ungodly shall be overthrown, but the tabernacles of the righteous shall stand. There is a * waye whiche some men think to be right, but the ende thereof leadeth unto death. The herte is sorowefull even in laughter, and the end of mirth is heavynesse. An unfaithful personne shall be filled with his owne wayes, but a good man wyll beware of such. An ignorant body beleueth all thinges, but who so hath understandinge, looketh well to his goynges. A wyle man feareth, and departeth farre euil, but a fool goeth on presumptuously. An unpacient man, dealeth folyshly, but he that is well aduysed doeth other wayes. The ignorant have folyshnes in possession, but the wyle are crowned with knowledge. The euil shall bowe them selues before the good, & the ungodly shall wait at the doores of the righteous. The pore is hated even of his own neighbours, but the rich hath many frendes.

E Who so despoyleth his neighbour, doth amysse: but blessed is he that hath pitye of the pore. They that ymagyn wyckednes, shall be dyspaynted: but they that muse upon good thynges unto such shall happen mercy and faithfulness. Diligent labour bringeth riches, but when many vayne wordes are, trulye there is scarcenesse. Riches are an ornament unto the wyle, but the ignorance of foolles is very folyshnesse. A faithful wyueth deliuereth soules, but a lyar dysceaueth the. The feare of the Lorde is a stronge holde, for unto hym he wyll be a sure defence.

The feare of the Lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoid the snares of death. The increase and prosperite of the comens is the Kinges honoure, but the decaye of the people is the confusion of the Prince. Patience is a token of wysdome, but wrath and hasty displeasure is a token of folyshnesse. A meere herte is the lyfe of the body, but rancoure consumeth away the bones. He that doeth a poore man wronge, blasphemeth his maker: but who so hath pitye of the pore, doth honour unto god. The ungodlye is afrayed of euery payell, but the righteous hath a good hope even in death. Wysdome resteth in the herte of hym that hath understandinge, and he wyll teach the that are vnclearned. Rightuousnes setteth up the people, but wyckednes byngeth folke to destruction. A discrete seruante is a pleasure unto the kynge, but one that is not honest prouoketh hym unto wrath.

The xv. Chapter.

A Soft answer putteth downe displeasure, but slowwarde wordes prouoke unto anger. A wyle tonge commendeth knowledge, a folysh mouth babbleth out nothinge but folyshnesse. The eyes of the Lorde loken on euery place both upon the good and bad.

A wholsome tonge is a tree of lyfe, but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde. A foolc despyseth his fathers correctiō, but he that taketh heed when he is reprovēd, shall haue the more understanding.

In the house of the righteous are great riches, but in the increase of the ungodlye, there is myforder. A wyle mouth poureth out knowledge, but the herte of the folysh doth not so. The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifyce of the ungodly, but the prayer of the righteous is acceptable unto hym.

The * waye of the ungodly is an abomination unto the Lorde, but who so followeth rightuousnesse, hym he loveth. He that forsaketh the righte strete, shall be sore punished: and who so hateth correction, falleth into death. The hel with her payne is knowne unto the Lorde, how much more then, the hertes of men? A scornfull body loveth not one that rebuketh hym, neither wyll he come amonge the wyle. A meere herte maketh a chearfull countenance, but an unquyet mynde maketh it heuy. * A wyle herte wyll seeke after knowledge, but the mouth of foolles medleth with folyshnesse. All the dayes of the pore are miserable, but a quiet herte is as a continual feast. Better is a lytle with the feare of the Lorde, then greate treasures: for they are not withoute Eccle. xlii. 6.

without sorrow. Better is a melle of por-rage w loue, the a fat oxe wth fuel wll.
An angry man stereth up strife, but he that is patient, stilleth discord. The way of the thoughtfull is full of thornes, but the crete of the ryghtuous is well clenched.
A wyse sonne maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrere body shamerh bys mother.
A fooler reioyseth in folyshe thynges, but a wyse man loketh well to bys owne go-inges. Unadvised thoughts shal come to naught, but where as men are that can geue counsell, ther is stebfastnes. How lovely a thyng is it a man to geue a connyent answer? How pleasaunte is a worde spoken in due season. The waye of lyfe leadeth vnto heauē; that a man shuld be ware of bel bench.

How the Lord wll breake down the house of the proud, but he shall make fast þ bozders of the widdowe.

The Lord abhorreth the pynag-nyons of the wycked: but pure wordes are pleasaunt vnto hym. The couetous man toteth up bys owne house, but who so bareth rewardes shall lye. A ryghtuous man museth in bys mynde howe to do good, but þ mynde of þ vngodly pynagnyeth how he may do harme. The Lord is far from the vngodly, but he heareth the prayer of the ryghtuous. Lyke as the clearenesse of the eyes reioyseth the hert, so doeth a good name fede the bones.

The eare that harkeneth vnto wholsome warnyng, and enclyneth therto, shall dwel amonge the wyse. He that refuseth to be reformed, despyseth bys own soule: but he that summyteth hym selfe to correction, is wyse.

The.xvi. Chapter.

The feare of the Lord is the ryghte repence of wysedome, and lowlynes goeth before honour. * A man maye well purpose a thyng in bys hert, but the answer of the tounge cometh of the Lord. A man thynketh all bys wayes to be cleane, but it is the Lord that sheweth the myndes. Comynge thy workes to the Lord, and looke what thou deuysest, it shall prosper. The Lord doeth all thynges for bys owne sake, yea when he kepereth the vngodly for the day of wrath.
The Lord abhorreth all presumptuous and proude hertes, there maye neyther strength nor power escape.

Wth lounge mercy and faythfulnes synnes be forgiven, and who so feareth the Lord, he eschuech euill. * When a mans wayes please the Lord, he maketh bys verynemes to be bys frendes. Better is it to haue a lytle thyng wth rygh-tuousnes, then great rentes wrongeously gotten. A man deuyseth a waye in bys herte, but it is the Lord that ordereth his goynge.

When the prophete is in the lyp-pes of the kyng, bys mouth shal not go wrong in iudgement. A true measure and a true balaunce are þ Lordes, he maketh al weightes. It is a greute abhominacion when kynges are wycked, for a kynges seat shoulde be holden up wth ryghtuousnes.

Ryghtuous lyp-
pes are pleasaunt vnto kinges, and they loue hym that speaketh the trueth. The kynges displeasure is a messaunger of death, but a wyse man wyl pacyfyte hym. The chearful countenaunce of the kyng is lyfe, and bys louinge fauor is as the eueryng dew.

To haue wysdom in possession is better then golde, and to get vnderstandyng is more worth the syluer. The path of the ryghtuous eschuech euill, and who so looketh well to bys wayes, kepereth bys owne soul. Presumptuousnes goth before destruc-cion, & after a proude stomak ther foloweth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde wth the lowly, the to deuyde the spoyle wth þ proude. He that hadleth a matter wysely, obteyneth good: & blessed is he, þ putteth bys truste in the Lord. Who so hath a wyse vnderstandyng, is called to counsell, but he þ ca speake satre getteth more ryches. Vnderstandyng is a well of lyfe vnto hym that hath it, as for the chastenyng of foolles, it is foolysheenes. The hert of þ wyse enfourmeth bys mouth, & amenderh the doctryne in bys lyp-pes.

Fayre wordes are an hony combe, & refreschyng of the mynde, and helth of the bones. * Ther is a way that men thynk to be ryght, but the ende thereof leadech vnto death. A troublous soule dysquy-eteth her selfe, for her owne moute hath brought her thereto. An vngodly person stryeth up euell, and in bys lyp-pes he is as an whote burnyng fyre.

A frowarde bodie causeth strife, and he that is a blabbe of bys tounge, maketh deuyssion among prynces. A wycked man be-gyleth bys neyghboure, and leadech hym the waye that is not good. He that win-keth wth bys eyes, ymagineth mischief: & he that byteth bys lyp-pes wll do some harme. Age is a crowne of wryshyp, if it be founde in the waye of ryghtuousnes.
A patiente man is better then one strong:
& he that can rule him selfe, is more worth the he that wynneth a cytye. The lottes are cast into the lap, but they shal stande in the Lord.

The.xvi. Chapter.

Better is a dry morsell wth quietnes, then a full house and manye fat scattel wth strife. * A discrete seruante shall haue more rule the the sonnes that haue no wysdome, and shall haue like heritage wth the byerhien. Lyke as syluer is tried in the fyre, and gold in the fornace, euen so doth the Lord proue the hertes. A wycked body holdeth muche of * Who so laugheth the poore to scorne blasphemeth his maker: and he that is glad of another mans hurte, shall not be unpunished. Chyldrens choldre are a woe: they vnto the elders, and the fathers are the honour of the choldren. An eloquent speech becommeth not a foole, a dissembling mouth also besemeth not a prince. Liberalitie is a precious stone vnto hym that hath it, for wheresoeuer he becommeth, he prospereth. Who so couereth another mans offence seeketh loue: but he that discloseth the faulte, setteth frendes at variance. One reprove onely doeth more good to hym that hath vnderstandyng, then an. C. stripes vnto a foole. A seditious person seeketh myschiese, but a cruel messenger shalbe sent agaynst him. It were better to come agaynst a theefe were robbed of her whelpes, then agaynst a foole in his folynesse. * Who so rewardeth euell for good, & plage shall not depart fro his house. He that soweth discord & stryfe, is lyke one that diggeth vp a water brooke: but an open enemy is lyke the water that breaketh out & runneth abroad. The Lorde hateth as well hym that iustifieth the vngodly, as hym that condemneth the innocent. What helpe it to geue a foole money in his hand, when as he hath no minde to be wysdome? He is a frende that alway loueth, and in aduersitye a man shall knowe who is his brother. Who so promyseth by the hand, and is swere for another, he is a foole.

He that loueth strife, beliteth in synne: and who so setteth his doze to hye, seeketh after a fall. Who so hath a froward hert obtayneth no good: & he that hath an ouerthwart tonge, shall fall into myschiese. An vnwise body bringeth hym selfe into sorowe, and the father of a foole can haue no ioye. * A merie herte maketh a lusty age, but a sorowfull minde dryeth vp the bones. The vngodly takerth giftes out of the bosome, to wrest the wayes of iudgement. * Wysdome shyneth in the face of hym that hath vnderstandyng, but the eyes of foolles wader thorowout al lades. An vndiscrete sonne is a grese vnto his father, and an heuynesse vnto his mother that bare hym. To punish the innocent, & to smite & princes & geue true iudgement are both euell. * He is wysse and discrete, that tempereth his wordes: and he is a man of vnderstandyng, that maketh much of his spytte. Yea a very foole (when he holdeth his tonge) is counted wysse, and to haue vnderstanding, when he shutteth his lippes.

The. xviij. Chapter.

VWho so hath pleasure to sow discord, pyketh a quarrell in every thyng. A foole hath no delite in vnderstanding, but only in those thyngs, wherein his hert reioyseth. Wher vngodlynes is, there is also disdayne: & so there foloweth shame & dishonour. The wordes of a mans mouth are lyke depe waters, and the wel of wisdom is lyke a full streame. It is not good to regarde the personne of the vngodly, or to put backe the ryghteous in iudgement. A foolles lippes are euer brayling, & his mouth prouoketh vnto battayle. A foolles mouth is his owne destruccio, and his lippes are the snare for his owne soule. The wordes of a sclauderer are verpe woundes, & go thorow vnto the inmost partes of his body. Who so is slouthful and slacke in his labour, is the brother of hym that is a master. The name of the Lorde is a strong castel, the ryghteous flieth vnto it, & shalbe saued. But the ryche mans goodes are his strong hold, yea he takerth them for an hye wall round aboute hym. After pryde cometh destruccio, and honoure after lowlines. * He that geueth sentence in a matter before he heare it, is a foole, and worthy to be confounded.

A good stomake dryueth away a mans disease, but when the spirit is vexed, who may abyde it? A wysse herte laboureth for knowledge, and a prudent eare seeketh vnderstandyng. Liberalitie byngeth a man to honoure and worship, and setteth hym amonge great men. The ryghteous accuseth hym selfe: spirit of al, if his neyghbour come, he shall fynde hym. The lot pacifyeth the variance, and parteth the myghty a sunder. The vnite of brethre is stronger then a castell, & they that holde together are lyke the bar of a palace. A mans bellye shalbe satisfied wyth the fruite of his owne mouth, and wyth the encrease of his lippes shall hee be fylled. Death & lyfe stande in the power of the tounge, he that loueth it, shall enioye the fruite thereof. Who so synneth a wyse, synneth: he a good thyng, and receyuerth an wholesome benefyte of the Lorde. The poore maketh supplicacion and prayeth mekely, but the ryche geueth a rough aunswere. A frende that delyteth in loue, doeth a man more frendshyppe, and sticketh faster vnto him, then a brother.

The. xix. Chapter.

Etter is the poore that lyueth godly, & the blasphemour that is but a foole. Where no discrecion is, ther the soul is not wel: & who so is swift on fote, stumblith hastily. Folyshnesse maketh a man to go out of his waye, and the is his hert vnpatient agaynst the Lorde. Riches make manye frendes, but the poore is forsaken of his owne frendes. A false witness shal not remayne unpunished, and he that speaketh lyes, shal not escape. The multitude hangerth vpon greate men, and euery man fauoureth hym that geueth rewarde.

As for the poore, he is hated among all his brethre: yea, his owne frendes forsake hym, and he that geueth credence vnto wordes, getteth nothyng. He that is wysse, loueth his owne soule: and who so hath hath vnderstanding, shall prosper. A false witness shall not remain unpunished, & he that speaketh lies shall perish. Delicate ease becometh not a foole, much more vnseemly is it, a bond man to haue the rule of princes. A wise man putteth of displeasure, & it is bys honour to let some fautes passe. The kinges disfaour is like the roaringe of a Lyon, but bys frendshipp is lyke the dewe vpon the grasse. An vn-discrete son is the heuines of bys father, and a brabylng wyfe is lyke the top of an house, where thowme it is euer drop-ping. House and ryches may a man haue by the heritagage of bys elders, but a discrete woman, is the gyfte of the Lorde.

Slouthfulness bringeth slepe, and an ydel soule shall suffer hunger. Who so kepeth the commaundemente, kepeth bys owne soule: but he that regardeth not bys way, shall dye. He that hath vytye vpon þ pore, lendeth vnto the Lorde: and loke what he layeth oute, it shall be payed hym agayne. Chastite thy sonne whyle ther is hope, but lette not thy soule be moued to slepe hym. For greate wrath bringeth harme, there-fore let hym go, and so mayst thou teache hym more nourtoure. D geue eare vnto good counsayll, and bee contente to be re- sourned, that thou mayst be wise here af- ter.

There are manye deuises in a mans hert, neuertheles the counsaill of the Lorde shall stande. It is a mans worshipp to do good, and better it is to bee a poore man, then a dissembler. The feare of the Lorde preserveth the lyfe, yea it geueth plente- ousnes, whout the vystraciõ of any plage. A mouthfull body shutteth bys hand into bys bosom, so that he can not put it to his mouth. * If thou smitest a scozeful per- son, the ignorant shall take better hede: & if thou reprove one that hath vnder- standing, he will be the wiser. He that hur- teth bys father, or shutteth oute bys mo- ther, is a shamefull & an vnworthi son. My sonne heare nomore the doctrine that lea- deth the away from the wordes of vnder- standing. A faulse witness laugheth iud- gemēt to scozne, and the mouth of the un- godly eateth by wyckednes. Punyshmen- tes are ordayned for the scozefull, & stry- pes for fooles backes.

The. xx. Chapter.

Vine is a voluptuous thyng, & drin- kes causeth sedicion: who so de- lyreth therein, shall neuer be wise.

The kyng oughte to bee feared as þ roaring of a Lyon, who so prouoketh hym vnto anger, offendeth agaynst bys owne soule. It is a mans honoure to kepe hym selfe from stryfe, but they that haue plea- sure in brawling, are fooles euery one. A mouthfull bodye shall not go to plowe for colde, therefore shall he go a beggynge in Sommer, and haue nothinge. Wyse coun- sail in the hert of man is lyke a water in þ depe of the earth: but he that hath vnder-standing, bringeth it forth. Manye there be that are called good doers, but where shall one fynde a true saythfull mā? Who so leadeth a godly and an innocent lyfe, happye shall bys children be whom he lea- ueth behind hym. A kyng that sitteth in iudgement, and loketh well aboute hym, byueth a waye all euell. * Who can saye: my hert is cleane, I am innocēt frō sinne? To vse twoo maner of weyghtes, or twoo maner of measures, boeth these are abho- minable vnto the Lorde. A childe is knowē by bys conuersaciõ, whether bys workes be pure and ryght. As for the hearinge of the eare and the syghte of the eye, the lord hath made them boeth.

Delyste not thou in slepe, lest thou come vnto pouertie: but open thyne eyes, and þ shalt haue bread ynough. It is naught, It is naught (saye men) when they haue it, but when it is gone, they geue it a good word. A mouth of vnderstanding is more worth then golde, many preecious stones, and costlye iewels. Take bys garmente that is suetie for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnkowen mans sake. Euery man lyketh the bread that is gotten wyth disceate, but at the laste bys mouth shall be fylled wyth grauell.

Whowme counsayll the thynges that men deuise go forward: and wyth dyscre- tion ought warres to be taken in hande. Medle not wyth hym that bewrayeth se- cretes, and is a sleaunderer, & disceaueth wyth bys lypes. Who so curseth bys fa- ther & mother, bys lyght shall be put oute in the myddest of darkenes. The heritage that cometh to hastily at the fyrst, shall not be praysed at the ende.

Saye not thou: I will recompense e- uell, but put thy truste in the Lorde, and he shall defende the. The Lorde abhorreth two maner of weyghtes, and a faulse ba- lance is an euell thyng. The Lorde or- deth euery mans goynges, for what is he that vnderstandeth bys owne wayes? It is a snare for a man to blaspheme þ which is holy, and then to go about wyth bowes. A wyse kyng destroyeth the vngodly, and bringeth the whele ouer the. The lanterne of the Lorde is the breath of man, & goeth thowme all the inwarde partes of the bo- dy. Mercy and saythfulness preserue the kyng, & wyth louynge kyndnes bys seate is holden by. The strength of yowngmen is theyr worshyppe, and a gray head, is an honoure vnto the aged. Woundes byrue a mate euell, and so doo stryppes the inward partes of the bodye.

The. xxi. Chapter.

The kinges hert is in þ had of þ Lorde, & lyke as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whether soeuer he will. Euery mā thinketh his owne way to be right, but the lord iudgeth the bettes. To doo righteousness and iudgement is more acceptable to þ Lorde then sacrifice.

A presumptuous loke, a proude stomake, & the laterne of the vngodly, is synne. The deuices of one þ is diligente, bypunge plentifulnes: but he that is vnadvised, cometh vnto pouertie. Who so hoodeth by ryches wth the disceatfulnes of his tōg, he is a foole, and lyke vnto them that seke their owne death. The robberies of the vngodlye shalbe theyr owne destruction, for they wold not do the thyng þ was ryght.

B The wayes of the frowarde are straunge, but the workes of hym that is cleane, are ryght. * It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe, then wth a brawnyng woman in a wyde house.

The soule of the vngodlye wytheth enel, and hath no pytie vpon hys neybour. * When the scoornfull is punyshed, the ignorant take the better hede: and when a wyse man is warned, hee wyll receaue the more vnderstandinge. The righteous enfourmeth the house of the vngodlye, but the vngodly go on styl after theyre owne wyckednesse. Who so stoppeth hys eare at the crying of the pore, he shal crye hym selfe and not be hearde. A pryncereward pacifyeth displeasure, and a gyft in the bosome stylleth furyousnes.

The iust delyterh in doinge the thyng that is right, but the workers of wyckednes abhorre the same. The mā that wandereth oute of the waye of wysdome, shal remayne in the congregacion of the dead. He that hath the pleasure in bankets, shal be a pore man: Who so delyteth in wyne and delicacies, shal not be riche. The vngodlye shalbe geuen for the ryghteous, & the wycked for the iuste. * It is better to dwell in a wyldernes, then wth a chydng and angry woman. In a wyse mans house ther is greate treasure, and plentifulnesse, but a folysh bodye spendeth vp all. Who so foloweth ryghteousnesse and mercy, synnderth both lyfe, ryghteousnes and honoure. A wyse man wynerh the ctype of the myghty, & as for strength that they trust in, he byngeth it downe. Who so kepeth hys mouth and hys tong, the same kepeth hys soule from troubles. He that is proude and presumptuous, is called a scoornfull man, whyche in wrath darre worke maliciouslye. The voluptuousnes of the flouthfull is hys owne death, for hys handes wyll not laboure. Hee coueteth and desyret (a) all the day long, but the righteous is alwaye geutinge, and kepeth nothyng backe. * The sacryfice of the vngodly is abhominacion, for they offer the thyng that is gotten wth wyckednes. A false wytnesse shal perishe, but he þ wyll be content to heare, shal alway haue power to speake hym selfe. An vngodlye man goeth for the rashely, but the iust resourmeth hys owne waye. * There is no wysdome, there is no vnderstandinge, there is no counsell agaynst the Lorde.

The. xxi. Chapter.

A * Good name is more worthe than the great riches, & louing fauour is better then syluer and golde.

Whether ryches or pouertie doo mete vs, it cometh al of god.

A wyse manne seeth the plage and byderh hym selfe, but the folysh go on styl & are punyshed. The ende of lololynes, and the feare of God, is ryches, honoure, prosperitie, and healeth. Speres and suares are in the way of the frowarde, but he that wyll kepe hys soule, lette hym flye from suche.

If þ teachest a chyld in hys youth what way he shulde go, he shal not leaue it whē he is olde. The ryche ruleth the poore, and the borower is seruaunte to the lender.

He that soweth wyckednes shal reape sorrow, and the rod of hys plage shal destroye hym. * A louing eye shalbe blessed, for he geueth of hys bread vnto the poore. Caste oute the scoornfull man, & so shal stepse go out wth hym, yea variatice and sclander shal cease. Who so delyteth to be of a cleane hert, & of gracious lyppes, the kynge shal be hys frende. The eyes of the Lorde perserue knowledge, but as for the wordes of the despitfull, he byngeth the to naughtie. The flouthfull bodye sayeth: ther is a Lion wthout, I myght be slayn in the strete.

The mouth of an harlot is a depe pyt, wher in he fallerh that the lorde is angrye wthal. Foolyshnes sticketh in the hert of the lad, but the rod of correcciō on dryueth it awaye. Who so doth a pore man wrong to increase hys owne ryches, geueth comenly vnto the ryche, and at the last cometh to pouertie hym selfe. Say son, bowe down thine eare, & heken vnto the words of wysdome, applye thy mynde vnto my doctryne: for it is a pleasaunte thyng, if thou kepe it in thyne herte, and practyse it in thy mouth: that thou mayst alwaye put thy truste in the Lorde. Haue not I warned the very oft wth counsell & learninge: that I myght shew the truth and that thou wth the veryte myghtest answer them that lay any thyng agaynst the? Se that thou robbe not the poore because he is weake, & oppresse not the simple in iudgement: for the Lorde hym selfe wyll defende theyr cause, and do violence vnto the that haue vled violence. Make no frendshyp wth an angrye wyful man, and kepe no company wth the furious: lest thou learne hys wayes, and receaue harme vnto thy soule. Be not thou one of them that bynd theyr hand vpon promise, & are swettye for dette: for if thou hast no thyng to paye, he shal take away thy bed fro vnder þ. Thou shalt not remoue þ lade marke, which thy fore elders haue sette.

Seest thou not, that they whyche be diligent in theyr busynes, stande before kyngs and not among the simple people?

My son, geue eate and be wyse, so shal thyne herte prospere in the way. Kepe no company wth wyne bybbers & riotous eaters of fleshe, for suche as be dronkarde and riotous shal come to pouertie, and he that is geuen to much slepe, shal go wth a ragged cote. Labour for to get a truth: sell not away wysdome, n<sup>or</sup> t<sup>o</sup>ut and vnderstandynge (for a ryghteous father is maruelous glad of a wyse son, and delp<sup>er</sup>eth in hym) so shal thy father be glad, & thy mother that bare the, shal reioyse.

My son, geue me thyne hert, & lette thine eyes haue pleasure in my wayes. For an hore is a depe graue, and an harlot is a natow pyt. Shelykerh lyke a these, and those that be not aware, she byngeth vnto her. Wher is woe? wher is sorow? wher is strepe? wher is byawynge? wher are wounds wout cause? wher be red eyes? Euen among those that be euer at the wine, and seke out wher the best is. Loke not vpon the wyne, howe red it is, and what a coloure it geueth in the glasse. It goeth doune softly, but at the laste it byteth like a serpent, and styngeth, as an Adder. So shal thyne eyes loke vnto straunge women, & thyne herte shal muse vpon frowarde thynges. Yea thou shalt bee as though thou slepest in the myddest of the sea, or vpon the toppe of the mast. They wounded me (shalt thou saye) but it hath not hurte me, they smote me, but I felt it not. When I am well wakened, I wyl go to the bynke agayne.

The. xxiiij. Chapter.

Be not thou gelous ouer wycked men, and desyre not thou to be among them. For they herte ymagineth to do hurte, and they lyp<sup>pe</sup>s talke of mischete. Thowth the wysdome, an house shal be buylded, & wth understanding it shal be set vp. Thowth discreci<sup>o</sup>n shal the chambers be fylled wth all costely & pleasante ryches. A wyse man is stronge, yea a man of vnderstandinge is better the he that is myghty of strenght. For wth discreci<sup>o</sup>n must warres be taken in hand, and wher as are many that can geue counsell, there is a victory. Wysdome is an hie thyng, yea euen to the foole, for he (a) dare not open hys mouth in the gate. He that ymagineth myschete, maye well be called an vngracious personne. The thought of the folye is synne, and the scornfull is an abhominacion vnto men. (b) If thou bee ouersene and neglygente in tyme of nede, then is thy strenght but smal.

Delpuct them that go vnto death, and are led away to be slayne, & be not neglygent therein. If thou wylt saye: I knewe not of it: Thynekst thou that he whych made the hertes, doth not consyder it? & that he whych regardeth thy soule, seeth it not? Shalt not he receyue euery man accordyng to hys woikes? My sonne, thou eatest hony & the swete hony combe, because it is good and swete in thy mouth. nor rayne in harueste: euen so is wor-dyppe vnsemye for a soole. Lyke as the byrd and the swalowe take theyr flight, and flye here & there, so & curse that is geuen in wayne, shall not lyghte vpon a man. Vnto the horse belongeth a whyp, to the asse a bydle, & a rod to the foolles back.
Geue not the soole an answer after his folpynes, lest thou becom lyke vnto him:
but make the soole an answer to his fo-lpynes, lest he be wyse in his owne con-ceite. He is lame of his fete, yea drunken is he in vanitye, that comitteth any thyng to a soole. Lyke as it is an vnsemye thyng to haue legs, and yet to halt, euen so is a parable in the foolles mouth. He that setteth a soole in hye dignitie, that is eue as yfa man byd cast a precious stone vpon gallous. A parable in a foolles mouth is lyke a thorne that pryketh a dronke man in the hande. A man of experiance discerneth all thynges well, but who so byrth a soole, byrth such one as wyll take no vnde.

can perceyue hym well ynoughe. When ryghteous menne are in prosperitie, then both honour flourish: but when the vngod-ly come vp, the state of men chaungeth. He that bydeth hys synnes, shall not prosper:
but who so knowledgeth them and forsaketh them, shall haue mercy.

Wayes to thynke him
wise becaus
he is ryche.

¶ Wel is hym that staderth alway in awe: as for him that hardeneth hys hert, he shall fall into myschance. As ke as a roaring lion, and an hungry beare, even so is an vngod-ly prince ouer the poore people.

¶ Whether the prince is without understandyng, ther is great oppression and wrong:
but if he be suche one as hateth couetousnes, he shall longe raygne. He that by vpolence sheddeth any mans bloude, shall be a rennagate vnto hys graue, and no mā shall be able to succour hym. Who so leadech a godly and an innocent lyfe, shall be safe: but he that goeth feowarde wayes, shall once haue a fall. ¶ He that tylleth hys land, shall haue plenteousnes of bread: but he that soweth idlenes, shall haue pouerty inough.
A saythful man is greatly to be commended, but he that maketh to much hast for to be ryche, shall not be vngylt. To haue respect of persons in iudgement, is not good:
And why? he wyl do wrong, yea, euen for a piece of breade.

¶ He that wyl be ryche al to soone, hath an euyleye: and consydereth not that pouerty shall come vpon hym. He that rebuketh a man, shall fynde more fauour at the last, the he that flattereth him. Who so robbeth his father and mother, and saith it is no synne, the same is lyke a murderer. He that is of a proud stomacke, steryth vp styffe, but he that putteth hys trust in the Lord, shall be wel fedde. He that trusteth in his owne hert is a foole: but he that dealeth wylfely, shall be safe. He that geueth vnto the poore, shall not want: but he that turneth away hys eyes fro such as be in necessite, shall suffer great pouerty hym selfe. When the vngodly ar-come vp, men are sayne to hyde them sel-ues: but when they perishe, the ryghteous increase.

The xxx. Chapter

¶ He that is styfnecked and wyl not be reformed, shall sodenly be destroyed wthout helpe. Whether the righteous haue the ouer hande, the people are in pros-periti: but when the vngodly beareth rule, the people mourne. Who so loueth wysdō, maketh hys father a glad manne: but he that kepeth harlots, spendeth awaye that he hath. Wth true iudgemente the kynge letterh vp the land, but if he be a man that taketh gyfres, he turtherh it upside downe.
Who so flattereth hys neyghbour, layeth a nette for hys feete. The synne of the wtked, is hys owne snare, but the ryghteous shal be glad and reioyce.

¶ The ryghteous consydereth the cause of the poore, but the vngodly regardeth no understandyng. Wicked people byng a cypre in decay, but wyse men set it vp agapne. If a wyse man goo to lerne wth a foole (whether he dealeth wth hym frendly or roughly) he getteth no rest. The bloude thysse hare the ryghteous but the luste seke hys soule.

A foole poureth out hys spirite al together, but a wyse man kepeth it in tyl afterward. If a prince delyte in lyes, al his seruauntes are vngodly. The poore and the lender mete together, the Lord lyghteneth both they eyes. The seate of the kynge that saythfully iudgeth the poore, shall conty-nue sure for euermore.

The rod and correccion mynyshter wyldome, but if a childe be not looked vnto, he byngeth hys mother to shame. When the vngodly come vp, wickednes increaseth: but the righteous shall se they sal. Putt out thy sonne wth correccio, and he shall comfort the, yea, he shall doo thee good at thyn hert. Whether no prophet is, there the people perishe: but wel is hym that kepeth the law. A seruaunt wyl not be the better for wordes, for though he understand, yet wyl he not regarde them.

If thou seest a manne that is hasty to speake vnadvised, thou mayest truste a foole more then hym. He that delycatelpe byngeth vp hys seruaunte from a chyld, shall make hym hys master at lengthe. An angry man stirreth vp styffe, and he that beareth euill wyl in hys mynde, doth much euill. After pryde cometh a fall, but a lowlye spyrit byngeth great wothyppe.
Who so kepeth compaignie wth a chyfe, hateth his owne soule: he beareth blasphem-yes, and telleth it not fourthe. He that feareth menne, shall haue a fall: but who so putteth hys trust in the Lord, shall come to honoure. Many there be that seeke the princes fauour, but euery mans iudgement cometh from the Lord. The ryghteous abhorreth the vngodly: but as for those that be in the ryghte waye, the wicked hate them.

As for cattell and shepe, I had more substance of them, then al they that wer before me in Ierusalem:

I gas

I gathered syluer and gold together, euen a treasure of kynges and landes.

I prouided me fingers & women, which could play of instrumentes, to make me myrth and pastyme. I gat me drynkyng cuppes also and glasses. Shortely, I was greater and in more worshipp, then all my predecessours in Iherusalem. For wysdome remyned with me, and looke whatsoeuer mine eyes desyred, I let them haue it: and wherin soeuer my hert dellyted or had any pleasure, I withheld it not from it. Thus my hert reioysed in al that I did, and this I tooke for the porcion of al my trauayle. But when I consydered all the woorkes that my handes had wrought, and all the laboures that I had taken therein, lo, all was but vanitie and veracion of mynde, and nothyng of any value vnder the sunne. Then turned I me to consyder wysdome, errour, and foolysnes: (for what is he among men, that myght be compared to me the kyng in such woorkes?) and I saw that wysdome excelleth foolysnes, as farre as lyghte dothe darknes. * For a wyse man beareth his eyes about in his head, but the foole goeth in the darknes. I perceyued also that they both hadde one ende. Then thought I in my mynde: If it happen vnto y foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour any more for wysdome? So I confessed wythin my hert, that this also was but vanyty. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the foolyshe, and al the dayes for to come, shalbe forgotten, yea the wyse man dyeth as wel as the foole. Thus beganne I to be weary of my lyfe, in so much that I could awayne wyth nothyng that is done vnder the Sunne, for al was but vanyty and veracion of mynde: Yea I was weary of al my labour, whych I had taken vnder the Sunne, because I shoulde be sayne to leaue them to another man that cometh after me: for who knoweth whether he shall be a wyse man or a foole? And yet shal he be Lord of al my labours, whych I wyth such wysdome haue taken vnder the Sunne. Is not this a vayne thyng?

So I turned me to refrayne my mynde from al such trauaile as I toke vnder the Sunne, for so much as a man shoulde wey bym selfe wyth wysdome, wyth vnderstandyng and oportunitie, and yet be sayne to leaue his laboures vnto another, that neuer sweate for them. This is also a vayne thyng and a great mysery. For what getteth a man of al the labour and trauaile of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the sunne, but heynnes, sorowe and dysquyetnes all the dayes of his lyfe? In so much that his hert can not rest in the nyght. Is not this also a vayne thyng? Is it not better then, for a man to eat and drinke, and his soule to be mery in his labour? Yea I saw that this also was a gift of God: For who may eat, drinke, or drynge any thyng to passe wythoute hym? And why? he getteth vnto man what it pleaseth hym, whether it be wysdome, vnderstandyng, or gladnes. But vnto the synner he getteth werines and sorrow, that he maye gather and heape together the thyng that afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto hym whom it pleaseth god. This is now a vayne thyng, yea a very dysquyetnes and veracion of mynde.

The.iii. Chapter.
Al thynges come in theyr tyme, and passe away in theyr tyme.

Every thyng hath a tyme, yea all that is vnder the heauen, hath his conueniente reason. There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to plucke vp the thyng that is planted.

A tyme to slay, & a tyme to make whole: A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde vp:

A tyme to weepe, and a tyme to laughe:

A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to dafice:

A tyme to cast away stoncs, and a tyme to gather stoncs together:

A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracyng.

A tyme to wyne, and a tyme to lese:

A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spend:

A tyme to cut in pyeces, & a tyme to cōm together.

A tyme to kepe sylence, & a tyme to speake:

A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.

A tyme of war, and a tyme of peace:

What hath a man els (that doth anye thyng) but weynnes and laboure? For as touchyng the trauaile and carefulnes whych God hath geuen vnto men, I see that he hath geuen it them, to be exercysed in it. Al this hath he ordayned maruelous goodly: to euery thyng in his due tyme. He hath plated ignorance also in y herres of men, that they shoulde not fynde oute the ground of his woorkes, whych he doth fro the begynnyng to the ende. So I perceyued, that in these thynges ther is nothyng better for a man, the to be mery, and to do wel so long as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and drinketh, yea whatsoeuer a man enioyeth of all his laboure, the same is a gyft of God. I consydered also that what soeuer God doth, it continueth for euer, and that nothyng can be put vnto it, nor taken from it: and that God doth it to the intent that men shoulde fear hym. The thyng that hath bene, is now: and the thyng that is for to come, hath bene afore tyme: for God restorcth agayne the thyng that was past.

Moreouer, I saw vnder the sunne vngodlynes in the stead of iudgemēt, and iniquitie in stead of righteousnes. Then thought I in my mynde: God shal separat the righteous from the vngodly, and then shall be the tyme and iudgemēt of al counceils and woorkes. I comened wythin myne own hert also concernyng the chyldren of men, how God hath chosen them, and yet letteth the appeare appeare as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto me as it doth vnto beastes, and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yea, they haue both ene manner of byrth, so that (in this) a man hath no preeminence aboue a beaste, but all are subdued vnto vanitie. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of duste, so shall they all turne vnto duste agayne. Who knoweth * the spryde of man that goeth vpwarde, and þ breath of the beaste that goeth doune into the earth? Wherefore I perceiue that ther is nothyng better for a man, then to be ioyful in hys labour, for that is his portion. But who wil bring him to se the thing that shal come after hym?

The.iii. Chapter.

The miseries of the innocent. The superfluous labours of men. The chylde that is poore and wyle.

S I turned me, and considered all the vyolent wrong that is done vnder the sunne: and behold, the teares of such as were oppressed, and ther was no man to comfort them, or that woulde deliuer and defende them from the vyolence of the oppressours. Wherefore I iudged those that are dead, to be more happy then such as be alpyue: yea, hym that is yet vnborne, to be better at ease then they both, because he seeth not the miserable workes that are done vnder the sunne.

Agayne, I saw that al trauaile and diligence of labour was hated of euery man. Thys is also a vayne thyng, and a vexacion of mynde. The foole foloweth hys handes together, and eateth vp hys owne flesh. One handfull (sayth he) is better to byrest, then both the handes full wyth labour and trauaile. Agoreouer I turned me, and behold yet another vanyty vnder the sunne. Ther is one man, no mo but hym selfe alone, vasyng neyther child nor brother: yet is ther no end of hys careful trauaile, hys eyes can not be satisfied wyth ryches, (yet doth he not remeber hym selfe, and say: ) For whom do I take suche trauaile? For whose pleasure do I thus consume away my life? This is also a vayne and myserable thing. Therfore two are better then one, for they may well entoye the profyt of thei labour. If one of them fall, hys companyon healeth hym vp agayne: But two is hym that is alone: for if he fall, he hath not another to helpe hym vp. Agayne, when two slepe together, they are warme: but how can a body be warme alone? One may be overcome, but two may make resistance: A thre fold cable is not lyghly broken. A poore chylde beyng wyle, is better then an olde kynge, that doteth, and can not beware in tyme to come. Some one cometh oute of prison, and is made a kynge: and another whyche is borne in the kynngdome, cometh vnto pouertye. And I perceyued that all men lyuyng vnder the sunne, go wyth the second chylde, that cometh vp in the steede of the other.

As for the people that haue bene before hym, and that come after him, they are innumerable: yet is not thei for the greater thowth hym. This is also a vayne thyng and a vexacion of mynde. When thou comest into the house of God, kepe thy foote (a) and draw nie (b) that thou mayest hear: that is better then the offerings of foolles, for they know not what euyl they do.

The.v. Chapter.

A monicion to beware of rage communcacion. We oughte not to maruell at the oppression of the poore. The courteous is not satisfied wyth hys ryches.

BE not hasty wyth thy mouth, and let not thyne heart speake any thing rashly before God. For God is in heauen, and thou vpon earth, therefore let thy wordes be fewe. For wher much carefulnes is, ther are many dreames: and wher many wordes are, ther men may heare foolles.

* If thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slack to performe it: As for solpysh vowe, he hath no pleasure in them. If thou promyse any thing, pay it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, then þ thou shouldest promyse, and not pay. Use not thy mouth to cause thy flesh for to synne, that thou say not before the aungel: my foolshynes is in the faulte. For then God wyl be angrie at thy voyce, and destroye all the workes of thyne handes. And why? wher as are many dreames and many wordes, ther are also diuerse vanities: but loke that thou fear God. If thou seest the poore to be oppressed and wrongfully dealt wyth al, so that equitie and ryght of the lawe is wasted in the land: maruel not thou at such iudgement, for one great man keperh touch wyth another, and the myghty help them selues together. The whole land also wyth the fieldes and al that is therein, is in subiection and bondage vnto þ kynge. He that loueth money, wyl neuer be satisfied wyth money: and who so delieterh in ryches, shal haue no profite thereof. It is not thys also a vayne thing? Wher as much ryches is, there are many also that spend the away: And what pleasure more hath he that posselth the, sauyn that he may looke vpon them wyth hys eyes? A labourynge manne slepeth sweetely, whether it be lytle or much that he eateth: but the aboundaunce of the rich wyl not suffer hym to slepe.

Yet is ther a sore plage, whyche I haue seene vnder the sunne (namely) ryches kept to the hurt of hym that hath them in possession. For oft tymes they petish wyth his great misery and trouble: and if he haue a chylde, it getteth nothyng. * Lyke as he came naked oute of hys mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, and carryeth nothyng away wyth him of al hys labour. Thys is a myserable plage, that he shal go awaye euen as he came. What helperh it hym then, that he hath laboured in the wynde?

The comen translation redeth, whether the spirit of a man go vpwarde & the breath of a beaste downward wynde: Al the dayes of hys lyfe also muste he eate in the darcke, wyth great carefulnes, spckenesse and sorowe. Therefore me thyvke it a better and fayrer thyng a man to eate and drynke, and to be refreshed of al hys labour that he taketh vnder þe sunne, al the dayes of hys lyfe, which god geueth hym, for thys his porcion. For vnto whom soeuer God geueth ryches, goodes, and power, he geueth it hym to enioy it, to take it for his porcion, and to be refreshed of hys labour: thys is now the gyfte of God. For he thynketh not much howe longe he shall lyue, for so much as God fylleth hys heart wyth gladnesse.

The. vi. Chapter.

The mystry of the rich and couetous. The difference of a foole and a wyle man.

Ther is yet a plage vnder the Sunne, as it is a general thyng among men: when God geueth a manne ryches, goodes, and honour, so that he wanteth no thyng of al that hys heart can desyre: and yet god geueth hym not leaue to enioy the same, but an other manne spendeth them. Thys is a vayne thyng, and a myserable plage. If a man beget an hundred chylde, and lyue many yeres, so that hys dayes are many in number, and yet can not enioy hys good, neyther be buryed: as for him I say, that an vntimely byrth is better the he. For he cometh to naught, and goeth hys way into darckenes, and hys name is forgotten. Moreover, he seeth not the sun, and knoweth of no rest neyther here nor ther: Yea though he lyued two thousand yeres, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not al to one place: Al the labour that a man taketh, is for hym selfe, and yet hys desyre is neuer fylled after hys mynde. For what hath the wyle more then the foole? What healeth he the poore, that he knoweth to walke before the lyupng? The syght of the eyes is better then that the soule should so departe awaye. Howebeit thys is also a vayne thyng, and a dysquyetenesse of mynde. What is more excellent then man? yet can he not in the last get the victorye of him that is myghtyer then he: A vayne thyng is it to cast out many wordes: but what hath a man els. The. vii. Chap. That which passeth our strengths and wits, ought we not to seke after.

Who knoweth what is good for man? lyving, in the dayes of hys vayne lyfe, which is but a shadow: Or who wyl tel a man what shal happen after hym vnder the Sunne.

A good name is more worth then a precious opntment, and þe day of death is better then the day of byrth. It is better to go into an house of mourning, then into a banqueting house. For ther is the end of al man, and he that is liuing taketh it to herte. It is better to be sory then to laugh, for when the countenance is heuy, the heart is ioyfull. The heart of þe wise is in þe mourning house, but the heart of the foolish is in the house of mirth. It is better to geue ear to þe chastening of a wise man, then to heare the song of fooles. For þe laughing of fooles is like the cracking of thornes vnder a por: And that is but a vaine thing. Who so doth wrong, maketh a wise man to go out of his witte, and destroyeth a gentle heart. The ende of a thing is better then the beginning. The patient of spirit is better then the hie minded. Be not hastily angry in thy mind, for wrath resteth in þe bosom of a foole. Say not thou: what is the cause þe dayes of þe old time were better then they þe now? for þe were no wise questio. Wisdome is better then riches yea much more worth then þe eye sight. For wisdom beledeth as wel as money, and the excellent knowledge and wisdom geueth life vnto him that hath it in possession. Consider the worke of God, howe that no man can make the thing straight which he maketh crooked. Use wel the tyme of prosperitie, and remember the tyme of misfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can fynde nothing els.

These two things also haue I considered in the tyme of vauitye: that the iust man perissheth for his righteousnes sake, and þe vngodly liueth in hys wickednes. Therefore be thou neither to righteous nor ouerwise, that thou perissh not: be neither to vnrightheous also, nor to foolish, lest þe be before thy tyme. It is good for thee to take hold of this, & not to let that go out of thy hand. For he that feareth God, shal scape them al. Wisdome geueth more courage vnto þe wise, then ten mighty men of the citie: for ther is not one iust vpon the earth, þe dothe good, and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery word that is spokē, lest thou hear thy seruant curse the: for thyne own herte knoweth that thou thy selfe also haste oft tymes spoken euyl by other men. All these things haue I proued because of wysdome, for I thought to be wise: but she went farther from me then she was before, yea and so depe that I myght not reach vnto her. I applyed my mynde also vnto knowledge, and to seeke oute science, wysdome, and vnderstandynge: to knowe the foolishnes of the vngodly, and the errour of doctryne fooles. And I founde, that a woman is bytterer then death: for she is a very angyle, her hearte is a net, and her handes are cheynes. Who so pleasech God shal scape from her, but the synner wyl be taken wyth her.

Behold (sayth the Preacher) thys haue I diligently searched out and proued, that I might come by knowledge: which as yet I seke and fynde not. Among a thousande men I haue found one, but not one woman among al. Lo this only haue I found, that God made man iuste and ryghte, but they seke dyuerse sorcelies, wher as no man hath wysdome and vnderstandynge, to geue answer thereunto.

The. viii. Chapter.

The kynges commaundement ought to be obeyed. Gladnes is one of the chyefe thynges vnder the sunne.

Verily maketh a mans face to shyne but malice putteth it out of fauour. Kepe the kyngs commaundement (I warne the) and þo that thou hast made vnto God. Be not hasty to go out of hys sight, and se thou continue in no euill thing: for what soeuer it pleaseth hym, that doth he. Lyke as when a kyng geueth a charge, hys commaundement is myghty: Euen so who may saye vnto hym, what doest thou? Who so kepeth the commaundement, shal fele no harme: but a wyse mā is bett dyscerueth tyme and maner. For euery thyng weyl haue oportunitie and iudgement, and this is the thyng that maketh men full of carefulesnes and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come, for who wyl tel hym? Neyther is ther any manne that hath power ouer the spyrte, to kepe styl the spyrte, nor to haue any power in þe tyme of death: it is not he also þe can make an end of the battail, neyther may vngodlynes deliuer hym that medleth wyth all.

All these thynges haue I considered, and applyed my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the sunne: howe ouer mā hath lordship vpon another to his owne harme. For I haue oft sene the vngodlye broughte to theyr graues, and fallen downe from the hye and glorypous place: in so muche that they wer forgotten in the cite, wher they were had in so hye and great tribulacion. This is also a vaine thyng. Because now that euyl works are not hastily punyshed, the hert of man geueth hym selfe ouer vnto wyckednes. But though an euyl person offend an hundred times, and haue a longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shal go wel with them that feare God, because they haue hym before his eyes. Againe, as for the vngodly, it shal not be wel wyth hym, neyther shal he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadow, so shal he be that feareth not god. Yet is ther a vanitie vpon earth: Ther be lust mē, vnto whō it happeneth as though they had the works of the vngodly. Againe, ther be vngodly, wyth whome it goeth as though they had the works of the ryghteous. This me thinke also a vaine thing. Therefore I commende gladnes, because a man hath no better thyng vnder the sun, then to eate and drynke, and to be merie: for that shal he haue of hys laboure of the dayes of the lyfe, whych God geueth hym vnder the sunne. When I applyed my mynde to learne wysdom, and to know the trauayle that is in the world (and that of such a fashō, that I suffered not mine eyes to slepe neyther daye nor nyght) I vnderstode of al the works of God, that it is not possible for a man to attain vnto the works that are done vnder the sunne: and though he be slowe hys labour to seeke the out, yet can he not teache vnto them: yea though a wyse man woulde vnder take to know them, yet myght he not synde them.

The. ix. Chapter.

A man wotteth not, by the ryghteousnes of hys own workes, whether he be worthy of loue or hate. A man ought to lyue merlye wyth hys wyfe. A prayse of wysdom.

For al these thynges purposed I in my mynde to seke out. The ryghteous and wyse, yea and they: (a) workes also are in the hand of God: and (b) ther is no man knoweth eyther the loue or hate of the thyng that he hath before hym. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: It goeth wyth the ryghteous, as wyth the vngodlye, wyth the good and cleane, as wyth the vncleane: wyth hym that offereth, as wyth hym þe offereth not: lyke as it goeth wyth the vertuous, so goeth it also wyth the synner: As it happeneth vnto the perjured, so happeneth it also vnto hym that is afrayed to be forsworn. Among al thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne, this is a myserye, that it happeneth vnto all alyke. This is the cause also that the heartes of men are full of wyckednes, and mad foolshynes is in theyr hertes: as long as they lyue, vntyl they dye. And why? As longe as a man lyueth, he is careles: for a quicke dog (say they) is better then a dead lyon: for they that be lyuyng, knowe that they shal dye: but they that be dead, knowe nothyng, neyther deserue they anye more. For theyr memory all is forgotten, so that they be neither loued, hated, nor enuid, neyther haue they any more part in the world in all that is done vnder the sunne. Good thou thy waye then, eate thy breade wyth ioye, and drynke thy wyne wyth gladnes, for thy workes please God. (c) Let thy garments be alway wythe, and let thy head want none ornament. Use thy selfe to lyue so fully wyth thy wyfe whom thou louest, al the dayes of thy lyfe, which is but vaine, that God hath geuen the vnder the sunne, all the dayes of thy vanitie: for that is thy porcion in this life of al thy labour & trauayle that thou takest vnder the sun. What soeuer thou takest in hand to do, that dooe wyth al thy power: for among the deade, wher as thou goest vnto, there is neyther worke, counsell, knowledge, nor wysdome.

So I turned me vnto other thynges vnder the sunne, and I saw that in running, it helpeth not to be swift: in battayle, it helpeth not to be strong: in sedynge, it helpeth not to be wyse: to cyches, it helpeth not to be satel: to be had in fauour, it helpeth not to be cunning: but al lyeth in tyme and fortune. For a man knoweth not hys tyme, but like as the fyshes are taken wyth the angle, and as the byrdes are caught wyth the snare. Euen so are men taken in the perilous tyme, when it cometh sodenly vpon them. This wysdome haue I sene also vnder the sunne, and me thought it a great thing.

 the sunne hath shyned vpon me.

The voyce of the Synagoge.

For when my mothers childre had euyl vineyard. Thus was I fayre to keepe a vineyard, which was not myne owne.

The voyce of the Church to Christ.

 of Cedre tree, and our balkes of Cypresse.

The. ii. Chapter.

The voyce of Christ.

I am the floure of the fielde, and Lylpe of the valleys: as the Rose amonge the thorns, so is my loue among y<sup>e</sup> daughters.

The voyce of the church.

Lyke as the applettee among the trees of the wood, so is my beloued amonge the sonnes. My delyte is to syt vnder his shadow, for his fruit is swete vnto my throt.
 He bringeth me into hys wyne seller, & lo-ueth me speciallly wel. Refreshe me wyth grapes, & forte me wyth apples, for I am sicke of loue. His left hand lieth vnder my head, and his right hand embraceth me.

The voyce of Christ.

I charge you (O ye daughters of Ierusale) by the Roses and Hyndes of the field, that yee wake not by my loue, nor touch her tyl she be content her selfe.

The voyce of the Church.

We thinke I heare the voyce of my be-loued: lo, ther cometh he hoppynge vpon
 the mountaynes, and leapyng ouer the little hylles. My beloued is lyke a Roos, or a yong hart. Behold, he standeth behind our wal, he looketh in at the wyndow, and pepeth thorow the grate. My beloued answered and sayd vnto me.

The voyce of Christ.

O stande vp my loue, my doue, my beutyful, and come: for lo, the wynter is now past, and the raine is away and gone. The floures are come vp in the fielde, the cry-

(saith y<sup>e</sup> preacher) al is but plaine vanitie.

The same preacher was not wise alone, but taught the people knowledge also: he gaue good hede, sought out the ground and set forth manie parables. Hys dyligence was to fynd out acceptable words, & y<sup>e</sup>ghe scripture, and the wordes of truth. For the wordes of y<sup>e</sup> wyse are like prickes & naitles that go thorow, wherewith men are kept together: for they are geuen of one shepheard only. Therefore beware (my sonne) that aboue these thou make thee not manie and innumerable booke, nor take dyuerse doctrines in hand, to wey thy body wythall.

Let vs hear the conclusion of al things.
Feare God, and kepe his commaundemēt:
For that toucheth all men: For God shall iudge al workes, and secret thynges, whether they be good or euyl.

The end of the booke of the Preacher, otherwyse called Ecclesiastes.

The Ballet of Ballettes of Salomon: called in Latine, Lanticum Lanticorum.

The first Chapter.

That is the chefe & most excellent balette, as the saint of sain-
tes, y<sup>e</sup> kyng of kynges,
which is as much to say
after y<sup>e</sup> maner of speaking of the Hebrues, as the chiefe sayntes, the chefe kyng.
Wherefore
it is to be supposed, y<sup>e</sup>
my chamber.
We wyl be glad and reioyce amonge the
M. and fine
other songs (of whyche
iii. re. iiii d)
thys hath ben esteemed
and iudged
the chiefe &
principal.

A mystical deuyce of the spiritual and godly loue betwene Christ the spouse, and the church or congregacion hys spouse. Salomon made this Balade or song by hym selfe and hys wyfe the daughter of Pharaon, vnder the shadowe of hym selfe figurynge Christe, and vnder the person of hys wyfe the Church.

The voyce of the Church.

That thy mouth would geue me a kysse, for thy breastes are more pleasaunt the wyne, and that because of the good and pleasaunt sauour. Thy name is a swete smellynge oymment, therefore do the maidens loue the: yea that same moueth me also to runne after the.

The spouse to her companions.

The king hath brought me into his priuē chamber. We wyl be glad and reioyce in the, we thinke more of thy breastes then of wyne: wel is them that loue the.

The voyce of the church in persecution.

I am black (O ye daughters of Ierusalem) lyke as the tentes of the Cedarenes, and as the hangings of Salomon: but yee am I fayre & well fauoured wythall. What uel not at me that I am so blacke: & why?
the sunne hath shyned vpon me.

The voyce of the Synagoge.

For when my mothers childre had euyl wyl at me, they made me the keeper of the vineyard. Thus was I fayre to keepe a vineyard, which was not myne owne.

The voyce of the Church to Christ.

Tel me (O thou whom my soul loueth) wher thou feedest, wher thou restest at the no me day: lest I go wrong, and come vn to the flockes of thy companions.

Christ to the Church.

If thou know not thy selfe (O thou say-rest among women) then go thy way forth after the footsteps of the shepe, as though thou wouldest feede the goates besyde the shepherdes tentes. Ther wyl I tarpe for the (my loue) wyth mine host and wyth my charters, which shal be no fewer then Sharaas. Then shal thy chekes and thy necke be made fayre, and hanged wyth spanges and goodly tewels: a necke band of golde wyl we make the wyth syluer buttons.

The voyce of the Church.

When the kyng syttech at the table, he shal smel my Rasbus: for a bondel of Agie (O my beloued) lyeth betwyxte my breastes. A cluster of Grapes of Eipers, or of the vineyardes of Sugaddy art thou vnto me, O my beloued.

Christ to the Church.

O howe fayre arte thou (my loue) howe fayre art thou: thou hast doues eyes.

The Church to Christ.

O howe fayre arte thou (my beloued) howe wel fauoured art thou: Our bed is decked with floures, the springes of our house are of Cedre tree, and our balkes of Cypresse.

The ii. Chapter.

The voyce of Christ.

I am the floure of the fielde, and Lylpe of
the valleys: as the Rose amonge the thorns, so is my loue among y<sup>e</sup> daughters.

The voyce of the church.

Lyke as the appletree among the trees
of the wood, so is my beloued amonge the sonnes. My delvte is to syt vnder his shadow, for his fruit is swete vnto my throt.
He bringeth me into hys wyne seller, & lo-
ueth me speciallly wel. Refreshe me wyth grapes, & forte me wyth apples, for I am sicke of loue. His left hand lieth vnder my head, and his right hand embraceth me.

The voyce of Christ.

I charge you (O ye daughters of Ieru-salem) by the Roses and Hyndes of the field, that yee wake not by my loue, nor touch her
tyl she be content her selfe.

The voyce of the Church.

We thinke I heare the voyce of my be-
loued: lo, ther cometh he hoppynge vpon
the mountaynes, and leapyng ouer the little hylles. My beloued is lyke a Roos, or a young hart. Behold, he standeth behind our wal, he looketh in at the wyndow, and pe-
peth thorow the grate. My beloued answered and sayd vnto me.

The voyce of Christ.

O stande vp my loue, my doue, my beau-
tyful, and come: for lo, the wynter is now past, and the raine is away and gone. The floures are come vp in the fielde, the cry-sting time is come, the voyce of the turtle dove is heard in our lande, The fygge tree bringeth

Byngeth forth her figs, & bynes bear blossoms, and haue a good smel. Stand by my loue, my beutyfull, and come (O my doue) oute of the caues of the rockes, out of the holes of the wall: O let me se thy countenance and heare thy voyce: for sweete is thy voyce, and fayre is thy face.

The voyce agaynst the heretikes.

Gette vs the foxes, yea, the lytle foxes that hurt the bynes, for oute bynes beare blossoms.

The voyce of the Church.

My loue is myne, and I am hys whych sedeth among the lylles, vntill the dawe breake, and til the shadowes be gon. Come agayne pryncely (O my beloued) lyke as a Ro, or a yong hart vnto the mountaynes.

The.iii. Chapter.

The voyce of the church whych is chosen out of the Heathen.

Bynght in my bedde I soughte hym, whom my soule loueth: yea diligently soughte I hym, but I founde hym not. I wyl get vp (thoughte I) and goe about the cytye, vpon the market, and in all the streetes wyl I seeke hym to whom my soule loueth: but when I soughte hym, I founde hym not. The watchmen that goe about the cytye, founde me.

The Church speaking of Christ.

Saw ye not hym to whom my soule loueth? So when I was a lytle past them, I founde him whom my soule loueth. I haue gotten hold vpon him, and wyl not let hym go, vntill I bryng hym into my mothers house, and into her chamber, that beare me.

The voyce of Christ.

I charge you, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, by the Roes and Bindes of the feld, that ye wake not vpon my loue, nor touche her, till she be content her selfe.

The voice of the Synagoge, marueylinge in it selfe at the Church of Christ.

Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness lyke pylers of smoke, as it were a smel of Myrrour, frankincense and al manner spyes of the Apotecary?

The voyce of the church.

Behold, about Salomons bedstede ther stande. I. valeant men of the myghty in Israel. They hold swerdes ouer yone, and are expert in warre. Every man hath hys swerde vpon hys thygh, because of feare in the nyght. King Salomon hath made him selfe a bedstead of the wood of Libanus, & pylers are of syluer, the couering of gold, the seat of purple, the ground pleasauntly panned for the daughters of Ierusalem.

The church speaking of Christ.

Go forth (O ye daughters of Sion) and behold King Salomon in the crown wher wyth his mother crowned him in the day of his marriage, and in the day of his gladnes of hys bert.

The.iiii. Chapter.

The voyce of Christ.

O howe fayre art thou, my loue, howe fayre art thou? thou hast doves eyes, beside & which lye hid within. Thy heart lockes are like a flock of shepe that be clipped, which go first vpon from the washyng place: wher every one beareth two twins, and not one vnfruteful among them. Thy lyps are lyke a rose coloured rhybonde, thy wordes are lovely: thy chekes are lyke a peice of a pomegranate, besydes & whych lye hid within. Thy necke is lyke & tower of David buylded wyth bulwarke, wher vpon ther hang a thousand shylde, yea al the weapens of the gyautes. Thy two breastes are lyke two twins of yong Roes, whych fede among the lylles.

The spouse speaketh to hym selfe.

O & I might go to the mountaine of Myrrour, & to the hil of frankincense: till & day breake, and till the shadowes be past away.

The voyce of Christ speaking to the church.

Thou art all fayre, O my loue, & no spot is ther in thee. Come to me from Libanus, (O my spouse) come to me from Libanus, come soone the nexte way from the top of Amanah, from & top of Sancti and Hermon, from the lions denes, and from the mountaynes of the leopardes. Thou hast wounded my hearte. O my sister, my spouse, thou hast wounded my herte, wyth one of thyne eyes, & with one chaine of thy necke. O howe fayre and lovely are thy brests, my sister, my spouse? Thy brests are more pleasant then wyne, and the smel of thyne ointments passeth all spyes. Thy lyps, O my spouse, drop as the honny combe, yea mylke and honny is vnder thy tounge, and the smel of thy garments is like & smel of frankincense. Thou art a wel kept garden, O my sister, my spouse, & art a well kepte water spryng, a sealed well. The frutes & sprut in the, are lyke a verreye Paradise of pomegranates wyth swete frutes: as Cypresse, Cardus, Safford, Calamus, and al & trees of Libanus: Myrrour, Aloes, and al the best spyes. Thou art a wel of gardens, a well of spryng water, whych renne downe from Libanus.

Christ calleth the Heathen.

Up thou Northwynde, come thou Southwynde, and blowe vpon my garden, that the smel thereof maye be caried on euery syde: yea that my beloued maye come into my garden, & eate of the frutes and apples that growe therein.

The.v. Chapter.

Christ speaketh to the church.

Come into my garden O my sister, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrrour wyth my spye. I wyl eate my honny and my honny combe, I wyl drynke my wyne and my mylke.

Christ speaketh to the Apostles.

Eate, O ye frendes, drynke and be merry, O ye beloued.

The voyce of the Church.

As I was a shepe, and my bert waking, I heard the voyce of my beloued, when he knocked.

The.v. Chapter.

Christ to the Church.

Open to me (sayde he) O my syster, my loue, my doue, my derlyng: for my head is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heare are full of the nyght drowppes.

The voyce of the spouselle.

I haue put of my cote, howe can I do it an agayne? I haue washed my seete, howe shal I drye it agayne?

The voyce of the Church speaking of Christ.

But whē my loue put in hys hand at the hole, my hert was moued toward hym: so that I stode vp to open vnto my beloued. My handes dropped with myrrour, and the myrrour ranne downe my syngers vpon the locke. Neuerthelesse when I had opened vnto my beloued, he was departed, and gone bys waye.

Now like as afore time when he spake, my hert could not longer restryne: Euen so now I sought hym, but I could not find hym: I cryed vpon hym, neuerthelesse he gaue me no answer.

The Church complayneth of her persecuters.

So the watchmen that went about the citty, founde me, smote me, and wounded me. Yea they that kept the walles, toke away my garment fro me.

The spouselle speaketh to her companions.

I charge you therfore, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, if ye fynde my beloued, that ye tel hym how that I am speke for loue.

The voyce of the Synagoge.

Who is thy loue aboue other louers, O thou sayrest among women? O what can thy loue doo, more then other louers, that thou chargest vs so straitely?

The Church, answering Christ.

As for my loue, he is whyte and red coloured, a synguler personne among many thousandes: his head is the most fine gold, the lockes of hys heare are bushed. broune as the euenyng: hys eyes are as the eyes of doves by the water brookes, washed with mylke, and remaynyng in a plentiful place: hys cheekes are lyke a garden bed, wherein the Apoticaries plant all manner of sweet thynges: hys lyps drop as flowers of the most principall myrrour, hys hands are full of gold rynges and precious stones. His body is as the pure puerp, deckt ouer with Sapphires. His legs are as pillars of Marbel, set vpon sokettes of gold: hys face is as Lybanus, and as the beauty of Cedre trees: his throte is sweete, yea, he is altogether loutye. Suche one is my loue, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, suche one is my loue.

The voyce of the Synagoge speaking to the Church.

Whither is thy loue gone then (O thou sayrest among womē) whither is thy loue departed, that we may seke him with thee?

The.vi. Chapter.

Salomons Ballets.

The voyce of the Church.

My loue is gone downe into his garden, vnto the sweete smellyng beds, that he may refresh hym selfe in the garden, and gather floures. My loue is myne, and I am hys, whych sedeth among the lyllys.

Christ to the Church.

Thou art pleasaunt (O my loue) euē as loutynes it selfe, thou art fayre as Ierusalem, glorious as an armie of men, with theyr banners. Turne away thyne eyes fro me, for they make me to proude. Thy heavy lockes are like a flocke of goates vpon the mount of Galaad. Thy reth ar lyke a flocke of shepe that be clypped, which go out of the washyng place: toher euery one beareth two twynnes, and not one vnfructful among the. Thy cheekes are lyke a piece of pomegranate, besyde that whych lyeth byd wythin. Ther ar thre score quenes, foure score concubynes, and yong women without number. But one is my doue, my derlyng. She is the only beloued of her mother, a dear vnto her that bare her. Whē her daughters saw her, they said, she was blessed: Yea her quenes & concubines praised her.

The voyce of the Synagoge.

What is she this, that peepeth out as the morning: fayre as the Moone, excellent as the Sunne, glorious as an armie of men with theyr banners?

Christ to the Synagoge.

I went downe into the nut garden, to se what grewe by the brookes, to looke if the byneparde flowered, and if the pomegranates were shot forth.

The voyce of the Synagoge.

Then the charettes of the prince of my people made me sodenly afrayed.

The voyce of the Church calling againe the Synagoge.

Turne agayne, turne agayne, O thou Sulamite, turne againe, turne againe, that we may looke vpon the.

The.vii. Chapter.

Christ to the Synagoge.

What pleasure haue ye more in the Sulamite, then when she daunseth among the men of war?

Christ to the Church.

O howe pleasaunt are thy treadynges with thy shooes, thou princes daughter? Thy thighes ar lyke a fayre iewel, whych is wrought by a connyng woorker master. Thy navel is lyke a rounde goblet, whiche is neuer about drynck: Thy wombe is lyke an heape of wheat, set about with lyllys. Thy two brests ar lyke two twyns of yong Roes: Thy necke is as it were a tower of puerp: thyne eyes are lyke the water poyles in Hesebon, besyde the porte of Bath-rabbim: thy nose is lyke the tower of Lybanus, whych looketh toward Damascus: That beade that standeth vpon the, is lyke the Carmell: the beate of thy head is lyke the rynges purple folden by in plates.

O howe

Salomons Ballets.

dearlyng, in pleasures? Thy stature is lyke a date tree, & thy brests lyke p grapes.

The spouse speaking of the Crosse.

I sayde: I wyll clymme vpp into the date tree, and take holde of hys braunces.

The spouse speaking to the spouse.

Thy brestes also shalbe as the wine gra pes, the smel of thy nostrils lyke the beste wyne. Thyss shalbe pure and clear for my loue, hys lypes and reth shal haue their pleasure. Ther wyll I turne me vnto my loue, and he shal turne hym vnto me.

The Church speaking of Christ.

O come on my loue, let vs go forth in to the field, and take oure lodgyng in the villages. In þ moynynge wyll we ryse by tymes, and goo se the vyneparde: yf it bee yf the pomegranates be shot oure. There wyll I geue the my brestes: ther shal the Mandragoras geue theyr smel besyde our dores: ther, O my loue, haue I kepte vn to the all maner of frutes, both new & old.

The. viii. Chapter.

The voyce of the Patriarches spea kyng of Christ.

That I myght fynde the wythout, and kysse the, whome I loue as my brother whych sucked my mothers brestes, and that thou woldest not be offended, if I toke the, and brought the into my mothers house: that thou mygh embraceth me.

The voyce of Christ.

I charge you, (O yed daughters of Je rusalem) that ye wake not vpon my loue, nor very deuy (b) fro the sole of the fote vnto the head, there is no hole parte in all your body: but al are wounds, botches, sores, and scrypes, whych can neither be helped, bounde vp, molsified, ne eased wyth anye opntement.

E Your land lyeth waste; your ctytes are bzent vp, * your enemyes deuoure youre lande, and ye must be sayne to stande, and loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it wer wyth enemyes in a batayll. Moreouer the *doughter of Sion is left alone lyke a corage in a vynesarde, lyke a watche house in tyme of warre, lyke a besyged city. * And except the Lorde of hostes had left vs a few aloue, we sholde haue bene as Sodoma, and lyke vnto Gomorra.

E * Heare the worde of the Lorde ye tyrauntes of Sodoma, & harken vnto þ law of your God þ people of Gomorra. Why offere you so many sacrifices vnto me? I am stuffed w the bzent offerpriges of weethers, & wyth the fatnes of fed bestes. I haue no pleasure in þ bloud of bullocks, lābes, & gores. When ye appeare before me, wher requireth these thyngs of youre hands, þ ye shold walke in my courts. Ofset me no mo oblations, for it is but lost labour. I abhorre your incense, I may not awaue wyth youre newe Moones, your Sabbothes and solemne dayes. Your assemblies are also in vayne. I hate youre newe holydayes, and fastynges, euen fro my very herte. They make me wepe, I can not abyde them. Though ye holde out your hands, yet tourne I myne eyes from you. And though ye make manie prayers, yet heare I nothyng at all, * for your handes are full of bloude.

E * Washe you, make you cleane, put awaye your euill thoughts out of my sight, cease from doyng of euill and violence. Learne to doo ryght, applye your selues to equyte, deliuer the oppressed, help the fatherlesse to vns ryght, lette the wydowes complainte come before you. Nowe go to (sayth the Lorde) we will talke together. Is it not so? Though ye your syns bee as redde as scarlet, shall they not be whytter the snowe? And though they wer lyke purple, shall they not be like whyte wolle? Is it not so? Yf ye be louinge and obedient, ye shall entoye the best thyng þ groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstinate & rebellious, ye shalbe deuoured wyth the swerde: for thus the Lorde hath promysed wyth vns owne mouth.

The Prophecy.

come before the. Therefore speaketh the *Lorde god of hosts, þ myghty one of Israel: Ah, I must ease me of mine enemyes & auenge me vpon the. And therfore shall I laye my hand vpon the, and burne oute the drosse from the synnest and purest, and put out all the lead, and set thy iudges as gayne as they wer somtyme, and thy senators, as they were fro the beginninge. Then shalt thou be called the ryghteous cty, the saythfull ctye. But Sion shall be redeemed wyth equitte, and her captiuitie wyth ryghteousnes. For the transgressours and vngodly, and such as are become vnfaithfull vnto the Lorde, must al together be vterly destroyed.

And vntesse ye be ashamed of the oke trees, wherin ye haue so delited, & of þ gardens þ ye haue chosen: ye shall be an oke, whose leaues are falle away, & as a garden that hath no moisture. And the glory of these thyngs shal be tourned into drie strawe, and he that made the to a sparke. And they shall boeth burne together, so þ no man shalbe able to queneche them.

The Notes in the First Chap.

(a) Of this tyme, and of the thynges done therein, ye haue in the fourth of the kyngs from the xlii. chapter to the. xli. And in the two of the Chronicles, from the. xxi. chap. to the. xxiii.

(b) From the soule. i. c. That is, in the whole multitude of the people is there no goodnes.

The.ii. Chapter.

Of the comminge and deth of Christ: and of the callinge of the Heathen.

Moreouer this is * the worde þ was opened vnto Elsaye the sonne of Amoz, vpon Iuda, and Ierusalem.

It wyl be also in the (a) last dayes: That the hill wher the house of the Lord is builded, shal be the chiefe amonge hylls, and exalted aboue all vile hylls. And all the Heathen shall prease vnto hym, & the multitude of þ people shal go vnto him, speaking thus one to another: aryse, let vs go to the hyll of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Iacob: that he may shewe vs vns waye, & that we maye walke in vns pathes. For the (b) lawe shal come oute of Sion, and the word of God from Ierusalem, and shal geue sentence amonge the Heathen, and shal reforme the multitude of people: (c) So þ they shal breake their swerdes & speeres, to make scythes, sickles, and sawes therof. From that time forth shall not one people lyft vp weapen agaynst an other, neither shall they learn to fyght from thence forth. It is to the that I crye (O house of Iacob) aryse, let vs walke in the lycht of the Lorde. But thou art scatered abroad wyth thy people (O house of Iacob) for ye go farre beyond your fathers, whether it be in sorcerers (whome ye haue as the Philistines hadde) or in calkers of mennes bythes, wherof ye haue so many. As sone as your lande was full of syluer and golde, and

and no ende of your treasure: so sone as your lande was ful of stronge horses, and noo end of your charrettes: Immediately was it full of ydolles also, euen workes of your owne handes, whiche ye your selues haue facioned, and your fyngers haue made. Ther kneleth the man, there fallerh the man downe before the, so that thou canst not bringe hym awaye thence.

And therefore gette the sone in to some rocke, and hyde the in the ground frō the syght of the fearefull iudge, and from the glorie of his maiesty: whiche casteth downe þ hygher lookes of the presumptuous personnes, and bringeth low the pryde of man, and he onely shall be exalted in that daye. For the (d) daye of þe Lorde of hostes shall goo ouer all pryde and presumption, vpon al them that exalte them selues, and shall bringe them all downe: vpon hygh and stoute (e) Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon al the okes of Besan, vpon al hygh hylles, & vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, and vpon all strong walles, vpon all shippes of the sea, and vpon euery thyng that is glorious and pleasant to loke vpon.

And it shall bringe downe the pryde of manne, and laye mannes presumption full low, and the Lorde shall onely haue the victorye in that daye. But þe ydolles shall vtterly be rooted oute. Whenne shall crepe into holes of stone, and into Caves of the pearthe, from the syghte of the fearefull iudge, and from the glorie of his maiesty: what tyme as he shall aryse to shake the pearthe. Then shall man caste awaye his goddes of syluer and golde, (whiche neuerthelesse he had made to honour the) vnto Moles and Backes: that he may þ better crepe into the caves and rockes, & in to the cliffes of hard stones, frō þe syght of the fearefull iudge, and from the glorie of his maiesty.

The notes of the.ii. Chap.

(a) Hebr. In the last dayes: by whiche is commonly signified the tyme of Christes coming, & from thence vnto the end of the worlde as in Ezech. xxxviii. e. and Jeremy. xlii. d. and in many other places.

(b) The Hebrues take not the lawe onely for the commaundementes, but also for all the promesses of God, for the playnges & thankesgeynges, & for al that is contained in the whole olde Testament.

(c) So that they shall breake theyrswerdes. &c. Note here the greates innocencye of them that dwell in the cite of God, that is in the church and congregacion of þe faithful: whiche thynketh it not ynoughe to refrayne from battayle and robbery, contencion and strepe. &c. But do also apply them selues to honest occupacions and vnfaultyecraftes, wherewith they maye leade not onely them selues but other also with them: whiche thyng is signified by these rude instrumentes, synthes, synles and sawes: doynge herein accordynge to the counsell of. S. Paule, which sayeth. Let hym that stole steale no more, but let him rather labour with his handes some good thyng, that he may haue to geue vnto him that needeth. Ephel. iiii. e.

(d) The daye of the Lorde is the daye of the iust judgement, in whiche God proueth the conscience of euery man, shewynge hym selfe a iust iudge: as it is figured of Christe. Mat. xxv. a. But who may avyde the daye of his coming. &c.

(e) Cedar trees are verpe hygher trees, & in Libanus are they hygher then in any other place, and therefore signifieth he thereby the mooste mighty prynces and rulers. The. xxi. kings also þ Josua ouerthrew, as ye read Josu. xii. dwellled about Libanus. It is an hyl in Syria, after in the. ix. c.

The.iii. Chapter.

The propheticke þ at the cominge of Christ al strength & power shall be put forth of Iery.

Euery man can eschew a person moued in anger: for what doth he wylle? Euen so shall the Lorde of hostes take awaye from Ierusalem & Iuda all possessions and power, all meate & drinke, the capitayne and the souldyer, the iudge and the prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the worshipfull of fiftie yeres olde, and the honourable: the senators & men of vnderstandynge: the masters of craftes and orators. And I shall geue you chyldren to be your prynces (sayeth the Lorde) and babes shall haue the rule of you. One shall euell be doynge violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume agaynst the elder, and the yole person agaynst the honourable. Yea one shall take a frende of his owne kyndred by the bosome, and saye: thou hast (a) clothynge, thou shalt be oure head: for thou maist kepe vs from this fall and perill.

Then shall hefweate and saye, I cannot helpe you. Moreover ther is neyther meate nor clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Ierusalem and Iuda must decay, because that both their wordes and counsellors are agaynst the Lorde, they prouoke the presence of his maiesty vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenance bewrayeth them, as they declare theyr owne synnes the selues, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not. Wo be vnto theyr soules, for they shall be heuily rewarded. Then shall they saye: O happye are the godlye, for they maye enioye the frutes of theyr studyes. But wo be to the vngodly & vnpaynted, for they shall be rewarded after their workes. O my people (b) cybaudes oppresse the, and women haue rule of the.

O my people, thy leaders discerne the, and tread out the wayes of thy forestepps. The Lorde is here to common of the matter, and standeth to geue iudgemente to the people. The Lorde shall come forth to reason with the senators and prynces of his people, and shall saye thus vnto them: It is ye that haue burnt vp my winelard, the robbery of the poore is in your house. Wherefore do ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the innocents? thus shall the

Moreover thus sayth the Lord: Seinge þ daughters of Syon are become so proud, and come in wyth stretched out neckes, & w dayne wanton eyes: seynge they come in tryppung so nyceþ w they: fete: Therfore shal the Lord (c) haue the heades of þ daughters of Syon, and make they: beauty bare in that day. In that daye shal þ Lord take awaye they: gorgiounes of they: apparel and spages, cheynes, parettes, collers, & braccellers, & bones, the goodly floured, wyde and bordered rayment, bruches and head bandes, cynges and garlandes, holy day clothes and vales, kerchines and pyennes, glasses and smockes, bonnettes and taches.

And in stede of good smelle, there shal be stynte among them. And for they: gyddles there shal be loose bandes. And for well set herre, there shal be baldnesse. In stede of a stomacher, a sacke cloth, and for their beauty, witherednesse and sunne burnynge. Their housbandes, & they: myghtye men shal perishe wyth þ sword in battayle.

The Notes in the.iii. Chapter.

(a) That is, thou art better apparelled and rycher the we, helpe vs wyth fode & other things necessarye. All the curses whiche the Propheete here reciteth, were fulfilled in the destruccio of Jerusalem.

(b) Some reader: exactors or extorcioners. He noteth the couetousnes of pprests and prelats. God here calleth the poore wyddowes, the fatherlesse, and all that are destitute of the comforte of this worlde, bys people, who the Pharisces then oppressed: nowe pprests, and such as falsly boast the selues to be spirituall: Justlye called exactors, in as muche as they require their ryght (as they call it) more by menies tradicions, then by the worde of God: and do not so seke soules to God, as mony for them selues. Oppresse, that is spoyle, pyl, and euen haue, so that they shante leane oughte. What house, fylde, or Hatchaundysse is there, that rendereth theym not some what? Whether there be chyldren Christened, or Mariages made, or men come to the table of the Lorde: whether the sycke be vsyted, or the dead buried, there is euer somewhat required. Furthermore they are not onely accused to be couetous, but also to be women, that is effeminate and womanlye: because they mooste fylthelpe and ydellye speke and wast that, whiche they haue scraped with iuggelynge, violence, and mooste naughtye fashyons.

(c) To haue the heades of wemene, is to make them confounded and ashamed, for it is a shame to a woman to be shaven. i. 20. xi. a. So that the Propheete hereby signifieth, by a borrowed speech, that the Lord shal make the daughters of Syon (by whiche vnderstand, the women of Iurpe) confounded & ashamed, & byynge theym to extreme aduersitie and pouertye, and euen to naught. Josephus maketh mention that Jerusalem, whiche was the chiefe cytpe therof, was ones so famished that a certayne woman of the cytpe ate her owne childe. Albeit, some vnderstand euen here also by þ daughters of Syon the townes, villages, and castelles of Syon: as it doth in deade often signify in þ scriptures.

The.iii. Chapter.

For wante of men. vii. women desyre to haue one man.

At that tyme shal their (a) gates mourne and complaine, and they shal sit as desolate folke vpon þ pearth (b). The shal seuē wyues take holde of one man and saye: we wyll lape all oure meate, and clothynge together in common, onelye that we maye be called thy wyues, and that this shamefull reprofe maye be taken from vs. After that tyme shal the * braunch of the Lord be beautifull and myghtye, and the fruyt of the earth shal be fayre and pleasaunt, for those Israelites that shal spring therof. Then shal the remnaunte in Syon, and the remnaunte at Jerusalem be called holy: nameiye all suche as are wyrtten amonge the lyving at Jerusalem what tyme as the Lorde shal washe awaye the desolacion of the daughters of Syon, and pouрге the bloud out from Jerusalem with the wynde of his smoke and syer. Moreover vpon all the dwellynge of the hill of Syon, and vpon they: hole congregacion, shal the Lorde prouide a cloude and smoke by daye, and the shynynge of flaminge fyre by nyghte: for all they: glorie shal be preserved. And Jerusalem shal be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of beate in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man maye kepe him for weather and rayne.

The Notes of the.iii. Chap.

(a) The Gates shal mourne and complaine because not onelye the soldpares shal perishe wyth the swerde, but also the Judges and geuers of sentence. He taketh the place of iudgement for the iudges: for in the Gates was iudgemente wonte to be geuen. Ruth. iiii. a. Or, euen the Gates shal be destroyed, and no man shal inter in or go oute thereat: for the Gates mourne, if the people be not often seen in the.

The wyched women were not contented wyth their housbandes, but there shal come suche a scarcenes of menne, that there shal be scant for euerye seuen woman one man. Suche a slaughter shal there be, that fewe men shal remaine, and the women shal be broughte into captiuytpe.

Well I shall tell you howe I wyll do wryth my vyneparde: I wyll take the (a) hedge from it, that it maye perperhe, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be troden vnder foote. I wyll lape it wast, that it shall neyther be thurst nor cut, but beare thornes and byars. I wyll also forbyd the cloudes, that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for the vyneparde of the Lorde of hostes, it is the house of Israell, and hole Iuda his sayr plāting. Of these he looked for equitie, but se there is wrong: for righteousness, so it is but misery. Wo be vnto you that ioyne one house to another, & bynge one land so nigh vnto another, tyll ye can gette no more grounde. Wyll ye dwell vpon the earth alone? The Lorde of hostes considereth me thus in the eare: shall not many greater & more gorgeous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwell in them? And ten akers of vynes, shall geue but a quarte, & .xxx. bushels of sede, shall geue but thre.

Dronkennes.

Wo be vnto them that ryse by early to vse them selues in dronkenesse, and yet at nyght are more superfluous wryth wyne. In those companyes are harpes & lutes, tabrettes, and pypes, & wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde, & consider not the worke of hys hands. Therefore cometh my folke also in captiuitie, because they haue noo vnderstandynge.

They glorie shalbe myrte wryth hunger, & they pyde shalbe marred for thyrst. Therefore gagerh hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that pyde, bo- styng, & wysdome, wryth suche as reioyse therein, may descende into it.

Thus shall man haue a fall, he shalbe brought lowe, and the hyghe lookes of þe proude laped downe. But the Lorde of hostes, that holy God, shalbe exalted, and vntouched, whē he shall declare hys equitye and ryghteousnes after thys maner: Then shal the lambes eat theyr appoin- ted fodder, and shall fede plenteously in þe mountaynes. Wo be vnto bayne persons that draw wickednes vnto them as it were with a corde, and synne, as it were with a cart rop, whiche vse to speke on thys maner: let hym make hast now, & go forth wryth hys worke, that we may se it. Let þe counsel of the holy one of Israell come and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it.

Wo be vnto them that cal euyl good, & goo euyl: whiche make darcknesse lyght, & lyght darcknesse: that make sower swete, and swete sower. Wo be vnto them that are worse in their owne sight, and thynke them selues to haue vnderstandynge. Wo be vnto them that are cunning men to sup out wyne, and expert to set by dronkenes.

These grue sentence wryth the vngodly for rewards, but condemne the iuste cause of the ryghtous.

Therefore lyke as fyre lycketh by the strawe, and as the flame consumeth the stubble: euens so (when they roote is full) their blossom shall vanishe awaye like dust or smoke: for they despise the lawe of the Lorde of hostes, and blaspheme the word of the holy maker of Israell.

Therefore is the wrath of þe Lorde kind- led also agaynst hys people, & he (b) shal- kerh hys hand at them, yea he shall smyte so that the hylls shall tremble. And their carcases shall lye in the open stretes lyke myre. After all thys, the wrath of God shall not cease, but he shall stretch hys hand wyder. And he shall geue a token vnto a strange people, & call vnto them in a farre country: and behold they shal come hasty- ly wryth speede. Ther is not one faynt nor feble among them, no not a sluggish nor sleappy persō. Ther shal not one of the put of the gyrdle from hys loynes, ne lose hys larchet of hys shoo. Their cry is as it were of a lion, and the royrng of the lyke lyons whelpes. They shal rore and hantche vpon the prayr, and no man shal re- couer it, or get it from them. In that day they shal be so scarce vpon them as the sea. And if we loke vnto the lande beholde it shal be al darcknes and sorow. Yf we loke to heauen: beholde, it shal be darcke wryth careful desperacion.

The Notes of the .v. Chapter.

(a) By the hedge and wall is figured the custo- dy of Angels, wherewith the people of God (whiche is called the vyneparde of the Lorde) was compassed about and defended.

(b) To make or stretch forth hys hand at them, is to prouide & make ready to stryke them, and greuously to punyssh them for their synnes. As after in the .lvi. g. If he stretch forth hys hand who wyll wrythdrawe it agayne?

The .vi. Chapter.

Elay sawe the glorie of the Lorde, and was sent to prophete the desolacion of Iurpe.

In the same year that kynge Oziah died, I saw (a) the Lorde sittyn vpon an high and glorious seat, and hys trayne fylled the palace. Fro aboue spcked þe Sera- phims, wherof euery one had sixe wings. With twayne eche couered hys (b) face, w- thwayne hys fete, and wryth twayne did he flye. They cryed also eche one to other in thys maner: holy holy holy, is the Lorde of hostes. The hole world is ful of hys glori. Yea the postes and dorecheques moued at theyr crynge, & þe house was ful of smoke. Then I sayde: Who is me (for I was astounded) that I (whiche am a man of vn- cleane lippes, and dwel among people that hath vncleane lippes also) holde se þe kynge and Lorde of hostes wryth myne eyes.

me, haupnge a hote cole in thys bā, which he had taken from the aulter wryth the tōgues, and touched my mouthe, and sayde: lo, thys hath touched thy mouth, & thynne vncyghteousnesse is take awaye, and thy synne forgiven. After thys I hearde the voyce of the Lorde, takynge aduysment on thys maner: Whom shall I sende, & whoe wyll be oure messenger? The I sayd: here am I, sende me. And so he sayd: go and tell thys people: * ye shall beare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstand, ye shall playnly se, and not perceyue. Harden the herte of thys people, stoppe theyr eares and shut theyr eyes, that they se not wryth theyr eyes, beare not wryth theyr eares, and vnderstand not wryth theyr hertes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, how longe? he answered: vntill the cityes be utterly wryth out inhabitantes, and the houses wryth pure men, tyll the land be also desolate, & ly vnbuilded. For the Lorde shall take the men far awaye, so that the lande shall lye wast. Neuerthelesse, the tenth parte shall remayne therein, for it shall conuerte and be frutfull. And lykewise as the Terebinthes and oketrees byynge forth theyr frutes, so shall the holy sede haue frute.

The notes of the. vi. Chap.

(a) That is some certen gloire of the Lorde: and so doeth. W. John ful well expounde it in these wordes: Suche thyngs sayde Elayas when he sawe hys gloire. &c. John xii. f.

(b) The sungelles are counted to haue face, fete and wynges, althoughe they are in dede wythoute a body or anye bodelye member: because that by the face or eyes we vnderstande knowledge: by the fete, diligente seruice, and by the wynges, quicke and readye expedition, as in Ezech. i. b.

The. vii. Chapter.

The Syrians moue battaile against Ierusalem, & a virgin shall beare a childe.

It happened in the tyme of Achaz the sonne of Ioatham, whiche was the sonne of Oziah kynge of Iuda: that * Razin the king of Siria, & Shabek the sonne of Romelias king of Israel, went vp toward Ierusalem to besige it, but wauit not. Now whē the house of Dauid (that is Achaz) herd word therof, & Siria and Ephraim were confederat together, hys hert quaked (yea, and & hertes also of hys people) lyke as a tree in the feld, that is moued wryth the wynd.

Then sayed God vnto Elay: go mete Achaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Asub) at the head of the ouer poole, in the foote pathe by the fullers ground, and say vnto him: take hede to thy selfe, and be styl, but feare not, neyther be faine herted for these two tables, & is, for these two smokyng fyre brands: the wrath and furiousnesse of Razin the Syrtan, and Romelias sonne: because that the kynge of Siria & Ephraim & Romelias sonne haue wickedly conspired agaynst the, sayinge. godowne into Iuda, bere them and bring the vnder vs, and let a king there euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus sayth the Lorde god thereto: It shall not so go forth, neyther come so to passe: for the head ctyr of the Siria is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Razin. And after. v. f. ix. yere, shall Ephraim be no more a people. And the chiefe ctyr of Ephraim is Samaria, But the heide of Samaria, is Romelias sonne. And if ye beleue not; ther shall no promyse be kept wryth you.

* Moreover God spake vnto Achaz, sayinge: requyre a token of the Lorde thy God wherher it be towarde the depth beneth or towarde the heygth aboue. Then sayde Achaz: I wyll requyre none, neyther wyll I tempte the Lorde. The Lorde answered: Then heare to ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not inoughe for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my god also? And therfore the lord shall geue you a token of hym selfe: Beholde, a virgin shall conceyue and beare a sonne, and shall call hys name * Emanuell. Butter & hony shall he eat, & he may knowe to eschue the euill, and chose the good. But or euer that chylde come to knoweledge, to eschue the euil and chose the good, the lande (that thou art so afrayd for) shall be desolate of both her kynges.

The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house, suche as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Iuda thowme the kyng of the Assyrians.

* For at the same tyme shall & lord (a) whiche is for the syes, that are about the water of Egypte, and for Bees in the Assyrians lande. These shall come, and shall lyght in all the valeyes, in the vaultes of stone, vpon all grene thynges, & in all corners.

At that same tyme shall & Lord * haue the harte of the head, and the feete, and the beard cleane of, wryth the (b) rasour, that he shall paye them wrythall beyond the water, namelpe, wryth the kynge of the Assyrians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue wryth a come, and two shepe.

Then because of & aboundaunce of milke, he shall make butter & eate it. So that euery one whiche remayneth in the land, shall eate butter and honye. At the same tyme all vineyardes (though there be a thousande vyues in one, and wer solde for a thousande spluctynges,) shall be turned to brens and thornes. Lyke as they shall come into the land wryth arrowes and bowes, so shall all the lāde become brens and thornes. And as for all bylles that now are hewen downe, thou shalt not come vpon them, for fear of brens and thornes. But the cattell shall be dryue thither, and the shepe shall fede there.

The.viii. Chapter.

The deliuerance of the land by Emanuel. The ſtone of offence, at whych many ſhall ſtumble.

Moreouer the Lorde ſayed vnto me: Take the a greate leafe, and wyte in it, as men do wyth a pen, that he ſpede hym to robbe, and haſte hym to ſpoyle. And immediately I called vnto me ſaythful wytnesſes: Uriah the priete, and zachariah the ſonne of Barachiah. After that wente I vnto the Prophetiſſe, ſhe now had conceyued and borne a ſonne. Then ſayd the Lorde to me: geue hym thys name: Maherſchalah baſchbas, that is: a ſpeedy robber, an haſty ſpoylet. For why, or euer the child ſhall haue knowledge to ſaye: a bi and Em (that is father and mother,) ſhall the riches of Damascus, and the ſubſtance of Samaria be taken awaye thorow the kynge of the Aſſyrians.

Whe Lorde ſpake alſo vnto me, ſayinge: for ſo much as the people reſuſeth the (a) ſpylrennyng water of Silo, and put theyr delpte in Razin and Homelyes ſonne, Beholde, the Lorde ſhall brynge myghtye & great ſtoudes of water vpon the, namelpe the kynge of the Aſſyrians wyth all hys power. Whych ſhall poure oute hys furiousnes vpon euery man, and ren ouer all theyr bakkes. And ſhall breake in vpon Iuda, increaſpunge in power, tyll he get hym by ſ throte. He ſhall ſpyl alſo the wydenesſe of thy lande wyth (b) hys brode wynges, Emanuel. Goo together ye people, and gather you, hearken to all ye of ſarre countreyes. Muſtre you, & gather you, muſtre you, and gather you: take poute counsell together, yet muſte poure counsell come to nought: go in had wyth all, yet ſhall it not proſper, Except Emanuel, (that is God) be wyth vs. For the Lorde chaſtyſed me, and toke me by the hand, and warned me, ſayinge vnto me: that I ſhulde not walke in the waye of thys people.

He ſayde moreouer: rounde wyth none of them, whoſoeuer ſay: ponder people are bounde together. Neuertheles ſear them not, neyther be afrayed of them, but ſanctify the Lorde of hoſtes, let hym be poute feare and drede. For hee is the ſactyfyng, and ſtone to ſtomble at * (c) the rocke to fall vpon, a ſnare & net to both the houſes: to Iſrael, and the inhabitours of Ieruſalem. And manpe ſhall ſtomble, fall, and bee broken vpon hym: pea they ſhalbe ſnared and taken.

Now lay the wytnesſes together (ſayd the Lorde) and ſcale the lawe wyth my dyſcyples. Thus I wypte vpon the Lorde that hath turned hys face from the houſe of Iacob, and I loke vnto hym. But lo, as for me, and the chyldren whych the Lorde hath geuen me, we are a token & a wonder in Iſrael, for ſ Lord of hoſtes ſake, whych dwelleth vpon the hyl of Syon. And therefore yf they ſay vnto you: aſke counsell at the ſorthe ſayers, wytcbes, charmers, and conſurers, the make them thys anſwere: Is ther a people any where, that aſketh not counsell at his God, whether it be concerning the dead, or the lyving? Yf any man want lpght, let hym loke vpon the lawe & reſpmony, whether they ſpeke not after thys meanyng. Yf he do not thys, he ſtombleth & ſuffreth hlyger. And if he ſuffre hlyger, he is oute of patience, & blaſphemerh hys kynge & hys god. Then loke he vwarde, & dounward to ſ earth, & beholde there is trouble and darknes, veracion is round about hym, & ſ cloud of errour. And out of ſuch aduerſity, ſhal he not eſcape.

The notes of the.viii. Chap.

(a) He calleth the kyngedom of David, whych ſygnifyeth the kyngdom of Chyſte, the ſpyll runnyng water of Silo: whych ſyngge agreeeth verpe well vnto Chyſte, that was meake and lowely of herte. Math. xi. d. And zachary. ix. Beholde thy kyngge commeth vnto the poore and lowely, &c. he raygneth in ſpyll & peaceable conſciences. Silo is a ſpyng at the foote of the hyl of Syon: whych hath not continually waſter, but ſpyngeth certayne houres & dayes, and commeth wyth a greate ſounde by the bothom of the ground, and ryſtes and holes of an harde ſtony rocke: The maner of ſpeaking is borrowd, of the dyſpyled littelnes of the water, whych ſignifieth the ſmall eſtimacion and pouertie of the Chyſten.

The Lorde wyll be vnto the. ii. houſes of Iſrael, that is, to the houſe of Iuda, and to the houſe of the ten tribes partly a ſanctyfyng (by whych vnderſtand health and felicity) and partly a ſtone to ſtomble at. So that ſome of bothe the houſes ſhal be ſanctified, and ſome ſhal ſtomble, but ſ chiefly they of Ieruſalem ſhal be ſnared. Who ſhal be ſanctified, and who ſhall ſtomble and fal, doth S. ## The ix. Chapter.

As for them that dwell in the lande of the shadowe of deathe, vpon them shall the lyghte shyne. Shalt thou multiplye the people, & not increase the ioy also? They shall reioyse before the euen as men make mery in harvest, & as men that haue gotten the victorie, whē they deale the spoyle. For thou shalt breake the (a) pocke of the peoples burthen: the staf of hys holder, and the rod of hys oppressoure, as in the * (b) day at Madian.

Judi. vii. f.

Moreover all remeracions and sedycious power, (yea where there is but a core fylled wth bloude) shall be burnt, and fede the fyre. For vnto vs a child shall be borne, and vnto vs a sonne shall be geue. Vpon hys shoulder shall the kyngdome lye, and he shall be called wth hys owne name, The wonderous geue of counsell, the myghty God, the euerlastyng father, the pryncce of peace: he shall make no end to encrease the kyngdome & peace, and shall sit vpon the seate of Dauid and in hys kyngdome, to set vp the same, to stablish it wth equitye and ryghtousnesse, from thenceforth for euermore. Thys shall the gelousye of the Lorde of hostes bynge to passe.

The Lorde sente a worde into Jacob, the same is come into Israell. And the people also of Ephraym, and they that dwell in Samaria, can saye wth pryde and hys stomackes, on thys manner: The tyle worke is fallen downe, but we will builde it wth harder stones. The mulberry tymbre is broken, but we shall sette it vp agayne wth Cedre. Neuertheles the Lorde shall prepare Razyn the enemye agaynst the, and so order theyr aduersaries, that the Syrians shall lay hold vpon them before, and the Philistines behind, and so deuour Israell wth open mouth.

After all thys, the wrath of the Lorde shall not cease, but yet hys hand shall be stretched oute still. For the people turneth not vnto hym that chastiseth them, neyther do they seke the Lorde of hostes. Therefore the Lorde shall rote oute of Israell boeth heade and taylor, braunch & twyg, in one daye.

By the beade, is vnderstande the Senatour and honorable man, & by the taylor the prophete that preacheth lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a ryghte case, suche be deceyuers. Such as men thynke also to be perfecte among these, are but cast awaye.

Therefore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in theyr younge men, neyther saue theyr fatherlesse and wydowes. For they are altogether ypocrites and wycked, and all theyr mouthes speake folly. After all thys shall not the Lordes wrath cease, but yet hys hand shall be stretched oute still. For the vngodly burne as a fyre in the byers and thornes. And as it were oute of a fyre in a wood or a reed bush, so ascenderth the smoke of theyr pryde.

For thys cause shall the wrath of the Lorde of hostes fall vpon the land, & the people shall be consumed, as it were wth fyre, no man shall spare hys brother. If a man do turne hym to the ryght hand, he shall samph, or to the lefte hande to eate, he shall not haue ynoughe. Euery man shall (c) eate the fleshe of hys own arme. Manasse shall eate Ephraym, and Ephraym Manasse, & they both shall eate Iuda. After all this shall not the Lordes wrath cease, but yet shall hys hand be stretched oute still.

The notes of the ix. Chapter.

(a) This pocke figureth the pocke & burthen of the law, whiche so oppressed the people, & saint Peter could say to the Apostles & neither they nor theyr fathers were able to kepe it, Actum. xv. b. Thys pocke hath Christe broken, accordinge to this prophete of Elyse, & viterly discharged the burthen therof. For we knowe now that god is satisfied & contented in the bloud of hys sonne Christ, & that the many thousandfold punishmentes whiche are due to oure synnes, are cleane pardoned and forgouen for the merites of the same christ. i. Joannis. ii. a. The Hies bryes expounde thys of the destruction of the holte of Sennacherib, whych was done by the Angel: of whych ye haue after in the. xxxviii. g. And call the host of the Assyrians, the pocke of the peoples burthen, the staf of the shoulders, and rod of the oppressoure, but it is a more greivous bondage, wherewith the spirituall Sennacherib of whom that Assyrian was a certayne figure & shadow, bound vs: from whych Christ hath deliuered vs.

(b) By the day at Madian is ment the day wher in Gedeon wth thye hundred men slue an innumerable multitude of the Madianites, as ye reade. Judi. vii. There foughte the Lorde for hym, & deliuered the people from bondage. Eue so hath he nowe deliuered vs from the captiuitie of the deuil, death, and hell, by Christe.

(c) He eateth the fleshe of hys own arme, that taketh away the goodes of hys nye frind: and robbeth hys kynsman. The meanyng is that one shall robbe and polle another.

The x. Chapter.

He threatneth the oppressours of the poore, & prophesieyth agaynst Sennacherib.

Woe vnto you that make vntyguous lawes, and deuse thynge whiche be to harde for to kepe: where thorow the poore are oppressed on euery side, & the innocentes of my people are therewith robbed of Judgemente, that widowes may be your praye, and that ye maye robbe the fatherlesse. What wyl ye do in tyme of visitaciō and distrucion, that shall come from farre? To whom wyl ye comē for helpe, or to whom wyl ye geue your honour, that he may kepe it: that ye come not amonge the prisoners, or lye amonge the deade? After all thys shall not the wrath of the Lorde cease, but yet shall hys hande be stretched oute still. Woe also vnto Assur, whych is a staf of my warre, in whose hande is the rod of my punishmente. For I shall send hym hym amonge those Apocryphes people, amonge the people that haue deſerued my diſſauioure, ſhall I ſend hym, that he maye utterly robbe them, ſpoyle them, & treade them downe lyke the myre in the ſtreete.

Howe be it, hys meaneinge is not ſo, neyther thynckerh hys herte of thys ſaſhion.
But he ymagyneth onelye howe he maye ouerthrowe and deſtroye muche people, for he ſayeth: are not my prynces all kynges? Is not * Calno as eaſye to wynde, as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria?
As who ſaye: I were hable to wynde the kyngdome of the Idolaters & theyr god-des, but not Ierusalem and Samaria.

Shal I not do vnto Ierusalem and theyr Images, as I dyd vnto Samaria, & theyr Images?

Wherefore the Lorde ſayeth: As ſoone as I haue perſoumed my hole worcke vpon the hyll of Sion and Ierusalem, then will I alſo viſite the noble & ſtout kyng of Affria, wth hys wyſedome and pride.

For he ſtanderh thus in his owne conceite.
Thys do I thowme the power of myne downe hand, and thowme my wyſedome.

For I am wyſe, I am he that remoue the landes of the people. I rob theyr prynces and (lyke one of the worthies) I dryue the from theyr hye ſeates. My hande hath foundede oute the hoſtes of the people, as it were a neſt. And lyke as egges that were layde here and there, are gathered together: So do I gather all countreyes. And there is no manne, that dare be ſo bold, as to touch a ſether, that dare open hys mouth, or ones wyſper.

But doth the axe boaſt it ſelfe agaynſte hym that heweth therewyth, or doth the ſawe make anye krakynge, agaynſte hym that ruleth it? That were euen lyke, as if the rod dyd exalt it ſelfe agaynſte hym that beareth it, or as though the ſtaffe ſhoulde magnifye it ſelfe, as who ſaye: it were no wood. Therefore ſhall the Lorde of Hoſtes ſende hym pouertie in hys ryches, and burne vp hys power, as it were wth a fyre. But the lyghte of Iſraell ſhall be that fyre, and hys Sanctuary ſhalbe the flame, and it ſhall kyndle, and burne vp hys thornes and briers in one day, yea all the glory of hys wods and fieldes ſhalbe conſumed wth bodye & ſoule. As for hym ſelfe, he ſhalbe as one chaſed awaye. The trees alſo of his ſyeld ſhalbe of ſuch a noiſe ber, that a chyld may tell them.

After þ day ſhal the remnant of Iſraell, and ſuch as are eſcaped oute of the houſe of Iacob, ſeke no more comfort at hym þ ſmote them, but ſhall comfort them ſelues wth faythfulneſſe & truth in the Lorde, þ holp one of Iſraell. The remnant, yea and the poſteritie of Iacob, ſhal conuerſe vnto God þ mighty one. For though thy people (O Iſrael) be as the ſand of þ ſea, yet ſhal I but the remnaunt of them onelye conuerſe vnto hym. Perfect is the iudgemente of hym that ſtoweth in ryghtouſneſſe, and therefore the Lorde of Hoſtes ſhal perfectly fulfill the thyng that he hath determined in the myddelt of the hole worlde.

Therefore thus ſayeth the Lorde God of Hoſtes: Thou my people that dwelleſte in Syon, be not aſcaped for the kyng of the Affrians. He ſhall wag hys ſtaffe at the, yea and beat the wth the rod, as the Egyptians dyd ſometyme. But ſoone after, ſhall my wrath and myne indignacion be fulfilled agaynſt theyr blaſphemies.

Moreover the Lorde of Hoſtes ſhal prepare a ſcourge for hym lyke as was the punyſhment of Madian vpon the mount of Oreb. And he ſhal lyfte vp hys rod ouer the ſea, as he dyd ſometyme ouer the Egyptians. Then ſhall hys burthen be taken from thy ſhoulders, and hys pocke from thy necke, yea the ſame pocke ſhall be corrupte for very ſatnes. He ſhall come to Aiath, and go thowme towarde Mygd.

But at Macmas ſhall he muſter hys hoſte, and goo ouer the * ſeorde. Babaah ſhall be theyr reſpyng place. Abamah ſhall be aſcaped, Babaah Saule ſhall fle awaye. The voyce of the noyſe of thy hoſtes (O daughter Ballym) ſhalbe heard vnto Lays and to Anathoth, wherche alſo ſhalbe in trouble. Madmena ſhal tremble for feare, but the cyteſyns of Badyu are manly, yet ſhall he remayne at Rob that day. After that, ſhal he lyft vp hys hand agaynſt the mount Sion, and agaynſte the hyll of Ierusalem. But ſe the Lorde God of Hoſtes ſhal take awaye the proude frō thence wth feare. He ſhall hewe downe the proude, and fell the hye mynded. The thornes of the wood ſhalbe roted out wth pyon, & Libanus ſhal haue a myghty fall.

The. xi. Chapter.

The propheth of the natiuite of Chriſte,

After this there ſhal come a rod forth of the kynrede of Jeſſe, and a bloſ-of wyſdome, & vnderſtadyng: the ſpyrit of counſel, & ſtrength, the ſpyrite of knowledge and of the feare of God: & ſhal make hym

For he ſhal not geue ſentence after the thyng that ſhal be broughte before hys eyes, neether reproue a maner at the ſpyll

The. xiii. Chapter.

The prophesyeth the destruction of Babilon, the captiuitie, and the comminge agayne of the people.

This is the beaue (a) burthe of Babilon, which saye the sonne of Amos did se. Make some tokens to the hye (b) hills, cal vnto them, hold vp your hand, that the princes may go in at y doze. For (c) I wyl sende for my (d) debites and my gyauntes (sayth the Lorde) and in my wrath I wyl cal for suche, as tryumphe in my glorie.

Wth that, me thoughte I hearde in the mountaynes a noyse, lyke as it had bene of a greate people: and a rushynge as though the kyngedomes of all nac-yons had come together, (And the Lorde of Hostes was the Captayne of the hole armye) as they had come not only oute of farre countreys, but also from the en-des of the heauens. Euen the Lorde hym selfe wth the ministers of his wrath, to destroye the hole land. Mourne therfore, for the day of the Lord is at hande, and cometh as a destroyer from the Almyghyte. Then shall all handes be letten downe, and all mens hartes shall melte awaye, they shall stand in feare, carefulnesse and sorow shall come vpon them, and they shall haue paine, as a woman that trauayleth wth chyld.

(e) One shall euer be abaished of another, & theyr faces (f) shall burne lyke the flame.

For lo, the day of the Lorde shall come, terrible, full of indignacion and wrath, to make the lande waste, and to roote oute the synne therof. For the starrs and pla-nets of heauen shall not geue theyr lyght, the sunne shall be quenched in the risynge, & the moone shall not shyne wth his lyght. And I wyl punish the wyckednesse of the

(g) world, and the synnes of the vngodly sayeth the Lorde. The hye stomackes of the proude wyl I take awaye, and wyl laye downe the boastyng of tyrauntes. I wyl make a man deater then fine gold and

and a man to be more worth, then a golden wedge of Ophir. Moreover I will shake the heauen, that the earth shall remoue out of her place.

Thus shall it go wyth Babilon, in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, in the day of his fearfull indignacion. And Babilon shall be as an hunted or chased Doe, and as a stocke wythout a shepheard. Every man shall turne to hys owne people, and see echone into hys owne lande. Who so is founde alone, shalbe shot thorowe. And who so gather together shalbe destroyed wyth the sword. * Theyr chyldren shalbe slayne before theyr eyes, their houses spoiled, and theyr wyues rauyned. For so, I shall bringe vp the Medes agaynst them, whych shall not regarde syluer, nor be desirous of gold. Then shall pong mens homes be knapped a sunder. The Medes shall haue no pryte vpon women wyth chyldre, and theyr faces shall not spare the chyldren. * And Babilon (that glorie of kyngdomes and betwty of the Caldes honour) shalbe destroyed, euen as God destroyed Sodome, and Gomorra. It shal neuer be more inhabited, neither shall ther be any more dwelling there, from generation to generation.

The Arabians shall make no more tentes there, neyther shall the shepherdes make theyr foldes there anye more, but wyld beasts shal lye ther, and the houses shalbe (h) full of greete Dules, Estriches shall dwell ther, and Apes shall daunce there: the lytle Dule shall cry in the palaces, one after another, & Dragons shalbe in the pleasaunt parlours. And as for Babilons tyme it is at hand, and her dayes may not be longe absent.

(c) Some reade: hpyll, and vnderstande thereby Babilon: which (saye they) is called an hpyll because of the hygh and excedyng sumptuous buyldinge ther of.

(d) He calleth the people of Persia & of Medes hys debities, and his gyauntes, because he was disposed by them to ouerthrowe the Babilonians.

(e) Some reade: Every man shalbe abashed toward his neyghbours. That is, they shalbe so astonied and amased and so destitute of counsell, that one shall loke vpon another and be confounded, maruelling howe they came in such trouble.

(f) That is, they shall be so sore ashamed that theyr faces shal be as red as fyre.

The.xliii.Chapter.

The retourne of the people from captiuitie.

The prosperity of the people of God, & affliction of their enemyes. The pyrde of Babilon.

At the Lorde will he mercyfull vnto Iacob, will take vp Israell agayne, and set them in theyr owne lande. Seruauntys shall cleaue vnto them, and get the to the house of Iacob. They shall take the people, and carry the home wyth the. And the house of Israell shall haue them in possession for seruauntys and maydens, in the lande of the Lorde. They shall take those prysoners, whose captiues they had bene afore, & rule those that hadde oppressed them. Whē the Lord nowe shall bringe the to rest, from the trauayle, feare, and harde bondage that thou wast laden wythall, then shalt thou vse thys mockage vpon the kyng of Babilon, and say. Howe happeneth it that the oppressoure leaueh of? Is the golden tribute come to an end? Doubtles the Lorde hath broken the (a) staf of the vngodlye, and the scepter of the lordly. Whych whē he is wroth, smyteth the people wyth durable strokes, and in his wonders he persecuteth them, and tamerh them continuallye. (b) And therefore the hole worlde is nowe at rest and quietnesse, & men sing for ioye. Yea euen the fyre trees & Ceders of Libanus reioyse at thy fall, saying: Nowe that thou arte layde downe, there come no moore to destroye vs. (c) Hel also trembleth at thy commynge, all myghtye men and princes of the yearth, step forth before the. All kynges of the earth stande vp frome theyr seates, that they maye all (one after another) singe and speake vnto the: Art thou wounded also as we? arte thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pyrde is gone downe to hell. Mothes shalbe layde vnder the, and wormes shalbe thy couerynge.

Howe arte thou fallen frome heauen (d) Lucifer thou sayre mornyng chyldre: hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, thou that (not wythstanding) diddest subdue the people? And yet thou thoughtest in thyne herte: I will clyme vp into heauen, and make my seat aboue the stars of god. I will sit vpon the glorious mounte toward the North, I will clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wyll be lyke the hyghest of all. Yet dare I saye, that thou shalt be broughte downe to the depe of hell. They that se the, shall narrowly loke vpon the, and thyncke in themselves, sayinge: Is thys the man that broughte all landes in feare, and made the kyngdoms ascrayd? Is thys he that made the worlde in a maner waste, and layed the cyties to the grounde, whycher let not hys prysoners go home?

Howe happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lye, euerye one at home in hys owne palace, wyth worshyppe, and thou art caste oute of thy graue lyke a wyld? J. l. l. bzaunich, Branch, lyke as dead mennes raymente that are shot thorow wyth the swearde, as they that go downe to the stoness of the depe, as a deade carse that is troden vnder fete, and art not buryed wyth the? Euen because that thou haste wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. For the generacion of the wycked shalbe wythout honour, for euer. There shall a waye be soughte to destroy theyr chyldren, for theyr fathers wyckednes, they shall not come vp agayne to possesse the lande, and fill the world full of castels and towne.

I wyll stand vp agaynst them (sayeth the Lord of Hostes) and roote oute the name and generacion of Babylon (saith the Lord) and wyll geue it to the Otters, and wyll make water poddels of it. And I wyll swepe them oute wyth the besome of destruction, saith the Lord of Hostes. The Lord of Hostes hath sworne an othe, saying: It shall come to passe as I haue determined, and shall be fulfilled as I haue deuysed. The Assyrians shalbe destroyed in my lande, and vpon my mountaynes wyll I treade them vnder foote. Wherthorowe hys pocke shal come from you, and hys burthen shalbe taken from your shoulders. Thys deuysed hath God taken thorowe the hole worlde, and thus is hys hand stretched oute ouer al people. For if the Lord of Hostes determin a thyng: who wyll dysanulle it? And if he stretch forth hys hande, who wyll holde it in agayne?

The same yere that kynge Achaz died, God threatened by Esay on thys maner: Keiope not (o hole Palestina) as though the rod of hym that beatech the were broken, for out of the serpentess rote, ther shal waxe a cockatrice, and the scrupte shalbe a fyre worme. But the poore shal fede of the best thyngs, and the simple shal dwel in safety. Thy rotes wyll I destroy wyth hunger, and it shall slaye the remnaunte. Mourne ye portes, wepe ye cytyes, and feare thou (o hole Palestina) for there shall come fro the North a smoke, whose power no man may abyde. Who shal the mayntaine the messages of the Gentils? But the Lord stablisheth Sion, & the poore of my people shal put theyr trust in hym.

A prophecy agaynst Moab.

Thys is the heuie burthen vpon Moab. Ar of Moab was destroyed, (as me thoughte) in the nyght season. The walles of Moab perished in the nyght, and vanished away. They went to Bath and Dibon in the hye places, for to wepe. Moab dyd mourne fro Bebo to Medba. * Al theyr heades were (a) polled, and all their beards shaued. In theyr stretes were they gydded about wyth lacke clothe. In all the tops of theyr houses & stretes was ther nothyng, but mounyng and wepyng. Belebou and Eleale cryed, that theyr voyce was heard vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab bleated & cryed for very sorowe of theyr myndes. Wo is my hert for Moabs sake. They fled vnto the cytye of Zoar, whiche is lyke a fayre frutfull bullocke, they went vp to Lubith wepyng. The way towarde Horonaim was full of lamentacion for the hurte.

The waters of Rimmon were dyed by, the grasse was wythered, the herbes destroyed, and what necessary grene thyng ther was beside. In lyke maner the thyng was left the of their substance, they carried it by water to Araby. The crye went ouer the hole land of Moab, fro Eglaim vnto Ber was ther nothyng but mounyng. The waters of Dimon were full of blud, for the enemy hath sent thither a bod of men, whych as a lid, lay wayt for the resnait of the land, & for the they were escaped.

The Notes of the .xv. Chapter.

(a) In tymes past it was a token of mounyng to shau the heade, and to clyppe the bearde, and therfore sayeth the Prophete, that the Moabites cut awaye their hearres, for sorowe and carefullnesse. A lyke thyng haue ye in Jeremie. vii. c. Cut of thine hearre, and cast it away. &c.

The .xvi. Chapter.

The destruction of Moab.

Then sent the Lords of the land a man of warre, from the rocke that lieth toward the desert (a) vnto the hille of the daughter Syon. (For as for the daughters of Moab, they were as it had bene a tremblyng byde, that is put oute of her neste, by the ferpe of Arnon,) whiche messaunger sayed: gather youre counsell, come together (c) couer vs wyth your shadowe (d) in the myddaye, as the nyghte doeth: hyde the

B chased, and betray not them that are fled, let the persecuted Moabites dwell among you, be our open refuge against the destroyer: for the aduersary oppresseth vs, the robber vndoth vs, and the tirauntes dyspuech vs out of our land. But the throne of your kingdome is full of grace, therefore be that sitteth vpon it with faithfulness and truth in the house of David, knowe the thyng and do bys dyligence to helpe shortly, according to equitie and righteousnes. As for Moabs pryde (shall they answer) it is wel known. And although they be excellent proude arrogante, and bye mynded, yet is their strenght nothing lyke. And therefore Moab complaineth vnto Moab, where thorow they come al to mourne, and nowe that they be smytten, they take theyr deuyce beneth by the bypckewall, and make theyr complaynte.

Jer.xlviii.c.

The suburbs also of Hesebon, were made waste, and the wyrces of the Gentiles hewed down the vineyardes of Sibma, whych wer planted with noble grapes, and spread vnto Jaser, and went vnto the ende of the deserte, whose braunches stretched theyr selues forth beyond y sea. Therefore I mourned for Jaser, and for the vineyardes of Sibma, with greate sorowe I poured my teares vpon Hesebon and Eleale, for al theyr songes were layed downe, in theyr haruest and gatherynge of theyr grapes. Myrth and chere was gone out of the feld and vineyardes, in so muche, that no man was glad nor song. Ther went no treader into the vinepresse, theyr merve chere was layed downe. Wherefore my belly tumbled (as it had bene a lute) for Moabs sake, and myne inward members, for the bypck wals sake. For it happened thus also when Moab saw that she was turned vpsydedowne, she went vpon hye into her Sanctuarie, to make her prayer ther, but she myght not be healed. Whys is the deuice, which the Lord toke in hande at that tyme against Moab. But nowe the Lord sayth thus: In thye year shall the power of Moab with theyr pompe (which is great) be minished, lyke as the burthe of an hyred seruaunt. And as for the remnant of the, they shalbe lesse then a fewe, and not reckened muche worth.

A prophete agaynst Damascus.

A Whys is the heuy burthe vpon Damascus. Beholde, Damascus shall be no more a cytye, but an heape of broken stones. The cities of Aroer shall be waste: the cattel shall lye there, and no man shall fray them away. Ephraim shal no more be stronge; and Damascus shall no more be a kyngdom. And as for the glory of the remnant of the Sirtans, it shalbe as the glory of the children of Israel, sayth the Lord of hostes. At that time also shall the glory of Jacob be very poore, & his fatnes leane. It shal happen to them, as when one sheareth in haruest, which cutteth his handfull with the sickle, and when one gathereth the sheaves together in y valley, of (a) Raphaim, there remayneth yet some eares ouer. Or as when one shakerh an olive tree, whych syndeth but two or thre olue berres aboue in the toppe, and foure or fyue in the braunches. Thus the Lord God of Israel hath spoken.

Then shal man conuert agayne vnto his maker, and turne bys eyes to the holy one of Israel. And shal not turne to yaulters that are the worke of bys own hands, neither shal he looke vpon groues and ymagges, whych his syngers haue wrought. At the same tyme shall theyr strong cytyes be desolate, lyke as were ones the forsaken plowes and corne whych they forsoke, for feare of the chyldren of Israel.

So shalt thou (o Damascus) be desolate, because thou hast forgotten God thy saviour, and hast not called to remembraunce the rocke of my strength. Wherefore thou hast also set a fayre plante, and grafted a straunge braunche. In the day when thou dydest plante it, it was greate and gaue soone the fruit of thy seede. But in the day of haruest, thou shalt reape an heape of sorowes and mysfortunes.

Do be to the multitude of much people that rushe in lyke the sea, and to the heape of folk that run ouer al lyke great waters. For though so many people increase as the flowynge waters, and though they be armed, yet they shal be far of, and vanysh awaye lyke the dust with the wynde vpon an hill, and as the whyle winde thorow a storme. Though they be fearefull at nyght, yet in the moorning it is gone with them. Whys is theyr porcion that do vs harme, and heritage of them that robbe vs.

hath the Lord saped vnto me. I saped me down and pondered þ matter in my house at þ noone day when was it hote. And ther fel a misting shower, lyke a dew, as it vapeneth in haruest. But the frutes wer not yet ripe to cut of, & þ grapes wer but yong and greue. When one smote of the grapes wth an booke, yea, he hewed downe also the boughes and the braunches, & dyd cast the away. And thus they wer laied waste, for the soules of the mountaynes, and for beasts of the earth togyther. So that the soules sat therupon, and the beasts of the earth wintered ther. Then shal there be a present brought vnto the Lord of hostes: eue that harde folke, that fearefull folke, and that further is then this, that desperate & pylled folke (whose land is deuyded from vs wth floudes of water) vnto the place of the name of the Lord of hostes: euen vnto the hyl of Syon.

The .xix. Chapter.

The propheth shal agaynst Egypt.

Egypt is the heuy burthen vnto Egypt. Beholde, the Lord wyl (a) ryde vpon a swift cloude, & come into Egypt. And the Gods of Egypt shal tremble at his comming, and the hert of Egypte shal quake within her. For thus sayth the Lord: I wyl sitte vpon the Egyptians one agaynst another among the selues, so that one shalbe euer agaynst his brother and neyghboure, yea one cytye agaynst another, and one kyngdom agaynst another. And Egypt shalbe choked in her selfe. Whē they aske counsell at their gods, at their prophetes, at their Soothsayers, and Wyches, then wyl I brynge theyr counsel to naught.

I wyl deliuer Egypt also into the handes of greuous rulers, & a cruel kyng shal haue the rule of them (b). The water of the sea shalbe drawen out, Nilus shal synke away, and be dryen vp. The ryuers also shal be drawen out, the wels shal decrease and drye away. Reedes and rushes shal fayle, the grasse by the waters syde, or vpon the ryuers banke, yea, and what soeuer is sown by the waters, shalbe wythred, destroyed, & brought to naught. The fyshers shal mourn, al such as cast angells in þ water, shal complayne, and they that spredde theyr nets in the water shalbe saynt hearted. Such as labour vpon flaxe and sylke, shal come to pouertye, and they also that meane fine works. Al the pondes of Egypt, al the pollicy of theyr notes and dytches shal come to naught.

Yea the vndercrete Prynces of Ioan, the counsell of the wyl. Senarours of Itharao, shal turne to foolshynes. Those that dare boaste and saye of Itharao behalfe: I am come of wyse people, I am come of the old regal progeny. But wher at now thy wise men? Let them tel the and shewe the what the Lord of hostes hath taken in hande agaynst Egypt. Fooles are those Prynces of

Ioan, and proud are the Prynces of Noph, yea they disceine Egypt wth the noblytē of theyr stocke. For the Lord hath made Egypt droncken wth the spirit of errour, & and they shal vse it in al matters, euen like as a dronke man goeth spurning about. For Egypt shal lacke good counsell, so that they shal not know what to do, neyther begynnyng nor ende, neyther vpon the land neyther on the water.

Then shal the Egyptians be lyke vnto womē, afraied, and astoined, at the liffing vp of the head, which the Lord of hostes shal lyft vp ouer them. The lande of Iuda also shal make the Egyptians afraied, who so dothe but speake vpon it, shal put them in feare. And that because of þ counsell which the Lord of hostes hath deuised agaynst the. Then shal the true cities of Egypte speake wth þ Canaanites tong, and swear by the Lord of hostes, and Heliopolis shal be one of them. At the same tyme shal the Lord of hostes haue an alter in the myddest of the land of Egypt, wth this tytle therby: Wit to the Lord. This shal be a token or testimony vnto the Lord of hostes in the lande of Egypt, whē they shal crye vnto him, because of those that oppresse them, that he shal send them a captaine, and a Sauoure to deliuer them.

Moreover Egypt shalbe broughte vnto the Lord, & the Egyptians also shal knowe the Lord at the same tyme, they shal do him reuerence wth peace offrings, and wth meat offrings, they shal promise hym offrings, yea, and paye hym also. Thus the Lord shal smyte Egypt, and deale it again, so shal they turne to the Lord, and he also shal haue mercy vpon them, and saue them. There shal ther be a comen way out of Egypt into Assyria. The Assyrians shal come into Egypte, and the Egyptians into Assyria. The Egyptians also and the Assyrians shal bothe haue one Gods seruyce. Then shal Israel wth honour be the thyrd to Egypt and Assur. And the Lord of hostes shal blesse them, sayinge: Blessed is my people of the Egyptians, Assur is the woork of my handes, but Israel is myne inheritance.

The Notes of the .xix. Chapter.

(a) To ryde vpon a swift cloude is to vyllet and punyssh quickly and wth expedition: as the cloudes go swiftly in the ayre from region to region.
(b) The water of the sea shal be drawen out. i.e. Egypte (as scorpes shewe) receyueþ no rayne fourth of the ayre, but is ouerflowed wth the water Nilus at certayne tymes. iiii. xv. xvi. cubytes hygh from the ground. For if it increase to any lesse heygthe, the countrey escapeth not a dearth, saith Plinius. And therefore by þ scarcenesse and want of water is the desolation of the lande describēd. Nilus is here called by diuers names, somtyme þ sea, somtyme ryuers, somtyme wels, somtyme pōdes. &c. For þ floud runneth, vnto sundry waies, & it is called þ sea, not onli because þ hebrues cal al cōgregacions of waters þ sea, generally: but also because it was of old tyme a cōstat opiniō after þ scorpes þ it hath his originall beginnē beginning from the Ocean sea. Yea maye also vnderstand by the dynesse of Nilus, that it ouerflowed not the lande contrary to the old accustomed maner therof. Some had leuer haue this to be figurately applyed. As ther be certayne waters of the Gospel, whych the holy goste geth, so are there also the troublous waters of Egypt, that is, of worldly doctrine. Therefore when the word of God is once heard, those waters dry vp. For the holy goste reprehendeth the worlde of synne, and openeth and declareth the workes of darknes. In these waters do reedes and rushes growe, that is vayne and tryfelinge workes, such as are the workes of hypocrites, whych after the outward shew and appareance seeme greene and freshe, but are wythin vayne and nought worthe.

The. xx. Chapter.

Agaynst Egypt and Ethiopia.

In the same yere that Tharthan came to Asdod, when Sargon the kyng of the Assyrians sente hym, what tyme as he also besyged Asdod, and was in the same season. Then spake the Lord vnto Elay the sonne of Amoz, saying: go and lose of that sacke cloth from thy loynes, and put of thy shooes from thy feete. And so he dyd, going naked and bare foote. Then said the Lord: wher as my seruaunt Elay goeth naked and bare foote, it is a token and spygall of the thyng that after thre yere shal come vpon Egypt and Ethiopia. For euen thus shal the kyng of the Assyrians dye both yong and olde, as prisoners, naked & barefoote out of Egypt and Ethiopia. And shal dyscouer the shame of Egypte. They shalbe also at theyr wyttes ende, and ashamed one of another, the Egyptians of the Moorians, and the Moorians of the Egyptians, at the syght of theyr glory. Moreover they that dwel in the Isles, shal se euen the same day: behold, thys is oure hope, to whom we fled to seke help, that we myght be deliuered fro the kyng of the Assyrians. How wyl we escape?

The. xxi. Chapter.

Agaynst Babylon, Idumea, and Arabia.

Thys is the heuy burthen of the wast sea. A greuous vision was shewed me lyke as when a storme of wynde and rayne rusheth in from the wyldernes, that terrible land. Who so may dysceyue (sayd the voyce) let hym disceyue. Who so maye destroy, let hym destroy. Up Elan, besyge it, O Gadai, for I wyl styll all theyr grownges. Wyth thys the reynes of my backe were ful of payne. Danges came vpon me, as vpon a woman in her trauayle. When I herd it, I was abashed: and when I looked vp, I was afraied. Myne heart panted, I trembled for feare. (b). The darknes made me fearful in my mynde.

Yea soone make readye the table (sayd thys voyce) kepe the watche, & eat drynck. Up ye captaynes, take you to your shylde, for thus the Lord hath charged me, go thy way and set a watch man that he may tell what he seeth. And when he had wayted dyllygently, he saw two horsemen, the one tydyng vpon an asse, the other vpon a Camel. And the Lyon cryed: Lord, I haue stande waiting al the whole day, and haue kept my watche al the nyght. Wyth that came thre one tydyng vpon a charer, whych answered and sayd: Babylon is fallen, he is turned vpsyde downe, and all the ymages of her gods are smytte to the ground. This (O my felow threshers and fanners) haue I hearde of the Lord of hostes the God of Israel, to shew it vnto you.

The heuy burthen of Duma.

One of Seir cryed vnto me: Watch man what hast thou espyed by nyght? watche man, what hast thou espyed by nyght? The watch man answered. The day breaketh on, and the night is comming. Yf your request be earnest, then aske and come agayne.

The heuy burthen of Arabia.

At euen ye shal abyde in the wood, in the way to ward Dedanim. Here the thursty wyth water (O ye citezens of Tema) mete those wyth bread that are deadde. For they shal run awaye from the weapen, from the drawen swearde, from the bent bowe, and from the greate battayle. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: ouer a yere shal al the power of Cedar be gon, lyke as when the offyce of an hyred seruaunt goeth out. And the remnaunt of the good archers of Cedar, shal be very fewe. For the Lord god of Israel hath spoken it.

The Notes of the. xxi. Chapter.

(a) By the waste sea is vnderstand Babylon, he is so called, because of the excedyng great cruelties and tyranny, wher wyth it excrucyed the Jewes. Hereof is there a prouerbe: Babylon is a sea of euyls, and euen the waste of the sea, that is the most tempestuous and desolate place, and that is lest possyble to be sayled thowow.

A prophete agaynst Jerusalem.

The heuy burthen vpon the valley (a) of visions. What hast thou ther to do that thou clymme up into the house top, O thou city of myacles, sedicious and wyful: seying thy sayne men are neyther kylled wyth sword, nor dead in battel. For al thy captaynes get them to theyr horses from the ordinaunce, yea they are altogether ridden away, and fled far of. When I perceyued that, I sayd: away fro me, that I may wepe bytterly. Take no labour for to comfort me, as touchyng the destruccio of my people. For thys is the daye of the Lord of hostes, wherin he wyl plage, tread downe, and weede out the valley of vyssions, and breake down the wals, with such a cracke, that it shal geue a sounde in the mountaynes.

I sawe the Elamites take the quyuers to carre and to horse, and that the walles were bare from harnes. The goodly balles were ful of charers, the horsemen made the soone to besyge the gates. When was the

shal ye set the cystes in the wals of the city of Dauid, wherof there shal be manye. Ye shal gather together the waters of the lower poole, and tel the houses of Ierusalem, and breake of some of the to kepe the wals.
And ye shal make a pit betwixt þe two wals of the water of the old poole, and no thyng regard hym, that tooke it in hande, and made it. And at the same time shal the Lord of hostes cal men to weppunge, mountynge, to baldenes and puttyng on of sackcloth. But they to fulfil theyr lust & wilful-nes, do slaughter oxen, they kyl shepe, they cate coslye meate, and drynke wyne, & let heard of it, he said: yea, if thys wyckednes of yours shalbe remitted, ye must die for it.

This hath the Lord God of hostes spoken.

Thus sayeth the Lord God of hostes: go into the treasury vnto Sobua the gover-nour, and saye vnto hym: What hast thou here to do? and from whence comest thou that thou hast made the a graue here? For he had caused a cosly tombe of stone to be made for hym selfe, and a place to lye in; to be betwen out of a rocke. Behold, the Lord shal cast the out by violence, he wyl deke the of another fashyon, and put vpon the a straunge cloth. He shal cary the into a far country, lyke a bal with hys hands. Ther shal thou dye, there shal the pompe of thy charets haue an end, thou vyllen of þe house of the Lord, I wyl shute the out of thyne offyce, and put the from thyne estate.

After this wyl I cal my seruant Eliakym, the sonne of Belkyah, and aray hym wth thy cote, and gird hym with thy girdle, I wyl geue thy power into hys hand.
He shalbe a father of the citisens of Ieru-salem, and of the kynged of Iuda. I wyl also lay the *(b) kepe of Dauids house vpon hys shoulters, and if he open, no man shal shut, and if he do shut, no man shal open. I wyl fasten hym to a nayle in the place of the most hygh faythfulnes, and he shal be vpon the glorious troie of hys fathers house. They shal hang vpon him al the glori-of hys fathers house, of the chyldren and chyldeys chyldren, al apparell smal & great, al instrumentes of measure and musycke.
Thys shal come to passe (sayeth the Lorde of hostes.) when the nayle that is fastened to the place of the vyghest faythfulnesse, shal be plucked of. And when the weyghe that hangeth vpon it, shal fall, be broken, and betwen in peces. For the Lorde hym selfe hath sayed it.

The Notes of the. xxii. Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Tyrys, and a promise

The Prophecy

to restore it agayne.

A heuy butthe vpon Tyrys. Mourn A ye wyppes of Tharlis, for she is thro-wen downe to the ground, and conquered of the that are come from Cethim.
The indwellers of the Ilandes, the mar-chautes of Sidon, and they that occupie the sea (of whom thou wast ful sometyme) are at a point. For by sea wer the fruytes brought vnto the, and al maner of corne by water. Thou wast the comen market of al people. Sidon is sorow for it, yea and all the power of the sea complaineth, & sayth: O that I had neuer trauailed wth child, & that I had neuer borne any, that I hadde neither noyshed boye, nor broughte vypp daughter. As soone as Egypte perceueth it, she wyl be as sorow as Tyrys it selfe. So ouer the sea, mourn ye that dwell in the Iles: is not that the glorious city, whych hath bene of lōg antiquyte? whose natines dwellynge far of, commend her so greatly?
Who hath deuised such things vpon Tyrys the crowne of al cytyes, whose marchautes and captaines wer the highest and principal of the world? Euen the Lorde of hostes hath deuised it, that he may put down all pompe, and mynyshe all the glorie of the world. So thorow thy lād (O thou daughter of the sea) as men goo ouer the water, and ther is not a gydle more.

Thus the Lord that remoueth the king-domes, and hath taken in hande agaynst that myghty Canaan to roote it out, hath stretched out hys hande ouer the sea, and sayd: From hence shalt thou make no more mirth (O thou daughter of Sidon,) for thou shalt be put downe of the Cethims. Stand vp therfore, and go wher the enemy wil cary the, wher thou shalt also haue no rest.
Behold, (for thyne ensample.) The Chal-dyes were such a people, that no man was like them, Allur builded them, he set vp hys castels and palaces, and broke them doune agayne. And therfore mourn (ye shippes of þe sea,) for your power shalbe throwed down.

After that, shal the. lxx. yeres of Tyrys (euen as long as their kinges lyfe was) be forgotten. And after. lxx. yeres it shal happen to Tyrys as sayth an harlot that plateth vpon a Lute. Take thy Lute (saye men to her) and go about the cytye, thou art yet an vknownen wench, make pastime wth druers ballers, wherby thou mayest come into acquayntaunce. Thus shal it happen after thre score and ten yeres: The Lorde shal vsyre the cytye of Tyrys, and it shal come agayne to her marchaundysse, and shal occupie wth all the kyngedomes that be in the worlde. But all her occupy-inge and wyppynge, shalbe halowed vnto the Lorde. For then shal they laye vp nothyng beynde them nor vpon heapes, but the marchaundysse of Tyrys shal belonge vnto the citisens of the Lord, to the seding and susteynyng of the hongrye, and to the clothyng of the aged.

The. xxi. Chapter.

A prophete vpon the tribulation that ſhall ſal vpon the world, becauſe of ſynne.

Behold, the Lord ſhal waſte and plage the world, he ſhal make the face of the earth deſolate, and ſcatter abroad the inhabytours therof. The ſhal the (a) prieſt be as the people, & maiſter as the ſeruaunt, the dame lyke the mayde, the ſeller like the byer, he that lenderth vpon uſury, lyke vnto hym that borroweth vpon uſury, the creditorye, as the detter. Yea myſerably ſhal the world be waſted and cleane deſtroyed.
For the Lord hath ſo determynd in hym ſelfe. The earth ſhal be heuye and decaye.
The face of the earth ſhal peryſhe and fall away, the proude people of the world ſhal come to naught. For the earth is corrupte of her indwellers.

Whye? they haue offended the law, chaunged the ordynaunces, and made the
(b) euerlaſting teſtament of none effecte.
And therfore ſhal I curſe denout the earth, for they ſhal dwel thereon haue ſinned, wherfore they ſhal be vrent alſo, and thoſe that remayne ſhal be very few. The ſwete wine ſhal mourn, the grapes ſhal be weake, and al that haue bene merry in hert, ſhal ſighe.
The myſth of tabrets ſhal be laied downe, the chere of the ioyfull ſhall ceaſe, and the pleſure of lutes ſhal haue an end, ther ſhal no more wine be dronke with myſthe, the beere ſhal be bytter to them that drinke it, the wycked cities ſhal be broken downe, at houſes ſhal be ſhut & no man may come in.

In the ſtreſes ſhal ther be lyft by a cye becauſe of wyne, al mens chere ſhal vaniſh away, and al ioy of the earth ſhal paſſe. Deſolacion ſhal remaine in the cities, and the gates ſhal be ſmitten wyth waſtenes. For it ſhal happen vnto al landes and to al people, lyke as when a man ſmyteth downe the oliues, that are left vpon the tree, or ſe-kerth after grapes, when the wyne gatheryng is out. And thoſe ſame (that remain) ſhal lyft up theyr voice, & be glad, and ſhall magnify the glory of the Lord euen from the ſea, and prayſe the name of the Lorde God of Iſrael, in the vailetes and Ilands.
We heare ſonges ſong to the prayſe of the ryghteous, from al the endes of the world.

Therfore I muſt ſpeake: O myne vnfruit-fulnes, O my pouerty. Who is me, al is full of ſynners, whych offende of purpoſe and malice. And therfore, O thou that dwel-leſt vpon the earth, ther is at hand for the, feare, pyn, and ſnare. Who ſo eſcapeth the terrible cry, ſhal ſal into the pyn. And yf he come out of the pyn, he ſhal be taken wyth the ſnare. For the windowes aboue ſhal be opened, and the foundation of the earth ſhal d moue. The earth ſhal geue a great cracke, it ſhall haue a ſore ruine, and take an horrible ſal. The earth ſhal ſtacker like a broken man, and be taken awaye lyke a tent.
Her myſdedes ſhal lye ſo heauye vpon her,
that ſhe muſt fall, & neuer ryſe vp agayne.

At the ſame tyme ſhal the Lord muſter together the hye hoſt aboue, and the kynges of the world vpon the earth. Theſe ſhal be coupled together as pryſoners be, and ſhal be ſhut in one ward and puniſhed innumerable dayes. The Moone and the Sunne ſhal be aſhamed, when the Lorde of hoſtes ſhal rule them at Ieruſale vpon the moue Sion, befoze and with his excellēt counſel.

The Notes of the. xxi. Chapter.

ruleth the people, be it kyng or prynce, or other comen offycer. Jer. vi. c. And from the prophete vnto the prieſt. &c.

(b) Some doo vnderſtande by the euerlaſtinge Teſtament, not onely that whych was made to Abraham, Iſaac and Iacob, but alſo the law of nature, whych is wyttē in our hertes. Other vnderſtand therby the law of charity. For that is no newe commaundement, but a comaundement fro the beginning. The law of charity is the law of the ſpirit. He that loueth his neygh-bour hath fulfilled the law. Rom. xiii. Gal. v.

The. xxv. Chapter

A thankſgeuyng to God for his workes.

O Lord, thou art my God, I wyl praiſe the, and magnify thy name: For thou bringest maruelous things to paſſe, according to thine old counſels, trulſe and ſtedfaſtly. Thou makeſt of towneſ, heapes of ſtone, and head cities, broken wals. The palaces of the wycked deſtroyeſt thou out of the city, that they ſhal neuer be buylded agayne. Therfore ſo very rude people muſt magnify the, and ſo cities of the cruel bea-then muſt feare the. For thou art the poore mans heaſpe, a ſtrengthe for the needefull in his neceſſitye.

Thou art a defence againſt euil wether, & a ſhadow againſt the heate. But vnto the preſumptuous, thou art lyke a ſtrōg whirle wynde, that caſteth downe the boaiſting of the vngodly, thou kepeſt men from heate, wyth the ſhadow of the cloude, thou cutteſt of the branches of tyrauntes.

Moreouer the Lord of hoſtes ſhal once prepare a feaſt for al people vpon the hyl. & A plenteous, coſtly, pleaſaunt (a) feaſte, of fat and wel fed beaſtes of ſwete and moſte pure thyngs. Vpon the (b) hyl ſhal he take away the ſide vale that vangereth befoze the face of al the people, and ſo couering wherwith al Gentils are couered. As for deaſth, he ſhal utterly conſume it. The Lord God ſhal wype away the teares from al faces, and take awaye the conſuſion of his pec-ple thorow the whole world. For the Lord hymſelfe hath ſayd it.

At the ſame tyme ſhal it be ſayd: lo, this is our God in whom we put our truſt, and he healed vs. This is the Lord that we haue waited for. Let vs reioyce and delice in his deaſth. For the hande of the Lord ceaſeth vpon this hyl. But Moab ſhal be threſſed downe vnder hym, lyke as the ſtraw is tro-den vnder feete in a dounghyl. For he ſhal ſtretch out his handes vpon hym, lyke as a ſwymmer dothe to ſwymme. And wyth the power of his handes shall he cast down his hye pompe. As for his stronge holdes and hye wales, he shall bowe them, cast the downe, & sel them to the ground into dust.

The Notes of the xxvi. Chapter.

(a) By the feast of fat and well fed beastes, and of swete and most pure thynges, is betokened the anger and indignation of God, as the scripture doth often signifye the same, vnder the name of a cuppe. Zachary. xiii. a. Behold I wyl make Jerusalem a cup of surfeit vnto all the people that are rounde about her.

(b) By the hill is meant the hill of Sion, by which is figured the church. Ther wyl þ Lord iudge, and deliuer vs fro al our enemies. By the vale and couerpyng, vnderstand synne, wherein all me are found guilty. Rom. iii. All men haue synned.
etc. From it hath the Lord deliuered all menne whych beleue, he hath freely done it, of his only mercy for Christes sake, and not of theyr deseruynges. Roma. iii. d.

The xxvi. Chapter.

A longe for the deliuerance of the people.

The shall this song be song in the land of Iuda: We haue a strong citie, the wals and the ordinaunce shall kepe vs.

Open the gates, that the good people may go in, whych labourerth for the truth.
And thou whych art the doze, and hast the matter in hande, shalte prouide for peace, euen the peace that menne hope for in the.
Hope styll in the Lord, for in the Lord God is euerylasting strength. For why, it is he that bringerth low the hye minded citie-sins, and casteth downe the proude cityes.
He casteth them to the grounde, yea, euē in the myre, that they maye be troden vnder the fecte of the symple, and wylth the steps of the poore.

Thou (Lord) considerest the pathe of the righteous, whether it be right, whether þ way of the righteous be righte. Therefore

(Lord) we haue a respect vnto the waye of thy iudgementes: thy name and thy re-membraunce reioyce the soule. My soule lufreth after the al the night long, & my mind hasteth freely to the. For as soone as thy iudgement is knowe to the worlde, the the inhabitours of þ earth learn rightousnes.
But the vngodly (though he haue recei-ued grace) yet learneth he not rightousnes but in that place wher he is punished, he offenderth, & feareth not þ glory of the Lord.

Lord, they shall not se thine hye bad, but they wil se it, and be confounded, whē thou shalt deuour them wylth the wrath of thy people, and wylth þ fyre of thyne enemies.

But vnto vs O Lord, prouide for peace, for thou workest in vs al our workes. O Lord our God, though such lords haue domina-cion vpon vs as know not the, yet graunte that we may hope only in the, and kepe thy name in remembrance. The malicious Tirauntes when they dye, are neither in lyfe nor in the resurrection, for thou vilitest the the endes of the worlde. The people that seke vnto the in trouble, that same aduersitye whych they complaine of, is vnto the a chastenyng before the. Like as a wyfe wylth chylde (when her traunple cometh vpon her) is a shamed, cryeth, and suffereth the payne. Euen so are we, O Lord, in thy syght. We ar wylth chylde, we traunple, and beare, and wylth spirit we bringe forth the belch, wher thow þ earth is vnderstroied, & the inhabitours of the worlde perish not.

But as for thy dead me and ours, that be departed, they are in life and resurrection. They lye in the earthe, they wake, and haue toye, for thy deue is a new of life and lyght. But the place of þ malicious tiraun-tes is fallen away. So go now my people into thy chamber, and shut the doze to the,
and suffer now the twinklyng of an eye, till the wrath be ouer past. For behold, the Lord wyl go out of his habitacion, and visit the wyckednes of them that dwel vpon earth. He wyl discover the bloude that the hath deuoured, the shall neuer hide the that he hath murdered.

The xxvii. Chapter.

The prophet's al realmes shall be destroyed about the coming of Christe.

mind. Who wil compel me, that I greatly forgettynge al fayrfulnes should burne it vpon at ones wylth thornes and bushes? Or who wil enforce me to kepe or make peace?
It wil come to this point, that Iacob shal be rooted agayne, and I Israel shal be grene, and beate floures, and they shal fil the hole worlde wylth theyr fruyte. Smyteth he not his smyter, as euyl as he is smyten hym self? Destroyerth he not the murderers, as he is murdered? Euery man recompenseth wylth the measure that he receaueth. He musterth vpon his sore winde as vpon þ dates of extreme heate. And therefore shal the inquity of Iacob be thus reconyled. And so shal he take away al the frut of his synnes.

As for aulter stones he shal make the as stones beaten to poulder, the groues and ydols shal not stand. The strong cities shal be desolate, and the sayre cities shal be left lyke a wyldernes. The carrel shal feede and lye ther, and the shepe shal eat it vp. Their baruest shal be brent, theyr wyues whych were theyr betwyl when they came for the, shal be defiled. For it is a people wylthoute vnderstanding, and therefore he that created them, shal not fauour them, and he þ made them shal not be merciful to them. In that

Behold, the ſtrength and power of the Lord ſhal breake into the land on euery ſyde, lyke a tempeſt of hayle that beareth downe ſtrong holdes, and lyke an horrible, mighti, and ouerflowing water. (b) What is he amonge theſe, that can teach inſtruct or enſourme the chyldre, which are weaned from ſucke, or taken fro the breaſts, of any other faſhion then? Commaund that may be commaunded, byd that may be bidden, forbidd that may be forbydden, kepe back that may be kept back, here a litle, ther a litle. And therfore the Lord alſo ſhal ſpeake wyth liſpyng lyps, & wyth a ſtraunge language vnto this people, to whom he ſpake afore of this maner. Thys ſhal bringe reſt. If one reſreſhe the wearye, yea, thys ſhal bringe reſt. But they had no wyl to hear. And therfore ſhall the Lord ſhall anſwer their ſubburnes. Commaund that may be commaunded, byd that may be bidden, forbyd that may be forbidden, kepe backe that may be kept backe, here a litle, ther a litle. That they may go forth, ſal backe: ward, be brooked, ſtared, and taken. Whet fore bear the word of the Lord, ye mockers that rule the Lordes people, whiche is at Ieruſalem. For ye comforte your ſelues thus: Tuſhe, death and we are at a poynt, and as for hel, we haue made a condycion with it, & though he ther breake out any ſore plage, it ſhal not come vpon vs. For wyth dyſcepte wyl we eſcape, and wyth nimbles nes wyl we deſende our ſelues. Therfore ſayth the Lord God: Behold, I wyl laye a ſtone in Sion, a great ſtone, a coſtly* corner ſtone for a ſure foundacion, that who ſo putteth hys truſt in hym, ſhal not be confounded. Anyghteouſnes wyl I ſet by agayne in the balaunce, and iudgement in the weyghes. The tempeſt of haile ſhal take awaye your refuge, that ye haue to diſceine with: al, and the ouerflowing waters ſhal break downe your ſtrong holdes of dyſſimulation. Thus the appoyntment that ye haue made wyth death, ſhal be done awaye: and the condycion that ye made wyth hel, ſhall not ſtand. When the great deſtruction goeth thowowe, it ſhal al to tread you. It ſhal take you quyte away before it. For it ſhall go forth early in the morning, and conrynue onely that daye and that nyghte. And the very feare only ſhall teache you when ye heare it. For the bed ſhal be ſo narrowe, that a man can not lye vpon it. And the coueryng ſo ſmal, that a man may not wende hym ſelfe cheriſht. For the Lord ſhall ſteppe forth as he dyd vpon the moſt* Berazin, and ſhal take on as he dyd vpon the* dape of Sabaon, that he may bring forth the hys deuice, hys (d) ſtraunge deuyce, and fulfill hys worke, hys wonderfull worke. And therfore make no mockes at it, that your captiuitie increaſe not, for I haue heard the Lord of hoſtes ſay, that ther ſhal come a ſodayne deſtruction and plage vpon the hole earth. Take heede and heare my voyce, ponder and marke my wordes wel. Boeth not the houſband mā euer in due ſeaſon earneſtly to hys land: he moueth and ploweth his ground to ſow. And when he hath made it plaine, he ſoweth it with ſitches or comin. He ſoweth the wheate and Barly in theyr place, Milium and Rye alſo in theyr place. And that he maye doo it ryghte, hys God teacheth hym and ſheweth hym. For he treadeth not the ſitches out wyth a wain, neyther bringeth he the carre here and there ouer the comin, but he threſheth the ſitches oute wyth a flayle, and the comyn wyth a rodde. But the wheate he gryneth to make breade therof: In as muche as he can not bring it to paſſe wyth treadyng oute. For neyther the broosyng that the carre wheelles make, nor hys beaſtes can grinde it. This and ſuch lyke thynges come of the Lord of hoſtes, whiche is mar-

The. xxix. Chapter.

The destruction of Jerusalem. Agaynst the commaundementes of men.

Whe vnto the, O Arpell, thou cypre that Dauid wan. Take per some peares, and let some feastes yet passe ouer: the shal Arpel be besyged, so that the shal be heuy and sorowful, and shal be vnto me euen as a Lyon. For I wyl lay spege to the round about, and keepe the in wyth towers, and graue vp dykes agaynst the.
And thou shalt be brought low, and speake out of the earth, and thy woordes shal goo hūbly out of the ground. Thy voyce shal come out of the earthe, lyke the voyce of a wyche, and thy talkynge shal groue oute of the myre. For the multitude of thine ennymes shalbe (a) lyke mele duste. (b) And the number of tyaunts shalbe as the dust that the wynde taketh awaye sodaynely.
Thou shalt be vspted of the Lord of hostis wyth thunder, earthquake, and wyth a great cracke, with the whyle wynde, tempest, and wyth the flame of a consumynge fyre. But now the multitude of al the people that went out agaynst Arpell, the hole host, the strong holdes, and spege, is lyke a dreame whych appeareth in the nyght. It is lyke as when an hungry mā dreameth that he is eatynge, and when he waketh, he hath nothyng: lyke as when a thyrsty mā dreameth that he is drynkynge, and when he waketh, he is saynte, and bys soule vn-pacyente.

So is the multytude of all people that muster them selues agaynst the hpl of Sy-on. But ye shal be at your wits end, ye shal be abashed, ye shal stacker and reele to and fro. (c) Ye shal be dronke, but not of wine.
Yea, ye shal sal, but not thoro we dronkennesse. For the Lord shal geue you an harde sleepynge spyte, and hold down your eyes:

namely your Prophetes and heads which should see, them shal be couer. And al vysions shal be vnto you, as the woordes that stande in a sealed letter, when one offereth it to a man that is learned, and saith: read vs this letter. Then he answereth: I can no reade it, for it is shutte. But if it be gyuen to one that is not learned, or sayed vnto hym: reade this letter. Then sayth he:
I cannot reade.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: For vs much as the people draweth vnto me wyth theyr mouth, and prayseth me byghlye wyth theyr lyppes (where as theyr hearte neuerthelesse is farre fro me, and the feare whyche they owe vnto me, that turne they to mennes lawes and doctrynes) therefore wyl I also shewe vnto this people a marueylous terribble and greate thyng.

(Namely this:) I wyl destroy the wyldome of theyr wise, and the vnderstanding of theyr learned men shal perishe. Wo be vnto them that seeke so deepe to hyde their ymagination before the Lord, whyche reherse theyr counsels in darkenes, and say:
who seeth vs, or who knoweth vs: Whyche ymagnacion of poures is euen as when the potters clay taketh anyfement, as though the worke myght say to the worke master: make me not: or as when an earthen vessel sayth of the potter: be vnderstandeth not. (d) Se ye not that it is harde by,
that Libanus shalbe turned into Charnel and that Charnel shalbe take as a wood: Then shal deaf men vnderstand the woordes of the booke, and the eyes of the blinde shal se wythout any cloude or darkenesse.
The oppressed shal hold a mery feast in the Lorde, and the poore people shal reioyse in the holy one of Israel.

Then shal the furious people cease, and the mockers shalbe put away, and al they that do wronge, shalbe plucked out, suche as laboure to drawe men vnto spūe, and that dysceane hym, which reprouerd them in (e) the gate, and such as turne good persons to vanytye. And therefore the Lorde (euen the defender of Abraham) saith thus vnto the house of Jacob.

Nowe shal not Jacob be ashamed, nor his face confounded, when he seeth among his children (whom my hands haue made) such as valow my name amongs the, that they may sanctifye the holy one of Jacob, and feare the God of Israel, and that they whyche afore tyme were of an erronous spirit, haue now vnderstandynge, and that such as before could not speake, are now learned in my lawe.

The Notes of the. xxix. Chapter.

that it not be so then, but as I wyll nowe shewe the: thou shalt be vpsyted and punyshed of the Lord, euen as when althynges tremble for fear of the thunder, whyche no man can elchue: and as when the earthquake shaketh al that ther is wyth an horryble and feareful sounde: a storme and tempest shall ouerthrowe the, and wyth the flame of fyre shalt thou be deuoured.

(c) That is, ye shall be dronken that ye shall not wete what to do, ye shall be so cleane destitute of counsell, not of the wyne that ye shall drynke, for ye shall suffer extreame thyrt, and the wyne of recreation and myght shall ye not taste of. Ye shall be feble, and fal as ye goo, ye shall be rennagates for the confuston, feare, hate, and persecution of al men: not for dronkenness or stronge drynche, whych ye shall want. Some expound this sentece of them that be dronken in hypocrisy and dysimulation: and of them that be ful of the ryghteousnes of theyr owne workes.

(d) As though he should saye: It is not long to, that goodly trees (whyche are sygnified by Libanus) shall be turned into playne feldes. The tyme that Christ should come, is the short tyme he meaneth, whych the scripture dothe ofte call a short tyme. The which the vnfruteful rough and woddye heathnesse (whyche is vnderstande by Libanus) he turned vnto the region of Chrystes congregacion or church, and vnto the true seruice of the true God (which is vnderstande by Chamel) that frutefull and well tyllid felde.

The. xxx. Chapter.

A curse agaynst them that forsake the counsell of God, and stycke vnto the counsell of men. He threatneth the reste of the people, whych after the destruction of Ierusalem went into Egipte.

Vho be to those thynkyng chylidren (sayth the Lord) whych seke counsell, but not at me, whyche take a web in hand, but not after my wyl, that they may heape one synne vpon an other. They goo downe into Egipte (and aske me no counsell) to seke helpe at the power of Pharaos, and comfort in the shadow of the Egypciens. But Pharaos helpe shall be your confusion, and the comforte in the Egypciens shadow shall be your owne shame. Your rulers haue bene at zoan, and your messengers came vnto Hanes. But ye shall all be ashamed of the people that maye not helpe you, whych shall not bring you strength or comforte, but shame and confusyon.

W Your beasts haue borne burthens vpon theyr backs toward the south, thorow the way that is ful of peryll & trouble, because of the lyon and lionesse, of the Cockatrice and scalyng draggon. Yea the mules bare your substance, and the Camels brought your treasure vpon theyr crooked backs, vnto a people that can not helpe you. For the Egypciens helpe shall be but vaine and lost. Therefore I tolde you also that your pryde shoulde haue an ende. Wherefore go hence and wyte them thys in theyr tables, and note it in a booke: that it may remayne by theyr posterity, and be styl kept.

For it is an obstynate people, vnfaithfull chylidren, chylidren that wil not hear the law of the Lord. They dare say to the Prophetes: medle with nothing, & vnto the soothsayers, tel vs of nothing for to come, but speake frendly words vnto vs, & preach vs false things. Tread out of the way, go out of the pathe, turne the holi one of Israel from vs. Therefore thus saith the holi one of Israel: for asmuch as ye haue cast of your beuty, & comforted your selues wyth power & nimbleness, and put your confidence therein: therefore shall ye haue thys mischpyse agayn for your destruccio and fal, lyke as an hie wal that falleth because of some ryft (or blast) whose breaking commeth sodenly.

And your destruccio shall be as an earthe pot which breaketh, nomā touching it: yea & breaketh so sore, that a mā shall not fynde a shewer of it to fetch fyre in, or to take water ther wyth out of the pyt. For the Lord God, euen the holi one of Israel hath promised thus: Wyth stil sitting and rest shall ye be healed, in quyetnesse and hope shall your strength lye. Notwithstanding ye regard it not, but ye wyll saye: No, for thus are we constrained to lye vpon horses. And therefore shall ye lye, we must ride vpon swift beastes, and therefore your persecuters shall yet be swifter. A thousand of you shall dye for one, or at the most for foue, which do but only geue you euyl wordes: yll ye be desolate as a thyp. mast vpon an hie mountein, and as a beaken vpon an hyl.

Yet standeth the Lord waitinge, that he may haue merce vpon you, & lyftech hym selfe vp, that he may receiue you to grace. For the Lord God is righteous, happy are al they that wait for him. For thus (o thou people of Syon, & ye citizens of Ierusalem) shall ye neuer be in heauines, for doubtlesse he wyll haue merce vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of the cry, he wil help the. The Lord giueth you the (a) breade of aduersity, & the water of trouble. But thine instructor styeth not far from thee: if thine eyes loke vnto thine instructor, & thine ear harkē to his word, & crieth after the, & sayeth: this is the way, go this, & turne neyther to the right hand, neither to the left.

Moreover if ye destroy the syluer workes of your ydols, & cast away the golde copes that ye dect the with (as sylthynes) & say: get you hence, then wyll be geue rapne to the seede, that ye shall sow in the earth, and geue you bread of the increase of the earth, so that all shall be plentuous and abundant. Thy catel also shall be feede in the broad medowes, yea, thine oren and gyles that tye the ground shall eat good fodder, which is purged with the fanne. Goodly riuers shall flowe oute of al hys mountaynes and hylles. In the daye of the great slaughter when the towers shall fal, the Moone shall shyne as the Sunne. And the Sunne shall be seuen fold, and haue as much shyne as in seuen dayes besyde.

In that day shall the Lord bynde by the brooked sores of the people, and heale their woundes. Behold, the glorie of the Lord shall come from farre, his face shall burne that no manne shall be able to abyde it, his lippes shall wagge for verie indignacion, and his tounge shall be as a consuming fyre. His breath lyke a vehemente floude of water whiche goeth vp to the throte. That he may take away the people which haue turned them selues to vanyte, and the bydle of erreure, that lyeth in other folkes chawes.

But ye shall sing as they vse in the nyght of the holy solemnity. Ye shall reioyse from your vert, as they that come wyth þe pyper, when they go by to the mount of the Lord, vnto the rocke of Israell. The Lord also shall set by the power of his voyce, and declare his terribile arme, wyth his angre countenance, yea and the flame of the consuming fyre, wyth earthquake, tempest of wynde, and hayle stones. Then shall the Assyrians fear also, because of the voyce of the Lord whych shall smyte hym wyth the rod. And the same rod whych the Lord wil send vpon hym, shall moue the whole foundation: wyth trumpet, wyth noyse of war and battaile to destroy. For he hath prepared the fyre of payne from the begynnyng, yea euen for kynges also. Whys hathe he made depe and wyde, the noything therof is fyre and wood innumerable, whych the breath of the Lord kyndleth as it were a matche of byrmstone.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

He curseth them that forsake God, and seeke for the helpe of men.

AVoid be vnto them that go down into Egypt for helpe, and truste in horses, and comfort them selues in chariots, because they be many, and in horsemen, because they be lusty and strong. But they regard not the holpe one of Israell, and they aske no question at the Lord. Where as he neuertheles plageth the wycked, and yet goeth not from his woorde, when he stepeth forth and taketh the victorie agaynst the household of the froward, and agaynst the helpe of euyl doers. Nowe the Egyptians are men, and not God, and theyr horses fleshe, and not spirite. And as soone as the Lord stretcheth out his hand, then shall the helpe fall, and he that shoulde haue bene helped, and shall altogether be destroyed. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Lyke as the Lyon, or Lyons whelpe roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayed though the multitude of shepherdes cry out vpon hym, neyther abashed for al the heape of them: So shall the Lord of hostes come downe from the mount of Sion, and defend, his hyll. Lyke as byrdes flutter about their nestes, so shall the Lord of hostes kepe, saue, defende, and deliuer Ierusalem. Therefore, O ye chyldren of Israell, turne agayne, lyke as ye haue exceded in your going backe. For in that day every man shall cast out his ydols of syluer and golde, whiche ye haue made wyth your synful bande. (a) Assur also shall be slayne wyth the swerde, not wyth a mans swerde. A swerd shall deuoute hym, but no mans swearde. And he shall flye from the slaughter, and his seruantes shall be taken prisoners. He shall go for fear to his strong holds, and his princes shall flye from his badge. Whys hathe the Lord spoken, whose lyght burneth in Sion, and his fyre in Ierusalem.

The Notes of the. xxxi. Chapter.

(a) Assur shall be slayne wyth the swerd &c. The Prophet should here seeme to prophesye of the great destruction that happened vnto Sennacherib. ii. Paral. xxxi. e. & Eay. xxxv. g. whiche was done by the swerd of the angell, not by the swerd of man, as ye may ther se. Sennacherib was the kyng of Assyria, and therfore is the destruction of the Assyrians whych happened vnder hym, signified by this worde Assur. Some (because the Prophet a lytle before in the texte, moueth the people to forsake Idols) expound it thus. Not by our ydols, not by our strength, not by mannes helpe (whiche al maye be called the swerd of man) shall our spiritual enemy which is signified by Assur perishe: but by the power of God, and the invincible swerd that can not be sen: wyth which the angel slew. clxxxv. thousand in one nyght. The. xxxi. Chapter.

The condicions of good rulers and officers

BEhold, the kyng shall gouerne after the rule of rightuousnes, and the princes shall rule accordyng to the ballaunce of equitye. He shall be vnto men as a defence for the winde, and as a refuge for the tempest, lyke as a ryuer of water in a thursty place, and the shadow of a great rocke in a drye land. The eyes of the seying shall not be dymme, and the eares of them that heare, shall take dyligente heede. The hert of the vntowse shall attayne to knowledge, and the vnpersyte tounge shall speake playnly and distinctly. Then shall the nigard be no more called gentle, ne þe churle lyberall. But the churle wyll be churlyshly mynded, & his bert wil worke euil & play the hypocrite, & imagin abhominacions agaynst God, to make þe hugre leane, & to withhold drynk fro the thursty. These are the perylous weapons of the couetous, these be his shameful counsailes: that he maye begyle the poore wyth dysceytfull workes, yea euen ther as he shoulde geue sentence wyth the poore. But the lyberall person ymagyneth honest thynges, and cometh by wyth honesty.

A ryse (ye ryche and ydle cittytes) harken vnto my voyce. Ye carelesse cittytes, marke my words. After peares and daies shall ye be be brought in leare, & ye carelesse cytyes. For harvest shall be oute, and the Grapes gatherynge shall not come, & ye ryche & ble cytyes, ye that feare no peryll, ye shall be abashed and remoued: when ye se barrennes, the nakednes and preparynge to war: Ye shall knocke vpon your brestes, because of the pleasaunte fiede, and because of the fruitfull vineyard, My peoples fiede shall bring thornes & thistles, for in euery house is voluptuousnes, and in the citie wilfulness. The palaces also shall be broken, & the greatly occupied cytyes, desolate. The towers and bulwarkes, shall become denues for euermore, the pleasure of mules shall be touned to pasture for shepe: vnto & tyme & the spirit be powred vpon vs from aboue.

D Then shall the wyldernes be a fruitfull field, and the plenteous field shall be reckened for a wood. Then shall equity dwell in the desert, and ryghtuousnes in a fruitful lande. And the rewarde of ryghteousnesse shall be peace, and her fruite rest and quietnesse for euer. And my people shall dwell in the Innies of peace, in my tabernacle and pleasure, wher ther is ynough in them all. And when the hail faileth, it shall fall in the wood and in the cytye. & how happy shall ye be when ye shall safely come to your sede besyde al waters, and dryue thither the feete of your oxen and asses.

The .xxxiii. Chapter.

Threatnyng agaynst the Assyrians. A description of them that shall be the Lord.

Therefore woo be vnto thee, o robber, shalt not thou be robbed also? and vnto the that laiest wayte, as who saye, ther should no waite be layed for the? Wo vnto the whych doest hurte, enen so shalt thou be hurt also. And as thou laiest wait, so shalt wayte be layed for the also.

Lord be merciful vnto vs, we wayte for the. Thine arme is at a point to visite vs, but be thou our helth in & tyme of trouble. Braunt that the people may flie at the angre of thy voice, and that at thy vpryding the Gentyls may be scattered abroad, and that theyr (a) spoule maye be gathered, as the greshoppers are comenly gathered together into the pytte. Stande vp Lorde, thou that dwellest on hye. Let Sion be filled wth equitye and ryghtuousnesse.

Lette truthe and faythfulnesse be in her tyme: power, healtbe, wysedome, knowledge, and the feare of God are her treasure. Beholde, theyr aungels crye wth oute, the messengers of peace weepe bitterly. The stretes are waste, ther walketh no man therein, the appoyntmente is broken, the cytyes are despyled, they are not regarded, the desolate earthe is in heauynesse. Lybanus taketh it but for a spoyle, that it is heuen downe: Saron is lyke a wilderness: Basan and Charnell are turned vpsyde downe. And therefore sayth the Lorde: I wyl vp, nowe wyl I get vp, nowe wyl I aryse. (b) Ye shall conceyue stubble and beare straw, and your (c) spyrite shall be the fyre, that it maye consume you: and the people shall be burnt lyke tyme, and as thornes burne that are vntwene of, and caste in the fyre.

Nowe hearken to ye that are farre of, howe I doo wth them, and consyder my glorie, ye that be at hande. The spynners at Sion are astryed, a sodayne fearfulness is come vpon the pproctes. What is he among vs, saye they, that wyl dwell by that consuming fyre? Whych of vs may abyde that euerlastyng heate? He that leadeth a godly lyfe. (say I) and speaketh the truthe: He that abhorreth to dooe violence and dysceyte: he that keepeth his hand that he touche no rewarde: whych stoppeth his eares that he heare no counceyl against the innocent: whych holdeth downe his eyes that he se none euyl.

He it is that shall dwell on hye, whose sauegarde shall be in the true rocke, to him shall be geuen the ryghte true meate and drynke. His eyes shall se the kynge in his glorie, and in the wyde worlde, and his heart shall desyre in the seate of God.

What shall then become of the Scribes of the Senatoure? What of hym that reacheth chyldren? There shalt thou not see a people of a strange tounge to haue so dysfused a language that it maye not be vnderstand: neyther so straunge a speech but it shall be perceyued.

Ther shall Syon be sene, the head cytie of our solempne feastes. There shall thynne eyes see Hierusalem, that glorious habytation: the tabernacle that neuer shall remoue, whose nayles shall neuer be take out worlde wythoute ende, whose cordes eue tychon shall neuer corrupte: for the glorious maiestye of the Lord shall ther be present amonge vs. In that place wher sayre broade ryuers and streames are, shall neyther Saley towne, nor great ship sayle. For & lord shall be our captayn, the Lord shall be our law gyuer. The Lord shall be our king, and he hym selfe shall be our sautour. Ther are the cordes so layed abroad, that they cannot be better. The mast set vp of such a facyon, that no banner nor sayle hangeth thereon: but there is dealed greate spoyle, yea lame men runne after the pray. There lynch no manne that sayeth: I am speke, but al euyl is taken awaye from the people that dwell there.

The Notes of the .xxxiii. Chapter.

(a) Theyr spoule, that is, of the Assyrians. It shoulde seeme that theyr spoule was so gathered after that the Aungell hadde destroyed the host of Sennacherib. iiii. Regum. xix. ii. Paralipo. xxi. e. Clay. xxxvii. g.

(b) By the conceyvinge is vnderstande the thought and ymaginacion, & by the learning or bringyng forth, the work. The Assyrians thought to take the citie of Hierusalem, but theyr thoughte was in vayne, and they: woorkte of none effecte. Wherupon they are counted to conceyue stubble and bring forth strawe.

(c) Your spirit. i.e. That is, your proud thoughts and Imaginacion shal be the verpe fyre that shal deuoure you: and the cause wherfore p lord shal send out hys angel to destroy you.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

The last destruction of the Synagoge, in which the kingdom and priesthode of that people was translated to the Church and congregation of Christ.

Come ye Deathe and beare, take hede ye people. Harken thou earth, and al that is therein: thou founde compasse and al that groweth thereupon, for the lord is angry wth al people, and hys dyspleasure is kyndled agaynst all the multitude of them, to curse them, and to sleve the. So that they: shal be cast out, and they: bodies stynke: that euen the very hills shal be wete wth the blood of them. Al p stars of heauen shal be consumed, and the heauē shal fold together lyke a rol, and al p stars therof shal fall, lyke as the leaues fall from the vynes and fyg trees. For my swearde (say the he) shal be bathed in heauen, and shal immediatly come downe vpon Idumea, and vpon the people whiche I haue cursed for my vengeance.

B And the Lords swerd shal be ful of blud, and be rusty wth the fatnes and blood of lambes and goates, wth the fatnes of the kydneyes of wethers. For the Lord shal kyl a great offering in Bosra, and in the land of Idumea. There shal the Antycoines fall wth the Bulles (that is wth the gassits) and they: land shal be washed wth blood, and they: ground corrupte wth fatnesse.

Esa. lxxiii. a Unto the also (D Sion) shal come the day of the vengeance of God, and the peare when thynne owne iudgements shal be recompensed. Thy floudes shal be turned to pytch, and thynne earthe to byrmstone, and therwth shal the land be kyndled, so that it shal not be quenched day nor nyght: but smoke euermore, and so forth to lye waste. And no man shal go thorowe thy lande for euer: but Bellicans, Strokes, great oules, and Trauers that haue it in possession, and dwell therein.

E For God shal spred out the lyne of desolation vpon it, & weygh it wth the stones of emptines. When kynges are called vpon, ther shal be none, and al princes shal be away. Thornes shal growe in they: palaces, nettels and thystels in they: strōghol-des, that the dragons may haue they: pleasure therein, and that they may be a court for Estriches. Ther shal straunge bysures, and monstrous beasts mete one another, and the wylde keepe companye together. Ther shal the Lamia lie, and haue her lodgynge. There shal the hedgehog build, dyg, be ther at home, and bring forth his yong ones. There shal the kyttes come together as the one to hys lyke.

Seeke thorowe the Scrypture of the Lord, and read it. There shal none of these thynges be left out, there shal not one (ne suche lyke) sayle. For what hys mouth commaundeth, that same doth hys spryte gather together (or fulfilleth). Vpon whom so euer the lot falleth, or to whom he dealeth it wth the lyne: those shal possesse the enheritaunce from generation to generation, and dwell therein.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

Of the tyme and kyngedome of Christ.

But the (a) wylbernes shal reioyse, the waste grounde shal be gladde, and floorysh as the Aylpe. She shal noorysh pleasure, and be ioyful, and euer be geuyng of thankes more and more. For p glory of Libanus, the beuty of Chamel & Saron shal be geuen her. These shal knowe the honoure of the Lorde, and the maiestye of our God. And therfore strengthen the weake handes, and comforte the feable knees.

Say vnto the that are of a fearful hert: be of good chere and fear not. Behold your God cometh to take vengeance and to rewarde. God cometh hys own self, and wyl delouer you. Then shal the eyes of the blynde be lightened, and the care of p deaf Math. xv. c opened. Then shal the lame man (b) leape as an harte, and the domme mans tounge shal geue thankes.

In the wylbernes also ther shal welles spryng, and floudes of water in the desert. The drye ground shal turne to ryuers, and the thyrstye to sprynges of water. Where as Dragons dwelt afore, ther shal growe sweete floures and greene rushes. There shal be foote pathes, and common stretes, this shal be called the (c) holy way. No vn-cleane persō shal go thorow it, for the Lord hym selfe shal goo wth them that waye, and the ygnorante shal not erre. There shal be no lpon, and no rauyngynge beaste shal come therein, nor be ther, but men shal go there free and safe. And the redemed of the Lord shal conuerte, and come to Spon wth thankes geuyng. Euerlastinge ioye shal they haue, pleasure and gladnes shal be among them. And al sorow and heauyness shal vanyshe away.

The Notes of the. xxxv. Chapter.

(a) By the deserte and wylbernes is signyfied the countrey of heathen, whiche were wythout grace, and wythout the fruite of good and vertuous lyuynge. Isa. lvi. d. It is a borrowed speache taken of the roughnes and vnfrutefulnes of the wylbernes.

(b) By this leape is vnderstande the reioysynge, chearefulness, and quyknes of the spryt. Can. ii. b. is ther a lyke thing, of the spouse: that cometh hoppynge vpon the mountaynes. Wher he here sayeth, the blynde shal se, the deafe here. i.e. the prophesyeth a manifest sygne of the comynge of Christ, and of the callynge of the Gentyllis and heathen, and of the kyngdome of god in the earthfull.

Mankynde was deafe to heare the heauenlye doctrine of God, domine to prayſe hym, lant to mynifter vnto hys neyghbours, and to preache the goſpell. &c. Theſe thinges Chyſte hath healed wryth hys commyng.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Jerusalem is aſſieged by Sennacherib, in the tyme of kynge Hezekiah.

iii. Reg. xlii. c.

ii. Parap. xxxii. a.

In the xlii. yer of king Ezechias, came Sennacherib kynge of ſ Affrias downe, to laye ſiege vnto all the ſtronge Cityes of Iuda. * And the kynge of the Affrias ſent Raſſakerib from Lachys toward Jeruſalem againſte kynge Ezechias, wryth a greuouſe hoſte, whych he ſet hym by the conduit of the ouer pole, in ſ way that goeth thorow ſ ſullers lande. And ſo ther came forth vnto hym Eliakim Helkiah ſonne, the preſident, Sobna the ſcribe, and Ioab Aſaphs ſonne, the ſecretarie.

And Raſſakerib ſayd vnto the: Tell Ezechias that the great kynge of Affria ſayth thus vnto hym: What preſumpcion is this that thou truſteſt vnto? Thou thyneſt peraduenture, thou haſte counſel & power inoughe to mapnteyne this warre: or els whertotrueſt thou, that thou caſteſt thy ſelfe of fro me? Lo, thou putteſt thy truſte in a broken ſtaffe of a reede (I mea Egipt) whych be that leaneth vpon it, it goeth into hys hande, and ſhoteth hym thorowe.

Buten ſo is Pharao the kynge of Egypt vnto all them that truſte in hym. But if thou woldeſt ſaye to me: we truſte in the Lorde our God. A goodly God in deede: whoſe bygd places and alters Ezechias toke downe, and commaunded Iuda and Jeruſalem to worſhypp only before the alter. Abyde the, thou haſt made a conſecion wryth my Lorde the kynge of ſ Affrias that he ſhulde geue the two thouſand horſes: arte thou hable to ſet men vpon the? Seynge nowe that thou canſt not reſpyſte the power of the ſmalleft prince that my Lorde hathe, howe dareſt thou truſt in the chariots and horſemen of Egypte? Moreouer, thyneſt ſ I am come downe by: ther to diſtroy thys lande wrythout ſ Lordeſ wyl? The Lorde ſaid vnto me, go down into the lande that thou mayſt deſtroye it.

Then ſayd Eliakim, Sobna, and Ioab vnto Raſſakerib: Speake to vs thy ſeruauntes (we pray the) in the ſirians language, for we vnderſtad it wel. And ſpeake not to vs in the Jewes tounge, leſt ſ folke hear, whych lyeth vpon the wal. Then answered Raſſakerib: Thyneke pe that the kynge ſent me to ſpeake thys onlpe to you? Darbe he not ſent me to them alſo ſ lpe vpon the wal: that they be not compelled to eate their owne donge, and drinke theyr owne ſtale wryth you?

And Raſſakerib ſtoode ſtyffe, and cryed w a loude voice in the Jewes tounge, & ſayed. Nowe take hede howe the greates kynge of the Affrias gyuerth you warnynge.

Thus ſayeth the kynge: Lette not Ezechias diſceyue you, for he ſhal not be hable to delpyer you. Moreover let not Ezechias coſorte you in the Lorde, whē he ſaieth: The Lorde wrythout doubt ſhall defende vs, and ſhal not gyue ouer thys cytie into the hande of the king of the Affrians, beleue hym not. But thus ſayth the kynge of Affria: Obteine my ſauour, enclyne vnto me: ſo may euery man enioy his bynepard and ſyggerrees, and drinke the water of hys ceſterne, vnto the tyme that I come my ſelfe, and bynnege you into a lande that is lyke your owne: wherin is wheate and wyne, whych is borbe ſowen wryth ſede, and planteth wryth bynepardes. Let not Ezechias diſceyue you when he ſayeth vnto you: the Lorde ſhall delpyer vs.

DMyght the gods of the Gentiles kepe euerye mannes lande from the power of ſ kynge of the Affrians? Where is the God of Demath & Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharuaim? And who was hable to defend Samaria out of my hand? Or whych of all the Goddes of the landes, hath deliuered their countrey oute of my power, ſo that the Lorde ſhulde deliuer Jeruſalem fro my hande? Vnto thys Ezechias meſſengers helde theyr tonges, and answered not one word: for the king had charged the that they ſhulde geue hym none anſwer. So came Eliakim Elkiah ſonne the preſident, Sobna the ſcribe, & Ioab Aſaphs ſonne the ſecretarie, vnto Ezechias wryth rent clothes, & told him ſ wordes of Raſſakerib.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Ezechias humbleth him ſelfe before the lord. The armye of Sennacherib is ſlayne of the Angel of the Lord, and he hym ſelfe is kylled of hys own ſonnes.

Vhen Ezechias hearde that, he reſte his clothes, and put on a ſackcloth, & wente into the temple of the Lorde.

A But he ſent Eliakim the preſident, Sobna the ſcribe wryth the eldeſte preſtes clothed in ſacke, vnto the Prophet Eſay the ſonne of Amoz, and they ſayd vnto hym: Thus ſayth Ezechias: Thys is the day of trouble, of plage, & of wrath, lyke as when a chylde commeth to the byrth, but the woman hath no power to bynnege it furth. The Lorde thy God, no doubt, hath wel conſydered the wordes of Raſſakerib, whō hys Lorde the kynge of Affrias hath ſent to deſpy and blaſpheme the liuinge God, w ſuch wordes as the Lorde thy god hath herd ryght wel. And therfore lyft vp thy prayer for the remnaunte that yet are leſte. So the ſeruauntes of kynge Ezechias came to Eſaye.

B And Eſay gaue the thys anſwere: ſay thus vnto your Lorde: thus ſaith the Lorde: Be not afrayed of the wordes that thou haſt herde, wherewryth the kynge of ſ Affrias ſeruauntes haue blaſphemed me. Beholde, I wil cauſe a wind go ouer hym:

The xxxvii. Chapter.

as soone as he heareth it, he shal go again into hys countreie, there wyl I destroye hym wyl the sword. Nowe when Nabas-keh returned, he founde the kynge of Assyria layinge siege to Lobnab, for he hadde vnderstande, that he was departed from Lachys. For there came a rumoure, that Tharbakab kynge of Ethiopia was come forth to war agaynst hym.

E And when the kynge of Assyria hearde that, he sent other messengers to kynge Ezechias, wyl thys commaundement: Say thus to Ezechias kynge of Iuda: Let not thy God deceyue the in whom thou bopest, and sayest: Ierusalem shal not be geyuen into the handes of the kynge of Assyria. For thou knowest well howe the kyn- ges of Assyria haue handled all the lands that they haue subuerted, & hopeste thou to escape? Were the people of the Ben- tytes (whome my progenytours conquere- red) deliuered at anye tyme thowowe thete goddes? As namely, Bozan, Haran, Re- zeph, and the chyldren of Eden, whiche dwell at Thalassar. Where is the kynge of Hemah, and the kynge of Arphad, and the kyng of the cite of Sepharuaim, Ena and Ana?

Nowe when Ezechias hadde receyued the letter of the messengers, and red it, he wente vpon into the house of the Lorde, and opened the letter before the Lord. And Ezechias prayed before the Lorde, on thys manner: O Lorde of hostes, thou God of Is- raell, whiche dwellest vpon Cherubinne. Thou art the God that onely is God of all the kyngdomes of the world, for thou onely hast created heauē & erth. Encline thyne eare, Lord, and consider, open thyne eyes, O Lorde, and se, and ponde all the words of Sennacherib, whiche haue sente hys embassage to blaspheme & lusing god.

It is true, O Lorde, that the kynges of Assyria haue conquered all kyngdomes and landes, and caste they goddes in the fyre. Notwithstandynge those were no goddes, but the workes of mens handes, of wood or stone, therefore haue they de- stroyed them. Deliuer vs then, O Lorde our God, from the handes of Sennache- ryb, that all kyngdomes of the earth may knowe that thou onely arte the Lorde. Then say the sonne of Amoz, sent vnto Ezechias, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell: wher as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchynge Sen- nacherib, thys is the aunswere, that the Lord hath geuen concernynge hym.

Despised arte thou and mocked, o (a) daughter of Syon, he hath shaken hys head at the o daughter of Ierusalem. But thou Sennacherib, whome hast thou de- spised and blasphemed? and agaynst whom haste thou lyfied vpon thy voyce, and exalted thy proude lookes? euen agaynst the holpe one of Israell. Thou wyl thy seruau- tes hast blasphemed the Lorde, and thus holdest thou of thy selfe: I couer the hye mountaynes and sydes of Lybanus wyl my horsemen.

And there wyl I cutte downe the hygh Cedre trees, and I sayest fyre trees. I wyl vpon into the heigth of it, and into the chiefe of the tymbre woddes. Yf there be no water, I wyl graue and dryke. And as for waters of defence, I shal dry them vpon wyl the sete of myne hoste. Yea (say- est thou) hast thou not herd what I haue taken in hande, and broughte to passe of old tyme? That same wyl I do nowe af- so: waste, destroye, and bynge stronge ci- ties vnto heapes of stoues. For they in- habitours shal be lyke lame me, broughte in fear & chounded. They shal be like gras and grene herbes in the felde, like the haye vpon house toppes, that wylbereth afore it be growen vpon.

I knowe thy wayes, thy goynge forth, and thy comynge home, yea and thy mad- nesse agaynst me. Therefore thy furious- nes agaynst me, & thy pride is come before me. I wyl put a * tynge in thy nose, and a bridle in the chawes of the, & turne the a- boute euen the same waye thou comest. I wyl geue the also thys token, O Ezechias, thys yere shalte thoueate that is kept in store, and the nexte yere such as groweth of hym selfe, and in the thyrde yere ye shal loto and repe, yea ye shal plante vyneyards, and enioy the frutes therof.

And suche of the house of Iuda as are escaped, shal come together, and the rem- naunte shal take roote beneth, and byng for the frute aboue. For the escaped shal go oute of Ierusalem, and the remnaunt from the mounte Syon.

And thys shal the gelousye of the Lorde of hostes bynge to passe. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde, concerninge the kyng of the Assyrians: He shal not come into the ctyte, and shal shoothe no arrowe into it, there shal no shylde hurt it, neyther shal they dygge aboute it. The same waye that he came, shal he retourne, and not come at thys ctyte, sayeth the Lorde.

And I wyl kepe, & saue the ctyte (say- eth he) for myne owne, and for my ser- uaunte Dauids sake.

* Thus the angell wente forth, and slewe of the Assyrians hooke, an hundred foure score and fyue thousande. And when men arose vpon earlye (at Ierusalem,) be- holde all laye ful of dead bodies. So Sen- nacherib the kyng of the Assyrians brake vpon and dwelt at Ninue. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Asrah hys God, Adramalech, and Sar- razer his owne sonnes, slewe hym wyl the swearde and fledde into the lande of Ararat. And Asar Hadon hys sonne ray- gned after hym.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Ezekiah is reproued of Esay, because he shewed hys treasure vnto the Embassadors of Babylon.

At the same time Merodach Baladā, Baladams sonne, kyng of Babylō, sent letters & presentes to Ezekias. For he vnderstode how he had bene sicke, & was recovered agayne. * And Ezekias was glad thereof, & shewed them the com- modities of hys treasure, of siluer, of gold, of spyes and cootes, of precious oyles, al that was in hys cupboards and treasure houses. Ther was not one thyng in Eze- chias house, and so thorowe oute all hys kyngedome, but he let them se it.

Then came Esay the Prophet to kyng Ezekias, & sayed vnto hym. What haue the men sayde, & frō whēce came they vnto the? Ezekias answered: they came oute of a farre countrey vnto me, out of Babylon. Esay sayd: what haue they looked vpon in thyne house? Ezekias answered: All that is in myne house haue they sene: & ther is nothinge in my treasure, but I shewed it the. Then sayd Esay vnto Ezekias: Un- derstande the worde of the Lord of hostes.

* Beholde the tyme wyll come that eue- ry thyng whiche is in thyne house, and al that thy progenitours haue layd vp in store vnto this daye, shall be caried to Ba- bylon, and nothyng lefte behynde. Thys sayeth the Lord. Yea and part of thy son- nes that shall come of the, and whom thou shalt get, shall be caried hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the kyng of Ba- bils court: The sayd Ezekias to Esay: Now God prospere his own word, which he hath spokē. He sayd moreouer: so there be peace and faythfulnesse in my tyme.

The xl. Chapter.

The cominge of Sainte John Baptiste. The preparacion of the Apostles. The cal- ling of the Gentyles.

Behold good chere my people, be of good chere: (sayth your God) comforte Je- rusalem, and tell (a) her that her tra- uayle is at an ende, that her offence is pardoned, that she hath receyued of the Lordes hand sufficient correction for all her synnes. A voyce cryeth: Prepare the waye for the Lord in the wilderness, make streygthe the path for our God in the de- sert. Let al vales be exalted, & euery mou- tayne & hyl be layed low. What so is cro- ked, let it be made straghte, and let the roughe places be made playne felde.

(b) For the glorie of the Lord shall ap- peare, and all fleche shall se it, for why? the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Come cry. And I sayd: what shall I cry? Then spake it: that all fleche is graspe, and that (c) all beauty therof, is as the floure of the field.

The graspe is withered, the floure falleth away. Euen so is the people as graspe, whē the brych of the lord bloweth vpon them. The graspe withereth, or the floure fade a- way: But the worde of our God endureth for euer. Moreouer the voyce cryed thus.

(d) Boo vp vnto the hill (o Sion) thou that bringest good tydings, lyft vp thy voyce wyth power, o thou preacher Jerusalem. Lyft it vp wythout feare, & say vnto the cy- ties of Iuda: behold your god, behold the Lord, euen the almyghty shall come wyth power, & beate rule wyth hys arme. Be- hold he bringeth hys treasure wyth him, & his workes go before hym. He shall fede hys flocke lyke an herd man. He shall ga- ther the lambs togyther wth hys arme, and carie them in hys bosome, & shall kyndelpe cutteate those that beare younge. &

Who hath holden the waters in hys fist? Who hath measured heuen wyth hys spanne, & hath comprehended all the earthe of the worlde in thre syngers? Who hath meyed the mountaynes & hyls? Who hath reformed the mind of the Lord? Or who is of hys counsell to teache hym? At whō hath he asked counsell, to make him vnderstand, & to lerne hym the way of iudgemente: to teach hym science & to instruct hym in the way of vnderstanding? Behold, all people are in co- parison of hym, as a droppe to a boket ful, & are counted as the least thyng of the balaunce weyeth. Beholde, the Isles are in comparison of hym, as the shadowe of the sunne beame. Libanus is not sufficient to minister fyre for hys offeryng, and all the beastes therof are not ynough to one sacrifice. All people in comparison of hym are rekened as no- thyng, yea vayne vanitie and emptinesse.

To whom then wyll yelpken God? or what similitude wyll yelset vp vnto hym? Shall the caruer make hym a carued y- mage? and shall the gold smyth couer him wyth golde, or caste hym into a forme of syluer plates? Moreouer shall the ymage maker (that the poore man whiche is dis- posed maye haue some thinge to set vp al- so) seke oute and chose a tree, that is not rotten, and carue of it an ymage that mo- ueth not? Know ye not thys? Herde ye ne- uer of it? Hath it not bene preached vnto you from the begynnyng? Haue ye not bene instructed of thys sithens the foun- dation dation of the erth was layde, that he sptteth vpon the circle of the world and that all the inhabitauntes of the worlde are in comparyson of hym, but as grethoppers?

That he spreadeth oute the heaueus as a tent to dwell in: that he byngeth dyna-ces to nothing, and the iudges of the erth to duste: so that they be not planted nor sowen agayne, neyther they stockeroted agayne in the earth: For as soone as he bloweth vpon them, they wither and fade away, lyke the straw in a whirlewynde.

To whome nowe wyll ye lyken me, and whome shall I be like saith the holy one?
Lifte vp youre eyes on hye, and consyder.
* Who hath made those thynges, whych come out by so greute heapes: and he can call them all by theyr names. For ther is nothyng byd vnto the greatnesse of his power, strengthe, and myght. Howe may then Iacob thyncke, or how maye Israell saye: My wayes are bydde frome þe Lord, and my God knoweth not of my iudgementes. Knowest thou not, or haste thou not herd, that the euerlastyng God the Lorde whiche made all the corners of the earthe, is neither werie nor sayue: and that his wysdome cannot be comprehended: but that he gyueth strength vnto the wey, and power vnto the saynt? Chyldren are weye and fainte, and the strongest me fall. * But vnto them that haue the Lorde before theyr eyes, shall strēgthe be increased. Eagles wynges shall growe vpon the:
When they runne, they shall not falle: and when they goo, they shall not be wey.

The notes of the.xl. Chap.

(a) Her trauell is at an end, that is, the time of her captiuitie, whiche dured. lxx. yeres, is bynyshed.

(b) The Prophetes call the gloye of the Lord, the rightuousnes that shoulde be shewed by the gospell, wherby we shuld become rightuous in þe lyght of God the father, for his sone Christes merytes. This gloye shall al flesh se, that is, all men as wel the Jewes as the Gentils, þe beleue.
I lyke saying haue ye after in þe. i. a. The gloye of the Lorde shall ryle vpon the. &c.

(c) All the bewty therof is as the floure. &c. that is, al the good doynges, all the good luynges, all the holynes and vertue, all the ryghtuousnes therof. &c. is of no valure: It dureth no longer then the floure of the fiede. Onely Christ is our rightuousnes, and holynes. &c. i. Corint. i. d.

(d) Syon and Jerusalem (by whiche vnderstand the church of the saythful) do preache and bring good tidings, that is, shewe the grace & health that hath bene longe wayted for, and þe is now obtained & geue by Christ. Mat. xi. a. Luke. ii. b

The.xli. Chapter.

Of the goodnesse and mercy of God toward the people.

Beyll (ye Ilandes) and harkē vnto me. Be stronge ye people: Come by-ther and shewe your cause, we wyll gooe to the lawe togyther. Who rayseth vp the iuste from the ryfinge of the sunne, and calleth hym to go forth? Who cast-eth downe the people, and subdueth the kynge before hym, that he maye throwe therm all to the groude wyth his sherd, and scatter them lyke stubble wyth his bow: He foloweth vpon the, and gorb safely hym selfe, and commeth in no fote pathe wyth his fete.

Who hath made, created and called the generations from the begynnyng?
Euen I the Lorde, whych am the fyrst and wyth the last.

Beholde ye Iles, that ye may feare, and ye endes of the carth that ye maye be abashed, drowne nye, and come byther. Every man hath exhorted his neyghboure, and brother, and bydden hym be stronge. The synthe comforted the moulder, and the yon synthe the hammer man, sayinge: It shal be good that we faste this cast worke:
and then they fastened it wyth nailes, that it shoulde not be moued. And thou Israell my seruaunte, Iacob my chosen seede of Abraham my beloued, whome I ledde fro the endes of the earthe by the hande: For I called the from farre, and sayd vnto the.
Thou shalt be my seruaunte, I haue chosen the, and wyll not caste the awaye, * be not afrayed, for I wyll be wyth the. Loke not behynd the, for I wyll be thy God to strengthe the, helpe the, and to kepe the w thys ryghte hand of myne.

Beholde, all they that wythstand the,
shall come to confusyon and shame: and thyne aduersaries shall be destroyed and broughte to naughte. So that who so se-keth after them, shal not fynde them. Thy destroyers shall perishe, and so shall they þ undertake to make barayle agaynst the.
For I thy Lorde and God wyll strengthen thy ryght hand. Euen I that say vnto the Feare not: I wyll helpe the. Be not afray-ed thou litle worme Iacob, and thou despised Israell, for I wyll helpe the, sayth the Lorde, and the holpe one of Israell thyne auenger. Beholde, I wyll make the a tredinge carte, and a newe Rayle, that thou mayest threthe and grynd the moun-taynes, and bynge the hylles to poulder.
Thou shalt san them, and the wynd shall carpe them awaye, and the whirlewynde shall scatter them. But thou shalt reioyse in the Lorde, and shalt delite in prayfinge the holy one of Israell.

* When the thyrste & poore seke water and fynde none, and when theyr thyrste is dye of thyrste, I gyue it them, saith the Lorde. I the God of Israell forsake them not, (a) I byng forth foudes in the hilles, & welles in the plaine fieldes, (b) I tourne the wildernes to ryuers, & the drye lande to Conduites of water, I plante in þe waste ground trees of Cedre, Bore, Myrre, and Olives, And in the dry, I set fyre trees, Elmes and Hawthornes togyther. Al this doo I that they all togyther may se and mark, perceyue wyth their heries and chsider that the hand of the Lorde maketh these

The. xlii. Chapter.

I these thynges, and that the holy one of Israel bryngeth them to passe. Stande at your cause sayth the Lord, & brynge forth the your strongest ground: cōfesseth the kyng of Jacob. Let the Goddes come forth the them selues, and shewe vs the thynges that are past what they be: let them declare them vnto vs that we may take the to herte, & know them here after. Further lette them shewe vs thynges for to come, and tell vs what shall be doone hereafter: so shall we knowe that they be goddes. Shewe some thinge eyther good or bad: so wyl we both knowledge the same, and tell it out.

Beholde, ye goddes are of nought, and your makynge is of noughte, but abominaciō hath chosen you. Neuerthelesse * I haue waked vp one from the north, & he shal come. And an other from the East, whych shal cal vpon my name, and shal come to the princes, as the potter to his clay, and as the potter treadeth downe the myre:

Who told that afore?

So wyl we confesse and saye, that he is ryghtuous. But ther is none that sheweth or declareth anye thyng, there is none also that heareth your wordes. Beholde, I wyl fyrste graunte them of Sion and Ierusalem to be Euangelistes. But when I consider, there is not one amonge them that prophceeth, neyther (when I aske hym) that answereth me one worde. Lo, wycked are they and vayne, wyth the thynges also that they take in hande: yea wynde are they, and emptynes, wyth theyr Images together.

The Notes.

(a) I brynge forth the floudes in the hylles. &c. In highe places that be easie to se, wherunto the thyrstie maye come, wyl I prepare not lytell welles, but great floudes of holy doctrine: in playne felde and lowe places, springes & fontaynes that the lame or clouthfull shal haue no excuse, but that all the thyrstie may come to the worde of lyfe.

(b) I turne the wyldernes into ryuers &c. That is: I makethe doctrine of trouth so general and easy to all men, that wher as were before wast wyldernes: by which vnderstand the errors of the heathen wherwyth they had made all vnfertull and vayne) shal now by the grace of the holpe ghost, be ryuers of the water of veritye. Where all was ful of Idolatrye, of abominacion and of synnyng errors: there shal the hertes of the chosen be watered wyth godly wyldome thow the Gospel & glad tydynges: & shal be indued wyth fayth, wherby they maye bothe profit them selues and other: and so shal they be fertull. Wyldernes is oftē thus take, as before in the. xxxv. a.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The commynge of Christe and his baptisme.

Beholde now therefore, this is my seruante whom I wyl kepe to my selfe: in me electe, in whom my soule shal be pacified. I wyl geue hym my spyte, that he maye shewe forth the iudgemente & equitye amonge the Gentyles. He shal not be an oute cryer, nor an hye mynded person. His voyce shal not be hearde in streets. A broused rede shal he not breake, and the smokynge flax shal he not quēche: but faithfully and truly shal he geue iudgemente. He shal neither be ouersene ne baske, that he maye restore ryghtousnes vnto the earth: and the Steriles also shal kepe his lawes. For thus sayeth God the Lord vnto hym (euen he that made heauens, and spreadde them abroad, and set forth the earth with her increase: whych geueth bryeth vnto the people that is in it, and to the that dwell therein) I the Lord haue called the in ryghtousnesse, and ledde the by the hande.

Therefore wyl I also defende the, & geue the for a couenant of the people, and to be the lighte of the Gentyles. What thou mayste open the eyes of the blynde, lette oute the prysoners, and them that sit in darcknes, oute of the dongeon house. I my selfe, whose name is the Lord, whych geue my power to none other, neyther myne honoure to the Goddes, shewe you these newe tydynges, and tel you them as they come, for olde thynges also are come to passe.

Synge therefore vnto the Lord, a newe songe of thankes grynge: blowe oute his prayse vnto the ende of the worlde. They that be vpon the sea, and al that is therein, prayse him, the Isles, and they that dwell in them. Let the wyldernes wyth her crytes lyfte vp her voyce, the towne also that be in Cedar.

Let them be glad that sitte vpon rockes of stone, and let them crye downe frome the hyghe mountaynes: as crybrynge almightynes vnto the Lord, & magnifyng him amonge the Steriles. The Lord shal come forth as a giaunte, and take a stomake to hym lyke a freshe man of warre. He shal cōre and cry, and ouercome his enemyes.

I haue longe houlden my peace (sayeth the Lord) should I therefore be styll, & kepe silence for euer? I wyl cry lyke a traue-lynge woman, and once wyl I destroye and deuoute. I wyl, make waste both mountayne and hyl, and drye vp euery grene thinge that groweth thereon. I wil drye vp the floudes of water, and dryke vp the ryuers. I wyl brynge the blynde into a strete that they know not: and lede them into a fote pathe, that they are ignorant in. I shal make darcknesse lyght before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streyght. These thynges wyl I doo, & not forget them. And therefore let the conuerter, and be ashamed earnestly, that hope in Idoles, and saye to facioned Images: ye are our goddes.

Hear, o ye deafe men, and sharpen your eyes to se, o ye blynde. But who is blynder then my seruant? Or so deafe as my messengers whome I sente vnto them? For who is so blinde as my people and they that haue the rule of them?

They

He meaneth
p hygh pre-
ses, & those p had care
of the people. Those should haue taught the other, but they were blyndest of all, as Chypte declareth in p
gospel.
Such ther
be at all times, and shal be vnto
the world's ende.

They are lyke as if p understodest muche, and keptest norhyng: or if one herde wel, but were not obedient. The Lord be mercyful vnto the for hys ryghtuousnes sake, and that hys word myght be magnified & prayed. But it is a mischeuous and wyc-ked people. Their yonge men belonge all to the snare, and shall be shut into pryson houses. They shalbe carped away captiue, & no man shal leuse the. They shal be tro-den vnder fore, and no man shal labour to bryng them agayne. But who is he amog you that pandreth this in hys mynde, that considereth it, and taketh it for a warning in tyme to come?

Who suffered Iacob to be troden vnder fore, and Israell to be spoyled? Did not the Lord? Howe haue we synned against hym, & haue had no delyte to walke in his wayes, nether ben obedient vnto his law.
Therefore hath he poured vpon vs hys wrauthful displeasure, and strong bataile, whyche maketh vs haue to doo on euery syde, yet wyl we not understande: He burneth vs vp, yet synketh it not in to oure heetes.

The. xliii. Chapter.

God promyseth to sende hys Chypt, whiche shall deliuer hys people. He forgiueth synnes for hys owne sake.

But now the Lord that made the,
Iacob, and he p facioned the, o Israell, sayeth thus: Feare not, for I wyl defend the. I haue called the by name, thou artemyne owne. When thou wentest in p water, I was by the, p the strong floudes shoulde not plucke the away. When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, & the flame shal not kyndle vpon the. For I am the Lord thy God, the holpe one of Israell, thy sauoure. I gaue Egypte for thy delyueraunce, the Morians and the Sa-bees for thee: bicause p wast deare in my sight, and because I set by the, and loued the. I pyllled al men for the, & deliuered v all people for thy sake, that thou shouldest not feare, for I was w the. I wyl brynge thy sede from the East, and gather the together from the West. I wyl saye to the North, let goo. And to p South: kepe not backe: but brynge me my sonnes from far, and my daughters from the endes of the world: Namely al those that be called after my name: For the haue I created facioned and made for myne honoure.

Bring forth the that people, whether they haue eyes, or be blind, deafe, or haue eares.
All nations shall come in one, and be gathered in one people. But whych amonge ponder goddes shall declare such thinges, and tell vs what is to come? Lette them bryng theyr wytnesses, so shal they be free:
for the men shal hear it, & saye it is trouth.
But I bring you wytnesses (saith p lord) euen those that are my seruantes, whome I haue chosen to thintent that ye myght be certyfyed, & gyue me saythfull credence:

pea and to conspyre: that I am he before whome there was neuer any God, & that there shal be none after me. I am onlpe the Lord, & withoute me is there no sauoure.
I gyue warnynge, I make hole, I reache you that ther shoulde be no straunge God amonge you. And thys recorde muste ye beare me your selues, sayeth the Lord, p I am God. And eue he am I from the begynnyng, and there is none that can take anye thyng oute of my hande. And what I doo, can no man chaunge.

Thus sayeth the Lord, the holpe one of Israell your redemer: For your sake I wyl sende to Babylon, and brynge all the strongest of the from thence: Namely the Chaldees p bolte the of theyr shyps: Euen
I the Lord your holpe one whyche haue made Israel, & am your kyng. Moreouer thus sayeth p Lord, eue he p maketh a way in the sea, & a foote pathe in the myghtye waters: whyche bryngeth forth the cha-rettes and horses, the holte & the power, p they maye fall a slepe, and neuer ryse, and be extinct lyke as towne is quenched.

Ye remembre not thynges of olde, and regarde norhyng that is paste. (a) Therfore beholde, I shall make a newe thinge, and shortly shall it appere, ye shall well knowe it, I haue tolde it you before, but I wyl tell it you agayne. I wyl make stretes in the deserte, & riuers of waters in the wylernes. (b) The wylde beastes shall worshype me: the Dragon and the Esterche. For I shall gyue water in the wylernes, and streemes in the deserte:
that I maye geue drynke to my people, whome I chose: thys people haue I made for my selfe, and they shall (c) shewe forth my prayse. For thou (Iacob) woldest not call vpon me, but thou baddest an vnjust towards me, o Israell.

(d) Thou gauest me not thy younge beastes for burnt offeringes, nether dyddest honoure me wth thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no deare voyces wth thy mynge, nether powrest the fatte of thy sacrifices vpon me. How be it I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offerynges, nether greuous in incense.

(e) But thou hast laden me wth thy synnes: and werped me wth thyne vngodlynesse.

(f) Where as I yet am euen he onlpe that for myne owne selves sake do a waye thyne offences, and forget thy synnes: so that I wyl neuer thynke vpon them.

(g) Wat me now in remembraunce (for we wyl reason together) & shewe what thou hast for thee to make thee quyte.

(h) Thy fyrst father offended sore, and thy rulers haue synned agaynst me. Therefore I eueher suspended, or stewe the chiefest princes: I dyd curse Iacob, and gaue Israel in to reprose.

The Notes of the. xliii. Chapter.

(a) Therefore behold, I shall make a new thyng.

II. i. Is

I shall gyue the the byd treasure, and the thynge whyche is secretely kepte: that thou mayest knowe that I the God of Israel haue called the by name: and that for Iacob my seruantes sake, and for Israell my chosen.

B For I called the by thy name, and ordeyned the or euer thou knewest me: Euen I the Lorde, before whome there is none other: for about me ther is no God. I haue prepared the or euer thou knewest me: that it myghte be knowne frome the ryfinge of the sunne, to the goynge downe of the same, that all is nothyng without me. For I am the Lorde, and there is elles none. It is I that created the lyghte and darkenes: I make peace and trouble: yea euen I the Lorde do all these thynges.

(a) The heauens aboue shal droppe downe, and the cloudes shal rayne rightousnesse. The earthe shal open it selfe, and bringe forth the helthe, and thereby shal rightousnesse forsythe. Euen I the Lorde shal bring it to passe.

Woe be vnto hym that chydeth wyth his maker, the potsherd wyth the potter: Sayeth the claye to the potter, what makest thou? or thy worke serueth for no thyng? Woe be vnto hym that sayeth to his father: why begettest thou? And to his mother: why bearest thou? Thus sayeth the Lorde, euen the holpe one and maker of Israell. Aske me of thynges for to come, concernynge my sonnes: and put me in remembraunce, as touchynge the workes of my handes: I haue made the earthe, and created man vpon it. Wyth mine handes haue I spred forth heauen, and geuen a commaundement for all the hoste therof.

I shal wake him vp wyth rightousnesse, and orde all his wayes. He shal buyde my cpye, and let out my prysoners, & that neyther for gyfte nor rewardes, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

C The Lorde hath sayd moreouer: The occuppers of Egypte, the marchauntes of the Moztians and Sabees, shal come vnto the wyth tribute, they shal be thyne, they shal folowe the, and go wyth cheynes vpon theyr fete. They shal fall downe before the, & make supplication vnto the. For God (wythoute whome there is none other God) shal be wyth the.

O how profoude arte thou, O God, thou God and saupoure of Israel: Confounded be ye, and put to dishonour: goo hence together wyth shame, all ye that be worke masters of erroure: (that is worshyppers of Idoles.) But Israell shal be saued in I the Lorde, whyche is the euerlastynge saluation: They shal not come to shame nor confusion, worlde wythoute ende.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: euen he that created heauen, the God that made the earthe, that factored it, and sette it forth: I haue not made it for nought, but I made it to be inhabited. Euen I the Lorde, wythout whome there is none other. I haue not spoken secretly, neyther in darke places of the earthe. It is not for nought, that I sayde vnto the seede of Iacob: seke me. I am the Lorde, whyche when I speake, declare the thynge that is righteous and true. Let them be gathered and come together, let the drake nye hyther that are escaped of the people: Haue they any vnderstandynge that set vp the stockes of theyr Idolls, and pray vnto a God that can not helpe them? Let men draw nye, let them come hyther, and aske counsel one at an other, and shewe forthe: What is he, that tolde thys before? or who spake of it, euer sence the begynning. Haue not I the Lorde done it: wythoute whome there is none other God: the true God & sauiour, and there is elles none but I? And therfore tourne you vnto me (all ye endes of the earth) so shal ye be saued: for I am God, and there is else none. I swere by my selfe: oute of my mouthe cometh the worde of rightousnes, and that maye no man tourne: but all knees shal bowe vnto me, and all tungen shal swere by me, sayinge: Verely in the Lorde is my rightousnes and strengthe. To him shal men come: but all they that chynke scorne of hym, shalbe confounded, and the hole seed of Israell shalbe iustified and praysed in the Lorde.

The Notes.

(a) Some rede, ye heauens, sende downe youre dew from aboue, and let the cloudes rayne. &c. The Prophet desyeth that kynge Cyrus may come and helpe the people of Israel, vnder Cyrus figurynge Christ, & vnder Israel I churche. As though he shulde saye: wolde God the heuyls powers wolde so geue their grace, as the earthly wold not refuse to receyue it: so I here after our heauen be not of brasse, for our sinnes sake: Deuter. xxxiii. b. but that by goddes grace, the rayne of saluacion wolde fall on vs, and rightousnes droppe downe from heauē, to make our hertes fertile and fruteful: I Christe our sauiour, whiche is the rightousnes of the chosen, wolde come forthe of the earth, & bringe forth the blossomes of saluacion. Thys peticio dothe the Lord promise to performe, sayinge: Euen I the Lorde shal bringe it to passe.

The xlvi. Chapter.

Idolatre is reprobued. The health that cometh by Christ is prophesied.

Euerthelesse (a) Well shal fall, & Bebo shalbe broken, whose Images are a burthen for the beastes and cattell to ouerlade them, and to make them weye. They shal synke downe, and fall together, for they maye not ease them of theyr burthe, therfore must they go into captiuitie.

Harken vnto me, O house of Iacob, & all ye that remayne yet of the housholde of Israell, whome I haue borne fro your mothers wombe, and brought you vp fro your byrthe, till ye were growne: I whiche shal beare you vnto your last age: I haue made you, I wyll also nourishe you, beare heare you, and ſaue you. Whome wyl ye make me lyke in ſacion or Image, that I may be like hym? Ye fooles (no doubt) wyl take oute ſyluer & golde of youre purſes, & weye it, & hyre a goldſmith to make a god of it, & men may knele downe & worſhip it.

Baruch. vi. a. Yet muſte he be taken on mennes ſhoulders and borne, and ſet in hys place, that he may ſtande and not moue. Alas that men ſhoulde crye vnto hym whych geueth no anſwere: & deliuereth not the man that calleth vpon hym from hys trouble.

Conſydre thys well and be aſhamed.

(b) Go into your owne ſelues (O ye runnagates.) Remember the thynges whych are paſte ſence the begynninge of the worlde: that I am God, and that there is elſes no God, yea and that there is no thyng lyke vnto me. In the begynnyng of a thyng, I ſhewe the ende thereof: and I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to paſſe. With one worde is my deuyſe accompliſhed, and all my pleaſure fulfilled. I call a (c) byrds out of the Eaſt, and all that I take in hande oute of far countreyes, as ſoone as I commaunde, I byrge it hither: as ſoone as I thynke to deuſe a thyng, I do it.

Heare me, O ye that are of an hye ſtocke, but farre from ryghtouſneſſe. I ſhall byrge forth my ryghtouſneſſe. It is not far, & my health ſhall not tary long away. I wyl lay healthe in Sion, and geue Iſrael my glory.

The Notes of the. xlvii. Chapter.

(a) B. and Rebo were Idoles of the babylonians. Theſe ſayth the Prophete, ſhalbe ouerthrowen by the hoſte of Cyrus.

(b) To go into them ſelues, is, to take good aduylment and cal to remembrance.

(c) He meaneth byrge Cyrus, whych ſhoulde come ſwiftly as a byrd flyeth, and deſtroye Babylon, and ſet the Iſraelites at libertye. He ſhoulde fulfill that whych the Lorde had deuſed and decreed. In him is figured Chriſt whych with the lyght of hys worde purgeth the whole worlde of erreours and Idolatrye, and ſetteth the conſciences at peace and libertye. He flyeth ſwiftly out of the eaſt, that is out of heuē: wher vpon he is called the day ſpyng from on hye. Luke. i. g.

The. xlviii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde againſt Babylon.

But as for the (O daughter) thou virgin Babylon. (a) Thou ſhalt ſyt in duſt, thou ſhalt ſyt vpon the grounde, & not in a throne (O thou maiden of Chaldea) Thou ſhalt no more be called tender and pleaſant. (b) Thou ſhalt byrge forth the quene & grind mee, put downe thy ſtomacher, make bare thy knees, and ſhalt wade thorow ſ water riuers. Thy ſhame ſhall be diſcouered, and thy priuities ſhal be ſene. For I wyl auenge me of the, & no man ſhall let me, ſaith our redemer, which is called the Lorde of hoſtes, the holy one of Iſrael.

Syt ſyl, hold thy tonge, and get the in to ſome darke corner, O Daughter Chaldea, for thou ſhalte be no more called ladye of kyngdomes. I was ſo wroth wth my people, that I puniſhed myne inberſtaunce, & gaue the into thy power. Neuer theleſſe, I ſhewed the them no mercy, but euē the very aged men of the diddeſte thou oppreſſe righte ſore wth your yoke, and thou thoughteſte thus: I ſhal be ladye for euer. And beſyde all that, thou haſte not regarded theſe thynges, neithet caſt what ſhoulde come after. Heare now therfore thou wiſe ful, that ſitteſt ſo careleſſe, & ſpeakeſt thus in thine heart: I am alone, and wthout me is ther none: I ſhall neuer be widowe, nor deſolate agayn. And yet both theſe thynges ſhall come to the vpon one day, in the twinklynge of an eye: namely widdowehead and deſolation.

They ſhal myghtily fal vpon the for the multitude of thy wythes, & for the greatheape of thy coniters. For thou haſt conſorted thy ſelfe in thy diſceitfulneſſe, and haſt ſaid: No man ſeeeth me. Thyne owne wyſdome & conninge hath dyſceyued the. In ſ thou haſt ſaid: I am alone, and wthout me ther is none. Therfore ſhall trouble come vpon the, and thou ſhalt not knowe from whence it ſhall aryſe. Miſchefe ſhall fal vpon the, whych thou ſhalt not be able to put of. A ſodayne miſerpe ſhal come vpon the, or euer thou be a wate.

Nowe go to thy coniters, and to the multitude of thy wythes (whome thou haſt bene acquainted wthall from thy youthe) yf they may helpe the, or ſtrengthen the. Thou haſte hitherto had many counſels of them, ſo let the heauengasers and the beholders of ſtars come on now and deliuer the: yea and let them ſwete, when theſe newe thynges ſhall come vpon the. Beholde, they ſhalbe like ſtraw, which yf it be kyndled wth fyre, no man may rydde it for the vehemencie of the flame: And yet it geueth no ſtunders to warme a man by, nor cleare ſper to ſyt by. Euen ſo ſhall they be vnto the whom thou haſt vled and occupied from thy youthe. Every one ſhall ſhewe the hys erroneous way, yet ſhall none of them defende the.

The notes of the. xlviii. Chapter.

(a) To ſit in the duſte is, to be brought lowe, to be poozely arayed and decked, to ſit wthout pompe, and to fall from her eſtate and degre, as it is ſayd Jona. iii. c. The Prophete here deſcribeth the deſtruction of Babylon vnder ſ figure of a proud quene: whych was deliciouſly and deintly brought up, and after fell into extreme pouerty, miſerpe, and wretchednes.

(b) He vnderſtandeth by the quene, or (as ſome reade) myll: ſcruple, pooe, and vpleſtate and condition.

The. xlviii. Chapter.

The ypoctiſie of the Jewes is reprobued. The Lorde alone will be worſhypped which hath choſen vs, and whych ſocoureth vs for hys owne ſake.

II. iii. Heare

Hear these, O thou house of Jacob, ye that are called by the name of Israel, and are come out of one stocke into Juda, whiche sweare by the name of the Lorde, & beare witness by the God of Israel (but not with truth & right) whiche are called free men of the holpe cypre, as they that take for comfort in the God of Israel, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

The thynges that I shewed you ever since the beginning: Have I not broughte the to passe immediatly as they came out of my mouth, and declared the? And they are come, how be it I knew that thou arte obstinate, and that thyne necke hath an

(a) Iron bryde, & that thy brow is of brasse. Nevertheless I have ever since the beginning shewed the of thynges for to come, & declared the unto the, or ever they came to passe, that thou shouldest not say: myne Idol hath done it, my carued or caste Image hath shewed it. Heare and consider all these thynges whether it was ye that prophesied them: But as for me, I tolde the before at the beginning, newe & secrete thynges that thou knewest not of. And some done nowe not of olde tyme, wherof thou never heardest before they were brought to passe, that thou canst not say: I knewe of them. Moreover ther be some wherof thou hast neyther herd nor knowen, neyther have they bene opened unto thyne eares afore tyme. For I knew that thou wouldest maliciously offend, therefore have I called the a transgressoure, even from thy mothers wombe.

Nevertheless for my names sake, I have withdrawen my wrath, & for myne honours sake I have overseene thee, so that I have not rooted the oute. (b) Behold I have purged the, and not for money. I have chosen the in the fyre of purtie. And that only for myne owne sake:

(c) For I geue myne honoure to none other, that thou shouldest not despyse me. Herken unto me O Jacob, & Israel who I have called. I am even he that is, I am the first and the last. My hand is the foundacion of the earth, & my right hande spaneth over the heavens. As soon as I called the, they were ther. Gather you all together, & herken: Whych of pander goddes hath declared this, that the Lord wyl do by the king of Babylon (who he loveth and saoureth) and by the Chaldees bys arme? I my selfe alone have tolde you this before. Yea I shall call hym, and bynge hym forth, and geue hym a prosperous journey. Come nye and heare this: have I spoken any thyng darkely since the beginning? whiche a thing begynneth, I am there.

Wherefore the Lord God with bys spirit hath sente me. And thus saythe the Lorde God thyne avenger, the holy one of Israel: I am the Lord thy God whiche teache the profitable thynges, and leade the the way that thou shouldest go. Yet thou wylt not regard my commaundement, thy welthynges shall be as the water streame, and thy rightousnes as the waves flowinge in the sea. Thy sede shall be lyke as the sande in the sea, and the frute of thy bodye, lyke the grauell stones therof. Thy name shall not be rooted out, nor destroyed before me. Ye shall go awaye from Babylon and escape the Chaldees with a merie voyce. This shalbe spoken of, declared abroad, and go forth unto the ende of the worlde, so that it shalbe sayed: The Lorde hath defended bys servaunt Jacob, that they suffered no thurst, when they travailed in the wyldernes. He claue the rockes aunder, and the water gushed oute. As for the vngodly, they have no peace, sayeth the Lorde.

(a) By this he meaneth that the people of Israel were stubborne, frowarde, rebellious, untractable, unruly and shamelesse.

(b) Some reade: Behold I have purged the: but not as silver: I have chosen the oute of the fournesse of affliction. For mine owne sake, for mine owne sake have I done this: for lyke who would they pollute me? trulie I wyl not geue my glory to any other. Herken. &c. The same erpoud it thus. I would not suffer the wholye to perishe: for if I had proued and purified the as gold & silver is proued & purified, from whiche all maner of dross is cleansed, there shoulde nothing haue remained in the: very fewe, yea none shoulde haue bene saued. But I broughte the vnto the, and proued the in the fournesse of affliction, that is, I wrapped the in captiuitie and bondage in Egypt, from whiche I afterwarde deliuered the. And this have I done for myne owne sake, that is onely for myne owne name and glory, of myne owne gentlenes & lounge kindnes, not for any of thy merites and deseruynges, whiche were none at all. For howe would the gentyles and heathen haue polluted, defiled and blasphemed my name, if I had rooted oute myne owne people, and so haue made the truth of the promises whiche I had determined to fulfill in Christe, vaine & untrue? For as well this prayse of my trueth, as the glory of the blessing promised in the seade of Abraham and Dauid, wyl I not geue vnto another people or nacion. The health of the worlde shall come of the Jewes. John. iiii. And from none other. The glad thynges of health shall the whole worlde receiue of no nother then of Christ, by the preachinge of the Apostles. &c.

The .xlix. Chapter.

Wyl commit my cause and my worke vnto the Lord my God. And now saith the lord: euen he that fashioned me fro my mothers wombe to be hys seruaunte, that I maye byng Jacob agayne vnto hym: how best, Israell wyl not be gathered vnto hym agayne. In whose syght I am great, which also is my Lord, my God, and my strenght. Let it be but a small chynge, that thou art my seruaunt, to set vp the kynredes of Jacob, and to restore the destruction of Israell, if I make the not also the lychte of the Gentyls that thou maiest be my health vnto the ende of the worlde. Moreover thus sayth the Lord the auenger and holpe one of Israell, because of the abhorring and despising among the Gentils, concerning the seruaunt of al them that bear rule, Kyngs and princes shal se, and arise and worship, because of the Lord that he is saythful, and because of the holy one of Israell, whiche hath chosen the.

And thus sayth the Lord: * In the tyme appoynted wyl I be presente wyth thee. * and in the houre of health wyl I helpe the, and delpue the, I wyl make the a pledge for the people, so that thou shalte helpe vp the earth agayne, and challenge againe the scattered heritages. That thou maiest say to the prisoners: go forth, and to them that are in darkenes: come into the lycht, that they may fede in the hye wayes, and gette theyr lyving in al places. There shall neyther hunger nor thurst, heate nor sun burne them. For he that fauoureth the, shal leade them, and gyue them drynke of the springe wels, I wyl make wates vpon al my mountaynes, and my fote pathes shalbe exalted. And behold, they shal come from farre: lo, some from the North and West, some fro the South. * Reioyce ye heauens, and sing praises thou earth. Walke of tope, ye hylls, for God wyl comfort hys people, and haue mercy vpon hys, that be troubled.

Then shal Syon say: * God hath forsaken me, and the Lorde hath forgotten me. (c) Doth a wyfe forgette the chyld of her wombe, and þ sonne whom she hath borne? And thoughte she doo forget, yet wyl not I forget the. Behold, I haue wyrtten the vp on my handes, thy walles are euer in my syght. * They that haue broken the down, shal make haste to buyld the vp agayn, and they that made the waste, shal dwel in the. Lift vp thine eyes, and looke about the, al these shal gather them together, and come to the. As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord) thou shalt put them al vpon the, as an apparel, and gyd the to the as a byrde doth her Jewels. As for thy land that lyeth desolate, wasted, and destroyed, it shall be to narrowe from the, that shal dwel in it. And they that would deuoure the, shal be farre away. (d) Then the chyld whome the baren shall bynge forth vnto the, shall saye in thine eare: thys place is to narrowe, syt myetogether, that I maye haue room.

Then shalt thou thynke by thy selfe. Who hath begotten me these? seynge I am barren and alone, a captiue and an outcaste? And who hath noursched them vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but from whence come these?

And therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, I wyl stretch out myne hande to the Gentyls, & set vp my token to the people. They shal byng the thy sones in their laps, and cary thy daughters vnto the vpon theyr shoulders. For kynges shalbe thy noursyng fathers, and Quenes shalbe thy noursyng mothers. They shal fall before the wyth theyr faces flat vpon the earthe, and licke vp the dust of thy feete, that thou mayest know howe that I am the Lorde. * And who so putteth hys trust in me, shall not be confounded. Who spyleth the gy-aunt of hys praye? or who taketh the prysoner from the myghty? And therfore thus sayth the Lord. The prysoners shalbe takē from the gyaunt, and the spoule delpued from the vyolent: for I wyl maintayn thy cause agaynst thine aduersaries, and saue thy sone. And wyl fede thine enemies with theyr owne flesh, and make them dryncke of theyr owne bloud, as offwete wyne. And al flesh shal know (O Jacob) that I am þ Lord thy sauour, and strong auenger.

Behold for your own offences are yē solde, and because of youre trangression is your mother forsaken. For why woulde no man receyue me, tohen I came? and when I called, no man gaue me answer. ned tong, so that I can comfort the which are troubled, yea and that in due season. He waked myne eare by betymes in the morning (as the schoole masters doo) that I myght hearken. The Lord God hath opened myne eare, therefore can I not say nay, nor withdraue my selfe, but I offer my backe vnto the smyters, and my chekes to pnyppers. I turne not my face fro shame and spyttyng, for the Lord God helpeth me, therefore shall I not be confounded. I haue hardened my face lyke a slynte stone, for I am sure p I shall not come to confusion. Myne aduocate speaketh for me, who wyl then go with me to law? Let vs stand one against another, if ther be anye p wyl reason with me, let him come here forth to me. Behold, the Lord god standeth by me, what is he that can condemn me? lo, they shall be all lyke as an old cloth, whyche the mothes shall eat vp.

Therefore, who so feareth the Lord among you, let hym heare the voyce of hys seruaunce. Who so walketh in darcknes, and no lpyghte shyneth vpon hym, let hym hope in the Lord, and holde hym by hys God. (b) But take hede, ye haue all kyndled a fyre, and gyded youre selues with the flame. Ye walke in the glysternge of youre owne fyre, and in the flame that ye haue kyndled. Thys cometh vnto you from my hande, namely that ye shall sleepe in sorowe.

The Notes of the.ii. Chapter.

(a) God was not the cause why the congregacion of the Jewes (whyche is vnderstande by moether, & was once hys spouse) was deuorced and forsaken: but they owne offences deuorced the, and was the cause whye they were solde to the blurer, and geuen ouer into the handes of the Gentyls, or Heathen, and sparpled amongst the Medians, Persyans, Babylonians, Grecians and Romaynes.

(b) As who say: ye your selues haue kyndled the fyre of my vengeance with youre offences: I was no causer thereof: ye must therefore suffer the punishment therto belongyng. For it cometh of your owne deservyng that I so lay my hand vpon you, and punyssh you.

The.iii. Chapter.

Consolacion and comforte is promised vnto the faythful.

Hearken vnto me, ye p holde of righteousness, ye p seke the Lord. Take hede vnto p stone wherout ye are hewed, & to p graue wherout ye are dygged. Consider Abrahā your father, & Sara that bare you how p I called him alone, prospered hym wel, & encreased him, how the Lord comforted Syb, & repaired al her decay, makynge her desert as a paradyse, & her wyldernes as the garden of the Lord. Myrrh and ioye was ther, thankesgeuyng and the voyce of praisse. Haue respect vnto me the, o my people, & lay thine eare to me, for a law and an ordinaunce shall go forth fro me, to lighten the Gentyls. It is at hand, that my health and my rightousnes shall go forth, and the people shall be ordered with myne arme.

The Prophecy

The Isles (that is the Gentyls) shall hope in me, & put theyr trust in mine arme. Lyfte vp youre eyes toward heauen, and looke vpo the earth beneth. For p heuens shall vanishe away like smoke, and p earth shall receiue lyke a cloth, and they that dwel therein, shall perishe in lyke manner. But my health endureth for euer, and my rightousnes shall not ceas. Therefore hearken vnto me ye that haue pleasure in rightousnes, thou people that bearest my law in thine herte. Feare not the curse of men, be not afrayed of theyr blasphemyes and reuylnges, for wormes and mothes shall eat them vp lyke cloth and wol. But my rightousnes shall endure for euer, and my sauing health from generation to generaciō. Wake vp, wake vp, and be strong, O thou (a) arme of p lord, wake vp lyke as in tymes past, euer and sence the world began.

Art not thou he that hast wounded that proud lucifer, and bemen the dragon in pieces? Art not thou euen he which hast dyed vpon the depe of p sea? which hast made plain the sea ground, that the deliuered myght go thorow? What the redeemed of the Lord which touned agayne, myght come with ioy vnto Sio, ther to endure for euer? What myrrh and gladnesse myght be with them that sorow, and woo myght aye fro them? Yea I, I am euen he, that in al things geueth you consolacion. What art thou then that fearest a mortal man, the child of man whych goeth away as doth the flour. And forgettest the Lord that made thee, that spred out the heuens, and layed the foundation of the earth. But thou art euer afrayed for the syghte of thine oppressoure, whych is ready to do harme. What is the wrath of the oppressoure? It cometh on fast, it maketh haste to appeare. It shall not perishe, that it shold not be able to destroy, neyther shall it fayle for faute of noysshing. I am the Lord thy God, that make the sea to be still and to rage, whose name is the Lord of hosts. I shall put my worde also in thy mouth, and desed the with the turning of my hand, that thou maiest plat the heauens, and lay the foundations of the earth, and say vnto Syn: thou art my people.

Awake, awake, and stand vp, O Ierusalem, thou that from the hande of the Lord hast dronken the (b) cuppe of hys wrath, thou that hast supped of, and sucked oute the Rombynge cuppe to the bottome. For among al the sonnes whom thou hast begotten, ther is not one that maye bold the vp, and not one to leade the by the hand, of al the sonnes that thou hast noysshed. Both these thynges are happened vnto thee, but who is sorpe for it? Yea, destruccyon, wastynge, hunger, and swerd, but who hath comforted the? Thy sonnes lye comfortes lesse at the beade of euery streete lyke a taken beylyson, and are full of the terribill wrath of the Lord, and punishment of thy God. And therefore thou myserable and dronke symple, and despyled of al, whych yet hath good experience of sorowes and infirmy-ties. We shall reken hym so symple and so vyle, that we shall hide our faces from him.

How be it (of a truch) he only taketh awai our infirmyty, and beareth our payne. Yet we shall iudge hym as though he were pla-ged and cast downe of God: Where as he

An exhortacion to iudgemente and ryghteousnes, and to the spiritual keepynge of the Sabbath. Agaynst Shepherdes that deuoure theyr flocke.

Thus sayth the Lord: kepe equity and do ryght, for my sauing healch shalbe opened. Blessed is the man that doth this, and the mans chyldre whych keepeth the same. He that taketh heede, that he vnhalowe not the Sabbath, that is he that keepeth hym selfe that he do no euyl. Then shal not the straunger whiche cleaueth to the Lord, say: Alas, the Lord hath shat me cleane out from hys people. Neyther shall the gelded man say: lo, I am a drye tree.

For thus sayeth the Lord: fyre vnto the gelded that keepeth my sabbath, Name ly, that holdeth greatly of the thyng that pleaseth me, and keepeth my couenaunt, vnto them wil I geue in my household & with in my walles, a better berytage and name then if they had bene called sones & doughters. I wyl geue the an everlasting name, that shal not perishe. Agayne, he saith vnto the straungers that are dysposed to stycke to the Lord to serue hym, and to loue hys name, That they shalbe no bond men. And al they, whych kepe them selues, that they vnhalowe not the Sabbath, namelpe, that they fulfyll my couenaunte, Then wyl I brynge to my holpe mountaynes, and make them ioyful in my house of prayer. Theyr burnt offerynges and sacrifices shalbe accepted vpon myne auter, for my house shalbe an house of prayer of al people.

Thus saith the Lord God which gathereth together the scattered of Israel. I wyl brynge yet another congregation to hym. Al the beastes of the field, and all the beasts of y<sup>e</sup> wood, shal come to deuour him. For hys (a) watch men are al blynde, they haue altogether no vnderstandynge, they are al dōme dogs, not being able to barke, they are sleepe, soogrye are they and lye snoztynge, they are shamelesse dogges, that neuer be satysfied. The shepherdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandynge, but euery man turneth hys owne waye, euery one after hys owne couetousnes with all hys power. Come (say they) I wyl fetche wyne, so shal we fill our selues, that we may be dronken. And do to morowe, lyke as to day, yea and much more.

Whych were the peruerter and deprauers of the law of God: These for fylthy lickers sake abolished the true seruyce of God, and were the chiefe causers of the forsaking of Israel. They were slouthful, and sought not that which was for the edification of the people, and for the glory of God, but that whych was for theyr owne ppyuate profit and pleasure. They were slouthful to roote out vyce, and to plante vertue, and dnyen into the profound and deepe sleepe of ignorance, idleness, of lecherousnes, and of pryde. As oft as the prelates of the people, Bishops, Abates, and they that auance them selues for religious be such, they hangeth a great scourge ouer the whole flocke of Christ.

1 A And therfore cry nothe as loude as I canst. Leaue not of, lyft vp thy voyce lyke a trompet, and shew my people theyr offences, and the house of Jacob their synnes. For they seke me daily & wil know

Behold, when ye (a) fast, your lust remaineth I neth syl, for ye do no lyfe vyolence to your betters, lo ye fast to dyspe and debate, and to smyte hym with your syt that speaketh your voyce myght be heard aboue. Thinke ye thys fast pleasech me, that a man shoulde chasten hym selfe for a day, and to wythe hys heade about lyke an hake in an heay-not me, tyl the tyme be thou lose hym oute of bondage, that is in thy dasyger, that thou breake the oth of the wycked bargaynes, that thou let the oppressed go free, and take from them al maner of burthens. It pleasech

The.lix. Chapter.

The Lord is myghty to ſaue, and readye to heare our requettes.

Behold, the Lords hand is not ſo ſhortened that it can not helpe, neyther is his eare ſo ſtopped that it maye not heare. But your myſdedes haue ſeparated you from your God, and your ſynnes hide his face from you, that he heareth you not. For your handes are deſpyled wth blood, and your ſpunges wth vncyghtuouſnes. Your lpps ſpeake leſpuges, and your tong ſetteth out wyckednes. No mā regardeth cyghteouſnes, and no man iudgeth truly. Every man hopeth in vayne thynges, and ymagineth dyſceyte, concepueth werynes, and byngeth forth euyl.

They brede (a) cockatrice egges, & weue the ſpyders webbe. (b) Whoſo eateth of theyr egges, dieth. (c) But if one tread vpon them, ther cometh vpon a ſerpēt. (d) Their web maketh no cloth, and they may not couer them wth theyr laboures. (e) Theyr dedes are the dedes of wyckednes, and the worke of robbery is in theyr handes. Their feete runne to euyl, and they make haſte to ſhed innocent bloude. Theyr counſayles are wycked counſayls, harme and deſtruction ar in theyr waies. But ſ way of peace they know not. In theyr goings is no equity, theyr wayes are ſo croked ꝑ whoſoeuer goeth therein, knoweth nothyng of peace.

And this is the cauſe that equitye is ſo farre from vs, and that the cyghtuouſneſſe cometh not nye vs. We looke for light, lo it is darkneſſe: for the morning ſhynē, ſee, we walke in the darke. We grope lyke the blynd vpon the wal, we grope euen as one that hath none eyes. We ſtumble at ꝑ noone daye, as though it wer toward myghte: in the falling places, lyke men that are halfe dead. We rore al lyke Beares, and mourne ſyl lyke doves. We looke for equitye, but theyr is none: for health, but it is far from vs. For our offences are many before thee, and our ſynnes teſtify agaynſt vs. Yea we muſt confeſſe that we offend, and acknowledge that we do amysſe: Namelye transgreſſes and deſſemble agaynſt the Lorde, and fall awaye from our God: vſynge preſumptuous and trayterous imagynacions, and caſtyng falſe matters in our heartes. And therfore is equitye gone aſyde, and cyghteouſnes ſtanderh farof: truth is fallen down in the ſtreete, and the thinge that is playue and open may not be ſhewed. Yea ꝑ truthe is layed in pryſon, and he that reſtrayneth hym ſelfe from euyl, muſt be ſpyled.

When the Lorde ſawe this, it dyſpleaſed hym ſore, that ther was no where anye equitye. He ſawe alſo that there was no man whych had pitte thereof, or was grieved at it. And he helde hym by his own power, and cleaued to his own cyghteouſnes. He put cyghteouſnes vpon hym for a breaſt plate, and ſet the helmet of health vpon his head. He put on wrath in ſtede of clothynge, and tooke gelaufye about hym for a cloke (lyke as when a man goeth forth wrothefully to recompence his cunnemyes, and to be auenged of his aduerſaries.) Namelye that he might recompence & reward the Iſlands, wher thowth the name of the Lord myghte be feared from the ryſynge of the Sunne, and his magelty vnto the goynge downe of the ſame.

For he ſhall come as a vyolente water ſtreame, which the wynde of the Lord hath moued. But vnto ſpon there ſhall come a redemer, and vnto the in Iacob that turne from wyckednes, ſayth the Lorde, I wyll make this couenaunt wth them (ſayth ꝑ Lorde) My ſpirit that is come vpon the, & ſ words which I haue put in thy mouth, ſhal neuer go out of thy mouth nor out of the mouth of thy chyldre & chyldren, from this tyme forth for euermore.

The Notes of the.lix. Chapter.

(a) To brede Cockatrice Egges, is to go aboute that wyche is myſcheuous and wycked. And to weue the ſpyders webbe is, to goo about vayne and tryſynge thynges, wyche are of no valare: althoughe they ſeeme neuer ſo excellent vnto the doers.

The propheth that Christ shalbe annointed, and sent to preache.

The spryde of the Lord God is wyth me, for the Lord hath anoynted me, and sent me, to preach good tydings vnto the poore, that I myght bynde up the wounded hartes, that I might preach despyeraunce to the captiue, and open the prison to the that are bound: that I might declare the acceptable yere of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God: that I myght comfort al them that are in heauynes, that I myght geue vnto them that mourne in Syon, beautye, in the seede of ashes, ioyful oymment for syghyng, pleasant rayment for an heauy mynde: That they myght be called excellent in ryghteousnesse, a plantyng of the Lord, for hym to reioyse in.

They shal buyld the longe rougher wyldernes, and set vp the old desert. They shal repaire the wast places, and suche as haue bene voide thowowout many generations. Strangers shal stand and seeke your cattel, and the aleaunces shall be your plowmen and repers. But ye shal be named the priests of the Lord, and me shal cal you the seruantes of our God. Ye shal enioye the goodes of the Gentyls, and triumphe in theyr substance. For your greate reprofe and shame, shal they haue ioy, that ye may haue parte wyth them. For they shal haue double possession in theyr land, and euerlastyng ioy shalbe wyth them. For I the Lord, whych I haue loue ryght, and hate robbery (though it wer offered me) shal make theyr workes ful of faythfulnes, and make an euerlastyng couenaunt wyth them.

Theyr seede also and theyr generacion shal be knowne amonge the Gentyls, and amonge the people. All they that see them, shal knowe that they are the hygge blessed seede of the Lord. And therefore I am ioyful in the Lord, and my soule reioysch in my God. For he shal putte vpon me the (a) garmente of health, and couer me wyth the mantel of ryghteousnesse. He shal deck me lyke a bydegrome, and as a byde that hath her apparel vpon her. For lyke as the grounde bringeth forth the cryp, and as the garden shooteth forth the seede: So shal the Lord God cause ryghteousnesse, and the feare of God to flourish forth before al the heathen.

The. lxiij. Chapter.

A prophecy of the coming of Christ.

A For Sion sake therefore will I not hold my tongue, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not cease, until they be righteous: they shall break forth as the shining light, and they shall be as a burning lamp. Then shall the Gentiles see the righteousness, and all kingdoms thy glory. Thou shalt be named with a new name which the mouth of the Lord shall show. Thou shalt be a crown in the hand of the Lord, and a glorious garland in the hand of thy God. From this time forth thou shalt never be called the forsaken, and thy land shall no more be called the wilderness.

B But thou shalt be called * Ephraim, and thy land * Beulah: for the Lord loveth thee, and thy land shall be inhabited. And like as a young man taketh a daughter to marriage, so shall God marry himself unto thy sonnes. And as a bydegroom is gladde of his bride, so shall God rejoice over thee. I will set watchmen upon thy walls (O Jerusalem) which shall never cease day nor night to preach the Lord. And ye also shall not kepe hym close, nor leue to speake of hym, until Jerusalem be set up & made the praise of the world. The Lord hath sworn by his right hand, and by his strong arme, that from hence forth he will not give thy corne to be meate for thine enemies, nor thy vine (wherein thou hast laboured) to be drucke for the strangers. But they that have gathered in the corne, shall eat it, and give thanks unto the Lord, and they that have borne in the vine, shall drinke it in the court of thy Sanctuary.

C Stande backe, and departe a sunder, ye that stand under the gate: make room ye people, repaire the streete and take away the stones, and set oute a token for the people. Behold, the Lord proclaimeth in the ends of the world: tel the daughter of Sion, see thy salvation cometh: behold, he bringeth his treasure with hym, and his works go before hym. * For they which the Lord delivereth, shall be called the holy people: and as for thee, thou shalt be named the greatly occupied, and not the forsaken.

The. lxiij. Chapter.

Of the redemption promised to the people

A What is he this, that cometh from Edom with stained red clothes of Bosra: (which is so costly cloth) and cometh in so nimble with all his strength? I am he that teacheth righteousness, and am of power to helpe. Wherefore is this thy clothing red, & thy raiment like bys that treadeth in the wyne presse? I have troden downe myne enemies in my wrath, and set my fete upon them in my indignation. And theyr blood sprang upon my clothes, and so have I stained all my raiment. For the daye of vengeance that I have taken in hand, and the pite of my deliuerance, is come. I looked about me, and ther was no man to shew me any helpe, I fel down, and no man helde me up. Then I held me by myne owne arme, and my feruentnesse susteyned me. And thus have I troden downe the people in my wrath, and bathed them in my displeasure: In so much that I have shed theyr blood upon the earth.

I will declare the goodnes of the Lord, pea and the praise of the Lord for all that he hath geuen vs, for the greates good that he hath done for Israel: which he hath giuen them of his owne sauour, and accordyng to the multitude of his louing kindnes. For he sayd: These no doubt wil be my people, and no chynnyng children, and so he was theyr sauoure. In theyr troubles he forsookethem not, but the angel that went forth from his presence, deliuered them: O very loue and kindnes that he had vnto them, redemed he them. He hath borne them, and caried them vpon euery sence the world began. But after they prouoked hym to wrath, and vexed his holy mynde, he was theyr enemye, and fought agaynst them hym selfe. Yet remembred he the old tyme of Moyses and his people: how he broughte them from the water of the sea, as a shepheard doth his shepe: how he had geuen his holy spirite among them: how he had led Moyses by the right hand with his glorious arme: how he had deuyded the water before them (whereby he gaue hym selfe an euerlastyng name) how he led them in the depe, as an horse is ledde in the playne, that they shoulde not stumble. The spirit of the Lord led them, as a tame beaſt goeth in the feld.

Thus (O God) haste thou led thy people, to make thy self a glorious name with al. Looke downe then from heauen, and behold the dwelling place of thy Sanctuary and thy glory. How is it, that thy gentyltye, thy strengthe, the multitude of thy mercyes, and thy louing kyndnes will not be intreated of vs: yet art thou our father. For Abraham knoweth vs not, neither is Israel acquainted with vs. But thou Lord art our father and redemer, and thy name is euerlastyng.

O Lord wherefore hast thou ledde vs oute of the wape: wherefore haste thou hardened oure hartes, that we feare thee not? Be at one with vs againe, for thy seruantes sake, that are of the generacion of thine heritage. Thy people hath hadde but lytle of thy Sanctuary in possession, for oure enemies haue taken it in: And we are become euil as we were from the begynnyng: but thou art not theyr Lord, for that I wyl dwel in? As for these thynges, my hand hath made them al, and they are al created, sayeth the Lord.

Whych of them then shal I regarde? Euen hym that is of a lowlye troubled spy-rite, and standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an oxe for me, dothe me so offereth swynes blond: Who so maketh me

a memorial of incense, prayseth the thinge
that is vnyght. Yet take they such waies in hand, and theyr soule delyteth in these abhomynacions.

Therefore wyl I also haue pleasure in laughyng them to scoone, and the thyng that they feare, wyl I bynge vpon them. B
For when I called, no man gaue answer: Jer. vii. f.

dyd wickednes before mine eyes, and chose the thynges that dysplese me. Heare the whych he speaketh. Your brethren that hate you, and caste you oute for my names sake, say: let the Lord magnify hym selfe, that we may se your gladnes, and yet they shal be confounded.

For as touching the city and the temple
I heare the voyce of the Lord, that wyl reward, and recompence hys enuemies, lyke
as when a wyfe byngeth forth a mā child, o<sup>r</sup> euer she suffer the paine of the byrth and anguysh of the trauaile. Who euer herd o<sup>r</sup> saw such thynges? doth the grounde beare in one day? Or are the people borne all at sayth the Lord: Am I he that maketh orhee to beare, and beare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth and maketh baren, sayeth thy God: Reioyse with Jerusalem, and be glad wpyth her, al ye that loue her. Be topefull wpyth her, all ye that mourned for her.

For ye shal sucke comfort out of her brea-stes, and be satisfied: ye shal taste, and haue delyre in the p<sup>r</sup>etousnes of her power. For thus sayeth the Lord: Behold, I wyl let peace into her, like a water floude, and the
might of the heathē like a flowing streame.
Then shal ye sucke, ye shal be borne vpon
her sydes, and be topefull vpon her knees.
For lyke as a chyld is comforted of hys mother, so shal I comfort you: and ye shal be comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye see this, your heart shal reioyse, and your bones

The. lxxvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mans hand. He despyseth sacrifices done wpythout mercy and fayth. God comforteth them that are troubled for hys sake. Among the Christen, the Sabbath is continuall.

Actes. vii. f. Thus sayth the Lord: beaue is my seat, & the earth is my fore stole. (a) Wher shal now the house stand that ye wyl buyld vnto me? And wher shal be the place that I wyl dwel in? As for these thynges, my hand hath made them al, and they are
al created, sayeth the Lord.

Whych of them then shal I regarde? Euen hym that is of a lowlye troubled spy-rite, and standeth in awe of my wordes. For
who so slayeth an oxe for me, dothe me so great dyshonour, as he that killeth a man.
He that kylleth a sheepe for me, choketh a dog. He that byngeth me meat offerings,

offereth swynes blond: Who so maketh me
a memorial of incense, prayseth the thinge
that is vnyght. Yet take they such waies in hand, and theyr soule delpyeth in these abhomynacions.

Therefore wyl I also haue pleasure in laughyng them to scoorne, and the thyng that they feare, wyl I byng upon them. B
For when I called, no man gaue answer: Jer. vii. f.
when I spake, they would not heare. But dyd wickednes before mine eyes, and chose the thynges that dysplese me. Heare the worde of God all ye that feare the thyng whych he speaketh. Your brethren that hate
you, and caste you oute for my names sake,
say: let the Lord magnify hym selfe, that
we may se your gladnes, and yet they shal
be confounded.

For as touching the city and the temple
I heare the voyce of the Lord, that wyl reward, and recompence hys enuemies, lyke
as when a wyfe byngeth forth a mā child,
o<sup>r</sup> euer she suffer the paine of the byrth and anguysh of the trauaile. Who euer herd o<sup>r</sup> saw such thynges? doth the grounde beare
in one day? Or are the people borne all at once, as Sp<sup>r</sup> beareth her sonnes? For thus sayth the Lord: Am I he that maketh orhee
to beare, and beare not my selfe? Am not I
he that beareth and maketh baren, sayeth
thy God: Reioyse with Jerusalem, and be glad wpyth her, al ye that loue her. Be topefull wpyth her, all ye that mourned for her.
For ye shal sucke comfort out of her brea-
stes, and be satisfied: ye shal taste, and haue delpye in the p<sup>r</sup>etousnes of her power. For thus sayeth the Lord: Behold, I wyl let peace into her, like a water floude, and the
might of the heathē like a flowing streame.
Then shal ye sucke, ye shal be borne vpon
her sydes, and be topefull vpon her knees.
For lyke as a chyld is comforted of hys mother, so shal I comfort you: and ye shal be comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye see this, your heart shal reioyse, and your bones shal flourish lyke an herbe.

Thus shal the hande of the Lord be knowen among hys seruantes, and hys in-dygnacion amonge hys enuemies. For be-holde, the Lord shall come wpyth fyre, and hys charer shal be lyke a whyle wind, that he may recompence his vengeance in his wrathe, and hys indygnacyon wpyth the flame of fyre. For the Lord shall iudge all fleshe wpyth the fyre, and wpyth hys swerde, and ther shal be a grete number slayne of the Lord. Such as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens, and those that haue eaten swynes flesh, myce, and o<sup>r</sup> ther abhomynacions, shal be taken awaye together sayth the Lord.

For I wyl come to gather al people and tounes wpyth theyr woorkes and ymagina-cions: these shal come, and see my glorie.
Vnto them shal I geue a token, and sende certayne of them (that be delpyered) a-

The Notes of the. i. Chapter.

(a) It is a necessary thinge to the understanding of the Prophetes, to know the storyes of the tymes, wherein they prophesied. The storyes of Jeremies tyme ye haue in the fourth of the kynges, from the twenty and one Chapter to the ende of booke: and in the seconde of the Chronycles, from the. xlii. chapter to the ende also. He prophesied aboute. xli. yeaeres.

(b) I sanctified the. x. That is, I dedicated, chose, appointed, and prepared, & set the a spede, to be a Prophete vnto the people. So in John. 1. 9. Saye ye then vnto hym, whome the father hath sanctified. &c. that is, hath chosen. &c.

(c) For a Prophete or Preacher to gyde by hys loynes, is boldelye and constantlye to resist the false opinion, & doctrine of þ wicked, and euen to emprint in them the worde of truth (whiche engendreth hate) whether they wyl or nyl: and that not once or twise, but vntyll suche tyme as they either amend, or elles were angry and furious wryth it. Yea, and then to set more by the commaundement of the Lorde, then by þ power and tyrannye of thys worlde: and not to let by the threatenynge of rulers, whiche canne do nothinge but that which God permits teth and suffereth them: therfore are they not to be feared of an obediens and sayethfull seruauant of the Lorde.

The. ii. Chapter.

God reherceth his benefites done vnto þ Jewes. Against Priestes and Prophets, or preachers that contemne and despise God. The Jewes are destroyed because they forsake God, and because they ran a whorehunge after Idoles.

Moreouer the worde of the Lorde commaunded me thus: So thy way, crye in the eares of Ierusalem, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I remember the for the kyndnesse of thy yowth, and because of thy stedfast loue, in þ thou folowedst me thowowe þ wyldernes, in an vntilled lande. Thou Israell wast halowed vnto the Lorde, and so was hys first frutes. All they that deuoured Israell, offended: my fortune fell vpon the, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therefore the word of the Lorde, O thou house of Iacob, and all the generation of the house of Israell. Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto you.

What vnfaithfulnesse founde your fathers in me, that they wente so far awaye from me, fallinge to lyghtnesse, & beyng so vaine? They thought not in theyr hertes: Wher haue we left þ Lorde, that brought vs oute of the lande of Egypt, that led vs thowowe the wyldernes, thowowe a desert and rough land, thowowe a dry & a deadly lande, yea a lande that no man had gone thowow, and wherein no man had dwelt? And when I had brought you into a pleasant wel builded land, þ ye myght enioye the frutes and all the commodities of the same, ye wente forth, and defiled my land & brought mine heritage to abominacion. The Priestes them selues sayd not ones: Wher is the Lorde? They þ haue the lawe in theyr handes knowe me not. The shepherdes offende agaynst me. The Prophets ses do seruice vnto Baal, & folowe suche thinges as shall byng them no profyt.

Wherfore I am constrained (saith the Lorde) to make my complaint vpon you, and vpon your chyldren. Go into the fles of Cethym, and loke well, sende vnto Cedar, take diligente hede, and se, whether such thinges be done there, whether the Gentyles them selues deale so falsly and vntreuly wryth theyr goddes, whiche yet are no goddes in dede. ) But my people hath geuen ouer theyr hye bonoure, for a thinge that may not helpe them.

Be astonysed, O ye heauens, be afrayed and abashed at suche a thinge, sayeth the Lorde. For my people hath done two euyls. They haue forsaken me the well of water of life, and digged them pyttes, yea vile and broken pyttes that holde no water. Is Israell a bonde seruauant, or one of the household? Why is he then so spoyled? Why do they roze and crye then vpon him as a Lid? They haue made his land waste, hys cityes are so brent vp, that there is no man dwellinge in them. Yea the chyldren of (a) Roph and Taphnes haue despoiled thy necke.

Cometh not thys vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he ledde the by the waye? And what haste thou nowe to doo in the strete of Egypt? to drynke foule water? Either what makeste thou in the waye of Assiria? To drynke water of the floude? Thyne owne wyckednesse shal reprove the, and thy turning away shal condemne the: that thou mayeste knowe and understand howe euyl and hurtfull a thinge it is, that thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, and not feared hym. sayeth the Lorde God of hostes.

I haue euer broke thy yoke of olde, and burste thy bondes: yet sayest thou, I wyl no more serue, but (lyke an harlotte) thou runnest aboute vpon all hye hylls, and amonge all grene trees, where as I planted the out of the noble grapes, & good rootes. Howe art thou turned the into a byttere, vnfruitful, and straunge grape? Yea, & that so soure, that though thou washest the wryth * Nitrus & make thy selfe to sauour wryth þ swete smellynge herbe of Boryth: yet in my syght thou arte stayned wryth thy wyckednes, sayeth the Lorde thy God.

Sape not nowe: I am not vnclane, and I haue not folowed the gods. Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in the woodes, halleyes, and denues: so shalt thou know what thou haste done. Thou arte lyke a swyre Dromedary that goth easely hys way: and thy wantonnes is lyke a wyld Ass that vseth the wyldernes, and that snoffeth and bloweth at hys wyl. Who can tame the? Al they that seeke the, shall not saye, but fynde the in thine owne vnclennes. Thou kepest thy foote from nakednes, and thy throte from thyrst, and thynekst þ in thy self: tushe, I wyl take after that? Is not this field the defiled & vnclean? But as for þ, thou hast (a) played the harlot with many louers, yet tourne agayne to me sayeth the Lorde. Lift vp thine eyes on euery syde, and loke if thou be not defiled. Thou hast waited for them in the stretes, and as a murderer in the wilderness. Thow thy whoredome & shameful blasphemies is the lande defiled.

This is the cause, that the rayne and e- uening dew hath ceased. Thou hast gotten an hoores forehead, & canst not be ashamed. Wilt thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou art he that haste brought me vp, and led me fro my youth: Wylce thou then put me awaye, and caste me of for euer? Or wilt thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane fro me?

Neuertheles thou speakest such wordes, but thou art euer doynge worse & worse.

Hast thou sene also (when she hadde done all this) howe I sayde vnto her, that she shoulde tourne agayne vnto me, and yet she is not touned? Juda that vnfaithfull syster of hers also sawe this: Namely that after I hadde well sene the aduouty of the whynckynge harlot Israel, I put her awaye, and gaue her a byll of deuorcement.

For all this her vnfaithfull syster Ju- da was not ashamed, but went backe and played the hooze also. Yea, and the nyse of her whoredome hath despyled the hole land. For she hath committed her aduou- trye with stones and stockes.

Neuerthelesse her vnfaithfull syster Ju- da is not touned agayne vnto me wyth her hole herte, but faynedlye, sayeth the Lorde. And the Lorde sayed vnto me: The bakkyder Israel is more rightuous then the vnfaithful Juda: & therfore go preach these wordes towarde the North, and saie: Thou whynckynge Israel, tourne agayne (sayeth the Lorde) and I wyl not tourne my face from you: for I am mer- cyfull, sayeth the Lorde, and I wyl not al- waye beare displeasure agaynst the: but on this condition, that thou knowe thy greate blasphemie: Namely that thou haste vnfaithfully forsaken the Lorde thy God, and haste made thy selfe partetaker of straunge Gods vnder all grene trees, but hast hadde no wyl to heare my voyce, sayeth the Lorde.

* O ye whynckynge chyliden, tourne ag- gayne, sayeth the Lorde: and I wyl be ma- rryed with you. For I wyl take one out of the cytle, and two oute of one generacion frome amonge you, and bringe you oute of Syon: and wyl gyue you herdemen af- ter myne owne mynde, whiche shal fede you wyth lernynge and wysdome.

Moreouer,

Moreouer, when ye be encreased and multiplied in the lande, then (sayeth the Lorde) there shall no more booke be made of the Arcke of the Lordes Testament: No man shall thynke vpon it, neyther shall anye man make mencion of it: for frome thence forth it shall neyther be visited, ne honoured wth giftes.

- Then shall Ierusalem be called the Lordes seate, and al Ierusalem shall be gathered vnto it, for the Lordes names sake, whiche shall be set forth, they shall folowe no more the magnacion of theyre owne froward herte.

F Then those that be of the house of Iuda, shall goo vnto the house of Israel: and they shall come togither oute of the North into the same lande that I haue gyuen your fathers. I haue shewed also howe I toke the vp, beyng but a chyld, and gaue the a pleasaunte lande for thyne heritage, yea and a goodly host of the Heathen: and howe I commaunded the that thou shouldest * call me father onelye, and not to thynke fro me.

mat. xx. iii. c

B But lyke as a woman faileth her louer, so are ye vnfaithfull vnto me (O ye house of Israel) sayeth the Lorde. And therefore the voyce of the chyldren of Israel was herde on euery syde, weytinge & waylping: for they haue defiled theyr way, and forgotten God theyr Lorde.

O ye thynckynge chyldren, tourne agayne (sayinge: lo, we are thyne, for thou arte the Lorde oure God:) And so shall I heale your backeturninges. The hylls fall, & all the hye pride of the mountaines, but the helth of Israel standeth only vpon God oure Lorde.

Confusion hath deuoured oure fathers laboure from oure pouth vpon: yea, theyr shepe & bullockes, theyr sonnes & daughters. So doo we also slepe in our confusio, and shame couereth vs: for wee and oure fathers s<sup>in</sup>d out pouth vpon this day, haue synned agaynst the Lorde oure God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord oure God.

The notes of the.iii. Chapter.

(a) That is, thou hast loued, worshipped, & seruied many Idoles of the Gentyles, in hylls, woodes, valleyes, fildes, and in many other places as we often reade in the Bible: and hast forsaken me thy housbande, contrary to the maner of honeste maryed women, wherfore thou art worthy to be deuoried: yet turne and repent and forgiue the earnestly, and I wyll not stycke to receyue the agayne.

The.iii. Chapter.

S The true repentaunce or returnyng to God. He exhorteth to the circuncysion of the herte. The destruccyon of Iewrye is prophesied, for the malice of theyr hertes.

A Israel, if thou wylt turne the, then turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. And if thou wylt put away thyne abhominacions out of my syght, thou shalt not be moued: And shalt swere. The Lorde lyueth: in truth in equity and ryghtousnesse: and all people shall be fortunable and ioyful in hym. For thus sayeth the Lord to all Iuda and Ierusalem: plow your land, & sow not among the thornes.

Be circuncised in the Lorde, and cutte awaye the foreskynne of your hertes, all ye of Iuda, and all the indwellers of Ierusalem: that my indignacion breake not oute lyke fyre, and kyndle, so that no man maye quenche it, because of the wickednes of your ymaginacions.

Dee. x. d.

Preache in Iuda and Ierusalem: crye Iere. i. out and speake: blowe the trumpets in the land: crye & euery man may heare, and say: Gather you togither, and we wyll go in to stronge cities. Set vpon the token in Syon, speede you, and make no tarynge, for I wyl byynge a greate plage, and a greate destruction from the North. For the spyler of the Gentyles is broken vpon from his place, as a lyon out of his denne, & he maye make the lande waste, and destroye the cities, so that no man maye dwell therein.

Wherfore gird your selues aboute wth sacke clothe, (a) mourne and wepe, for the fearefull wrath of the Lorde shall not be withdrawen from you.

At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde) the herte of the kynge and of the princes shall be gone, the priestes shall be astonysed, and the prophetes shall be sore afayed. Then sayde I: O Lord God, haste thou then disceyued this people, and Ierusalem, sayinge: ye shall haue peace, and now the swearde goeth thorow their lyues: Then shall it be sayed to the people, and to Ierusalem: (b) ther cometh a warm wynd fro the North thorow the waye of my people, but neyther to fan, ne to cleanse.

(c) After that there shall come vnto me a stronge wynd, and then wyll I also gyue sentence vpon them. For lo, he cometh downe lyke as a cloud, & his charetes are lyke a storme wynde: his horsemen are swifter then the Eagle. Wo vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Ierusalem, washe thyne herte from wyckednesse, that thou mayst be helped. Howe longe shall thy noy some thoughtes remayne wth the?

For a voyce from Dan, and from the hyll of Ephraim speaketh out, and telleth of a destruccyon. Behold the Hebrer gyue Ierusalem warnyng, and preache vnto her, that her destroyers are commynge frome farre countreys. They tel the cities of Iuda the same also, they shall gyue the warnyng in euery place lyke as a watch-mene in the feld. For they haue prouoked me to wrath, sayeth the Lorde.

Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue brought & vnto this: this is thine owne wickednesse & disobedience that hath possessed thyne herte: As my bely, as my bely (shalt thou crye,) howe is my herte so sore? my hert panteth wthin me, I can not be styl,

The. v. Chapter.

for I haue herd the crying of the troopers and peales of warre.

They crye murder vpon murder, the hole lande shall perishe. Immediately my tentes were destroyed, and my hangyn- ges in the twinklinge of an eye. How long shall I se the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes?

Euertheles, this shall come vpon the because my people is become folishe, and hath utterly no understandinge. They are the chyldren of folyshnesse, & without any discrecion. To do euill they haue wyl- lough, but to do well they haue no wyl- dome. I haue looked vpon the earth: and se, it is waste and voyde. I looked towarde heauen, and it had no shynne.

I beheld the mountaynes, and they tre- bled, and all the hylles were in feare: I looked aboute me, and ther was no body, & all the byrds of the ayre were away. I marked well, and the plowed fiede was become waste: yea all theyr cities were bro- ken downe at the presence of the Lorde, and indignacion of his wrath.

For thus hath the Lorde sayd: The hole land shall be desolat, yet wil I not the haue done. And therfore let the earth mourne, & let the beaue be sorow above: for the thyng that I haue purposed and taken vpon me to do, shall not repent me, and I wyl not go from it. The hole land shall lye for the noyse of horsemen and bowmen: they shal run into the denues, into wodes, and clyme vp the stony rockes. All the cytyes shal be voyde, and no man dwellynge therein.

What wylt thou now do, thou beynge destroyed? For though thou clovest thy selfe with scarlet, and deckest the with golde, though thou paintest thy selfe with colours, yet shalt thou trim thy selfe in vain.

For those that hytherto haue ben thy great fauorers shall abhorre the, and goo about to slea the. For, me thynke I heare a noyse, lyke as it were a woman traue- llynge, or one labourynge of her first child: Euen the voyce of the doughter Siss, that casteth out her armes, & swoneth, sayinge: Ah, mo is me, how sore vexed and saynt is my herte, for them that are slayne?

The notes of the. lvi. Chapter.

(a) To mourne in scripture, signifyeth some time to make an vmeasurable and greuous la- mentacion, as when a man for impatience and griefe smiteth his owne bodye, refteth his clothes, teareth his hear. &c. So in. Mat. xlii. c. And then shall all the kynredes of the earth mourne.

(b) Some reader the dyce wynde cometh out of the hygge places of the wyldernes, by the way of the doughter of my people. &c. They vnder- stand by the wynde, the kyng of Egypt. And by the way of his people, the way whiche he ledde his people whē they came forth of Egypt, whis- che was throughe the wyldernes. Exo. ciii. d.

(c) After that shall there come vnto me a stronge wynde. &c. By this wynde is vnderstande the synge of Babilon and his armie.

The Prophecy

The. v. Chapter.

In Jewrye is there no ryghtous or sayth- full man founde, eyther amongst the people, or the rulers, for whose sake the lord should spare the cytye: wherfore Jewrye is destroyed of the Assyrians.

Like thowome Jerusalem: beholde and se: Seke thowome her streets also within, if ye can fynde one man that doeth equall and ryghte, or that la- boureth to be saythfull: and I shall spare hym (sayeth the Lorde.) For though they can say: the Lord lyueth, yet do they sweare to dysceyue: Where as thou (o Lord) *lo- kest only vpon sayth and truthe.

Thou haste scourged the, but they toke no repentance: thou haste correcte the for amēdment, but they refused thy correccio. They made theyr faces harder the a stone, and wolde not amende.

Therfore I thoughte in my selfe: per- aduēture they are so symple and foolishe, that they vnderstande nothyng of the Lor- des waye, and iudgements of oure God. Therfore wyl I goo vnto theyr heades and rulers, and talke with them: if they knowe the way of the Lorde, and the iud- gementes of oure God. But these (in lyke maner) haue broken the yoke, and burst the bandes in sunder.

* Wherfore a lyon oute of the woode shall hurte them, and a wolfe in the eue- nyng shall destroye them. The cat of the mountayne shal lye lurking by theyr ci- tytes, to teare in pteces al the that come ther- oute. For theyr offences are many, & theyr departing away is greute. Shoulde I the for al this haue mercy vpon the? Thy chil- dre haue forsake me, & sworn by the that are no gods. And albeit they were bounde to me in mariage, yet they fel to aduoutry, & haunted harlottes houses.

In the desyre of vnclely lust, they are become lyke to stoned horses, euery man neyeth at his neyghbours wyfe: should I not correcte this sayth the Lorde?

Shulde I not be auenged of euery peo- ple, that is lyke vnto this? Clyme vp vpon theyr walles, beate them downe, but destroye them not utterly, * cut of theyr bryanches, because they are not the Lor- des. For vn saythfullye hath the house of Israell and Iuda forsaken me, sayth the Lorde. They haue denyed the Lorde and sayde: it is not he. Tush, there shal no mysfortune come vpon vs, we shal se ney- ther swerde nor hunger. As for the war- nyng of the prophetes, they take it but for a wynd: yea ther is none of these whi- che wyl tell them, that suche thynges shal happen vnto them.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes: because ye speake suche wordes, beholde: The wordes that are in thy mouth wyl I turne to fyre, and make the people to be wood, that I may consume them.

Lo, I wyl bynge a people vpon you from from farre, O house of Israel (sayth the Lorde) a myghty people, an olde people, a people whose speche thou knowest not, neyther understandest what they saye. Theyr arrowes are sodeyne deathe: yea theyr theselues be very gyauntes. Thys people shal eat vpon thy fruite & thy meate: yea they shal deuoure thy sonnes and thy daughters, thy shepe and thy bullocks.

They shal eat vpon thy grapes and figges. As for thy stronge and well fenced ctyes wherin thou dydest trust, they shal destroye them wth the swerde. Neuertheles I wyl not haue done w you, sayth the Lorde. But if they saye: Wherfore doth the Lorde our God al thys to vs?

Then answereth them: because that lyke as ye haue forsaken me, & serued straunge goddes in your owne lande: euen so shall ye serue other goddes also in a straunge lande. Hereof cometh theyr greate substance and riches, herof are they fat & wealthy, and are run awaye fro me wth shamefull blasphemys. They minister not the law, they make no end of the fatherles cause, they iudge not the poze accordinge to equitie. Shulde I not punyshe these thynges, sayth the Lorde? Shulde I not be auenged of all suche people as these be? Horrible and greuous thynges are done in the land. The.vi. Chapter.

The synnes for which Ierusalem is afflicted. Circuncised eares. Couetousnes. Disceyte. The Lorde reiecteth the sacrifice of & Jewes. The commynge of the Babylonians is prophesied agayne.

Come forth of Ierusalem, ye stronge chyl dren of Ben Iamin blow vp the trumpets ye Tecuites, set vpon a token vnto Berbecar, for a plage & a greate misery bursteth out from the North. I wyl lyke the daughter of Sion to a fayre & tender womā, and to her shal come the shepherdes wth theyr flockes. Theyr tentes shal theyr ppyche round about her, & euery one shal fede the that are vnder bys hāde. Make batayll agaynst her (shall they say) Arise, let vs go vpon whyle it is yet daye. Alas, the day goeth away, and the nyght shadowes fal down: Arise, let vs go vpon nyght, & destroy her strong holdes: for thus hath the Lorde of hostes commaunded.

Heue down her trees, & set vpon bulwokes agaynst Ierusalem. Thys is the ctye & must be punished, for in her is al delycioussnesse. Like as a condit aboundeth in water, euen so thys ctye aboundeth in wyckednesse. Robbery & vncirightousnes is heard in her, sorow and woundes are euer there in my syght. Amend the, O Ierusalem, lest I wythdrawe my herte fro the, and make the desolate, and thy lande also, that no man dwel in it. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * The residue of Israel shal be gathered as the remnaunt of grapes.

And therefore tourne thynne hand again in to the basket, lyke to the grape gatherer. But vnto whom shal I speake, whose shal I warne, that he maye take heede? Theyr eares are so vncircuncised, & they may not heare.

Beholde, they take & worde of God but for a scoone, and haue no lust thereto. And therefore * I am so full of indignacion O Lord, that I maye suffer no longer. Shede out thy wrath vpon the chyl dren that are without, and vpon all yonge men. Yea the man must be take prisoner wth the wife, & the aged wth the cceple. Their houses wth theyr landes and wyues shal be turned vnto straungers, when I stretch oute myne hand vpon the inhabitantes of this land, sayth the Lorde. For from the least, vnto the most, they hange all vpon couetousnes: & from the prophet vnto the prest they go all about wth falsehead & lies.

And besyde that, they heale the hurte of my people wth sweete words, sayinge: peace peace, when ther is no peace at all. Therefore they must be ashamed, for they haue committed abhominaciō. But how shoulde they be ashamed, when they knowe nothyng neyther of shame, nor of good noutoure? And therefore they shal fall amonge the slayne: and in the houre when I shall vpsyte them, they shal be brought downe, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde, goe into the stretes, consydre and make inquisition for the olde waye, and if it be the good and ryghte waye, then go therein, that ye maye fynde rest for youre soules. But they saye, we wyl not walke therein, and I wyl set watche

And therefore thus sayeth the Lord: beholde, I wyl make this people fall, and there shall fall frome amonge them the father wyth the chyldren, one neyghboure shall perseye the wyth an other.

Moreover thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde there shall come a people frome the Northe, and a greete people shall aryse from the endes of the earth, wyth bowes and wyth dartes shall they be weapened. It is a rough and ferece people, an vnumercyfull people: theye wyll rore as the sea, theye wyll ryde vpon horses well appointed to the battayle agaynst the, O doughter Sion.

Then shall this crye be heard: Our armes are feble, heuynesse and sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman frayne: lyngge wyth chyld. No man go forthe in to the felde, no mā come vpon þ hye frete, for the swearde and feare of the enemye shall be on euery syde.

Wherefore gyde a sackecloth aboute the (O þ doughter of my people) sprinkle thy selfe wyth ashes, moune and wepe bitterly, as vpon thy only beloued sonne. For the destroyer shall codepulpe fall vpon vs. The haue I set for a prouer of my hard people, to seke out, and to trye theyr ways. For they are all vnfaithfull and fallen awaye, they hange vpon sylthyl lurre, they are clen brasse and prou, for they haue a destroye euery man. The bellous are brent in the fire, the lead is consumed, the melter melecth in vayne, for the euyl is not taken awaye from the. Therefore shall they be called noughty syluer, because the Lord hath cast them out.

The. viii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Jewes. The Lorde moueth the people to amēdment, rechenyng vpon their synnes. He reprehēdeth the lying doctrine of the Prophets and priestes, and theyr couetousnes also.

At the same tyme, sayeth the Lorde, the bones of the kinges of Iuda, the bones of bys wyntes, the bones of the priestes and prophetes, yea and the bones of the citezens of Ierusalem, shall be brought out of theyr graues, and layde against the sunne, the moone, al the beauey host, whom they loued, whom they serued, whō they ran after, whome they sought & worshypped. They shall neyther be gathered togyther, ne buried, but shall lye vpon the earth to theyr shame and despising.

And al they that remaine of this wicked generacion, shall desire more to dye then to lyue whersoer they remaine, & wher as I scatter them, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Thus shalt thou say vnto them also, Thus sayeth the Lorde: Do men fall so, that they arise not vp agayne? And turne they so farre away & they neuer couert? Therefore then is this people and Ierusalem gone so far backe, that they turne not agayne. They are euer the longer, the more obstinat, and wyl not be conuerted.

Luk. xxi. c.

Ezech. xx. c.

For I haue looked and considered: but ther is no man that speaketh a good word ther is no man that taketh repentance for bys synne, & wyl so muche as say: wherfore haue I done this? But euerye mā (as sone as he is turned backe) runneth for the styl, lyke a wyld horse in a battayle. The stroke knoweth bys appointed tyme, the turtle doue, the swalowe and the crane consider the tyme of their traueile, but my people wyl not knowe the tyme of the punishment of the Lorde. Howe dare ye say the, we are wyse, we haue the lawe of the Lorde among vs?

Beholde the disceytfull pen of the scribes, setteth forth lyes: therefore shall the wyse be confounded, they shall be afraid & taken: for lo, they haue caste oute the word of the Lorde: what wysedome can then be among them? Therefore I wyl geue thetrewes vnto straungers, and theyr felldes to destroyers.

For from the lowest vnto the hiest, they folowe all fylthy lute: and from the prophet vnto the priest, they deale all wth lyes. Neuertheles, they heale the hurt of my people wth swete wordes, sayinge: peace, peace, wher ther is no peace at all. I fe for shame, howe abhominable thinges do they: and yet they be not ashamed, yea they knowe of no shame.

Ezay. lvi. c.

Therefore in & tyme of theyr visitacio, they shall fall amonge the dead bodies sayeth the Lorde.

The. xi. Chapter.

(a) Moreover I will gather them in, sayth the Lord, so that there shall not be one grape upon the vine, ne one fig upon the fig tree and the leaues shall be plucked off.

Then will I cause them to depart & say: why prolong we the tyme? Let vs gather out selues together, and go into the strong city, that shall we be in rest: for the Lord our God hath put vs to silence, and (b) given vs water myrrer with gall to drinke, because we haue sinned agaynst hym.

Deloked for peace, and we fare not better, we waited for the tyme of helth, & lo, here is nothing but trouble.

Then shall the noise of hys horses be heard from Dan, the hole lande shall be ascraped at the neyng of hys strong horses, for they shall go in and deuoure the lande, withal that is in it: the cypres, and those that dwell therein. Moreover, I will send

(c) Cockatrices and serpentes among you (whiche they will not be charmed) and they shall bite you, sayth the Lord.

Sorrow is come upon me, and heavynesse vereth my herte: for lo, the voyce of the cryenge of my people, is heard from a farre countrey: Is not the Lord in Sion? Is not the kynge in her? Wherefore then haue they greued me (shall the Lord saye) with theyr images and foolyshe strange facions?

The harvest is gone, the sommer hath an ende, and we are not healed. I am sore vexed, because of the hurt of my people: I am heauye, and abashed: for there is no more Eracle at Balad, & there is no physicion that can heale the hurt of my people.

The Notes of the. viii. Chapter.

(a) Moreover I will gather them in. &c. The meaning is: I will gather the Jewes from all the partes of Jewrye vnto Jerusalem. There shall no figge, grape, or other fruite remaine in the villages or fyeldes: and so shall they haue no luste to abyde there, but shall be fayne to flye to the cite. Thither caused he them to flye, and ther also camped them, and deliuered the into theyr enemies handes. Whiche punishment had they synnes deserved.

(b) Hath geue vs water myrrer with gall to drinke, that is, hath wrapped vs in mysery & wretched chaldome.

(c) I will send Cockatrices and serpentes. &c. That is, I will bring among you a fearefull company of sondyars, with whose deadly arrowes and barbes and cryes, ye shall be slayne such as though ye should perpe the strokes of venemous bytynge of Cockatrices & serpentes.

The. ix. Chapter.

The complayne & bewayling of the prophete, for the malice of the people. In the knowledge of God oughte we onely to reioyce. The vncircumcision of the herte.

Who will geue my head water enough, and a wel of teares for myne eyes: that I may wepe nyghte and day for the slaughter of my people? Would God that I had a corage some wher far fro solke, that I myght leaue my people, and go fro the, for they be all aduouterers and a thynkyng sort. They bend theyr thynges lyke bowes, to shoote oute lyes. As for the truth, they may not hyng awaye withall in the worlde. For they go from one wickednes to another, & hold nothing of me, sayth the Lord. Yea, one must keepe hym selfe from an other, no man may safely trust hys own brother: for one brother vndermineth another, & one neyghbor begyleth another. Yea one dissembleth w another, & they deale w no truth. They haue practysed theyr tonges to lye, & take great paynes to do myschies. They haue set their stole in the midst of disceyte, & for very dissimylng falsehead they will not knowe me, sayth the Lord. Wherefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes: behold, I will melt them & try them, for what shuld I els do to my people? Their tonges are lyke sharpe arrows to speake disceyte. Wher they mouth they speak peareably to theyr neybour, but priuely they lay wait for hym. Shuld I not punyssh the for these thynges sayth the Lord? or shuld I not be auenged of any such people as thys? Upon the mostrepynes will I take up a lamentacion & sorowfull cry, & a mourninge vpon the faire playnes of the wilderness, namely, how they are so bryt by the no man goth ther any more: yea a man shall not heare one beast crye there.

The Prophecy

Byrdes and cattell are all gone from thence. I will make Jerusalem also an heape of stones, & a denne of venymous wormes. And will make the cypres of Iuda so wast, that no man shall dwell therein. What man is so wyse as to vnderstand thys? Or to whom hath the Lord spoken by mouth, that he may shewe thys & say: O thou land why perishest thou so? Wherefore art thou so brent vp, & lyke a wylde-nes, that no man goeth thowowe?

Yea the Lord hym selfe tolde the same vnto them that forsoke hys lawe, & kept not the thyng that he gaue them in commaundement, nether luyed thereafter: but folowed the wyckednes of theyr owne hertes, and serued strange goddes, as theyr fathers taught them.

Wherefore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israell: Beholde, I will sede thys people with wormewood, & geue the gall to drinke. I will scatere them also among the heathen, whome neyther they ne their fathers haue known, and I will send a sword among the, to persecute the tyll I bringe them to nought. Moreover thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, loke ye call for mourninge wyues, and send for wyse women, that they come shortly, and sing a mourning songe of you, that the teares may fall out of our eyes, and that our eye liddes may gush out of water.

For there is a lamentable noise herbe of Syon, & how are we so sore destroyed? & how are we so vtterly confounded? We must nedes forsake oure owne natu-raile countrey, and we are shut oute of our owne lodgruges. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye women and let your eares regarde the wordes of hys mouth: for ye may lette your daughters to mourne, and that euey one may teache her neighboures to make lamentacion. Namelye thus:

Deathe is clymmyng vp in at oure wynd-owes, he is come into oure houses to destroy the chyldre before the doore, & the yong man in the strete.

But tell thou plainlye, thus sayeth the Lorde. The dead bodys of men shall ly vp on the ground, as the donge vpon the feld, and as the hey after the mower, & there shalbe no man to take them vp.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde, let not the wyse man reioyse in hys wysdom, ne the strong mā in hys strength, neyther the ryche man in hys ryches. But who so wil reioyse, let him reioyse in this, for he vnderstandeth, & knoweth me: for I am the Lorde, whych do mercy, equitye & ryghteousnes vnto all. Therefore haue I pleasure in such thynges, sayeth the Lorde. Behold the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lorde) that I wyll vspyt (a) all them, whose foreskin is vncircumcised. The Egyptians, the Hemes, the Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the shauen Medians: these that dwell in the wyldernes. For all the Gentyles are vncircumcised in flesh, but all the house of Israell are vncircumcised in the herte.

The Notes of the .ix. Chapter.

(a) All, that is, as well the Jewes as the Gentiles: for he is as free as he other. The Jewes are euill as well as the heathen, as touchyng the herte, although they be circuncised, as touchyng the fleshe. Therefore are they here reckned among the vncircumcised.

The .x. Chapter.

The constellacions of the starres are not to be feared. Of the wyckednes of Idols, and of the power of God. Of euill curates.

Hear the worde of the Lorde, that he speaketh vnto the, O thou house of Israell: Thus sayth the Lorde: Ye shal not lerne after the maner of the heathen, & ye shall not be astrayed for the tokens of heauen: for the heathen are astrayed of luche, yea all the customes and lawes of the Gentyles are nothyng but vanity. They hew down a tre in the wood wyth hoes of the workman, & facyon it wyth axes:
they couer it ouer w golde or syluer, they fasten it wyth nailes and hammers, that it moue not. It standeth as styffe as a palme tree, it can neyther speake ne goo, but muste be borne. Be not ye astrayed of luche, for they can doo neyther good ne euill. But ther is none lyke vnto thee, O Lorde, and great is the name of thy power. Who wold not feare thee? Or what kynge of the Pami-nes wold not obey thee?

For amonge all the wyse men of the Panymes, and in all theyr kyngedomes, there is none that maye be lykened vnto the. They are all togyther vlcarned and vnyse. All theyr connyng is but vanytie: namelye woode, syluer whych is broughe oute of Tharsis, and beaten to plates, and golde from Ophyr: a worke that is made wyth the hand of the craftes man and the casser, clothed wyth yelow sylke & scarlet: euen so is the worke of theyr wise men all togyther. But the Lorde is a true God, a luyng God, and an euerlastyng king.

Yf he be wrothe, the earth shaketh: all the Gentyles may not abyde hys indignaciō.

As for theyr gods, it may well be sayde of them: they are no gods & neyther made heauen neyther earthe: therefore shall they perishe from the earthe, and from all thynges vnder heauen. But (as for our God) he made the earth wyth hys power, and wyth hys wysdome hath he syrised the whole compasse of the worlde, wyth hys discrecyon hath he spred oute the heauens.

At hys voyce the waters gather togy-ther in the ayre, he draweth by the cloudes fro the vttermost parts of the earth, he turneth lyghnyng to rayne, and byn-geth forth the wyndes oute of theyr treasures. Hys wysdom maketh almen folles.
And confounded be all casters of images, for that they cast, is but a vayne thyng, and hath no lyfe. The vayne craftesmen wyth theyr workes that they in their va-nytye haue made, shall perishe one wyth an other in the tyme of visitacion. Neuer-thelesse Iacobys porcion is not luche: but it is he that hath made all thynges, and Israell is the rod of hys suberitace. The Lorde of hostes is hys name. Put awaye thyne vncleannesse oute of the lande, thou that arte in the stronge cyties. For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll nowe thrust out the inhabitants of this lande a greate way of, and trouble them in luche forte as they shall no more be founde.

Alas howe am I hurt? Alas howe payne full are my scourges vnto me? For I consyder thys sorowe by my selfe, and I must suffer it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my cordes are broken. My chyldren are gone fro me, & can no wher be found. Nowe haue I none to sprede oute my tent, or to set vp my hangynges. For the herdemen haue done foolyshe, that they haue not soughte the Lorde. Therefore haue they dealt vnyse wyth theyr cattell, and all are scattered abroad. Beholde, the noyse is harde at hande, and greate sedycyon oute of the Northe: to make the eyes of Iuda a wyldernesse, and a dwel-lyng place for dragons.

Nowe I knowe, O Lorde that it is not in mannes power to order his owne way: es, or to rule hys owne steppes and goyn-ges. Therefore chasten thou vs, O Lorde, but w fauour & not in thy wrath: bynge vs not vtterlye to naughte. Doute oute thyne

The. xi. Chapter.

A curse of them that obey not the worde of Goddes promise. The people of Iuda fo-lowinge the steppes of theyr fathers, worshippeth straunge goddes. The Lorde sayeth he wil not heare the Jewes, and forbyddeth also Jeremye to praye for them.

This is an other sermon, whiche the Lorde commaunded Jeremy to preache, sayinge: Heare the wordes of the couenaunte and speake vnto all Iuda, and to al the that dwel at Ierusalem. And say vnto the: thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Cursed be every one that is not obedient vnto the wordes of this couenaunte:
whiche I commaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought the out of Egypt from the (a) yron forname, saying: Be obedient vnto my voyce, and do accordyng to all that I commaunde you: so shall ye be my people, and I wyll be your God, and wyll kepe my promise that I haue sworn vnto your fathers: Namelye that I wolde gyue them a lande whiche floweth wyth mylke and honny, as yee se come to passe this day. When answered I, and sayde.
Amen. It is euen so, Lorde, as thou sayest.

When the Lorde sayde vnto me agayne: preache this in the cityes of Iuda, & round about Ierusalem, and saye: Heare the wor-des of this couenaunte, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exhorted your fathers, euer sythens the tyme I broughte them oute of the lande of Egypte, vnto this daye. I gaue them warnyng by tymes, sayinge: Harken vnto my voyce.
Neuerthelesse they wolde not obeye me, nor encline theyr eares vnto me, but folowed the wycked imaginations of theyr owne hertes.

And therefore haue I accused them as transgressours of all the wordes of this couenaunte that I gaue them to kepe, whiche they (not withstandinge) haue not kepte.

And the Lord saide vnto me: It is folde out that hole Israel, and all these citezins of Ierusalem, are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemies of theyr forefathers, whiche hadde no luste to heare my worde. Euen lykewyse haue these also folowed straunge goddes, and worshipped them. The house of Israel & Iuda haue broken my couenaunte, which I made wyth theyr fathers.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: Behold,
I wyll sende a plague amonge you, whiche ye shall not be hable to escape: & though ye cry vnto me, I wyll not heare you. The shal the townes of Iuda, and the citizyns of Ierusalem goo and call vpon theyr god-des, vnto whome they made theyr oblacions, but they are not hable to helpe them in tyme of their trouble. For as manye cities as thou hast, O Iuda, so manye god-des haste thou also. And loke howe manye stretes there be in the, O Ierusalem, so manye shamefull aulters haue ye set vp, to offre vpon them vnto Baal. But praye not thou for this people: byd neyther prayse ne prayer for them, for though they cry vnto me in theyr trouble, yet wyll I not heare them.

(b) O thou beloued, why dost thou so shamefull great blasphemies in my house?
Euen as though that holpe fleshe myght absolue the, specially why thou hast made thy host of thy wyckednes. The Lorde called the a grene olyue tre, a fayre one, a frutefull one, a goodlye one: but now that there is a contrarie report of the abode, he wyll burne the vp, and destroy thy brach-es. For the Lorde of hostes that planteth the, hath deuised a plague for the O thou house of Israel and Iuda, for the euyl that ye haue done to prouoke hym to wrath, in that ye dyd seruite vnto Baal.

This, O Lord, haue I lerned of the, and understande it: for thou haste shewed me theyr ymaginations. But I (as a meke lambe) was caried awaye to be slayne:
not knowyng that they hadde deuyled suche a counsel agaynst me, sayinge: we wil destroy this meate wyth (c) wood, & dryue hym out of the land (d) of the lyuynge, that his name shal neuer be thought vpon.

Therefore I wyll beseeche the nowe, O Lord of hostes, thou righteous iudge, thou that tryest the reynes and the hertes, let me se the auenged of them, for vnto the haue I committed my cause. The Lorde therefore spake thus of the cyprians of A-nathoth, that sought to sle me, sayinge: Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Lorde, or elles thou shalt dye of oure han-des. Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll vspite you. Your younge men shal perishe wyth the sword, your sonnes and your daughters shall veterlye dye of hongre, so that none shall remayne. For vpon the cyprians of Anathoth wyll I bringe a plague, the yere of their visitacion.

The Notes of the. xi. Chapter.

(a) Egypt was vnto them an yron forname for greate anguysh, grefe, sorowe, and carefulnes of herte, whiche they there suffered. i. Re. iiii. c.

(b) He speaketh vnto the Jewes, which in their Synagoge worshipped manye & diuers Idols les, and thereby blasphemed God: And yet thought they to haue redeemed theyr wyckednesse wyth the offerynges of theyr bullockes and fleshy sacryfices, whiche are here called holpe fleshe.

(c) Wood, vnderstand: venomd and poysoned.
Some expound hereby the woode of the crosse and of affliction whiche the wycked deuyled to wrape the prophet in, for his tellynge of the truth.

(d) What the lande of the lyuynge signifieth is shewed in Esay. liii. c.

The

The Prophet marueleth greatly at the p[er]p[et]rator of the wicked, although he tolde God to be righteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lord. He speaketh against Curates & preachers that seduce the people. The Lord threatneth destruction vnto the nations that bordered vpon Jewry, whych troubled and vered it.

O Lord, thou art more righteous then I should dispute with: Neuertheles, let me talke with the in thinges reasonable. Howe happeneth it that the waye of the vngodly is so prosperous? and it goeth so well with them whych (with out any shame) offend and lyue in wickednes? Thou plantest them, they take roote, they growe, and brynge forth the fruyte.

Job.xii. a.
Abac.i. b.

They boaste muche of the, yet dost thou not punyche them. But thou Lord (to whom I am wel knowe) that hast sene and proued my herte, take the away lyke as a flocke is carped to the slaughter house, and appoint the for the day of slaughter.

Howe longe shall the lande mourne, & all the bearches of the fyerde peryshe, for the wickednes of them that dwell therein?

The cattel & the bydes are gone, yet they say, tush: God wil not destroy vs utterly.

(a) Seynge thou art wery in runnyng with the foote men, howe wylt thou do in the furious pyrde of Jordan? for thy brethren and thy kynred haue all together dyspyled the, and cryed oute vpon the in thy absence. Beleue the not, though they speake say wordes to the. As for me (say I) I haue forsaken mine owne dwelling place, and lest mine heritage. My lyfe also that I loued so well, haue I geuen in to the handes of myne enemies. Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a lion in the wood. It cryed oute vpon me, therefore haue I forsaken it. Myne heritage is vnto me as a speckled byrde, a byrde of diuerse colours is vpon it. So hence and gather al the beastes of the fyerde together, that they maye eate it vp.

(b) Diuerse heardmen haue broken doune my vyneyarde, and troden vpon my porcion. Of my pleasaunt porcion, they haue made a wyldernes. They haue layde it waste: and nowe it is waste, it sygheth vnto me. Yea, the hole lande lyeth waste, & no man regardeth it.

The destroyers come ouer the beache euery waye, for the swerde of the Lord shall consume from the one ende of the land to the other, & no fleshe shal haue rest. They shall sowe wheate, & reape thornes. They shall take heritage in possession, but it shal do them no good. And ye shal be confounded of your owne winnynges, because of the great wrath of the Lord.

(c) Thus sayth the Lord, vpon all myne euill neyghboutes that laye hande on mine heritage, whych I haue geuen my people of Israell: Beholde, I wyl plucke them (namely Israell) oute of theyr land, and put oute the house of Iuda from the. And when I haue coted the out, I wyl be at one with them agayne, and wyl haue mercye vpon the: and brynge them agayne, euery man to his owne heritage, and in to his lande.

And if they (namely that trouble my people) wyl learne the wayes of them to swere by my name: The Lord lyueth, (lyke as they lerned my people to swere by Baall) then shall they be reckened amonge my people. But if they wyl not obeye, then wyl I roote oute the same folke, and destroye them sayth the Lord.

The Notes of the.xii. Chapter.

(a) Thus spake the wycked of the Prophete by the way of rebuke. As though they had sayd by a parable. When thou wast but in a litel town, thou couldest not beare the persecution of thine owne citezins & household folches: Howe wylt thou then beare the princes and chiefe rulers of Iuda, and the Nobles of Ierusalem. And after, by the preasable sure lande, is vnderstand Anathoth, and by the pyrde of Jordan, Ierusalem. The lytell ruler of Anathoth is not to be compared to the great flowing streames of Jordan. If he were dyspyled of his owne andytoures, howe shoulde he be heard of other, and those greater and excellenter?

The.xiii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Jewes is presygyred, and their sparlyng abrode. Whye Israell was receyued to be the people of God, and why they were forsaken.

Moreouer, thus sayde the Lord vnto me: go thy way & and get the a lynne breche, and gyde it aboute thy loynes, and let it not be wet. The I got me a breche, accordyng to the commaundemēte of the Lord, & put it aboute my loynes. After this the Lord spake vnto me agayne: Take the breche that thou hast prepared, about the, and get the vp, and go vnto Euphrates, & hide it in a hole of the rocke. So wente I, and hyd it, as the Lord commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, that the Lord spake vnto me: Arise, and get the to Euphrates & fet the breche thence, whych I commaunded the to hyde there.

Then went I to Euphrates, and digged vp, & toke the breche frome the place where I hadde hyd it: and beholde the breche was corrupte, so that it was profitable for nothyng.

Then sayed the Lord vnto me: thus sayeth the Lord: euen so wyl I corrupt the pyrde of Iuda, and the hantye mynde of Ierusalem. This people is a wycked people, they wyl not hear my worde, they folowe the wycke imaginations of their own hert, & hang vpon straunge gods, the haue they serued and worshipped: & therefore they shalbe as this breche that serueth for nothyng.

For as straitlye as a breche lyeth vp:

on a mannes lynes, so strapye dyd I brnde the hole house of Israel, and the hole house of Juda vnto me, sayeth the Lorde, that they myght be my people, that they myght haue a glorious name, that they myght be in honoure, but they wolde not obeye me. Therefore laye thys ridle before them, and saye. Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: Every pot shalbe fylled w wyne. And they shal say: thynkest thou we knowe not that every pot shalbe fylled w wyne? Then shalt thou say vnto the: Thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, I shall fyl al the inhabitauntes of thys lande wth dzonkenes, the kynges that sit vpon Dauides stole, the priestes and p[ro]phets wth all dwel at Jerusalem. And I wyll shote the one agaynst an other, yea the fathers agaynst the sonnes, sayeth the Lorde.

I wyll not pardon them, I wyll not spare them, ne haue p[re]tye vpon them: but destroie them. Be obediēte, g[ra]ue eare, take no dysdayne at it, for it is the Lorde him selfe that speaketh: Honour the Lorde your God herein, or he take hys lyght from you, and or euer your fete stumbe in darkenesse at the hyl: lest whē ye loke for the lyght, he tourne it into the shadowe & darkenesse of deathe. But if ye wyll not scene, thy aduoutye, thy deadly malice, thy beastynesse, and thy shamefull hoores-dome. For vpon the felde & hylles I haue sene thy abominacions. Wo be vnto the (O Jerusalem) when wilt thou euer be clen-

The. xiiii. Chapter.

Of the deathe that should come in Jewrye.
The prayer of the people askyng mercie of the Lord. The vnfaithful people are not heard, of prayer, fastyng, and of false p[ro]phets & dyscease the people.

The worde of the Lord shewed vnto Jeremy, concerning the deathe of the fru-tes. Juda shal mourne: men shal not go much more thorow hys gates: the land shalbe no more had in regard, & the cry of Jerusalem shal breake oute. The Lordes shal sende their seruauntes to fetch water, & when they come to the welles, they shal fynde no water, but shal cary theyr besselles home empty. They shal be a shamed and confounded, and shal couer their heades. For the ground shalbe dreyed vp, because there cometh no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also shalbe a shamed, and shal couer their heades. The binde shal forsake the yong sowne that she bringeth forth in the field, because there shalbe no grasse.
The wyld Asses shal stand in the mosse, & drawe in theyr wyndlyke & dragons, their eyes shal fayle for want of grasse.

Doutles oure owne wyckednesse reward vs: but Lord do the accordinge to thy name, though our transgressions & synnes be many. For thou art the conforter & helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble. Why wilt thou be as a stranger in the lande, and as one that goeth ouer the felde, & cometh in oulype to remayne for a nyght? (a) Why wilt thou make thy selfe a cowarde, and as it were a graunte that yet may not helpe?

* For thou art oures (O Lorde) & we beare thy name, therefore forsake vs not.

Then spake the Lord, concernyng thys people, that haue pleasure to go so nymblly wth their fete, and leaue not of, and therfore displease the Lorde, in so much that he wyl now byngne agayne to remembraunce all theyr mysdoedes, and punyche al theyr syn-nes. Yea, euen thus said the Lord vnto me: Thou shalt not praye to do thys people good. For though they faste, I wyll not heare theyr prayes. And though they offer burnt offerynges & sacrifices, yet wyll not I accepte the. For I wyll destroy the wth the sword hunger and pestilence. The answered I: O Lord God, the p[ro]phets saye vnto the: Tuthe, ye shal se no sword, and no hunger shal come vpon you, but the Lorde shal g[ra]ue you continual resce in this place.

And the Lorde sayd vnto me: The p[ro]- phets preach lyes vnto the in my name.
I haue not spoken wth theym, neyther gaue I them any charge, neyther dyd I sende them: yet they preache vnto you false by lions, chatmyng, banitye, and dyf-ceptfulnes of theyr owne herte. Therefore thus sayth the Lord: As for those prophets that preach in my name (whome I neuer theles haue not sent) and that saye: The ther shal neyther battayle ne hunger be in this land: Wp the sword and with hunger shal those prophets perishe, and the people to whom they haue preached, shall be caste out of Ierusalem, dye of hunger, & be slaine wp the sword (and ther shalbe no man to bury them) both they and theyr wyues, theyr sonnes & theyr daughters. For thus wyl I poure theyr wyckednes vpon them.

Thys shal thou say also vnto the. Myne eyes shal wepe wpythout ceassyng, day and nyght. For my people shalbe destroyed with greate harme, and shal perishe wpyth a greate plage: for if I go into the feld, lo, it lyeth al ful of slaine men: Yf I come into a citty: lo, they be al famyshed of hunger.

Yea, theyr prophets also and piteas shal be led into an vnknoyn lande. Hast thou then vtterly forsaken Iuda (said I?) Dost thou so abhorre Sion? Dost thou so pla-ged vs, that we ca be healed no more? We looked for peace, and ther cometh no good: for the tyme of health, & lo here is nothyng but trouble: We knowlege (O Lord) all our mysdeedes, and the synnes of oure fathers, that wee haue offended thee. We not displeased (O Lord) for thy names sake, for get not thy louyng kyndenes: Remember the trene of thyne honoure, bryake not the couenaunt that thou haste made wpyth vs.
Are ther any amonge the gods of the Pa-nyms, that send raine, or geue the showres of heauen? Dost not thou it, O Lord oure God, in whom we truste? Yea Lord, thou dost al these thynges.

say. Thou behauest thy selfe vnto vs as a stranger, or as a wayfaryng man: for thou settest not

The.xv.Chapter.

The Lord wil not heare Moyses or Aaron, if they pray for the people, but wil wrappe them in many myseryes. The cause of such greate myseryes.

Then spake the lord vnto me, and saide: Though Moyses and Samuell stode before me, yet haue I no hert to thys people. Dyeue them away, that they maye go oute of my spghre. And if they saye vnto the. Whyther shal we go, then tel the: The Lord gyueth you thys answer: Some vnto death, some to the sword, some to hunger, some into captiuitie. For I wyl bryng four plages vpon them, sayeth the Lord. The sword shal strangle them, the dogs shal deuour them, the foules of the ayre, and beas-tes of the earth shal eat them vp, and destroy them. I wyl scatter them about also, in al kyngdomes and landes to be plagued, because of Manasses the sone of Ezechias kyng of Iuda, for the thynges that he dyd in Ierusalem.

Who shal then haue pity vpon the, O Jerusalem? Who shal be sorow for the? Who shal make intercession to obtaine peace for the, seing thou goest fro me, & turnest back-warde, sayth the Lord: Therefore I wyl stretch out myne hand agaynst thee, to destroy thee, and I wyl not be entreated. I wyl scatter the abroad wpyth the fenne on euery syde of the land, I wyl wast my people and destroy them, for they haue had no luste to turne from theyr owne wayes. I wyl make theyr wydowes moode in number then the sands of the sea. Vpon the mothers of theyr chyldren, I shal bryng a destroyer in the noone day. Sodeynly and vnwares shal I send a feare vpon theyr cities. She that hath borne seven chyldren, shall haue none, her hert shal be ful of sorow.

The sunne shal faile her in the cleare day, when ye shal be confounded and saynte for very heauynes. As for those that remaine, I wyl deliuer them vnto the swerde of theyr enemyes, sayth the Lord. O mother, alas that euer thou diddest beare me, an enemy and hated of the whole lab: Though I neuer sent ne receiued vpon vsury, yet all men speake euyl vpon me.

And the Lord answered me: Lead not I the the vnto good? Come not I to the when thou arte in trouble, and heape the when thyne enemy oppresseth thee? Dost one pry-d but an other, or one merat that cometh from the North another? As for your ryt-ches and treasure, I wyl geue them out in to a pray, not for any mouny, but because of al your synnes that ye haue done in al your coastes. And I wyl bryng you wpyth your ennemyes into a land that ye knowe not:
for the fyre that is kyndled in my indignacion, shal burne you vp.

O Lord (sayd I then) thou knowest all thynges, therfore remember me, and vyllet me, deliuer me fro my persecuters. Receiue not my cause in thy longe wrath, yet thou knowest that for thy sake I suffer rebuke.
When I had found thy wordes, I eat the vp gredely: they haue made my hert ioyful and glad. For I cal vpon thy name, O lord god of hosts. I dwel not among the scorneres, neyther is my delpte therein: but I dwell only in the feare of thy hand, for thou haste fylled me wpyth bytternes. Shall my heauynes endure for euer? Are my plagis the so greate, that they maye neuer be healed?
Wilt thou be as a water that falleth, and can not continue?

Vpon these wordes, thus sayd the Lord vnto me: Yf thou wylte turne agayne, I shal set the in my seurce: and if thou wylt take out the thyng that is precious from the vyle, thou shalt be euen as myne owne mouth. They shal conuerte vnto thee, but turne not thou vnto the: & so shall I make the a strong wal of Steele agaynst this people. They shal fyght agaynst thee, but they shall not preuaile: For I my selfe wyl be

The xvi. Chapter.

He prophesieth the myserie of the Jewes. He sheweth, that worshyping of Idolles and the contempt of Gods law, is the cause of theyr myserie. He prophesieth the captivity of Babylon, and theyr deliuerance from thence agayne. The callinge of the Gentyles.

Moreouer thus sayd the Lord vnto me: Thou shalt take the no wyfe, ne beget chyldren in this place. For of the chyldren that at borne in this place of theyr mothers that haue borne them, and of theyr fathers that haue begotten them in this lande, thus sayeth the Lord: They shall dye an horrible death, no manne shall mourne for them, ne burye them: but they shall lye as dounge vpon the carthe. They shall perishe thow the sword and hunger, and theyr bodies shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the earth. Agayne, thus sayth the Lord: Do not vnto them that come together for to mouen and wepe, for I haue take my peace from this people (saith the Lord) yea my fauour and my mercy. And in this lande shall they dye olde and ponge, and shall not be buried: no man shall bewaile, no man shall clipp or haue hym selfe for them.

There shall not one byspte another, to mourne with them for theyr dead, or to comfort them. One shall not offer an other the cuppe of consolacyon, to forget theyr heauyness for father and mother. Thou shalt not go into theyr feast house to sitte doune, much lesse to eate or drynke with the. For thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: (a) Behold, I shall take away oute of this place, the voyce of myrrour and gladnesse, the voyce of the bydegrome and of the byde: yea and that in your dayes, that ye maye see it.

Now when thou shewest this people all these wordes, and they say vnto the: Wherfore hath the Lord deuyd all this greete plage for vs? Or what is the offence & sinne that we haue done agaynst the Lord our God? Then make thou them this answer: Because your fathers haue forsaken me (sayeth the Lord) and haue cleaued vnto strange Goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshipped: but me haue they forsaken, and haue not kept my lawe. And ye with your shamefull blasphemies haue exceeded the wyckednes of your fathers. For euerye one of you foloweth the frowarde and euyl ymaginacion of his hert, and is not obedyent vnto me.

Therefore will I caste you oute of this land, into a lande that ye and your fathers know not: and ther shall ye serue strange Gods daye and nyghte, ther will I shewe you no fauour. Beholde therefore (sayeth the Lord) the dayes are come, that it shall no more be sayed: The Lord lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israel out of the land of Egypt: but it shall be sayd, the Lord lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israel for the North, and fro all lands wher I had scatered them. For I will bring the agayne into the lande, that I haue geuen vnto theyr fathers.

Beholde (sayeth the Lord) I will sende oute manye (b) fyshers to take them, and after that will I sende oute manye hunters to hunte them oute, from all mountaynes and hilles, and oute of the Caves of stones. For myne eyes beholde all theyr wayes, and they can not be hydde fro my face, neyther can theyr wycked deedes be kepte close oute of my syghte. But firste will I suddenly reward the: shamefull blasphemies and synnes, wherewith they haue despyled my lande: Namelye with theyr synkyng Idols and abhominacions, wherewith they haue despyled my lande: Namelye with theyr synkyng Idols and abhominacions, wherewith they haue fylled myne heretage. O Lord my strength, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyls shall come vnto the, from the endes of the worlde, and say: We reioyce oure fathers haue cleaued vnto lyes, theyr Idolles are but vayne and vnpromysable. Howe can a manne make those bys Gods, which are not able to be gods? And therefore I will once teach them saith the Lord, I will shewe them my hande and my power, that they maye knowe that my name is the Lord.

The Notes.

(a) The manner of the Prophetes communique is first vnto the condempne, and after to reioyce and comfort the faythful, as Jeremy doth here in this Chapter, and as it is vnto the whole scripture thowwe.

(b) By these fyshers are vnderstand the hosts by whom the Lord scourged the Jewes, and synned away theyr rulers. At four sundry draughtes were foure of theyr kynges taken, and at euery tyme some of the chyefe of the people with al. But at the last in tyme of iedekiah, was al the rest of the people hunted out of those cruel hunters the Chaldees. Reg. xlv. a. b. Reade the note in the xxiii. Chap. folowing at the letter. c

Wherfore I will make all your substance & treasure be spoiled, for the great syn & ye haue done vpon your hye places thowwe oute all the coastes of your land. and he, whose hearte departerh from the Lord. He shal be lyke the heath that grow-that is for to come, he shal not see it: but dwel in a drye place of the wyldernes, in a salt and vnoctupped lande. * Blessed is the man, that putterh his trust in the Lord and whose hope is in the Lord hym selfe.

* For he shal be as a tree that is plated by the water syde, whych spredeyth oute the roote vnto moystnes, whom the heate can not harme when it cometh, bys leaues are grene. And though they grow but litle fruite because of drouth, yet is he not careful, but he neuer leauerh of to byng forth

Who shal then know it? Euen I the Lord search out the grounde of the hert, and try yng to bys wayes, and accordyng to the fruite of bys counsailes.

The disceyful makerh a nest, but byn-geth forth no ygg: He cometh by. ryches but not righteously. In the myddes of bys lyfe must he leaue them behynde hym, and at the last be found a very soole. But thou O Lord, whose throne is most glorious, excellent, and of most antiquity, whych dwel-lest in the place of our holy reast: Thou art the comfort of Israel. Al they that forsake the, shal be confounded: al they þ depart frō the, shal be written in earthe, for they haue forsaken the Lord the verpe condyte of the waters of lyfe.

Heale me, O Lord, and I shal be hole, saue thou me, and I shal be saued, for thou art my prayse. Behold, these men say vnto me: Wher is the word of the Lord? Let it come. Wher as I neuerthelesse leding the flocke in thy wayes, haue compelled none by violence. For I neuer despyed any mā death, thys knowest thou wel. My words also were ryght before thee. Be not now terrible to me, O Lord, for thou art he in whom I hope, when I am in peril. Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be astraped, and not me. Thou shalte byng vpon them the tyme of theyr plage, and shalt destroy them right soze.

Agayne, thus hath the Lord sayed vnto me: Go and stand vnder the gate where thorowe the people and the kynges of Juda go out and in, yea vnder al the gates of Jerusalem, and say vnto them: Heare the word of the Lord, ye kynges of Juda, and al thou people of Juda, and al ye cytyfyns of Jerusalem, that go thorowe thys gate:
Thus the Lord commaundeth: Take hede for your lyues, that ye carry no burthen vpon you in the sabboth, to byng it thorow the gates of Jerusalem, ye shal beare no burthen also out of your houses in the sabboth.

(b) Ye shal do no labour therein, but halowe the Sabbath as I commaunded your fathers. How be it they obeyed me not, neyther hekened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubburne, and neyther obeyed me, nor receyued my correccion. Neuertheles, if ye wyl heare (sayth the Lord) I beare no burthen into the cyty thorow thys gate vpon the Sabbath: If ye wyl halowe the Sabbath, so that ye do no worke therein: then shal they go thorow the gates of this cyty, kynges and prynces, that shal sit vpon the stoole of David: They shal be caried vpon charets, and ryde vpon horses, both they and theyr prynces. Yea whole Juda and al cytyfyns of Jerusalem shal go here thorow, & this cyty shal euer be the more more inhabited. Ther shal come men also from the cyties of Juda, from about Jerusalem, and from the lande of Ben Amin, frō the plain fields, from the mountaines, and frō the wyldernes: whych shal byng burnt offrynges, sacrifice, oblations, and incense, and thanksgyving in the house of the Lord. But if ye wyl not be obedyent vnto me, to halowe the Sabbath, so that ye wyl beare your burthens thorow the gates of Jerusalem vpon the Sabbath: The shal I set fyre vpon the gates of Jerusalem, and it shal burne vpon the houses of Jerusale, & no man shal be able to quench it.

The Notes of the. xvi. Chapter.

(a) That takerh flesh for his arme, that is, þ putteth bys trust in any thyng but in the Lord.

(b) Ye shal do no labour therein, but halowe
the Sabbath, as I commaunded your fathers.
ec. The foundation of the faith, is to beleue gods promyses, and that he made the whole worlde, & doth also gouerne it: and further that he knoweth and wyl iudge al thynges. ec. These thyngs dyd the law requyre in keeping of the Sabbath, to confesse both wyth woorde and sygne, and to geue diligent heede to the hearyng and inter-pretyng of the lawe, to thynke of the gloire of God, and to relpue the saythfull soule wyth the foode of the worde, to minister occasion also vnto the symple that they lykwys might attempt such thyngs in theyr houses amongest theyr hous-holde folkes, to be ppytful ouer the wearines of such neyghbours as laboured soze al the wecke long, and releace them, to attende and geue hede to the ex:rcyses of the spirite, and to the consolation and comfortyng of theyr neyghbours: not only to abstayne from outward works, and ful-fyl theyr appetytes and lustes, for that dyd the Lord forbyd. The Sabbath should be applied to the lawful seruyng of God, not to synfulness and wantonnes. It is commaunded to be sanctified, not to be polluted and defyled wyth naughtynes. To God alone must we also kepe it, and cal on his name: other Gods or Gods felowes ought we not to enuyze of, nor fal downe vnto

The.xviii.Chapter.

God sheweth by the example of a potter, that it is in his power to destroy the despoilers of his word, and to helpe them again whe they amend. The conspiracy of the Jewes agaynst Jerem. His prayer agaynst his aduersaries.

This is an other communication that God had with Jerem. saying: Arise and go down into the potters house, and ther shal I tel the more of my mynde. Now when I came to the potters house, I found hym makynge his worke upon a whele. The vessel that the potter made of clay, brake among his handes: So he began a new and made an other vessel accordyng to his mynde. Then sayd the Lorde thus vnto me: May not I do with you, as this potter doth, O ye house of Israell, sayth the Lorde? Behold, ye house of Israell: ye are in my hande, even as the claye in the potters hand.

Agayne when I take in hande to builde, or to plante a people or a kingdome, if the same people do euill before me, and heare not my voyce, I immediately I repent of the good, & I deuyse to do for them.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Aske among the heathen if any man herd suche horrible thinges, as the daughter of Sion hath done? Shal not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Libanus) moysten the fieldes? Or may the spraynges of waters be so grauen awaye, that they runne no more, geue moystnes, ne make frutefull? But my people hath so forgottē me, that they haue made sacryfyce vnto vaine gods. The.xix.Chapter.

The prophetieth the destruction of Ierusalem, for contempt and despyng of the woorde of God.

Moreouer, thus sayd the Lorde vnto Jerem: Go thy way, and bye thee an earthen pytcher, and bring forth the Senatours, and chiefe priestes into the valley of the chyldren of Hennon, which lieth before the porte that is made of brick, and shewe them ther the woordes that I shal tel the, and saye thus vnto the: Heare the word of the Lorde, ye kyniges of Iuda, & ye citisins of Ierusalem: Thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell. Behold I wyl bringe such a plage vpon this place, that the eares of al that heare it, shal glow. And that because they haue forsaken me, and vnhalowed this place, and haue offered in it vnto straunge gods: whom neyther they, theyr fathers, ne the kyniges of Iuda haue knowen. They haue filled this place also with the bloud of innocētes, for they haue set vp an auker vnto Baal, to burne theyr chyldren for a burnt offering vnto Baal, which I neither comaunded, ne charged the, nether thought once ther vpon.

Jerem. vi. b

Beholde therfore, the tyme cometh (sayth the Lorde) that this place shal no more be called Topheth, ne the valleye of the chyldren of Hennon, but the valley of slaughter. For in this place wyl I slay the Senatours of Iuda and Ierusalem, and kyll them downe with the sword in the syght of theyr enemyes, and of them that seke theyr lyues. And theyr dead carcasses wyl I geue to be meat for the soules of the ayre, & beasts of the field. And I wyl make this citie so desolate, and despised, & whoso goeth therby, shalbe abashed and lest vpon her euery one shal eat vp an other in the beseg-gung and straghtnes, wherwth their e-them in. And the pitcher shal thou breake in the syght of the men, that shall be wth of hosts: euen so wyl I destroy this people and c<sup>ty</sup>pe as a potter breaketh a vessel, that can not be made hole agayne.

D In Topheth shal they be buried, for they shall haue none other place. This wil I do vnto this place also sayth the Lorde, and to them that dwel therein: Yea I wil do to this city, as vnto Topheth. (For the houses of Ierusalem and the houses of the kinges of Iuda are defiled, like as Topheth) because of al the houses, in whose parlours they dyd sacrifice vnto all the host of heauen, and poured out drynke offerings vnto straunge gods. And so Ieremye came from Topheth wher the lord had sent him to prophesye, and stode in the courte of the house of the Lorde and spake to al þe people: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the god of Israel: Behold I wyl bring vpon this city and vpon euery towne about it, al the plagues that I haue deuyled against them:
for they haue bene obstinate, and wold not obey my war nynges.

Jeremy is smytten and cast into pylson, for preachyng of the word of God. He prophcyeth the captiuitie of Babylon. He complayneth that he is a mocking stock for the word of God. He is compelled by the spirit to preach the word, wil he, wyl he not.

Verbe (a) Ishaſhur the preſt, the ſonne of Emer, chiefe in the houſe of the Lord, heard Ieremy preache ſo ſted-faſtly: he ſmote Ieremye, and put hym in the ſtockes, that are by the hyghgate of Ben Amin, in the houſe of the Lord. The next day ſolowynge, Ishaſhur brought Ieremy out of the ſtockes agayne. The ſayde Ieremy vnto hym: The Lord ſhal cal thee no more Ishaſhur (that is excellent and increaſynge) but Magog (that is fearful and aſtayed) euery wher. For thus ſaith the Lord, behold, I wil make the aſtayed, the thy ſelfe, and al that ſauioure thee: whyche ſhal peryiſh woth the ſweard of theyr ene-myes, euen before thy face.

B And I wyl geue hole Iuda vnder þ power of the kyng of Babylon, whych shall cary some vnto Babylon prysoners, and slay some wyth the sword. Moreover, all þ substance of this land, al thet pfectous and gorgeous workes, al costlynes, and al the treasure of the kynges of Iuda wyl I gyue into the handes of thet ennemys whych shal spoyle them, and cary them vnto Babylon. But as for thee (O Ishahur) thou shalt be caried vnto Babylon wyth al thyne housholde, and to Babylon shalt thou come wher thou shalt dye and be butyed: thou and al thy fauourers, to whom thou hast preached lyes. O Lord, thou makest me weake, but thou refresthest me, and makest me strong agayne: Al the day long am I despyled and laughed to scorne of e-uery man: because I haue nowe preached lōg agaynst malicious tyranny, & shewed them of destruction. For the whych cause they cast the word of the Lord in my teeth, and take me euer to the worst.

Wherefore, I thought from hence forth not to speak of hym, ne to preach any more in his name. But the word of þ Lord was a very burning fyre in my heart and in my bones, which when I would haue stopped I myght not. For why I heard so manye derisyonys and blasphemys, yea euen of myne owne companions, and of suche as were conuersant wth me: which wente about to make me a scayed, sayinge: vpon hym, let vs go vpon hym, to seare him, and make hym hold hys tong: that we may o-uercome hym and be auenged of him. But the Lord stood by me lyke a myghtye gyaunt: therfore my persecuters fel, & coulde do nothyng. They shalbe sore confounded, for they haue done vnywysly, they shal haue an euerlastyng shame. And now, O Lord of Hostes, thou righteous searcher (whych knowest the reynes and the very heartes) let me see them punished, for vnto thee I commyt my cause.

Singe vnto the Lord and praise him, for he hath deliuered the soule of þe oppressed, from the hand of the ydolente. (b) Cursed be the day, wherein I was bozne: unhappy be the day wherein my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man that brought my father the ydinges, to make hym gladder, saying: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it hap pen vnto that man, as to the cities which the Lord turned vpside downe (when he hadde heard long the wycked rumour of them) because he slewe me not, as soone as I came out of my mothers wombe, and be cause my mother was not my graue her selfe, that the byrth myght not haue come oute, but remayned still in her. Wherefore came I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experyence of labour and sorrowe, and to lede my lyfe wryth shame?

(a) Thys Shamur was the hyc Byshop of the temple, the ryng leader of false Prophetes, the chiefe heretike taker, that is, the ouerthrower of true godlynes. The dygnyty of priesthoode geuen vnto hym he abused. For he taughte not and rejoyced by the word, but feared the godd ly wyth cruelty. He is not the greater man that streyeth, but he is the stronger that is streyken. He not onlye stroke but also pylsoned hym that wythstoode hym not, but patientlye looked for the helpe of God. It is no new thyng (ye maye se) for Byshops to persecute the Prophetes of the Lorde, for theyr preachynz of the truty and constançe.

The. xxi. Chapter.

The propheth that zedekiah shalbe taken and the cytye burned.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie what tyme as kyng zedekiah sente vnto hym. Wha-ther the sonne of Melchiah, and Sophoniah the son of Maasiah priest, saying: Alke counsel at the Lorde (we pray the) of our behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon besiegeth vs, if the Lorde (peradueture) wyl deale with vs, accordinge to his maruelous power, and take hym from vs.

Then spake Jeremie: Behold zedekiah thy answer. Thus sayth the Lorde, & Lorde God of Israel: behold, I wyl turne backe the weapons that ye haue in your hands, wherewith ye fyght agaynst the kynge of Babylon and the Chaldees, which besiege you round about the wals, and I wyl bring them together in the myddest of this city, and I my selfe wyl fight against you, with an out stretched hand, and with a mighty arme in greate dyspleasure and terryble wrath, and wyl smyte them, that dwell in this cyty: yea both me and cattel shal dye of the pestilence.

And after this (sayth the Lorde) I shall deliuer zedekiah & king of Iuda and his seruauntes, his people (and such as are escaped in the city from the pestilence sword, and hunger) into the power of Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon: yea into the han-des of theyr enemyes, into the handes of those that folow vpon theyr lyues, wherby shal smyte them with the sword: they shal not pity them, they shal not spare the, they shal haue no mercy vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Dent. xxx. e Thus sayth the Lorde: Behold, I lay be-
Je. xxxviii. fore you the way of lyfe and deathe. Who Je. xxxviii. a so abyedeth in this cyty, shal perishe: either with the sword, with hunger, or with pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees part that besiege it, he shall saue his lyfe, and shal (a) wyne his soule for a pray. For I haue set my face against this cyty (sayth the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It must be gyuen into the hande of the kynge of Babylon, and be brent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the king of Iuda, say thus: Heare the worde of the Lorde (O thou house of David) for thus saith & Lorde: O mynister rightousnes, and that soone, de-liuer the oppressed from vpolent power: or euer my terryble wrath breake out lyke a fyre, and burne so, that no man may quench it, because of the wyckednes of your ymagynacions. Behold, (saith the Lorde) I wyl come vpon you, that dwell in the valleyes, rockes, and felde, and saye: Tushe, who wyl make vs afraied? who wyl come into our houses? For I wyl vylset you (sayeth the Lorde) because of the wyckednes of your inuencions, and wyl kyndle suche a fyre in your wood, as wyl consume al that is aboute you.

The. xxi. Chapter.

(a) Shal wyne his soule for a pray, that is, shall escape danger: It is all one wyth that whiche goeth before, he shall saue his lyfe: his soule, that is, his lyfe shalbe vnto hym as a praye, because he shoulde vterly haue lost it, if he hadde bydden in Jerusalem, and by flyng vnto the Chaldees, he shoulde win it: euen as a man winneth a pray in battayle.

The. xxii. Chapter

The exhorteth the kyng of Iuda to iudgement and rightousnes. Why Jerusalem is brought into captivity. The deathe of Sulum the sonne of Josiah is prophesied.

Thus saied the Lorde also: So down in to the house of the kyng of Iuda, and speake ther these wordes, and saye: Heare the word of the Lorde, thou kyng of Iuda that syttest in the kyngly seat of Da-uid: thou and thy seruauntes and thy people, and go in and oute at his gate. Thus the Lorde commaundeth: kepe equitye and righteousnes, deliuer the oppressed fro the power of the vpolent: do not greue nor op-presse the straunger, the fatherles, ne & widow, & shed no innocent blud in this place.

And if ye kepe these thyngs saythfully, then shal ther come in at the doore of this house kynges to syt vpon Davids seate:
they shalbe caried in Charets and ride vpon horses, both they and theyr seruauntes, and theyr people. But if ye wyl not be obedient vnto these commaundementes, I swear by myne owne selfe (sayth & Lorde) this house shalbe waste. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vpon the kyngs house of Iu-da: Thou art the heade, as Balaad is in Libanus: What wylt thou laye of it, if I make the not so waste (and the cities also) that no man shal dwell therein? I wyl prepare a destroyer wyth his weapons for the,
to hewe downe thy specyall Cedar trees,
and cast them in the fyre.

And al the people that go by this cite, shal speake one to an other: wherfore hath the Lorde done thus vnto this noble cytie?
Then shall it be answered: *because they haue broken the couenaunte of the Lorde theyr God, and haue worshipped and ser-ued straunge Gods. Journe not ouer the dead, and be not wo for them, but be soye for hym that departeth away: for he commeth not agayne and seeth his natyue country no more. For thus sayeth the Lorde as touchyng (a) Sulum the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, whiche raygned after his father, and is caried out of this place:
He shall neuer come hyther agayne, for he shall dye in the place, wherunto he is led captiue, and shal see this lande no more.
Do worthe hym that buyldeth his house wyth vnyghteousnes, and his parlers wyth the good that he hath gotten by vyolence: whiche neuer recompenseth his neighbour's labour nor payeth him his hyre.

hyze. He thinketh in hym self: I wyl build me a wyde house and gorgeous parlours: He causeth wyndowes to be heiren therein, and the selynges and forres maketh he of Cedre, and painteth the with Senober. Thinkest thou to raggne now that proudest me to warch wyth thy Cedre trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drynk, and prosper wel, as long as he delt wyth equity and rightuousnes? Yea when he helped the oppressed and poore to theyr ryght, the prospered he wel. From whence came this, but only because he had me before his eyes sayth the Lord. Neuertheles, as for thyne eyes and thyne heart, they looke vpon couetousnes, to shed innocent bloude, to doo wronge and vpolence. And therefore thus sayth the Lord agaynst Jehoakim, the son of Josiah kyng of Iuda: They shall not mourne for hym (as they vse to dooe) alas brother, alas syster: neyther shall they say vnto hym: Alas syr, alas for that Noble prynce. But as an Ass shall he be buried, corrupte, and be caste wythoute the gates of Ierusalem.

Thyme vp the byll of Iybanus (O thou daughter Syon) lyfte vp thy voyce vpon Basan, crye from all partes: for al thy loyers are destroyed. I gaue the warnynge, whyle thou wast yet in prosperite. As truelye as I lyue (sayeth the Lord) though Conaniah the sonne of Jehoakim kyng of Iuda were the sygnet of my ryght hand, yet wyl I plucke him of: And I wyl geue the into the power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the power of the that thou fearest: into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of the Calders. Moreover, I wyl send the, and thy mother that bare the into a straunge lande, where ye were not borne, and ther shal ye dye. Wherefore both he and hys seede shalbe sent away, and caste oute into a land, that they know not.

O thou earthe, earthe, earthe: heare the word of the Lord: Wyte this man among the outlawes, for no prosperity shal thys man haue al his life long. Neither shal any of his seide be so happy, as to sit vpon the seate of Dauid, and to beate rule in Iuda.

For the prophets and the priestes them selues, are polluted by hypocres, and theyr wyckednesse haue I founde in my house, sayth the Lord. Wherefore, theyr way shal be slipperry in the darknes, wherein they may staker and fal. For I wyll brynge a plague vpon them, even the yere of theyr visitacion, sayth the Lord: I haue sene folly among the prophets of Samaria, that they preached for Baal, and dysceyued my people of Israel.

I haue sene also amonge the prophetes of Ierusalem, that folowe aduoutre, and presumptuous lyes. They take the most shamefull men by the hand, flattering them, so that they canne not retorne from theyr wyckednes. Al these wyth theyr citizens ar vnto me as Sodom, and as the inhabitoures of Gomor.

Jer. li. b Therefore thus sayth the Lord of Hostes concernyng the prophets: Behold, I wyll fede them with wormwood, and make the drynke the water of gal. For from the prophetes of Ierusalem is the sykenes of p-pocrysy come vnto al the land.

Jer. xlii. b And therefore the Lord of hostes gyueth you this warning: Heare not the wordes of the prophets, that preach vnto you, and dysceue you: for they speake the meaning of theyr owne harte, and not oute of the mouth of the Lord. They say vnto them, that despyse me: The Lord hath spoken it: Tushe, ye shal prosper ryght well. And vnto al them that walke after the luste of theyr owne harte, they saye: Tushe, there shall no myfortune happen you. For who hath synnen in the counsell of the Lord, that he hath hearde and vnderstand, what he is about to doo: Who hath marked his deuyce, and hearde it? Behold, the storme weather of the Lord (that is, bys indignacion) shal go forth, and shal fal downe vpon the head of the vngodly. And the wrath of the Lord shal not turne agayne, tyll he perfourme and fulfyl the thoughte of his hert. And in the latter dayes ye shal know bys meanynge. I haue not sente the prophets (sayth the Lord) and yet they ranne,

Jer. xlii. b I haue not spoken to the, & yet they preached. But if they hadde contynued in my counsell, and hearde my wordes: they had turned my people from theyr euyl wayes and wycked ymagynacions. Am I then God that seeth but the thyng whiche is nyghe at hand, and not that is far of, sayth the Lord: Maye anye man hyde hym selfe so, that I shall not see hym: sayth the Lord. Do not I fulfyl heauen and earth: sayeth the Lord. I haue hearde well p-noughe, what the prophetes saye, that preache lyes in my name, sayinge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe wyll they contynue in the prophets herts, to tel lyes, and to preach the crafty subtilty of theyr owne herte: Whose purpose is (wyth the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forget my name, as theyr forefathers did, when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame, let hym tel it: & he that vnderstandeth my word, let him shewe it saythfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheate to do together: sayth the Lord. Is not my word like a fyre, sayth the Lord, and like an hammer, that breaketh the stone? Therefore thus sayth the Lord: beholde, I wyll vpon the prophetes, that (b) steale my woorde p-puely from euery man. Behold, here am I (sayth the Lord) against the prophets, that take vpon thei tongs to speake: The Lord hath sayde. Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lord) against those prophets, that dare prophecy lyes, and dysceue my people wyth theyr vanities, and miracles, whome I neuer sente, nor commaunded them. They shall dooe thys people greete harme, sayth the Lord.

If thys people, eyther anye prophet or prest aske, and say: what is the (c) burthen of the Lord? Thou shalt say vnto the: What burthen? Therefore wyll I cast you from me (sayth the Lord) because ye pour selues as a burthen. And the prophet, prest or people sh vseth this tearme (the burthen of the Lord) hym wil I viset and bys house also.

But thus shal ye say, euery one to an other: What answer hath the Lord gyuen? Or what is the Lords commanndement? And as for the burthen of the Lord, ye shal speak no more of it: for euery mans owne worde is his burthen, because ye haue altered the woorde of the spynge God the Lord of Hostes oure God.

Thus shal euery man say to the prophetes: what answer hath the Lord giue the? Or what sayth the Lord? And not ones to name the burthen of the Lord. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: For so muche as ye haue vseth thys tearme (the burthen of the Lord) whereas I not wythstandyng set vnto you, and forbad you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Behold therefore I wyll repute you as a burthen, and wil cast you out of my presce: yea and the city also, that I gaue you and your fathers: and wyll brynge you to an euerlastyng confusyon, & into such a shame as shal neuer be forgotten.

The byspon of the two panyers of fygs.
The fyfte byspon segnyfeth that part of the people shoulde be broughte agayne from captyvity. The second, that sedechiah and the rest of the people shoulde be destroyed.

The Lorde shewed me a vision: Behold thre stonde two maundes of fygges before the temple of the Lorde, after that Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon had led away captiue Iechoniah the sonne of Ioaquym kyng of Iuda, the myghty me-also of Iuda, with the workemasters, and conyng men of Ierusalem vnto Bafygs, even lyke as those that be fyft ripe.

In the other maunde were very naughty fygs, which myght not be eaten, they wer so euyl. The sayd the lord vnto me: What seest thou Jeremy? I sayed: fygs, whereof some be very good, and some so euyl, that no man may eat them.

When came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, after thys maner: Thus saith the lord the God of Irael: lyke as thou knowest led away, whom I haue sent oute of thys place into the land of Chaldees for they profite: and I wyl set myne eyes vpon the for the best, for I wyl build the vp, and not bryake them down, I wyl byng them againe into thys land: I wyl plant the, and not roote them out. And I wyl geue them so euyl: Euen so wyl I (sayth the Lorde) let Sedechias the kyng of Iuda, yea and all his princes, and the resydue of Ierusalem that remayne ouer in thys land, and them also that dwell in Egypt, to be vered and plaged in al kyngdomes and landes. And wyl make them to be a reprove, a common byword, a laughynge stocke, and shame, in al the places wher I shal scatter them. I wyl send the sword, hunger and pestilence among them, vntyl I haue cleane consu-them and theyr fathers.

captivity the score and ten yeres, because they contemned and despyled the word of God. He sheweth that after the score & x. yeres, the Babi-phet made vnto al the people of Iuda, and to al the inhabitants of Ierusalem on thys maner. Fro the. xlii. yere of Iosias the sonne of Ammon kyng of Iuda, vnto this present day (that is euen. xlii. yere) the worde of the lord hath bene comitted vnto me. And so I haue spoken to you, I haue ryssen vp early, I haue giuen you warning in season, but ye wold not hear me. Though the lord hath sent his seruauntes, all the prophtes vnto you in season. Yet wold ye not obey, ye wold not encline your eares to hear.

He said: turne again euery man fro his euyl away, and from your wycked image-nations, and so shal ye dwell for euer in the land that the lord promised you and your forefathers: & go not vnto straunge gods, serue them not, worshyp them not, and anger me not with the workes of your han-des: then wil not I punish you. Reuer the les, ye wold not heare me (saith the lord), but haue despyled me with the workes of your handes, so your owne great harme.

Wherefore thus sayth the lord of hostes: Bycause ye haue not harkened vnto my word: lo, I wyl send out and cal for all the people that dwell in the North, sayth the lord, and wyl prepare Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon my seruaunte, and wyl byng them vpon thys land, and vpon on al that dwell therein, and vpon all the people that are about them, & wyl utterly roote the out: I wyl make of them a wy-dernes, a mockage, and a continual desert.

Moreover, I wil take from them (a) the voyce of gladnes and solace, the voyce of byrdes, and the bride, the voyce of the anoynted with the cressethes: & thys hole lande shal become a wyldernes, and they shal serue the sayd people, and the king of Babylon the score yeres and ten. When the thre score and ten yeres are expyred, I wyl vilit also the wyckednes of the king of Babylon and his people, sayth the lord:
yea and the land of the Chaldees, and wyl make it a perpetual wyldernes, and wyl fulfyl al my words vpon that land, which I haue deuyled against it: yea, all that is wrytten in thys booke, whiche Jeremy hath prophesied of al people: so that they also shal be subdued vnto dyuers nacyns and great kynges, for I wil acquite them according to theyr dedes, and workes of theyr own handes.

For thus hath the Lorde God of Irael spoken vnto me: Take thys wine cuppe of indignacyon fro my hand, that thou maiest cause al the people to whom I sende thee, for to drinke of it: that wher they haue doun-ken therof, they may be madde, and out of theyr wits, when the sword cometh: bat I wyl sende amonge them. When tooke I the cup from the Lordes hande, and made al the people drynke therof, vnto whome the lord had sent me.

all the cytyes of Iuda, they: kynges and prynces: to make them desolate, waste, despyled & cursed, as it is come to passe this daye. Yea, and Pharao kyng of Egypte, his seruantes, his prynces, and his people altogether one wyth an other, and all kynges of the land of Hus, al kyngs of the Philistines land, Ascalon, Azab, Accaron, and the reste of Afdod, the Edomites, the Moabites, and the Ammonites, al þ kynges of Tyrys and Sydon: the kynges of the Isles, beyonde the sea: Dedan, Thirma, Buz, and the Hauen Ismaelites: all the kynges of Arabye, and (generallye) all the kynges that dwell in the wyldernesse: all the kynges of Hamir, all the kynges of Elam, all the kynges of Medes, all kynges toward the North, farre or nye, euery one wyth his neyghbours. Yea, al the kyngdoms that are vpon the whole earth. The kyng of Sezach, sayed he, shall dyncke wyth them also.

And saye thou vnto them: This is the commaundement of the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Dyncke and be droncken, spewe and sal that ye neuer clyse, and that thow the steward, whych I wyl sende among you. But if they wyl not receiue the cuppe of thy hande, and dynke it, then tel them: Thus doth the Lord of hostes threaten you: dynke it ye shal, and that shortly. For lo, I begyn to plage the cyty that my name is geuen vnto: dynke ye then, that I wyl leaue you unpunished: Ye shall not go quyte. For why, I call for a sword vpon al the inhabytauntes of the earth, sayeth the Lord of hostes.

There fore tell them all these wordes, and say vnto them: The Lord shall crye about, and lette his voyce be heard from his holy dwelling place. Wyth a greete noise shal he crye from his court regall. He shal geue a great voice (like the grape gatherers) and the sounde therof shal be herd vnto the endes of the world. For the Lord hath a iudgement to geue vpon al people, and wyl holde his court of iustyce wyth all fleshe, and punyssh the vngodlye, sayeth the Lord.

For thus saith the Lord of hostes: Be bold, a myserable plage shal go from one people to an other, and a great stormy water shal aryse from al the endes of þ earth. And the same day shal the Lord hym selfe sleie them, from one end of the earth to an other. Ther shal no lamentacion be made for any of them, none gathered vp, none buryed: but shal lye as dounge vpon the grounde. Mourne, ye shepherdes, and crye: spraynkle your selues wyth ashes, o ye rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of your slaughter is fulfilled, and ye shall fall lyke vessels connyngly made for pleasure.

The shepherds shal haue no way to fly, and the rammes of the flocke shal not escape. Then shal the shepherdes crye horrible, and the rammes of the flocke shal

The xxvi. Chapter.

Jeremy moueth the people to amendement. He is taken of the Prophetes and priestes, and brought to iudgement. He being accused before the prynces, answereth, that he hadde preached only the wordes of God. The eulars and þ people delpued Jeremy, agaynst the wylls of the Priestes and Prophetes, after the example of Hezekiah, whych had delpued Mischeah, that hadde preached the same thyngs that Jeremy hadde preached. Ariah the Prophet is kylled of Jehoahim, contrary to the wyl of God.

In the beginning of the raigne of Joahim the sonne of Josias kyng of Iuda: came this word from the Lord, saying: Thus sayth the Lord, Stand in the court of the Lords house, and speake vnto al the which (out of the cytyes of Iuda) come to do worship in the Lordes house, al the wordes that I commaunde the to saye. Looke thou kepe not one worde backe, if (peradventure) they wyl barken and turne euery man from his wycked way: that I may al so (a) repent of the plage, whych I haue determined to bringe vpon them, because of theyr wycked inuencions.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus saith the Lord: if ye wyl not obey me, to walke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruantes the Prophetes whiche I sent vnto you, clynging vpon timely, and still sending: Yf ye will not folow them (I say) then wyl I do to this house, as I dyd vnto Silo, and wyl make this city to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the priestes, the Prophetes, and al the people heard Jeremy preach these wordes in the house of the Lord.

Now when he had spoken out al þ wordes that the Lord commaunded hym to preach vnto al the people, then the priestes, the Prophetes, and al the people laid hold vpon him, and said: thou shalt dye. Howe darest thou be so bold, as to say in þ name of the Lord: it shal happen to this house as it did to Silo: and this cytye shal be so waste, that no man shal dwell therein?

And when all the people had gathered about Jeremy in the house of the lord, the prynces of Iuda herd of this rumour and they came forth out of the kynges palace into the house of the Lord and sat the downe before the newe dore of the Lord. Then spake the priestes and the Prophetes vnto the rulars, and to al the people, these wordes.

wordes: This man is worthe to dye, for he hath preached a gayne this cytye, as ye your selues haue heard wth your eares.

Then sayed Jeremie vnto the eulers, and to al the people: The Lorde hath sente me to preache agaynst this house, and agaynst this cytye, all the wordes that ye haue herd. Therefore amend your wayes, and your aduysmentes, and be obedyente vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God: so shal the Lorde repent of the plage, that he had deuyed agaynst you. Now as for me: I am in your handes, doo wth me as ye thynke expedient and good.

But this shal ye knowe: if ye put me to death, ye shal make your selues, this cytye, and al the inhabitants thereof, guilty of innocent blood. For this is of a truthe: that the Lorde hath sent me vnto you, to speake al these wordes in your eares.

Then said the rulers and the people vnto the priestes and Prophetes: This man may not be cōdemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde our God. The elders also of the landNode bp, and sayd thus vnto al the people: Mycheah the Mozaabite, whiche was a prophet vnder Ezechias kyng of Iuda, spake to al the people of Iuda: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Syon shal be plowed like a fild, Ierusalem shal be an heape of stones, and the hil of the Lords house shal be touned to an hye wood.

And Ezechias the kyng of Iuda and his people of Iuda put hym to death for this: No verely, but rather feared the Lorde, and made theyr prayer vnto hym. For whiche cause also the Lorde repented of the plage that he had deuyed agaynst them. Should we then do such a shameful dede agaynst our soules? Ther was a prophet also, that preached this in the name of the Lorde called Uriah the sonne of Semetah of Gathastarim: this mā preached also agaynst this cytye and agaynst this lande, according to all as Jeremie sayeth. Now when Ioaquin the kyng wth al the eulers and princes had heard his wordes, the kyng went about to sleigh him. When Uriah perceived that, he was afrayed, and fled, and departed into Egypt.

Then Ioaquin the kyng sent seruantes into the lande of Egypt: Namely Elnathan the sonne of Achaboz, and certayne men wth hym into Egypt, whiche fetched Uriah out of Egypt, and brought hym vnto the kyng Ioaquin that sleigh hym wth the swearde, and cast his dead body into the common peoples graue. But Ahikam the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremie that he came not into the handes of the people to be slayne.

The.xxvii. Chapter.

Jeremie, at the commaundement of the Lorde, sendeth bondes to the kyng of Iuda, and to the other kynges that were nye, whereby they are moued to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and the kynges and rulers, that they beleue not falsse Prophetes.

In the begynning of the raigne of Ioaquin the sonne of Iosiah kyng of Iuda, came this worde vnto Jeremie from the Lorde, whiche spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes and cheynes, and put them about thy necke, and send them to the kyng of Edom, the kyng of Moab, the kyng of Ammon, to the kyng of Tyrus, and to the kyng of Sidon, and that by the messengers whiche shal come to Ierusalem vnto Sedechias the kyng of Iuda, and byd them say vnto theyr masters: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell, speake thus vnto your masters, I am he that made the earth, the men, and the cattel that are vpon the ground, wth my great power and stretched out arme, and haue gyuen it vnto whom it pleased me.

And now wyl I deliuer al these landes into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon my seruaunt. The beastes also of the fild shal I geue hym to do hym seruyce. And al people shal serue him, and his sonne, & his childe chylde vntil the tyme of the same lande be come also, yea many people, and great kyngs shal serue hym.

Moreover, that people and kyngdome whiche wyl not serue Nabuchodonosor, that wyl not put theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babylon, the same people wyl I visite wth the sword wth hunger, wth pestilence, vntil I haue consumed them in his handes, saith the Lorde. And therefore folow not your Prophetes, soothsayers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wyches, whiche say vnto you, ye shal not serue the kyng of Babylon.

For they preache you lies, to byrnyng you farre from your lande, and that I myghte cast you out, and destroy you. But the people that putte theyr necke vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babylon, and serue hym, those wyl I let remayne tyl in theyr own land (saith the Lorde) and they shal occupy it, and dwell therein.

All these thynges tolde I Sedechias the kyng of Iuda, and sayde: Putte your necke vnder the kyng of Babylon, and serue him and his people, that ye may liue. Why wylte thou and thy people perishe wth the swearde, wth hunger, wth pestilence, lyke as the Lorde hath deuyed for al people that wyl not serue the kyng of Babylon? Therefore geue no care vnto those Prophetes that tel you: Ye shal not serue the kyng of Babylon, for they preache you lies, neither haue I sent them sayth the Lorde: howe be it they are bold, falsly to prophete in my name, that I myghte the soner dryue you out, and that ye might pe-ty I wyth your preachers.

I speake to the priestes also, and to all people: Thus sayth the Lord: Heare not the wordes of those prophets that preach vnto you, and say: Behold the vessels of the Lords house that shal be brought hy-ther agayne from Babylon: For they prophesye lyes vnto you. Heare them not but serue the kynge of Babylon, that ye may lue. Wherefore wyll ye make this city to be destroyed? But if they be (a) true prophetes in very dede, and if the word of the Lord be comitted vnto the, the let the praye the Lord of hostes, that the remnaunte of the ornaments (which are in the house of the Lord, and remayne yet in the house of the kynge of Iuda, and at Ierusalem) be not carryed to Babylon also.

For thus hath the Lord of hostes spoken concernyng the pylers, the lauer, the seat, and the residue of the ornaments that yet remayne in this city, whych Nabuchodo-nosor the king of Babylon tooke not, whē he carryed awaye Jeichontab the sonne of Ioakim kynge of Iuda, wyth all the power of Iuda, and Ierusalem, from Ierusalem vnto Babylon captiue.

Yea thus hath the Lord of hostes, the God of Irael spoken, as touching the residue of the ornaments of the Lords house, of the king of Iuda his house, and of Ieru-salem. They shal be carryed vnto Babilō, and ther they shal remayne vntill I bysite them sayth the Lord. Then wyll I byrnye them byther agayne. And this was done in the same yere: euen in the begynning of the raygne of Sedechias king of Iuda.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The false prophecy of Hananiah the prophet. Jeremey sheweth that the Prophecy of Hananiah is false, by the example of other Prophetes. He byng inspired of the Lord reprooueth Hananiah, prophesyinge his death.

But in the fourth yere of the raigne of Sedechias king of Iuda, in the fyfte moneth: It happened þ Hananiah þ sonne of Asur þ prophet of Babilō, spake to me in the house of the Lord, in the presence of the priestes and of all the people & sayd: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Irael: I haue broken the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and after two yere wyll I byrnye agayne into this place, all the ornaments of the Lords house, that Na-buchodonosor kynge of Babylon, carryed away from this place vnto Babylon.

Yea, I wyll byrnye agayne Jeichontab the sonne of Ioakim the kynge of Iuda hym selfe, wyth all the prisoners of Iuda (that are carryed vnto Babylon) euen into this place, sayth the Lord, for I breake the yoke of the kynge of Babylon.

Then the prophet Jeremey gaue answere vnto the prophet Hananiah, before þ priestes, and before all the people that wer present in the house of þ Lord. And þ prophet Jeremey sayed: Amen. The Lord doo that, and graunt the thyng whiche thou haste prophecied: that ye may byrnye agayne all the ornaments of the Lords house, and restore all the ornaments of the Lords house, and restore all the prisoners from Babilō into the place. Neuertheles harken thou also what I wyll say, that thou and all the people may hear: The prophets that wer before vs in tymes past, whych prophecied of war or trouble, or pestilence, eyther of peace vpon many nations and great kingdoms, wer proued by this, (if God had set them in dede) whē the thyng came to passe whych that prophet told before,

And Hananiah the prophete tooke the cheine from the prophet Jeremies necke and brake it, and wyth that said Hananiah that all the people myght heare. Thus hath the Lord spokē: Euen so wil I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, from the necke of all nacyns, yea and that wythin this two yere. And so the prophet Jeremey went his way.

Now after that Hananiah the prophete had taken the cheine from the prophet Je-remies necke, and broken it, The word of the Lord came vnto the prophet Jeremey, sayng: Go and tel Hananiah these wor-des. Thus sayeth the Lord: Thou hast broken the chayne of woodde, but in steede of woodde thou shalt make cheynes of yron.
For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the god of Irael: I wyll put a yoke of yron vpon the necke of all this people, that they may serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilō, yea and so shal they do. And I wil geue hym the bestes in the feldes. Then sayde the prophet Jeremey vnto that prophet Hananiah: Heare me (I praye thee) Hananiah: The Lord hath not sente the, but thou byngest his people into false belyfe. And therfore thus sayeth the Lord: Behold, I wyll send the out of the land, and wythin a yere thou shalt dye, because thou hast false spoken agaynst the Lord. So Hananiah the prophet dyed the same yere in the seuen moneth.

The Epistle of Jeremey, sent vnto the that were in captiuite in Babylon. He propheseth theyr retorne from captiuite after thre score and ten yeres. He prophesy-eth the destruction of the kynge and of the people that remayned in Ierusalem. He threatneth two Prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeiah the Rehelampe is prophesied.

phets, and all the people whō Nabuchodonosor had ledde vnto Babylon: after the tyme that kynge Jeconiah, and his quene, his chamberlaynes the princes of Iuda, Ierusalem, and the worke masters of Ierusalem were departed thither.

Whiche letter Elasah the sonne of Saphan and Samaria the sonne of Belkiah dyd beare, whom Sedechias the kynge of Iuda sente vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon. These were the wordes of Jeremys letter.

Thus hath the Lorde of hostes, the God of Irael spoken vnto all the prysoners that were led from Ierusalem vnto Babylon: bulde youre houses to dwelle therein: plante you gardens, that ye may entoye the frutes thereof: take you wyues to beare you sonnes and daughters: proude wyues for youre sonnes, and housebandes for youre daughters, that they may gette sonnes and daughters, and that ye maye multiplye there. Laboure not to be fewe, but seke after peace, and prosperitie of the ctyte wherein ye be prysoners, and praye vnto God for it. For in þ peace thereof shall youre peace be. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Irael: Let not those prophetes and southsayers that be among you, dyscepe you: and beleue not youre owne dreames. For why, they preache you lyes in my name, and I haue not sent them sayeth the Lorde.

But thus sayeth the Lorde: When ye haue fulfilled thre score and ten yeres at Babylon, I wyll bring you home, and of myne owne goodnes, I wyll carry you hither agayne vnto this place. For I know what I haue deuised for you, sayeth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trouble (whiche I geue you alredye) and that ye myghte haue hope agayne. Ye shall cry vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, and I shall heare you: Ye shall seke me, and fynde me. Yea, if so be that ye seeke me with your hote hart, I wyll be founde of you (sayth the Lorde) & wyll deliuer you oute of prysoun, and gather you together agayne out of all places wherein I haue scatered you, sayeth þ lord: and wyll bringe you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be carried awaye captiue.

But wher as ye say that (a) God hath capsed you by prophetes at Babylon: thus hath the Lorde spoken (concernynge the kynge that sitteth in the stole of Iuda, and all the people that dwell in this ctyte, your brethren that are not gone w you into captiuitie) Thus I saye, speake the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll sende a swerde, hunger, and pestilence vpon them, and wyll make them lyke vnto chylde slynges, that they may not be eaten for bitterness. And I wyll persecute them w the swerd, with hunger, & death.

I wyll deliuer them vp to be vexed of all kyngedomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scoone, and put to confusion of all the people amonge whome I haue scatered the: and that because they haue not bene obedient vnto my commaundementes, sayth the Lorde, whiche I sent vnto the by my seruantes þ prophetes. I stode by earlye, and sent vnto them, but they wold not heare, sayth the Lorde.

Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prysoners, whome I sent from Ierusalem vnto Babylon: Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Irael spoken of Achab the sonne of Colayab, and of Sedechias the sonne of Maasiah, whiche prophete lyes vnto you in my name: Beholde, I wyll deliuer them into the hand of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he may slei the before your eyes. And al the prysoners of Iuda that are in Babylon, shall take vpon them this terme of cursinge, and say: Howe God do vnto the, as he dyd vnto Sedechias and Achab whome the kynge of Babylon rosted in the fyre, because they synned shamefully in Irael.

For they haue not onely defyled theyr neyghbours wyues, but also preached lyinge wordes in my name, whiche I haue not commaunded the. Thus I testyfy and assure, saith þ Lorde. But as for Semeliah the Rebelampte thou shalt speake vnto hym: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Irael: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name, vnto all the people that is at Ierusalem, and to Sophonias the sonne of Maasiah the prest: yea and sente them to al the priestes, wherein thou wyrttest thus vnto hym. The Lorde hath ordeined the to be prest in stede of Joiada the prest, that þ shouldest be the chiefe in þ house of the Lorde aboue all prophetes, & preachers, and that thou myghtest put the in prysoun, or in þ stocks. How happeneth it the, that thou hast not reprobued Jeremey of Anothoth, whiche neuer leaueth of his prophecyinge?

And beside all this, he hath sente vs worde vnto Babylon, and tolde vs plainly, that our captiuitie shall longe endure: that we shoulde build vs houses to dwell therein, and to plant vs gardens that we maye enioye the frutes thereof. Whiche letter Sophonias the prest did rede, and let Jeremey the prophet heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremey, sayinge: Sende worde to all them that are in captiuitie, on this manner. Thus hath the Lorde spoken concerninge Semeliah the Rebelampte: Because that Semeliah hath prophesied vnto you withoute my comission, & brought you into a false hope, therefore thus the Lorde dothe certyfy you: Beholde, I wyll visite Semeliah the Rebelampte, and his seede: so that none of his shall remayne amonges this people, and none of them shall

The Notes of the. xxx. Chapter.

(a) Suche prophetes as preached vnto them the thynges which they were desirous of, dyd they greatly allowe: yea euen after they came to Babylon. In the they reioyced, as though they had ben sent of the Lord, and yet were they in dede false Prophetes. But Ezechiel the true Prophet of the Lord, which preached the contrary, they dyd persecute. By the false Prophetes they sayde: God hath sent vs Prophetes: and they doctrine dyd they heare and folowe. But the true Prophet dyd they moche and laughe to scoyne: and wolde nerther beleue hys doctrine, nor geue care vnto it.

For loe, I tyme comynge (sayeth the Lord) I will bring agayne the prysoners of my people of Israel and Iuda, sayeth the Lord: For I will restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to theyre fathers, and they shall haue it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes spake the Lord concerning Israel and Iuda: thus sayeth the Lord. We heare a terrible crye, feare and disquietnes. For what els doth this signifie, that I se? Namely that al strong men smyte euery man hys bande vpon his lopnes, as a woman in the payne of her trauaile. Who euer sawe a man trauaile wchylde? Enquire thereafter, and se. tyes, the shepherdes and husbände men:
For I shall feede the hungry soules, and refreshe all saynt hertes. When I hearde thys, I came agayne to my selfe, and mus-

The xxxii. Chapter.

Jeremy is cast into prison, because he propheted that the cytie shoulde be taken of the kynge of Babylon. By the felds that Jeremie bought at the commaundement of the Lord, signified, that the people shoulde come agayn to their own possession. The people of God are his seruantes, and he is their Lord. To feare God, is Goddes gift: to thinke that sinnes may be schged.

These wordes spake the Lord vnto Jeremy, in the tenth yere of Sedechias kynge of Iuda, whiche was the xlii. yere of Nabuchodonozor, what tyme as the kynge of Babylons Hoste layed siege vnto Ierusalem. But Jeremy the Prophet was bounde in the court of the prison, which was in the kynge of Iudas house: where Sedechias the kynge of Iuda caused him to be layed, because he hadde propheted of this maner: Thus sayeth the Lord: Behold, I will deliuer this cytie into the handes of the kynge of Babylon whiche shall take it. As for Sedechias the kynge of Iuda, he shall not be hable to escape the Chaldees but surely he shall come into the handes of the kynge of Babylon: whiche shall speke with hym mouth to mouth and one of the shall loke an other in the face.

Jer. xlii. a. and xlii. b. a.

And Sedechias shall be carted vnto Babylon, and ther shall he be vntyl the tyme that I visit hym, sayth the Lord. But if thou takest in hande to fyghte against the Chaldees, thou shalt not prosper.

And Jeremy sayd: Thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Behold Hananeell the sonne of Selum thynne vncles sonne, shall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme the land, that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: for by reaso of kintred it is thy part to redeme it, and to bye it oute.

Leui. xvi. b. Nu. xvi. a. Ruth. iii. a.

And so Hananeell myne vncles sonne came to me in the court of the prison (accordinge to the worde of the Lord) and sayed vnto me: Bye my land (I pray the) that lyeth in Anathoth in the countrey of Ben Iamin: for by heritage thou hast ryghte to loose it oute for thy selfe, therefore redeme it. When I perceiued, that this was the commaundement of the Lord, and so I losed the land from Hananeell of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne, and weyed hym ther the mony even seuen sicles, and ten silver pens.

I caused hym also to make me a wytyng and to seale it, and called recorde therby, and weyed hym ther the mony vpon the waighes.

So I toke the euidence with the copen (when it was orderlye sealed and red ouer) & I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah the sonne of Maasiah, in the sight of Hananeell my cosen, and in the presence of the wytnesses, that he named in the euidence, & before al the Iewes that wer therby, in the court of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them, saying: the Lord of Hostes the God of Israel commaundet the, to take this sealed euidence with the copen, and to lay it in an ethen vessel, that it may long continue.

For the Lord of Hostes the God of Israel hath determined, that houses, felde and vineyardes shall be possessed agayne in this lande.

Nowe when I hadde deliuered the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, siab,

tyah, I besoughte the Lorde, sayinge: O Lorde God, It is thou that haste made heauen and earth wth thy great power and hygh arme, and there is nothyng to hard for the. Thou shewest mercey vpon thousandes, thou recourest the wyckednes of the fathers, into the bosome of the chyldren that come after them.

Thou arte the grete and myghty god, whose name is the Lorde of Hostes: great in counsell, and inspyte in thoughte.

Rom. ii. a. Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mennes chyldren, to rewarde euery one after hys way, & accordyng to the frutes of hys inuencions.

Thou haste done grete tokens & wonders in the lande of Egypt (as we se this daye) vpon the people of Israell and vpon those men: to make thy name great as it is come to passe this day.

Thou hast brought thy people of Israell oute of the lande of Egypte wth tokens, wth wonders, wth a myghty hand, wth a stretched oute arme, & wth grete terriblenes: and hast gyuen them this lande, lyke as thou hadst promised vnto theyr fathers, namelye þ thou woldest gyue them a lande, that floweth wth mylke and honny.

Nowe when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe: but all that thou commaundedst the to doo, that haue they not done, & therfore come all these plagues vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulwokes made nowe agaynst the ctyte, to take it: and it shall be won of the Chaldees that besiege it, wth sword, wth hunger and death, and loke what thou haste spoken, þ same shall come vpon them.

E For loo, all thynges are present vnto þ: Yet sayest thou vnto me (O Lorde God) and commaundest me, þ I shall lose a piece of lande vnto my selfe, and take wytnesses thereto: and yet in the meane season the ctyte is deliuered into the power of the Caldees.

Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, I am the Lorde God of all fleshe: is ther any thyng that is hard for me? Therfore thus sayde the Lorde: beholde, I shall deliuer this ctyte in to the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, they shall take it. For the Caldees shall come and wyne this ctyte, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it: wth the gorgeous houses, in whose parlours they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and powred drynke offeringes vnto straunge goddes to prouoke me vnto wrathe.

Jer. xv. d. and. xix. b.

For seynge the chyldren of Israell, and the chyldren of Iuda, haue wrought wickednes before me euer from their yowth, what haue they elles done, but prouoked me wth the workes of theyr owne handes?

sayth the Lorde.

O what hath this ctyte ben els but a prouokynge of my wrathe, euer sence the daye that I buylded it vnto this houre? Wherin I cast it oute of my sight, because of the grete blasphemys of þ chyldren of Israell & Iuda, whyche they haue done to prouoke me: yea they, theyr prophets, hole Iuda, and al the ctyzens of Ierusalem.

When I stode vpearlye, and taughte them, & instructed them, they turned theyr backs to me, and not theyr faces: They wolde not heare, to be reformed and corrected. They haue sette theyr goddes in þ house that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hygh places for Baal in the valley of the chyldren of Hennon, to bowe theyr sonnes & daughters vnto Moloch, whyche I neuer commaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thought, to make Iuda sin wth such abhominacion.

Moreouer thus hath the Lorde God of Israell spoken, concernynge this ctyte, whyche (as ye poure selues confesse) shall be deliuered into the hande of the kynge of Babylon, when it is wonne wth the swerde, wth hunger, and wth pestilence. Beholde, I wyll gather them to gether frome all landes, wherewith I haue scattered them in my wrathe, in my fearfull and great displeasure: and wil bring the again vnto this place, wher they shall dwell safely. And they shall be my people, and I wyll be theyr God.

Deut. xxx. d.

Ezech. xi. e.

Isa. cxix. e.

And I wyll gyue them one herte and one waye, that they may feare me al the dayes of theyr lyfe, that they and theyr chyldren after them maye prospere. And I wyll sette vp an euerlastynge couenant wth them, namelye: that I wyll neuer cease to doo them good, and that I wyll put my feare in theyr hertes, so that they shall not run away from me.

Yea I wyll haue a luste and pleasure to doo them good, and saythfully to plant them in this lande wth my whole hert, and wth al my soule.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: lyke as I haue brought all this grete plage vpon this people: so wyll I also brynge vpon them all the good, that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue theyr possessions in this lande, wherof ye saye nowe, that it shall neyther be inhabited of people ne of cattell, but be deliuered into the handes of the Caldees: Yea ladies shall be boughte for monye, and euidences made therupon and sealed before wytnesses in þ countrey of Ben Iamin, and round about Ierusalem: in the ctytes of Iuda, in the ctytes that are vpon the mountaynes, & in them that lye beneth, yea and in the ctytes that are in the deserte. For I wyll brynge theyr prysoners hyther agayne, sayeth the Lorde.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The prophete is monished of the Lorde, to praye for the deliuerance of þe people, which the Lorde promyseth. God forgiveþ synnes, and doeth graciously to the people, for hys owne renowne. Of the byrthe of Chyſte. The kyngdome of Chyſte in the church ſhall neuer be ended.

Moreouer the word of the Lorde came unto Jeremie on this maner, whē he was yet bound in the court of þe priſon: Thus ſaith þe Lorde, which fulfylleth the thinge that he ſpeaketh, the Lorde whiche perſourmeth the thinge þe he taketh in hand: euen he, whose name is the Lorde: thou haſte * cryed vnto me, and I haue hearde the, I haue ſwewed greates and hygher thinges, which were vnknewen vnto you.

Jer. xx. a.
and. xxxii. b.

Thus (I ſaye) ſpake the Lorde God of Iſrael, concernynge the houſes of this cite, and the houſes of the kynges of Iuda, that they ſhall be broken thorow the ordynance and weapons, when the Chaldees come to beſiege them: and they ſhall be fylled wth the dead karcaſes of men, whome I wyll ſlaye in my wrath and diſpleaſure: when I tourne my face frome this cite becauſe of all her wyckedneſſe. Beholde, (ſaith the Lorde) I wyll beale theyr woundes and make theim hole, I wil open the treaſure of peace and truth.

And I wyll returne the captiuitie of Iuda and Iſrael: and wyll ſet them by a gayne as they were afore. From all mysdedes (wherin they haue offended againſt me) I wyll clenſe them: And al theyr blaſphemies whiche they haue done agaynſt me, when they regarded me not, I wyll forgive them.

B And this ſhall get me a name, a prayſe and honoure, amonge all people of the earth, whiche ſhall heare all the good, þe I wyll ſewe vnto theim: pea they ſhall be aſtayed and aſtonied at al the good dedes and benefytes, that I wyll do for them. Moreover thus ſaith the Lorde: in this place (whereof ye ſay that it ſhall be a wilderness, wherin neyther people ne cattell ſhall dwell: in like maner in the ctytes of Iuda and wythoute Ieruſalem whiche alſo ſhall be ſo voyde that neyther people ne cattell ſhall dwell there) ſhall the voyce of gladnes be herd agayne, the voyce of the bydegrome and of the byde, the voyce of them that ſhall ſynge: Praise the Lorde of Hoſtes, for he is louing and hys mercie endureth for euer, and the voyce of them that ſhall offer by gifts in the houſe of the Lorde. For I wyll reſtore the captiuitie of this land, as it was afore, ſaith the Lorde.

Thus ſaith the Lorde of hoſtes: At ſhall come yet cherto, that in this land, whiche is voyde from men and catel, and in all the cities of the land, ther ſhall be ſet vp ſhepe herdes cotages: in the cities vpon the moūtaines, and in the ctytes that lye vpon the playne, and in the deſerte.

The Prophecy

In the lande of Ben Iamin, in the ſeldes of Ieruſalem, & in the ctytes of Iuda ſhall the ſhepe be numbred agayne, vnder the hand of hym that telleth them, ſaith the Lorde: Beholde, the tyme cometh ſaith the Lorde, þe I wyll perſourme þe good thinge, whiche I haue promysed vnto the houſe of Iſrael, and to the houſe of Iuda. In thoſe dayes, and at the ſame tyme, I wyll byng forth vnto Dauid the br aunche of ryghteouſnes, and he ſhall do equytie and ryghteouſnes in the lande. In thoſe dayes ſhall Iuda be helped, and Ieruſalem ſhall dwell ſafe, & he that ſhall cal her, is euen God our ryghteouſe maker. For thus the Lorde promiſeth: Dauid ſhall neuer want one to ſt upon the ſtole of the houſe of Iſrael: neyther ſhall the prieſtes and Leuites wante one to offer alway before me burnt offeringes, to kyndle the meat offeringes, and to prepare the ſacrifices.

Jer. xlii. a.
Jer. xlii. a.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie after this maner: Thus ſaith the Lorde: May the couenant whiche I haue made wth day and nyght be broken, that there ſhoulde not be day and nyght in due ſeaſon? When may my couenante alſo be broken whiche I made wth Dauid my ſeruaunte, and ſo he not to haue a ſonne to reygne in hys trone. So ſhall alſo the prieſtes and Leuites neuer fayle, but ſerue me. For lyke as the ſterres of heauen may not be numbred, neyther the ſande of the ſea be measured: ſo wyll I multiplye the ſede of Dauid my ſeruaunt, and of the Leuytes my myniſters.

Jer. xlii. a.

Gene. xv. a.
and. xxi. c.

Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremie, ſayinge: Conſidereth thou not what this people ſpeaketh. Two kynredes (ſaye they) had the Lorde choſen, and thoſe ſame two haue he caſte awaye. For ſo farre is my people come, that they haue no hope to come togyther anye more, and to be one people agayne. Therefore thus ſaith the Lorde: If I haue made no couenante wth daye and nyght, and gyuen no ſtatute vnto heauen and earth, then wyll I alſo caſte awaye the ſede of Dauid my ſeruaunte: ſo that I wil take no ioyne oute of hys ſede, to rule the poſteritie of Abraham, Iſaac and Iacob. But yet I wyll turne agayne theyr captiuitie, and be mercyfull vnto them.

The xxxiiii. Chapter.

The threteneþ þe cite, and kyng Sedechias alſo, ſhall be gyuen into the handes of the kyng of Babylon, he rebuketh the þe brought ſuch of their bretheren into captiuitie, that were pardoned to go at theyr lybertye.

Theſe are the wordes whiche the Lorde ſpake vnto Jeremie, what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, & al hys hoſtes (oute of all the kyngdomes that were vnder hys power) and al hys people, ſoughte agaynſt Ieruſalem, and all the ctytes therof. Thus ſaith the Lorde God of Iſrael: Go, and ſpeake to Sedechias Sedechyas the king of Iuda, and tel him: The Lord sendeth the this word: Behold, I wyl deliuer this cite into the hand of the kynge of Babilon, he shall burne it, & thou shalt not escape his hands, but shalt be led away prisoner, & deliuered into his power: Thou shalt loke the kynge of Babilon in the face, and he shall speake wyth the, mouthe to mouth, then shalt thou go to Babilon. Yet heare þ word of the Lord, O Sedechias thou kynge of Iuda: Thus saith the Lord vnto the: Thou shalt not be slain wyth the sword, but shalt dye in peace. Lyke as thy forefathers the kynge, thy progenytours were brent, so shalt þ be brent also, & in the mornyng they shall say: Oh Lord. For thus haue I determy-ned, saith the Lord.

When spake Jeremey the prophete all these wordes vnto Sedechyas kynge of Iuda in Ierusalem, what tyme as þ king of Babilons hoste besieged Ierusalem, & the remnaunte of the cyties: Namely, Iachis and Azecah, whych yet remayned the strong defended cyties of Iuda.

These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Jeremey the prophete, when Sedechyas was agreed wyth all the people at Ierusalem, that there should be proclaimed a libertie: so that euery man shoulde lette his seruaunte and handemayde goo free, Hebrue and Hebruelle, and no Iewe to holde his brother as a bondma. Now as they had consented, eue so they were obedyent, and let the go free. But after ward they repented, and toke agayne the seruauntes and handemaydes, whom they had let go free, and so made them bonde agayne.

E For the whiche cause the worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremey from the Lord hym selfe, sayinge: Thus saith the Lord God of Istraell: * I made a couenaunte wyth your fathers, when I brought the out of Egypt (þ they shoulde no more be bond men) sayinge: When seue peres are out, euery man shall let his boughte seruaunte an Hebrue go free, if he haue serued hym seue peres. But your fathers obeyed me not, and hekened not vnto me. As for you, ye wer now turned, & did right before me, in þ ye proclaimed euery ma to let his neighbour goo free, & in þ ye made a couenaunt before me in the temple that beareth my name: But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne and blasphemed my name, In this, that euery man hath requyred his seruaunte and handemayden agayne, whome ye had let goe quyte and free, and compelled them to serue you agayne, and to be your bonde men. And therfore thus saith the Lord: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclaim freedom vnto his brother and neighbour: wherfore I wyl call you vnto a freedom, saith the Lord: euen vnto the sword, to the pestilence, & so hunger, and wyl make you to be plagued in all the kyngdomes of the earthe. Yea those men that haue broke my couenaunte and not kept the wordes of the appoyntement, which they made before me: whē they hewed the calfe in twa, and whē they wēt thorow the two halfes therof: The Princes of Iuda, the Princes of Ierusalem, the gelded men, the dyekes and all the people of the lande, whiche wente thorow the two sides of the calfe: Those men wyl I gyue into the power of their enemyes, and into the handes of them that folowe vpon their lyues.

And their dead bodies shal be meate for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the fildes. As for Sedechias the kynge of Iuda and his Princes, I wyl deliuer the into the power of theyre enemyes, and of the that desyre to slaye them, and into the hande of the kynge of Babilons hoste, whiche nowe is departed from you: But thorow my commaundement (saith the Lord) they shall come agayn before this cite, they shall fight agaynst it, wyne it, and burne it. Moreover I wyl lay the cyties of Iuda so waste, that no man shal dwell therein.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

He propoundeth the obedyence of the Rechabites, and thereby confoundeth the pride of the Jewes. Also commaundement of Ionadab, the father of the Rechabites. He threteneth punishment vnto the rebellious Jewes. He promyseth prosperite vnto the Rechabites, for their obedyence vnto their father.

The wordes whiche the Lord spake vnto Jeremey, in the raygne of Iosiah the sone of Josiah king of Iuda, are these: Goo vnto the house of the Rechabites, and call them oute, and bryng them to the house of the Lord into some commodious place, and gyue the wyne to drynke. Then toke I Iazanyah the sonne of Jeremey, the sonne of Habaziniab, and his brethren, and all his sonnes, and the hole houshoulde of the Rechabites: and broughte the to the house of the Lord, in to the closet of the chyldren of Hanan the sonne of Iegedalph the ma of God: whiche was by the closet of the Princes, that is aboue the closet of Maasiah the sone of Selum, whych is the chiefe of the treasure. And before the sonnes of the kyned of the Rechabites, I sette pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto them: Drynke wyne. But they sayed: we drynke no wyne, for Ionadab the sonne of Rechab our father commaunded vs, sayinge: ye & your sonnes shal neuer drynke wine, buyde no houses, sowe no seide, plant no vyues, pea ye shal haue no vineyardes, but for all your tyme ye shal dwell in tentes, that ye maye lye long in the lād wherein ye be straungers.

Thus haue we obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab the sonne of Rechab our father: in all that he hath charged vs.

us, and so we drinke no wyne all oure lyfe longe: we nor oure wyues, oure sonnes, and our doughters. Neyther buyde we any house to dwel therein, we haue also amongs vs neyther vineyardes, ne corne lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obey, & do accordynge vnto all that Jonadab our father commaunded vs.

But now when Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon came vnto the land, we sayed: come, let vs go to Ierusalem, that we may escape the hofte of the Chaldees and the Assirians: and so we dwell now at Ierusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ieremye, saying: thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes God of Israel: Goo and tell hole Iuda and all the inhabitants of Ierusalem: Wyl ye not be refourmed to obeye my wordes: saith the Lorde. The wordes whiche Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded hys sonnes, that they shoulde drinke no wyne, are faste and surely kepte: for vnto this day they drinke no wine, but obeye theyr fathers commaundemente. But as for me I haue stande vpon early, I haue spoken vnto you, and geue you earnest warnyng, and yet haue ye not bene obedyente vnto me.

Yea I haue sente my seruauntes all the Prophetes vnto you, I rose vpon early, and sente you worde, sayinge: O tourne you, euerye man from hys wycked way: amende youre lyues, and goo not after straunge gods, to worshyp them: that ye maye continue in y<sup>e</sup> land, whiche I haue gyuen vnto you & your fathers, but ye wolde neyther heare me, ne folowe me.

The childre of Jonadab Rechabs sonne, haue stedfastlye kept their fathers commaundement that he gaue them, but this people is not obedient vnto me. And therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyl bynge vpon Iuda, and vpon euerye one y<sup>e</sup> dweller in Ierusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuysed agaynst them. For I haue spoken vnto them, but they wolde not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuertheless they wolde geue me no answer. Ieremye also spake vnto the householde of the Rechabytes: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, the God of Israel: For so muche as ye haue obeyed the commaundemente of Jonadab your father, and kept all hys precepres, & done accordyng vnto all that he hath bydden you: Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, the God of Israel, Jonadab the sonne of Rechab shal not sayle, but haue one oute of hys stocke, to stande alway before me.

booke. Jehudy taketh the booke, and readeth a lytle of it, and after casteth it in the fyre. There is an other wyrtten at the commaundemente of the Lorde.

In the iiii. yere of Ioaquym the sonne of Iosaph kynge of Iuda, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ieremye, sayinge: Take a booke and wyrteth therein all the wordes that I haue spoken to the, to Israel, to Iuda, and to all the people from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto y<sup>e</sup> (in the reygne of Iosiah) vnto this daye. That whē the house of Iuda heareth of y<sup>e</sup> plage whiche I haue deuysed for them, they may peradventure turne euerye manne fro hys wycked waye, that I maye forgue theyr offences and synnes. Then dyd Ieremye call Baruche the sonne of Neriah, and Baruche wrote in the booke at the mouthe of Ieremye, al y<sup>e</sup> wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had spoken vnto hym. And Ieremye commaunded Baruche, sayinge: I am in prison, so that I may not come into the house of the Lorde, therefore go thou: byther, and reade the booke, that thou hast wyrtten at my mouth. Namelye, the wordes of the Lorde, and reade the in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng daye: that the people, hole Iuda, and all they that come oute of the cytyes maye heare. peradventure they wil pray mekely before the face of y<sup>e</sup> Lorde, and turne euerye one from hys wycked way. For great is the wrath and dyspleasure, that the Lorde hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruche the sonne of Neriah dyd accordyng vnto all that Ieremye the prophete commaunded hym, readyng the wordes of the Lorde out of the booke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyfte yere of Ioaquym the sonne of Iosiah kynge of Iuda, in the nyenth moneth whē it was commaunded that al the people of Ierusalem shoulde faste before the Lorde, and they also that were come from the cytyes of Iuda vnto Ierusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Ieremye oute of the booke wyrtin the house of the Lorde, out of the treasure of Bama-riah the sonne of Sapha the Scribe, whiche is besyde the hygher losse of the doore of the Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Nowe when Archeah the son of Bama-riah the son of Saphan had heard all the wordes of the Lorde oute of the booke, he wente downe to the kynges palace into the Scribes chabre, for there all y<sup>e</sup> princes were set: Elisama y<sup>e</sup> Scribe, Dalayah the sonne of Semey, Elnarban the sonne of Achaboz, Bama-riah the son of Sapha, Sedechpas the son of Hananiah, wth all the princes. And Archeah told the all the wordes that he heard Baruch reade out of y<sup>e</sup> booke before the people.

Then all the princes sente Jehudy the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selemiah iah toke the booke in hys hande, and came unto them. And they sayd unto hym: Syt downe, and reade the booke that we maye myght heare. Nowe when they had heard all the wordes, they wer abashed one vp on another, and sayde unto Baruch: We wyl certifie the kyng of al these wordes.

And they examined Baruch, sayinge: Wel vs, howe dydest thou wyte al these wor-des oute of hys mouth? Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes unto me wyth hys mouth, and I alone was wyth hym, & wrote the in the booke.

Then sayd the Prynces unto Baruch: Go thy way and hyde the wyth Jeremy, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they wente into the court. But they kept the booke in the chamber of Elyfama the Scripbe, and tolde the kyng all the wor-des that he myght heare. So the kyng sente Jehudy to fetch hym the booke, whiche he brought out of Elyfama & Scribes chambre. And Jehudy red it, that & kyng and all the Prynces whiche were about hym, myght heare. Nowe the kyng sat in the wynter house, for it was in the nyth moneth, and ther was a good fyre before hym. And when Jehudy had red thre or foure leaves therof, he cut the booke in pte-ces wyth a penne knyfe, and cast it into & fyre vpon the harth, vntyll the booke was al brent in the fyre vpon the harth.

Yet no man was abashed thereof, or rente hys clothes: neyther the kyng hym selfe ne his seruantes, though they herde all these wordes. Neuerthelesse Elnatha, Dalaiab, & Samaria besought & kyng & he wolde not burne the booke: not with-standynge the kyng wold not heare them, but commaunded Jer hameell the sonne of Amalech, Saraiab the sonne of Eziel and Selamiah & sonne of Abdiel, to laye vades vpon Baruch the Scripbe, and vpon Jeremye the Propbet e, but the Lorde keppe them oute of syghte. After nowe that the kyng hadde brente the booke, and the Sermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremy: The worde of the Lorde came unto Jeremy, sayinge: Take an other booke, and wyte in it all the foresayde ser-

Joakym the kyng of Iuda hath brent.

And tell Joakym the kyng of Iuda:
thus sayth the Lorde: thou hast brent the booke and thoughteste wythin thy selfe: Why haste thou wyrtten therein, that the kyng of Babylon shall come, and make thys land wast, so that he shall make both people and cattel to be out of it. Therefore thus the Lord sayeth to Joakym the kyng of Iuda: There shall none of hys generacyon syt vpon & throne of David. His dead corse shall be cast out & the heat of the day and the frost of the nyght may come vpon hym: And I wyl visit the wyckednes of his seide, and of hys seruantes. Moreover all the euill that I haue promysed them (though they heard me not) wyl I bring vpon them, vpon the inhabitantes of Jerusale, and vpon all Iuda. Then toke Jeremye an other booke, & gaue it Baruch the Scripbe, the sonne of Neriah, whiche wrote therein out of & mouth of Jeremy:

All the sermons & were in the fyrst booke, whiche Joakym the kyng of Iuda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons then before.

The. xxxviii. Chapter.

Sedechias succeeded Cononiah. He sendeth unto Jeremy to praye for hym. Jeremy goynge into the lande of Ben Iamin, is taken.
He is beaten, and put in prison. He is deliuered by kyng Sedechias.

Sedechias the son of Josiah, whiche was made kyng thorow Nabuchodon-nosor kyng of Babylon, reigned in the lande of Iuda, in the stede of Cononiah the son of Joakym. But neither he, nor his seruantes, ne the people in the land wold obey the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he spake by & prophet Jeremy. Neuertheles Sedechias the kyng sent Jehucal the son of Selemiah, and Sophoniah the son of Maasiah priest, to the prophet Jeremy, sayinge: O praye thou vnto the Lorde oure God for vs. Nowe Jeremy walked fre amonge the people at that tyme, & was not put in prison as yet. Pharaos host also was come oute of Egypte, whiche when the Caldees that besieged Ierusalem per-ceyued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy the prophet, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell, thys answer shal ye geue to the kyng of Iuda, that sent you vnto me for counsell: Beholde, Pha-raos hoste whiche is come forth to helpe you, shall retorne to Egypte, into hys own lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne, and fyghte agaynst thys Cytre, & wyne it, and set fyre vpon it. For thus sayth the Lorde: * disceyue not your owne myndes, thynkynge on thys maner. To the Caldees go now their way fro vs. &c. No they shall not go theyr waye. For though ye had slayn the hole host of the Caldees, that besiege you, & euerye one of the Rayne laye in hys tent, yet shulde they stande vp, and set fyre vpon thys cytre.

Nowe when the hoste of the Caldees was broken vp from Ierusalem for feare of the Egyptians armie, Jeremy wente out of Ierusalem toward the lande of Ben Iamin, to do (a) certeine busines there amonge the people. And when he came vnder Ben Iamins porte, ther was a portec called Neriah & son of Selemiah, & son of Wherfore the princes wer angry w Jeremy, causing hym to be beaten, & to be layd in prysoun in the house of Ionathas the scribe, for he was the ruler of the prysoun. Thus was Jeremy put in the dongeon and prysoun, and so lay there a longe tyme. Then Sedechias the kynge sent for hym, and called hym, and asked hym quietly in hys own house, sayinge: thynkest thou thys busines (that nowe is in hande) cometh of the Lord? Jeremy answered: yea that it doth, and thou (sayd he) shalt be deliuered into þe kyng of Babylons power.

D Moreover Jeremy said vnto kyng Sedechias: what haue I offended agaynst the, agaynst thy seruantes, or agaynst thys people, that ye haue caused me to be put in prysoun? Wher are your Prophetes whiche haue prophesied vnto you, & said þe kyng of Babylon shoulde not come agaynst you and thys land?

And therfore heare nowe, O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accept before the, & send me no more into þe house of Ionathas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then Sedechias the kyng commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entry of the prysoun, and dayly to be gauen hym a cake of bread, and els no dyght meate, vntill all the (b) breade in the ctyte was eaten vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in the fore entry of the prysoun.

The Notes of the. xxxviii. Chapter.

(a) Some reade: to deuyde the possession in the myddest of the people. They vnderstand hereby the deuyision of certayne landes, wyth hys kynfolkes at Anathoth. Other reade: to separate (vnderstande hym selfe) because he was in the myddest of hys people: that is, to thynntent to departe forth of the myddeste of hys people. They thynke that he would haue fled, for feare of persecution.

The. xxxviii. Chapter.

E By the motion of þe rulers Jeremy is put into a dongeon. At the request of Abedmelech the Chamberlayne, the kynge commaunded Jeremy to be broughte forth of the Dongeon. Jeremy sheweth the kynge howe he myght escape death.

Saphatyah the sonne of Maathan, Boshiah the sonne of Shashur, the son of Selemtah, and Shashur the sonne of Melchiah perceyued the wordes that Jeremy had spoke vnto al þe people: namelye on thys maner: Thus sayth þe Lord: Who so remayneth in thys ctyte, shall perishe, ether wyth the swearde, wyth hunger or wyth pestilence: But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape & wyngynge hys soule for a praye, and shall lyue. For thus sayth the Lord, Thys ctyte (no doubt) must be deliuered into the power of the kyng of Babylon, and he also shall wyne it. The sayd the princes vnto the kynge: Syr, we beseech you lette thys man be put to death. For thus he discourageth the handes of þe souldyers that be in thys ctyte, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh such wordes vnto them.

Thys man verely labourerth not for peace of the people, but myschyeffe. Sedechias the kynge answered and sayd: lo, he is in youre handes, for the kynge may denye you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremy and cast hym into the dongeon of Melchias the sonne of Hamalech, that dwelte in the fore entry of the prysoun. And they let downe Jeremy wyth cordes into a dongeon, where ther was no water, but myre: So Jeremy sticke fast in the myre.

Nowe when Abedmelech the Mozyan beyng a Chamberlayne in the kynges courte, vnderstode that they had caste Jeremy into the dongeon: he wente oute of the kynges house, and spake to the kyng, (whiche then sate vnder the port of Ben Samin) these wordes: My lorde the kyng wher as these men medle wyth Jeremy the prophet, they do hym wronge: Name lye in that they haue put hym in prysoun, ther to dye of hunger, for ther is no more bread in the ctyte.

Then the kyng commaunded Abedmelech the Mozyan, and sayd: Take from hence. xxx. men whom thou wilt, & drawe vp Jeremy the prophet oute of the dongeon before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men wyth hym, and went to the house of Amalech, and there vnder an almyr he gat old ragges, and worne cloutes, and let them downe by a corde into the dongeon to Jeremy.

And Abedmelech the Mozyan sayd vnto the prophet Jeremy: O put these rags & clouts vnder thyne arme holes, betwixt them and the cordes: and Jeremy did so. So they drew vp Jeremy w cordes, and toke hym out of the dongeon, & he remained in the fore entry of the prysoun. Then Sedechias the kyng sent & caused Jeremy the prophet to be called vnto hym oute of the thirde entry that was by the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremy: I will aske the some what, but hyde nothyng fro me. The Jeremy answered Sedechias: Yf I be plaine vnto þe, thou wilt cause me suffer death: if I geue þe counsel, þe wilt not folow me. So the kynge swore an othe secreatlye vnto Jeremy, sayinge: As truly as the Lorde lyueth, þe made vs these soules, I will not see þe, ne geue the into þe handes of the that seke after thy lyfe. Then sayd Jeremy vnto Sedechias: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Yf case be that thou wilt go furth vnto the kyng

Jer. xxxviii. b.

kyng of Babylons princes, thou shalt save thy lyfe, and thys ctyte shall not be brent: yea both thou and thy household shall escape wyth your lyues. But if þu wilt not go forth to the kyng of Babylons princes, the shall thys ctyte be deluyered into þe handes of the Caldees, whiche shall set fyre vpon it, & thou shalt not be able to escape the. And Sedechias sayde vnto Jeremey: I am afraid for the Jewes that are fled vnto the Caldees lest I come in theyr handes, and so they to haue me in derision. But Jeremey answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O haeken vnto the voyce of the Lorde (I beseech þu) which I speke vnto the: so shalt þu be wel, & saue thy life. But if thou wilt not goo forth, the Lorde hath tolde me thys playnly: Beholde, all the women that are left in the kyng of Judas house, shall go out to the kyng of Babylons princes. For they thynke, that thou art dysceyued: and that the men in whome thou dyddest put thy trust, haue mastered the, & set thy fete faste in the myre, & gone theyre waie from the. Therefore all thy wyues wyth theyre chyldren shall fle vnto the Chaldees, and thou shalt not escape theyre handes, but shalt be the kyng of Babylons prisoner, & thys ctyte shall be brent.

When sayd Sedechias vnto Jeremey: loke that no body knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But if the princes perceiue that I haue talked wyth the, and come vnto the saying: O speake, what sayed the kyng to the: hyde it not fro vs, & we wyll not put the to deathe: Tell vs (we praye the) what sayed the kyng to the: Se thou gyue them thys answer: I haue humblye besought the kyng, that he wyll let me lye no more in Ionathas house, that I dye not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremey, & asked him. And he tolde them after the manner as þe kyng had hym. The they held their peace, for they perceyued nothyng. So Jeremey abode still in the fore entry of the pryson, vntill the day that Ierusalem was wonne.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Sedechias flyeth. He is take of the Chaldees. Hys sonnes are slain. Hys eyes are thruste oute. Jeremey is prouided for. Abedmelech is deluyered from captiuyte, bycause of the confydence that he hath in God.

Jer. xxxix. b.
iii. re. xrb. a.
Jer. lli. a.

Nowe when the ctyte of Ierusalem was taken (for in the ninth yere of Sedechias kyng of Iuda, in the tenth moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon and all hys host, and besyged Ierusalem, and in the eleuenth yere of Sedechias, in the fourth moneth in the nynew daye of the moneth he brake into the ctyte.) The all the princes of the kyng of Babylon came in, and sat them downe vnder the port: Neregell, Sarezar, Samegarnabo, Sarsachym, Rabfarys, Merbel, Sarezar, Rabmag, wyth al the other princes of the kyng of Babylon. And when Sedechias the kyng of Iuda, wyth hys souldyers sawe them, they fled, and departed out of þe ctyte by nyght thowowe the kynges garde, and thowowe the porte that is betwene the two walles, and so they wete towarde the wylder nesse.

But the Chaldees hoste folowed faste vnto them, and toke Sedechias in the felde of Iericho, and broughte hym prisoner to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath that lyeth in the lande of Bemeb, wher he gaue iudgement vpon hym. So the kyng of Babylon caused the chyldren of Sedechias, and all the nobles of Iuda to be slayn before hys face at Reblath. And made Sedechias eyes to be put out & bounde hym wyth chaynes, and sente hym to Babylon.

Moreouer the Chaldees brente by the kyngs palace, wyth the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Ierusalem. As for the remnaunte of the people that wer in the ctyte, and such as wer come to help them (whatsoeuer was left of the common sort) Nabuzardan þe chyefe capitayne caried them to Babylon. But Nabuzardan the chyefe capytayne let the Iasat people, (and those that had nothyng) dwell still in the land of Iuda, and gaue them vineyardes and corne felde, at the same tyme. Nabuchodonosor also the kyng of Babylon, gaue Nabuzardan the chyefe capytayne a charge concerning Jeremey, sayinge: Take and cherishe hym, and make muche of hym: se thou do hym no harme, but entreat hym after hys own desire. So Nabuzardan the chyefe capytayne, Nabusathan the chyefe chamberlayne, Mergalsarez the treasurer, and all the kyng of Babylons Lordes, sente for Jeremey, and caused hym to be set out of the fore entree of the pryson, and committed hym vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan: that he shoulde carie hym home, and so he dwelt amonge the people.

Nowe whyle Jeremey laye yet bounde in the fore entree of the pryson, the worde of the Lorde came vnto hym, sayinge: Go and tell Abedmelech the Moorian: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuised for thys ctyte, wyll I bringe vpon them, that thou shalt se it, but I wyll deluyre the (sayeth the Lorde) and thou shalt not come in the handes of those men whom thou fearest. For doubtlesse I wyll saue the so that thou shalt not see the wyth the sword, but thy lyfe shall be saued, and that bycause thou hast put thy trust in me, sayeth the Lorde.

The.xl. Chapter.

Jeremy hath licence to go whither he will. He dwelleth with the people that remaineth at Jerusalem, ouer whome Godoliah ruleth. Johanan prophesieth death vnto Godoliah.

Jer. xl. a.
Josa. x. viii.

Thus is the maner how the Lord entreated Jeremy, when Nabuzardan the chiefe captayne had let hym go fre fro Ramah, whither he had led hym bounde among al the prysoners, that wer caried from Jerusalem and Juda vnto Babylon. The chiefe Capitaine called for Jeremy, & sayde vnto hym. The Lord thy God spake myghtely before of the mystry vnto this place. Now the Lord hath sent it, & performed it as he had promised, for ye haue spurned agaynst the Lord, and haue not ben obedient vnto his voice, therefore commeth this plage vpon you. Behold, I loose þe bondes from thy handes this daye: if thou wilt not go with me vnto Babylon, vnto the for I will se to the, and prouyde for the: But if þe wilt not go with me to Babylon, then remaine here. Behold, all the lande is at thy will, loke wher thou thinkest conueniente and good for the to abyde, there dwell. If thou canste not be content to dwell alone, the remaine with Godoliah the sonne of Abicam the sonne of Saphan: whome the kynge of Babylon hath made gouernoure ouer the citres of Juda, and dwell with hym among the people, or remaine where soeuer it please the. So the chiefe Capitaine gaue hym his expenses with a reward, and let him go. Then went Jeremy vnto Godoliah the sonne of Abicam to Gazpab, and dwelt ther with hym among þe people that were left in the land.

Now whē the Capitaines of the host of Juda (whych w their felowes wer scattered abrode on euery side in the lād) vnderstode þe kynge of Babilō had made Godoliah the sonne of Abicam gouernour in the lande, and that man, wyfe, & chyld, yea and the poore men in the lande (that were not led captiue to Babylon) holde be vnder his iurisdiction: They came to Godoliah vnto Gazpab. Namely Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah, Johanan, and Jonathan the sonnes of Careah, Sareah the sonne of Ebanhomer, & sonnes of Ophay the Netophathite, Jekaniah the sonne of Maachath with their companyons.

Mat. ix. xxi. c.

And Godoliah the sonne of Abicam, the sonne of Saphan swore vnto them and their felowes on this manner: Be not afrayed to serue the Chaldees, dwell in the lande, and doo the kynge of Babylon seruyce, so shall ye prospere. Behold, I dwell at Gazpab to be an officer in the Chaldees behalfe, and to satisfie suche as come to vs. Therefore gather you wyne, come and oyle, and kepe them in youre ware houses, and dwell in youre citres that ye haue in keepinge.

and in all the countreys, when they herd that the kynge of Babylon hadde made Godoliah the sonne of Abicam, the sonne of Saphan, gouernoure vpon them that were left in Juda: All the Jewes (I say) returned out of al places where they were fled vnto: and came into the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Gazpab, and gathered wyne and other frutes, and that verie muche. Moreover Johanan the son of Kareah and all the capitaynes of the hostes, that were scatted on euery syde in the lād, came to Godoliah in Gazpab, and said vnto hym: knowest thou not that Baalam kynge of the Ammonytes hath sente Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah to sle the? But Godoliah the sonne of Abicam beleued the not. The sayed Johanan the sonne of Kareah vnto Godoliah in Gazpab, these wordes secretly: let me go I praye the, & I will see Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, so that no bodye shal knowe it. Wherefore will he kyl the, that all the Jewes whych resort vnto the myght be scatted, and the remnant in Juda perishe? Then sayed Godoliah the sonne of Abicam to Johanan the sonne of Kareah: Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lyes, that men saye of Ismaell.

The.xli. Chapter.

Ismaell kylleth Godoliah gylefully, and many other with hym. Johanan followeth after Ismaell.

In the seventh moneth it happeneth that Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynge's bloud) came with them that was greatest about the kynge, and ten men that were sworn with hym vnto Godoliah the sonne of Abicam to Gazpab, & eat ther togyther. And Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah, with those .x. men þe were sworn to him, start vp and smot Godoliah the sonne of Abicam, the sonne of Saphan with the sword, and slew hym, whome the kynge of Babylon had made gouernoure of the land. Ismaell also slew al the Jewes þe were with Godoliah at Gazpab, and all the Caldees that he found there wayting vpon hym.

The next day after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknewen) there came certeine men from Sichem, from Sylo, and Samaria, to the number of fourescore, whych had shauen their beardes, rente their clothes, and were all heauy, brynginge meat offeringes, and incense in their handes, to offer it in the house of the Lord. And Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah wente forth of Gazpab wepyng to mete them. Now when he met them, he sayd: Go your way to Godoliah the sonne of Abicam. And when they came in the myddest of the cite, Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah (with them þe were sworn vnto hym) slew them euen at the myddest of the cite.

Among

Among these foure score men thet were ten that said vnto Ismael: O hea vs not for we haue yet a great treasure in þe speld of wheat, barley, oyle and honny. So he speered them, and slewe them not wth they brethren. Now the pit wher in Ismael did cast the dead bodyes of the men (whom he slewe because of Godoliah) had kynge Asa caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the kynge of Israell, and the same pyt dyd Ismael fyl wth clayne men. As for the remnant of the people, the kings daughters, & all the peoplet that were yet leste at Mazyphab, vpon whom Nabuzardan the chiefe Capytayne had made Godoliah the sonne of Abicā gouernour, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah carped them away prysoners towarde the Ammonites. But when Johanan the son of Careah and al they which had bene capytaynes ouer the kynges host wth hym, heard of al the wyckednes that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had done, they tooke they companyons and wente out for to fyght wth Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and found him by the waters of Rabim Babaon. Now when al the people whom Ismael led captiue saw Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the other capitaynes of the host, they wer glad. So al þe people that Ismael had carped away from Mazyphab wer brought agayne.

1. Re. xxx. d

When they returned, they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fled from Johanan with eight of hys sworne companiōs, & went to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the capitaynes of the host that were wth hym, tooke the remnaunte of the people, tohome Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah hadde led awaye (when he had slayne Godoliah the sonne of Abicā) whom they hadde also rescued from him: fyghting men, women and children, and gelded men, whom they broughte agayne from Babaon, and wente from thence, and late the dwyne at Beruth Carmaan, whych lyeth besyde Bethlehe, that they myght go into Egypt for feare of the Caldees: of whom they were afrayed, because that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliah Abikams sonne whom the kynge of Babilon had made gouernour in the land.

the prophet said vnto them: I haue heard you. Behold, I wyl pray vnto God your Lord, as ye haue requyred me: and looke what answer the Lord gyuerth you, I shal eertype you thereof, and keepe not bynge backe from you. And they sayde vnto Jeremyp: The Lord of truth and faithfulness be our record that we wyl doo al that the Lord thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euill. We wylarken vnto the voyce of our Lord God, to whome we send the, that we maye prosper, when we haue folowed þe voyce of the Lord our god.

And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremyp. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the Capytaynes of the people that wer wth him, yea and al the people from the least to the most, and said vnto them. Thus sayth the Lord god of Israell, vnto whom ye sent me to lay forth your prayers before hym. If ye wyl dwell in this land, I shal buyd you vp and not breake you down, I shal plant you, and not roote you out, for I am pacified as concernynge the trouble that I haue done to you. Feare not the kynge of Babylon, of whom ye stande in awe: he be not afrayed of hym sayeth the Lord, for I wyl be wth you to helpe you, and deliuer you from his hand. I wyl pardon you, I wyl haue mercy vpon you, and byng you agayne into your owne land.

Neuertheles, if ye purpose not to dwell in thys land, nor to folow the voyce of the Lord your God, but wyl say thus: we wyl not dwell here, but go into Egypte, where we shal neither see war, heare the noyse of battell, ne suffer hunger, ther wyl we dwell. Wherfore heare now the word of the Lord, O ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: If ye be holy purposed to go into Egypt, and to be ther as straungers, the sword that ye fear shal ouertake you in Egypt, and the hunger wherof ye be here afrayed, shal hange vpon you into Egypte, and there ye shall dye. For al they that of set purpose vnderake to go into Egypt, there to ease them selues of they mysery, shal perishe wth the swearde, wth hunger, and pestilence: not one of them shal remayne, there shall none escape the plage, that I wyl bynge vpon them.

For thus saith the Lord of hostes the god of Israell, lyke as my wrath and indignacion is come vpon the inhabitants of Ierusalem, so shal my displeasure go forth vpon you also, if ye go into Egypt: For there ye shall be reupled, abhorred, broughte to shame and confusio, and as for this place ye shal neuer se it more. The Lord fordydeth you, O ye remnaunt of Juda, that ye shal not go into Egypt.

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly thys day, els shal ye begyle your selues. For ye sent me vnto the Lord your God, and sayed: O praye thou the Lord our god for vs: and loke what answer the Lord our God geueth the, that bring vs agayne, and we shal doo thereafter. Nowe haue I shewed and declared vnto you the voyce of the Lord your God, for the which cause he hath set me to you. If ye wyl not folow it, be sure that ye shal peryshe wth the sword, wth hunger, and pestylence, euē in the same place, wher your lust was to go and dwell.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Johanan carryeth the remnaunte of the people into Egypt contrarye to the mynde of Jeremie. Jeremie prophesieth the destruction of Egypt.

Nowe when Jeremie had ended all his wordes of the Lord God vnto the people (for their sakes to whom god had sent him) Azariah the sonne of Oshab, and Johanan the sonne of Kareah, wth all the proude persons, sayed vnto Jeremie: Thou lyest, the Lord our God hath not sente the to speake vnto vs, that wee should not go into Egypt, and dwell ther. But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he myght bring vs into captiuitie of the Caldees, that they myght slep and carie vs away prysoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the Capitaynes of the hoste, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lord. Namely to dwell in the lande of Iuda. But Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the Capitaynes of the host, caried away all the remnaunte in Iuda, that were come togyther agayne from the Heathen, (among whom they had ben scattered) to dwell in the land of Iuda: Men, women, children, the wyues daughters: all those that Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne hadde left wth Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam. They caried away also the prophet Jeremie, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came into Egypt: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

And in Taphnis the word of the Lord happened vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Take great stones in thine hand, and hide them in the bricke wal, vnder the doore of Iharas house in Taphnis, that all the men of Iuda may see, and saye vnto the: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Behold, I wyl send and call for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruauit, and wyl set his seat vpon the stones that I haue hidde, and he shal spread his tente ouer them.

And when he cometh he shal smyte the land of Egypt wth slaughter, wth prisonment, and wth the sword. He shal sette vpon the temples of the Egyptians gods, and burne them vp, and take them selues prysoners. Moreover he shal aray himself wth the land of Egypte, lyke as a shepherd putteth on his cote, and shal departe his way from thence in peace. The pylers also of the temple of the sunne that is in Egypt, shal be breake in pieces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians gods.

The. xliiii. Chapter.

He repproueth the people for theyr idolatry. They that let lyghte by the threatenynge of the Lord are chastened. The destruction of Egypt and the Jewes therein, is prophesied.

This is the word that was shewed to Jeremie concerninge al the Jewes, which dwelt in Egypte, at Magdal, at Taphnis, at Memphis, and in the land of Satures. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: ye haue sene al the myserte that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem, and vpon al the cities of Iuda, so that this day they are desolate, and no man dwelling therein: and that because of the great blasphemies which they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger: In that they wente backe to do sacrifice and worshyppe vnto strange gods: whom neither they nor ye, nor your fathers haue knowen. How be it I sente vnto them my seruantes all the prophets: I rose vpearely, and sent vnto them, and gaue them warning: O doo no suche abhomyable thynges, and thynges that I hate. But they woulde not folowe ne harken, to tourne from theyr wickednesse, and to doo no more sacrifice vnto strange Gods.

Wherefore myne indignacion againste was kindled, and brent vp the cities of Iuda, the synners wth the stretes of Ierusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to pas this day. Now therefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: How happeneth it that ye do so great euill vnto your owne soules, thus to destroy the men and women, children and babes of Iuda: so that none of you is lefte, because ye prouoke me to wrath wth the workes of your own handes: when ye offer vnto strange gods in the land of Egypt, wher as ye beganne to dwell: That ye myght utterly peryshe, and that ye myght be reupled, and shamefully intreated of al nations. O haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednes of your fore fathers, the wickednes of the kinges of Iuda, and theyr wyues, the wickednes that ye your selues and your wyues haue done in the land of Iuda, in the city, and in the land of Ierusalem?

Yet are ye not sorry this day, ye fear not neyther walke ye in my law, and in my commaundementes that I haue geuen vnto you and your fore fathers.

Wherefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the god of Israel: I am stedfastly aduised and determined to punyssh you, and to rote out al Iuda. As for the remnaunt of Iuda that purposely went into Egypt, there to ease them of theyr misery, I wyl take the, and they shal al be destroyed. In the lande of Egypt shal they peryshe, beynge consumed wth the swerde and wth hunger. For from the least vnto the most they shal perishe.

lyke the floude, and casteth out the waters wyth so great noyse.

For they say: We wil go vp and wyl couer the earth: we wyl destroye the ctytes, wyth them that dwell therein. Set you to horsebacke, roule forth the charetes, come forth ye worthies, ye Morians, ye Libians wyth your buklers, ye Libeans with your bowes: So shal thys day be vnto the Lord God of hostes, a daye of vengeance, that he may auenge hym of hys enemyes. The sword shal deuour, it shalbe satisfied and bathed in theyr blud: (a) For the Lord god of hostes shal haue a slayne offeringe toward the North, by the water of Euphrates.

So vp (O Galaad) and brynge tripacle vnto the daughter of Egypte: But in vayne shalt thou go to surgerie, for thy wounde shal not be stopped: The heathen shal hear of thy shame, and the land shalbe ful of thy confusion: for one strong man shal stumbe vpon an other, how then shoulde they not fall both together. These are the wordes

D that the Lord spake to the Prophet Ieremy, concerning the host of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon, whych was sente to destroy the land of Egypt: Preach out vnto the land of Egypt, & cause it to be proclaimed at Magdol, Memphis and Taph-nis, and say: Stand styl, make the redy, for the sword shal consume the round about.
How happeneth it that thy myghty worthies are fallen? why stode they not faste?
Euen because the Lord thrust them down.
The slaughter was great, for one fell euer stil vpon an other. One cried vnto another:
Up, let vs go agayne to our owne people, and to our owne naturall countrey, from the sword of our enemye. Cry euen there: O Pharao kyng of Egypte, the tyme wyl brynge sedicion. As truly as I lyue (saith the kyng, whose name is the lord of hostes) it shal come as the mount of Thabor, and as Libanus, if it stode in the sea. O thou daughter of Egypt make redye thy geare to flyt. For Memphis shalbe voide and desolate, so that no man shal dwell therein. (b)

The land of Egypt is lyke a goodly fayre calfe, but one shal come out of the North to prick her forward. (c) Her waged soules diers that be wyth her, are like fat calves.

They also shal flye away togyther, and not abyde: for the daye of theyr slaughter and the tyme of theyr vyltacion shal come vpon them.

The crye of theyr enemyes shal make a noyse, as the blast of a trompet. For they shal enter in wyth theyr hoste, and come wyth axes, as it were hewers downe of wood. And they shal cut downe her wood, saith the Lord, wythout any dyscrecion.
For they shal be mo in number then the Greshoppers, so that no manne shal be able to tell them. The daughter of Egypt shal be confounded, when she shal be delyuered into the handes of the people of the North.

Moreouer thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyl vylt that restless people of Alexandria, Pharao and Egypt, yea both theyr gods and theyr kings: euen Pharao, and al them that put theyr trust in hym. Yea I wyl deliuer the into the hands of those that seke after theyr lyues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of hys seruautes. And after al these thynges it shalbe inhabited as afore tyme, saith the Lord.

But be not thou afrayed (O my seruaunt Jacob) feare not thou, O Israel. For loo, I wyl helpe the from far, and thy sede frō the land of thy captiuitie: Jacob also shal come agayne, and be in rest: he shalbe rich, and no man shal do him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaunt) saith the lord, for I am wyth the: and wyl destroy al na-cions, amonges whome I haue scattered the. Reuertebes I wyl not consume the, but chasten the and correct the: yea & that wyth dyscrecion: neither wyl I spare the as one that were fauteles.

The Notes of the xlvi. Chapter.

(a) The Chaldees kyled the Egyptians, at the floude of Euphrates, whych was towarde the North: wher as yet theyr hoste was wonderous great, and theyr horses and charetes many.
But the greater theyr host was, the more cruell was theyr slaughter, so dyd the Lord punyssh theyr wyckednes, geuinge them into the handes of the Caldees: and therefore called the Pro-phete the daye of theyr slaughter the daye of the Lords vengeance, and them a slayne offering of the Lord.

(b) As though he sayd: Wyther to (O Egypt)

ed forward wyth goades (or as some call them wyth gaddes) so shal the Babylonians, stynge

The. xlviii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Philistines.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophete agaynst the Philistines, before that Ibarao smote the city of Azah. Thus saith the Lorde: Beholde, ther shall water growe out of the North, and shall growe to a greete floude, runnyng ouer, and couerynge the lande, the cities, and them that dwell therein.

And the men shall crye, and all they that dwell in the lande shall mourne at y<sup>e</sup> noyse and stamping of theyr strong barbed horses, at the shaking of their charrets, and at the rombling of the wheles. The fathers shall not looke to theyr children, so feable & weep shall theyr bads be. At the same time when he shall be ther, to destroy the whole lād of the Philistines, he shall make waste both Tyrys, Sydon and al other that are sworne vnto them.

For the Lorde will destroy al Palestina, and the other Iles, that he deuoyded from the countrey. Baldnesse is come vpon Azah, Ascalon wyth her other valleyes shall keepe her peace.

How long wilt thou stai, O thou sword of the Lorde? Turne againe into thy sheath, ceast and leaue of. But howe can it ceaste, when the Lorde hym selfe hath geuen hym a charge agaynst Ascalon, and raysed it vp agaynst the cities of the sea coast?

The. xlviii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Moabites.

Thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel agaynst Moab: wo be to the city of Rabb, for it shall be laid waste, brought to confusion, and taken. Yea the strong city of Cariathiarim shall be brought to shame and afayed: Moab shall no more be had in honoure: Wrecked counceyl shall be taken vpon Hesbon. Come (shall they say) let vs roote them oute, that they may be no more among the number of the Gentyls, yea that they make no more be thought vpon: Thus the swerde shall persecute the. A voyce shall crye from Horonaim: With great wasting and destruction is Moab made desolate.

And this crye shall be herd in all her cityes. At the goynge vp into Iudith ther shall arylse a lamentacion: and downe towarde Horonaim, ther shall be herd a euell and a deadly crye: Get you away, saue your lyues, and be lyke vnto the heath in the wil-dernesse. For because thou hast trusted in thy strong holdes and treasure, thou shalt be taken. * Chamos wyth his pyrites and pyrites shall go away into captiuitie.

The destroyer shall come vpon al the cityes, none shall escape. The valleyes shall be destroyed, and the fields shall be laid waste lyke as the Lorde hath determynd.

* Make a rokē vnto Moab, that she get her away speedely: for her cityes shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therein. (a) Cursed be he that doth y<sup>e</sup> worke of the Lorde negligently, and cursed be he that keepeth backe his swerde from shedding of bloud.

Moab hath bene cūe ryche and careless from her yowth vp, she hath sytten and take her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessel into another (that is) she neuer wēt away into captiuitie, therfore her taste remayneth, & her sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme cometh sayth the lord, that I shall sende her trussers to trusse her vp, to prepare and season her vessels: yea her tankards rattell and shake to and fro. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethell, wherin she put her trust.

Wherfore do ye thynke thus: we are mighty, and strong men of war: Moab shall be destroyed, and her cities brente vpe: her chosen young men shall be slaine, sayeth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The destruction of Moab cometh on a pace, and her fall is at hand.

Al her neyghbours shall mourne for her, and al they that know her name, shall say: O how happeneth it that the strong staffe and the goodly rodde is thus broken? And thou daughter Dibon, come downe from thy glory and syt in pouertie. For he that destroyed Moab, shall come vp to the also, and breake downe thy strong holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get thee to a strete and looke about the: aske them that are fled and escaped, and saye: what thyng is happened? Oh, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and cry, tel it oute at Arnon, y<sup>e</sup> Moab is destroyed. And misery shall come vpon the plaine land: namely, vpon Holo, and Jahazab: vpon Gephath and Dibon, vpon Rabb and the house of Deblathaim, vpon Cariathiarim and Bethgamul, vpon Bethmaon and Carior, vpon Bozrah and al the cities in the land of Moab, wherher they lye far or nere.

The horn of Moab shall be smitten downe, and her arme broke, saith the Lorde. Make her drunken, for she magnified her selfe: as boue the Lorde, that men may clap their handes at her vomit, and that she also may be laughed to scorn. O Israel, halt thou not laughe hym to scorn, when he is taken among rebues: Yea because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynst hym, thou shalt shall be dyuen away. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cities, & dwell in rockes of stone, and become lyke doues, that make theyr nestes in holes.

As for Moabs pryde, we haue heard of it, he is very hyghly mynded, I knowe her stoutnes, her boastyng, her arrogancye, and the pryde of her stomacke, sayth the Lord. For her furtoufnes may neyther vpholde her wylth strength ne dede. Therefore shall there mourninge be made for Moab, and euery man shall crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacion shall be made to the mēne that stand vpon the wal: So wil I mourne for the also, O Hazer, and for the, O thou vine parde of Sabamah. The wyne branches shall come ouer the sea, and the branches of Hazer but vnto the sea: the destroyer shall breake into thy baruest and grape gathering: Myt and chere shall be taken away from the tymbre spelde, and from the whole lande of Moab. There shall be no swete wyne in the presse, the reeder shall haue no stomacke to crye, yea there shall be none to cry vnto hym: whyche afore tyme were hearde from Hesbon to Eleale and Abaz, whychlyfted vp theyr voyce from zoar vnto Horonaim, that Bullocke of thre yere old. The waters also of Aemrim shall be dyed vp.

Moreover I wil make Moab cease (sayth the Lord) from the offerings & censing that she hath made vnto her gods in hygh places. Wherefore my heart mourneth for Moab, like a croude playing an heuy sōg: and for the mēns sake of the byrke wal my hearte mourneth also, even as a pype that pypeth a doleful song: for they shall be very fewe, and destroyed. Al heades shall be shauen, and al berdes clipped of: al hands bound, and al loynes gyrded aboute wylth sackcloth. Upon all the house toppes, and streetes of Moab, there shall be mourning: For I wyl breake Moab lyke an vnprofitable vessel sayth the Lord. O how fearful is she? O how mourneth she? O how doth Moab hang down her heade, and is ashamed? Thus shall Moab be a laughing stocke, and had in derision of al them, that be rold about her. For thus saith the Lord: Behold, the enemy shall come flying as an eagle, and spread his wynges vpo Moab. They shall clyme ouer the wals, and wylth the strong holdes. When the myghty mēns bettes in Moab shall be lyke the harte of a woman trauayling wylth chylde.

And Moab shall be made so desolate that she shall no more be a people, because she hath sette vp her selfe agaynst the Lord. Fear, ytt, and snare shall come vpon the (O Moab) sayth the Lord. Who so escapeth the feare, shall fall in the pytte: and who so getteth out of the pytt, shall be taken in the snare. For I wyl byng a yere of vspiration vpon Moab, sayth the Lord. They that are able to flye, shall stande vnder the shadow of Hesbon. For they shall go a spie out of Hesbon, and a flame from Sid, and shall burne vpon that proud people of Moab, both before and behynde.

Who be vnto the (O Moab,) for thou people of Chamos shalt perishe: Yea thy sones and doughters shall be led away captiue. Yet at the last wyl I byng Moab oute of captiuitie agayne, sayth the Lord. Thus far of the plage of Moab.

The Notes of the. xlviii. Chapter.

(a) The Hebrewes expound thys of the Chaldees, that they should haue to destroy the whole kyngdome of the Moabites: as though the text should meane thus muche: Cursed be he that negligently perfourmeth the vengeance of the Lord, that spareth these most wyched Moabites, and that withholdeth his sword from the bynge of theyr bloude.

The. xlix. Chapter.

The worde of the Lord agaynst the Ammonites, agaynst Idumea, Damascus, Cedar and Elam.

As concerning the Ammonites, thus saith the Lord: Hath Israel no child? or is he without an heyr? Why hath your kyng then taken Gad in? wherefore doth his people dwell in his cities? Behold therefore, the tyme cometh (saith the Lord) that I wyl bynge a noyse of warre into Rabath of the Ammonites. Raabel shall be desolate, and her cyties brente vp: and the Israelites shall be Lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, sayth the Lord. Hesbon shall mourne, for it shall be rooted out of the ground sayth the Lord. The cities of Rabab shall crye oute, and gyrd them selues wylth sackcloth: they shall mourne, and run about the wals: for theyr kyng shall be led away prisoner: yea his priestes and prynces wylth hym.

Wherefore trustest thou in the water streames that flowe to and fro, O thou scarce doughter: and thynekst thou art so safe (by reason of thy treasure) that no mā shall come to the.

Behold, I wyl byng a feare vpon the, sayth the Lord God of hosts, from al those that be about the: so that ye shall be scattered euery man from an other, and no man shall gather them together agayne that be fled. But after that, I wyl byng the Ammonites also out of captiuitie agayne.

Upon the Edomites hath the Lord of Hostes spoken on thys maner: Is there no more wysedome in a man? Is there no more good counsell among his people? Is theyr wysedome then turned cleane to nought? Gette you hence, tourne youre backs, creepe downe into the deepe, O ye cytyzens of Dedan. For I wyl byng destruction vpon Esau, yea and the daye of his vspiration. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, should they not leaue some grapes? If the nyght robbers came vpon the, should they not take so muche as they thought wer ynough.

For thus hath the Lord spoken: Beholde, they that men thoughte were unmeete to drynke of the cup, haue dronken wyth the spelt: and thynkest thou then to be free?

11. No no: thou shalt neyther be quyte, nor free, but thou muste drinke also: for why, I haue sworne by my self (sayth the Lord) that Bozrah shal become a wilderness, an open shame, a laughing stock and curling:
and her cyties shalbe a continual desert.

For I am perfectly informed of the Lord that he hath sent a message already vnto the Heathen. Gather you together, and go forth agaynst them: make you ready to the battayle: for lo, I will make the but smal among the Heathen, and little regarded among men.

be a wyldernes: who so goeth by it, shalbe abashed, and wonder at all her plazes.

Gene. xix. c.

Therefore hear the counsel of the Lorde, that he hath taken vpon Idumea, and his purpose that he hath deuised vpon the cytizens of Theman: The leaste of the flocke shall teare the in pces, and looke what fayre thyng they haue, they shall make it waste, and them selues also. At the noise of their fall, the earthe shall quake, the crye of theyr voice shall be herd vnto the read sea.
Behold, the enemye shall come and flye vp hyther, lyke as it were an Eagle, and spred hys wyngs vpon Bozrath. Then shall the hertes of the worthyes in Edom be as the hert of a woman trauayling of child. Vnto Damascus, Heralah and Arphad shall come confusion, for they shall hear euill tydings:
they shall be tossed to and fro, lyke the sea that can not stand still. Damascus shall be fore a strayed, and shall flye, tremblyng shall come vpon her. Sorow and payne shall o-uertake her as a womā traveling of child But how should so worshipful and glorious a city be forsaken? Heare therefore:

Her yong men shal sal in the streets, and al her men of war shalbe taken away in that tyme, saith the Lord of hosts. I wil kindle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, whyped shal consume the palace of Benhadad.

As for Cedar, and the kingdome of Ba-391, whom Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon smote down, the Lord hath spoken thus vpon them: Arysle and get you by vnto Cedar, and destroy y<sup>e</sup> people toward the East. They: tentes and they: flockes that they take awaye, yea they: hangings and they: vessel. They: Camels also shall they carge awaye wyth them. They shall come aboute them ouer euerye syde wyth a fearefull crye.

flie, get you soone away, crepe into ca-ues, that ye maye dwell there, & ye inha-bytauntes of Babilon sayeth the Lorde: for Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babilon hath holden a counsell concernynge you, and concluded bys deuyce agaynst you. Aryse, and get you vp agaynst yonder ryche and careles people (saith the Lord) which haue neyther gates nor doore barres, and that dwell not togyther. Theyr Camelles shalbe stollen, and the droues of theyr cat-tyle dzyuen away.

Moreover, these that be shaven wyllye scatter toward al the wyndes, and bynge them to destruccion: yea and that thorow theyr owne famliers, sayth the Lord. Ba-302 also shalbe a dwellinge for Dragons, and an euerlastyng wyldernes: so that no body shal dwel ther, and no man shal haue ther his habytacion.

These are the words, that the Lord spake to the prophet Jeremie concerning Elam, in the beginning of the reigne of Sedechie as king of Iuda. Thus saith the Lord of hostes: Behold, I will breake the bowe of Elam, and take away their strength, & upon Elam, I will bring the. iiii. windes from the four quarters of heauen, and will scatter them agaynst the same four wyndes. And ther shall be no people, but some of Elam shall aye vnto them.

For I wyl cause Elam to be asraped of theyr ennemyes, and of the that seke their lyues: and wyl bynge vppon theym the indygnacyon of my wrathe, sayeth the Lorde. And I wyl persecute them wyth the swearde so longe tyl I haue broughte them to noughte, I wyl fet (c) my stoole in Elam, I wyl destrope bothe the kynge and the Prynces from thence sayeth the Lorde. But in processe of time, I wil bring Elam oute of captuytye agayne, sayeth the Lorde.

Yea the gods shall be brought to shame, and the images shall stand in feare. For out of the North shall come a people agaynst her, which shall make her land so waste, that nobody shall dwell therein, neither man nor beaste, for they shall flye and departe from thence.

(a) In those dayes and at that time saith the Lord, the children of Israel shall come, they & the children of Iuda, weeping and making hast, and shall seeke the Lord their God. They shall aske the way to Sion, thither shall they turne their faces, and come and hange vpon the, in a couenaunt that neuer shall be broken.

My people hath bene a losse flocke, my shepheardes haue deceyued them, & haue made them go astray vpon the hylls. They haue gone from the mountaine to the lyt-

All they that came vnto the, haue deuoured them: & their ennemys sayed: We haue made no faulte agaynst them, for they haue displeased the Lord, yea even the Lord whiche is the beuty of their ryghteousnes, and that defiled their fathers. Yet shall ye fly from Babylon, and departe out of the lande of the Caldees, and ye shall be as the rammes that goo before the flocke. For loo, I will wake vp an host of people from the Northren land, and bring them vpon Babilon: these shall lay siege to it, and win it: Their arrows shall not misse, lyke as a cunning archer shooteth not wrong. And the Caldees shall be spoiled, and all they that spoile them, shall be satisfied sayeth the Lord: because ye were so chearful and glad to tread downe myne heritage, and fulfilled your pleasures, as the calves in the grasse: and triumphed ouer them lyke the buls, when ye had gotten the victory. Your mothers shall be sore confounded, and they that bare you, shall come to shame. She shall be the least set by among the nations, void, wast and dried vp. No man shall be able to dwell ther, for the feare of the Lord, but he shall be whole desolate. All they that go by Babylon, shall stand still, and be abashed, and shall wonder at their plagues.

Yea vengeance shall be taken of her, and as she hath done, so shall she be dealt with: all they shall roote out the sower from Babylon, and hym that handleth the spade in her nest. For feare of the sword of the enemy, euery man shall get hym to his owne people, and euery man shall flye to his owne land. Israel is a scattered flocke, the lions haue disperced them. These thynges shall come vpon her at the laste, they shall breake into her pryue chambers, they shall leaue her as bare as stones, that be layed together vpon heapes. They shall so destroye her, that nothinge shall be left.

They shall slaye all their myghtye soldiers, and put them to deathe. Mo be vnto them, for the day and tyme of their visitacion is at hand. We thinke I heare already a cry, of them that be fled and escaped out of the land of Babylon, whiche shewe in syon the vengeance of his temple: yea a voyce of them that cry agaynst Ba-

Babylon: Cal vpon al the archers against Babylon, pytch your tentes round about her, that none escape. Recompence her, as she hath deserued: and accordynge as she hath done, so deale wth her agayne: for she hath set vp her selfe agaynst the Lord, agaynst the holpe one of Israel. Therefore shall her yong men fall downe in the streets, and al her men of war shall be rooted oute in that day saith the Lord. Behold I speake vnto the (O thou proude) sayth the Lord God of hosts: for thy day shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proude shall stoble and fall, & no man shall helpe hym vp, I wyl burne vp bys ctyt w fyre, and it shall consume al that is round about hym.

Thus sayth the Lord of hosts: The children of Israel and Iuda suffer violence together. All they that haue them in captiuitie, kepe them fast, and wyl not let the go: but they: auenger & redemer is myghty, whose name is the Lord of hostes: he shall mayntayne theyr cause, he shall make the land shake, and iudge them that dwel therein one with an other. The sword shall com vpon the Caldees, sayth the Lord, vpon them that dwel in Babylon, vpon theyr princes, and vpon theyr wyse menne: the sword vpon theyr Southsayers: as for those, they shall become fooles. The sword vpon theyr worthyes so that they shall stand in feare: The sword vpon theyr horsemen and charets and vpon al the comen people that dwel vnder them: so that they shall al become lyke womē: the sword vpon theyr treasure, so that it shall be stolen away. The sword vpon theyr waters so that they shall be dryed vp: For the land worshypeth Images and belyteth in straunge wonderfull thynges. Therefore shall wyld beasts, Apes, and Estriches dwel therein: for ther shall neuer man dwel ther, neyther shall any man haue bys habitation there for euermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah with the ctytes that laye there aboute, sayeth the Lord: So shall no manne dwel there also: neyther shall any manne haue ther bys habitation. Beholde, there shall come a people from the North, wth a greate bond of mē, & many kyngs shall stand by the endes of the earth: They beare bowes and bucklers, cruel are they and vmercyful.

Theyr voyce roareth lyke the raging sea, theyr ryde vpon horses, and come weaponed to fyght agaynst thee, O Babylon. As soone as the kyng of Babylon heareth tel of them, bys handes shall waxe feble. Sorow, and heynes shall come vpon hym as a woman trauailing wth chyld. Behold lyke as the Lyon cometh vp from the pleasaunte medowes of Jordan vnto the greene pastures of Eban, so wyl I dryue them forth, and make them runne agaynst her. But whome shall I abuse out and ordayne to suche a thyng? For who is lyke me, or who wyl stryue wth me: or what shepheard may stand agaynst me? Therefore heare the counsel that the Lord hath geuen vpon Babylon, and the deuice that he hath taken vpon the lande of the Caldees. The least among the people shall teare them in peces, and looke what pleasure they haue: they shall laye it waste. The noyse at the wyntynge of Babylon shall moue the earth, and the cry shall be heard among the Gentyls.

The .ii. Chapter.

How Babylon should be ouerthrowen. Jeremy geueth bys booke to Bariah.

Thus hath the Lord sayed: beholde I wyl raise vp a perillous wynd against Babylon and her citizens that beate euyl wyl agaynst me. I wyl send also into Babylon, sanners, to (a) fanne her oute and to destroy her lande: for in the daye of her trouble they shall be about her on euery syde: Moreover the Lord hath sayd vnto the bowemen, and to them that clyme ouer the wals in breast plates: Ye shall not spare her yonge men: kyll downe all her host. Thus the sayne shall fall downe in the lande of the Caldees, and the wounded in the streetes. As for Israel and Iuda, they shall not be forsaken of theyr God, of the Lord of Hostes, of the holpe one of Israel: no though they haue fylled all theyr lande ful of synne. Flye away from Babylon, euery man saue bys lyfe. Let no man holde bys tounge to her wickednes, for the tyme of the Lordes vengeance is come, yea he shall rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hande a golden cuppe: that maketh all landes drunken: O her wyne haue all people drunken, therefore are they out of theyr wyttres. But sodainlye is Babylon fallen & destroyed. Mourn for her, bynge playsters for her woundes, if she may peradventure be healed again. We woulde haue made Babylon whole (say they) but she is not recovered. Therefore wyl we lette her alone, and go euery manne into bys owne countrey. For her iudgemente is come into heauen, and is gone vp to the clouds. And therefore come on, we wyl shewe Syon the woorkes of the Lord our God.

Make sharpe the arrows, and fyl f quiers: for the Lord shall rayse vp the spirite of the kyng of the Medes, whych hath already a desyre to destroy Babylon. This shall be the vengeance of the Lord, and the vengeance of bys temple.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon, make your watch strong, set your watchmen in a rape, yea holde pryue watches: and yet for al that shall the Lord goe forth wth the drupe whych he hath

O thou that dwellest by the great waters, O thou that hast so great treasure & riches, thyne ende is come: and the reke-ning of thy winnings. The Lord of hostes hath sworn by hym selfe, that he wil ouerwhelme the wyth men lyke greshoppers in number, wyth wyth a courage shall cry, Alarum Alarum agaynst the. Yea eue the Lord of hostes, that wyth hys power made the earth, wyth hys wysedome prepared the round world, and wyth hys dy-crescion sprede oute the heauens. As soone as he letteth hys voyce be heard the waters in the ayre ware feare: He draweth vp the cloudes from the endes of the earth. He turneth the lightnyngs to rain, he byngeth the wyndes oute of theyr secrete places. By the reason of wysdom al men are become fooles. Confounded be al the casters of ymages: For the thyng that they make, is but dysceate, and hath no breathe: Wayne is it, and worthy to be laughed at: and in the tyme of vpsitacion, it shall peryshe.

Reuerthelesse the porcyon of Jacob is none suche: but he that made all, whose name is the Lord of hostes, is the rodde of his inheritaunce. Thou breakest my weapons of war, and yet thowme the I haue scattered the nacjons and kyngdomes. Thowme the I haue scattered horse and horsemen, yea the charretes, and suche as fate vpon them: Thowme the I haue scattered man and woman, old and yonge, bachelor and mayden.

Thowme the I haue scattered the shep-herd, and his flocke, the husband man, and hys cattell, the prynces and the rulers. Therefore wyl I reward the city of Babylon, and al her cytezens the Caldees, wyth all the euill whiche they haue done vnto Syon: yea, that ye your selues shall see it, sayth the Lord. Behold, I come vpon the, thou nopsome (b) hyll, sayeth the Lord: thou that destroyest all landes, I wyl stretch out my hand ouer the, and cast the downe from the stoupe rockes: and wyl make the a bzent hyll, so that neyther cor-ner stones, nor pynnacles, nor foundation stones shall be taken any more oute of thee, but waste and desolate shalt thou lye for euermore, sayth the Lord.

Set vp a token in the lande, blowe the trumpets amonge the Heathen, prouoke the nacjons agaynst her: call the kyngdomes of Ararat, Menni, and Ascanes agaynst her: number out Taphsar agaynst her: bynge as greates a sorte of horses agaynst her, as if they were greshoppers. Prepare agaynst them the people of the Medes, wyth theyr kyngs, prynces, and all theyr chiefe rulers, yea and the whole land that is vnder them.

The land also shall shake and be afrayed when the deuyce of the Lord shall come forth agaynst Babylon, to make the lande of Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell any more therein. The worthies of Babilon shall leaue the battayle, and keepe them selues in strong holds, their strength hath fayled them, they shall be like womē. Their dwelling places shall be brente vp, theyr bars shall be broken. One pursuauant shall mete an other, yea one post shall come by a nother to byng the kyng of Babylon tydings that his city is taken on euery side, the fordes occupied, the tents bzent vp, and the souldiers sore afrayed.

For thus sayth the Lord of Hostes the God of Israell: the daughter of Babylon hath bene in her tyme lyke as a threshyng floore, but shortly shall her harvest come. Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an empti vessel, he swallowed me by lyke a draggon, and fylled hys bellye wyth my delycates: he hath cast me oute, he hath taken my substance awaye, and the thyng that was left me, hath he caried vnto Babylon sayeth the daughter that dwelleth in Syon: yea and my bloude also vnto the Caldees, saith Jerusalem. Therefore thus sayth the Lord: Behold I wil defend thy cause, & auenge the: I wil drinke by her sea, and dry vp her water sprynges.

Babilon shall become an heape of stones, a dwelling place for dragons, a feareful-nes and wondryng, because no man dwelleth ther. They shall rore togyther lyke lions, and as the yong Lyons when they be angry, so shall they bynde them selues. In theyr heate I shall set drynke before them, and they shall be drunken for ioy: They shall slepe an euerlastyng sleepe, and neuer wake, sayth the Lord. I shall carpe them downe to be slayne lyke sheepe, lyke weathers and goates.

O how was Sefach won? O how was the glory of the whole land taken? Howe happeneth it that Babilon is so wondred at amonge the Heathen? The sea is ryfen ouer Babylon, and hath couered her with hys greates waues. Her cytyes are layed waste, the land lyeth vnbuylded and void: it is a lande where no man dwelleth, and wher no man traauyleth thowme. More ouer I wyl bysyt Bel at Babilon: and the thyng that he hath swallowed vp, I same shall I pluck out of hys mouth. The getils also shall run no more vnto hym: yea and the wals of Babylon shall fall.

O my people, come out of Babilon, that euerye man maye saue hys lyfe, from the feareful wrathe of the Lord. Be not faine herred, and fear not at euery rumour that shall be heard in the land: for euerye yere byngeth new tydings, yea strange wickednes and lordshyppe. And loo, the tyme cometh that I wyl bysyt the Images of Babylon, and the whole lande shall be confounded, yea and her slayne shall lye in the myddest of her. Heauē and earth with al that is therein, shall reioyse ouer Babilon when

Though Babylon climed vp into heauen and kepte her power on hye, yet shall I send her destroyers sayth the Lord.

Jer. xlix. b

A pyteous crye shall be heard from Babylon, and greate miserie from the lande of the Caldees: when the Lord destroyeth them, and when he drineth out the hie stomacke and proude boastynge, whetewyth they haue bene as furpous as the waues of greate water floudes, and made greate crakes with theyr wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her, (euen vpon Babylon) whych shall take her worthyes, and breake theyr (c) bowes: for God is dysposed to auenge hym selfe vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them. Yea (sayeth the Lord) I wil make theyr princes, their wyse men, theyr chiefe rulers, and al their worthyes, dronken: so that they shall slepe an euerlastynge sleepe, and neuer wake: Thus sayeth the kyng whose name is the Lord of hostes.

This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiab the sonne of Neriah, the son of Maasiah, when he went toward Babylon wyth Sedechias the kyng of Iuda, in the fourth yere of hys raigne. Now this Saraiab was a peaceable prince. Jeremy wrot in a booke al the miserie that should come vpon Babylon, yea and al these sermons that be wyrtten agaynst Babylon, and gaue Saraiab this charge: When thou comest vnto Babylon, se that thou rede al these wordes and say: O Lord thou art determined to roote out this place, so that neyther people nor cattel shall dwel ther a tyme more, but to lie waste for euer: and when thou hast red out the booke, hynde a stone to it, & cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and say: Euen thus shall Babylon synke, & be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble that I wil brynge vpon her: so that she shall neuer come vp agayne. Thus far are the preachynge of Jeremy.

The Caldees also brake the brasen pyl- lers that were in the house of the Lord, yea the seate and the brasen Lauer that was in the house of the Lord: and carped al the metal of them vnto Babylon.

They tooke away also the Cauldrons Shouls, flesh hookes, sprinklers, Spoues and al the brasen vessel that was occupied in the seruyce: with the basens, colepans, sprinklers, portes, candelstyckes, spoues, and cuppes: whereof some were of gold, and some of syluer.

But the poore people of the countrey dyd Nabuzardan the chiefe Capytayne leaue in the land to occupy the vyneyards and felde.

The Caldees also brake the brasen pyl- lers that were in the house of the Lord, yea the seate and the brasen Lauer that was in the house of the Lord: and carped al the metal of them vnto Babylon.

They tooke away also the Cauldrons Shouls, flesh hookes, sprinklers, Spoues and al the brasen vessel that was occupied in the seruyce: with the basens, colepans, sprinklers, portes, candelstyckes, spoues, and cuppes: whereof some were of gold, and some of syluer.

The chiefe Capytayne toke also the two pyl- lers, the lauer, the twelue brasen bul- lockes that stode vnder the seate, whiche kynge Salomon made in the house of the Lord: and al the vessel conteyned so muche metal that it might not be weied. For eue- ry pyl- lers was eynghen cubites hie, and a rope that went aboute it, was twelue cu- bites, and foure syngers thicke and round: Now vpon the rope were brasen knops, and euery knop was .v. cubytes hie: and vpon the knops were hopes and pomgranates round about of clene bras.

After this maner were both the pyl- lers facioned with the pomgranates, wherof ther were an hundred, foure scoze and syx- tene, which hanged vpon the hoopes round about. The chiefe Capytayne also tooke Saraiab the hie pyeste, and Sophoniah that was chiefe next him, and the thre ke- pers of the treasury. He tooke out of the ci- ty a chamberlayne whiche was a captain of the souldiers, and seuen men that were the kyngs seruants, which were found in the city: and Saphera a capytaine that vsed to master the men of war: with .lx. men of the countrey that were taken in the ctye. These Nabuzardan the chiefe Capytayne tooke and caried them to the kynge of Ba- bylon vnto Beblach: and the kynge of Ba- bylon caused them to be put to deathe at Beblach in the land of Demath. And thus Iuda was led away captiue oute of hys own lande. This is the sum of the people, whiche Nabuchodonozor led away captiue.

In the .vii. yere of hys raigne, he caried awaye of the Jewes, .iii. M. and .xxiii. In the .xviii. yere Nabuchodonozor carped awaye from Ierusalem .viii. C. and two and thyrty persons. In the thre and twen- ty yere of Nabuchodonozor, Nabuzar- dan the chiefe Capytayne toke awaye seuen hundred and .xlv. Jewes prisoners. The whole sum of al the prisoners, is .iiii. thou- sand and syxe hundred.

In the .xxxvii. yere after that Ioaquin the kynge of Iuda was carped awaye, in the .xv. day of the .xii. moneth, Evilme- rouch king of Babylon (the same yere that he raygned) gaue Ioaquin the king of Iu- da his pardon, and let hym out of prysen, & spake lounge to hym, & set his throne aboute the thrones of the other kings that were with hym in Babylon. He chaunged also the clothes of hys prysen, yea he eate with hym al hys lyfe longe. And he had a continuall luyng geuen hym of the kynge of Babylon, euery daye a certayne thyng allowed hym al the dayes of hys lyfe vntill he dyed.

The Lamentacions of Ieremy.

It happened after Irael was brought into captiuitie, and Ierusalem destroy- ed, that Ieremy the Prophete sate weep- yng and sorrowfully bewayled Ierusalem: and syghynge and howling with an heuy and woful hert, sayde:

The fyrste Chapter. Aleph.

As, how sitteth the city I so desolate, that sometime it was ful of people? How is she become lyke a wy- dow, which was a ladye of al nacions? How is she brought vnder tribute & ruled al landes.

Beth

She wepeth sore in the nyght, so that her teares run downe her cheekes: for among al her louers, ther is none that geueth her any comfort: yea her next frendes abhorre her, and are become her enemyes.

Simel.

Iuda is taken prisoner, because she was defiled: and for seruynge so manye straunge gods, she dwelleth now among heathen. She synneth no rest, al they that persecu- ted her, tooke her, and so she dwelleth among her enemyes.

Dalath

The stretes of Sion mourne because no man cometh any more to her solenne feasts. Al her gates are desolate, her pyl- lers make lamentaciō, her maidens are careful, & she her selfe is in great heuines.

He.

Her enemyes are fallen vpon her heade, and haue put her to shame: because the Lord hath chastened her for her greates wycked- nes: her children are led away captiue be fore they enemy.

Vau.

Al the beute of the daughter Syon is away, her prynces are become lyke weas- thers that synne no pasture. They are dy- uen away before they enemy: so that they haue no more power.

tyme of her mysery and disobedyence, peathe top and pleasure that she hath had in tymes past: sepage her people is brought downe thowhe the power of theyr enne-mye; and ther is no man for to helpe her: her ennemyes stande lokynge at her, and laugh her Saborh dayes to scoyne.

Beth.

Jerusalem synned euer moze and moze, therfore is she come in decap. Al they that had her in honoure, despyse her: for they haue sene her fylthynesse. Yea she spgbe-th and is ashamed of her selfe.

Teth.

Her skpytes are despyled, she remembred not what wolde folow: therfore is her fall so great, & ther is no man to comfort her.
O Lord consyder my trouble, for myne ennemye hath the vpper hand.

Jod.

The ennemye hath put hys hand to all the precyous thynges that she had, peae-uen before her eyes came the Deachen in, & out of the Sanctuarpe, whom thou (ne-uerthelesse) haste forbydden to come wyth in thy congregacion.

Laph.

Al her people seke theyr bread with be-uynesse, and loke what precyous thyng euery man hath, that geueth he for meat to saue hys lyfe. Consyder, O Lord, and se, how vyle I am become.

Lamed.

O ye all that go fore by, beholde and se, if ther be any sorow like vnto myne, wher wyth the Lorde hath troubled me in the daye of hys feareful wraethe?

Mem.

From aboue hath he sent downe a fyre into my bones and chastened me: he hath layde a net for my fere, and throwen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must cuer be mounyng.

Nun.

The poke of my transgression is come at the last, whys hand hath he taken it by and put it about my necke. My strength is gone: the Lord hath delpyered me into those handes, from wythch I cannot quyte my selfe.

Samech.

The Lord hath destroyed all the mygbty men that were in me. He hath proclay-med a feaste, to slaughtre al my best men.
The Lord hath troden downe the dought-ter of Iuda, lyke as it were a wine presse.

Ein.

Therefore do I wepe, and myne eyes gush out water: for the comforter that should quicken me, is far from me. My chy-dren are dyspyd away, for why? the enemy hath gotten the ouer hand.

She.

Syon casteth oute her handes, and ther is no man to comfort her. The Lord hath laid the ennemyes rounde aboute Iacob and Jerusalem is as it were a menstru-ous woman in the myddest of them.

zade.

The Lord is ryghteous, for I haue prouoked hys * countenance vnto anger. O take hede all ye people, & consyde my be-uynesse: My maydens and my yonge meare led away into captuytpe.

Koph.

I called for my louers, but they begg-led me: for my pryestes & counsellers, but they perished: euen while they sought for meat to saue theyr lyues.

Res.

Consyde (O Lorde) howe I am troubled, my wombe is disquetered, my herte turneth aboute in me, and I am full of be-uynesse. The sword butteth me wythoute, and wythin I am lyke vnto death.

Shin.

They heare my mounyng, but ther is none that wyll comforte me. All myne ennemyes haue herd of my trouble, and are glad therof, because thou haste done it.
But thou shalt byng for the tyme, when they also shalbe lyke vnto me.

Thau.

From the shall come al theyre aduersitye, thou shalt plucke the awaye, euen as thou haste plucked me bycause of all my wyckednes. For my sorowe is very great, and my herte is heuue.

The.ii. Chapter.

Aleph.

As how hath the Lorde darkened the doughter of Syon so sore in hys wraethe? As for the honoure of Israel he hath casten it downe from heauen: Howe happeneth it, that he re-membred not hys owne sore stole, when he was angrey?

Beth.

The Lorde hath cast down al the glory of Iacob without any sauour: al p strong places of the doughter Iuda hath he broken in hys wraath, and throwen the down to the ground: her kyngedome and her prynces hath he suspended.

Gimel.

In the wraethe of hys indignation he hath broken all the * horne of Israel: he hath wythdrawen hys ryghte hande fro the ennemye: yea, a flambe of fyre is kindled in Iacob, and hath consumed by all rounde aboute.

Daleth.

He hath bent hys bowe lyke an enemye, he hath fastened hys ryghte hande as an aduersary: and euerye thyng that was pleasaunte to se, he hath smitten it downe. He hath powred oute hys wraath like a fyre, in to the tabernacle of p dought-ter of Syon.

Man.

Her tabernacle (whych was lyke a gardeyne of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solemne feastes hath he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it so to pas, that the hye solemne feastes and Sabothes in Sion, are cleane forgotten. In hye heauy displeasure hath he made the kynge and pryestes to be despyed.

zain.

The Lorde hath forsaken hye owne altier, and is wroth wyth hye owne Sanctuary, and hath giuen the walles of theyr towres into the handes of the enemye. Theyr enemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it had bene in a solemne feast daye.

Beth.

The Lorde thoughte to breake downe the walles of the doughter Sion: He spredde oute hye (a) lyne, and drew not in hye hande, tyll he had destroyed them. Therefore moune the turrets and the broken walles togyther.

Teth.

Her portes are casten down to the ground, her bars are broken and smytten in sonder: her kynge and prynces are carped away to the Gentyles. They haue neyther law ne prophetes, nor yet any vision from the Lord.

Jod.

(b) The Senatoures of the doughter Syon sate vpon the ground in silēce: they haue strowed ashes vpon theyr heades, and gyrded them selues wyth sackloth. The maydens of Ierusalem haue down theyr heades to the grounde.

Laph.

Myne eyes begyn to sayle me thorow weppung, my body is disquyeted, my lyuer is poured vpon the earth, for the greate hurt of my people, seinge the chyldre & babes drowne in the stretes of the cty.

Lamed.

Euen whē they spake to theyr mothers: wher is meat and drynke? for whyle they so sayd, they fel downe in the stretes of the cty lyke as they had bene wounded, and some dyed in their mothers bosome.

Mem.

What shal I say of the, O thou doughter Ierusalem, to whome shal I lyken the? To whome shal I compare the, O thou doughter Syon, to comfort the wythall? Why hurte is lyke a mayne sea, who may heale the?

at the: hissing and wagging their heades vpon the doughter Ierusalem, and saye: is this the ctye that men call so fayre, wherein the hole land reioyseth?

Ain.

All thyne enemyes gape vpon the, whisping and biting their teethe, saying: let vs deuour, for the tyme that we looked for is come: we haue found and sene it.

Bhe.

The Lorde hath fulfilled the thyng that he was purposed to do: and performed what he had deuised long ago: he hath destroyed and not spared. He hath caused thyne aduersarye to triumphe ouer the, and set vp the hoine of thyne enemye.

zade.

Let thyne herte cry vnto the Lorde, O thou ctye of the doughter of Syon, let thy teares run downe lyke a ryuer, day and nyght: rest not, & let not the apple of thyne eye leaue of.

Ikoph.

Stand vp and make thy prayer in the first watche of the nyght, poure out thyne herte lyke water before the Lorde, lift vp thyne handes for the lynes of thy yonge chyldre that dye of hongre in the stretes.

Res.

Beholde, O Lorde, & consydre, why hast thou gathered me vp so clene? Shall the women then eate theyr owne frute, euen chyldren of a span longe? Shal the pryestes and prophetes be slaine thus in the Sanctuary of the Lorde?

Sin.

Yonge and olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens & yonge men are slayne wyth the swerde, whome thou in the daye of thy wrathful indignacion hast put to deathe: yea, euen thou hast put to deathe, and not spared them.

Myne neighbours that are round about me, hast thou called, as it wer a feast day, so that in the day of the Lordes wrath none escaped neyther was any lefte behynde. Those that I had brought vp and nourished, hath myne enemy destroyed.

The Notes of the.ii. Chapter.

(a) As carpenters spred out their lines to build walles, houses and other thynges: so had God spredde oute hye lyne to destroye Ierusalem and Jewrye: and to bringe them to perfect subiection. For that signifieth the spredynge oute of the lyne as it is saied. ii. Reg. viii. a. It is a similitude borrowed of carpenters.

(b) Wher the iudges of Ierusalem wer wont to sit honorablye and gorgeously vpon goodly seates, and geue sentence in the gates, now lye they vpon the grounde slayne and in the gates is nothyng but sylence, and stylnes.

The.iii. Chapter.

Aleph.

I Am the man, that (thorow the rod of Ihye wrath) haue experyence of misery. He droue me forth, and led me: yea into darcknesse, but not into lpyghte.

Agaynste me only he turneth hys hand, and layeth it euer vpon me.

Weth.

My fleshe and my skyn hath he made olde, and my bones hath he broked.

Sal for sor- He hath buylded rounde about me, and rowfulnes closed me in wpyth * gal and trouaile.

He hath set me in darcknesse, as they that be dead for euer.

Simel.

He hath so bedged me in, þ I canot get

O howe good is the Lorde vnto them þ put theyr trust in hym, & to the soule that seketh after hym?

O howe good is it w sylnesse to wayt, and rary for the helth of the Lorde?

O howe good is it for man, to take the yocke vpon hym from his yowth by.

Job.

He sitteth alone, he holdeth hym still, & dwelleth quietly by hym selfe.

He layeth hys face vpon the earth, if percase ther happen to be any hope.

He offereth hys cheke to þ smyter, he wyl be content wpyth repones.

Laph.

For the Lorde wyl not forsake for euer.
But though he do cast of, yet accordyng to the multytude of hys mercies, he receyueth to grace agayne.

For he doeth not plage, and cast out the chyliden of men from hys herte.

Lamed.

To tread all the prysoners of the earth
vnder hys fete.

To moue the iudgemēte of man before the moste hygheste.

To condemne a man in hys cause: The

I chaunced in the thyrte yere the fyfth daye of the fourth moneth, þ I was amonge the prysoners by the ryuer of Cobar: (a) wher þ beauen opened, and I saw a visyon of God. Nowe the fyfth daye of the month made out the fyfth yere of king Ioacims captiuitie. And in the myddest of the fyre it was al cleare, and as it were the lyknes of foure beastes whiche were fashyoned lyke a man: sauynge, that every one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Their legges were streighte, but theyr fete were lyke bullockes fete, and theyr glystered, as it had ben fait scoured metal. Under theyr wynges vpon all the foure corners they had mens handes. The fashyon and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hote coles of fyre, euen as though burning cressettes hadde bene amonge

The.ii. Chapter.

Amonge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glystere, and oute of the fyre there wente lyghtenynge. When the beastes wente forwarde and backward, one wolde haue thoughte it hadde lyghtened. Nowe whē I hadde well consydered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth, wth foure faces also lyke the beastes.

The fashyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the sea. The foure wheles wer ioynded and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in an other. When one wente forward, they wente all foure, and turned them not aboute in theyr goinge. They were large, greete and horrible to loke vpon. Theyr bodyes were ful of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles were also wth them: And when the beastes lyft them selues vp from the earth, the wheles wer lyft vp also. Whither soeuer (b) spyrte wēt, thither went they also, & the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed the: for the spyrte of lyfe was in the wheles.

When the beastes wente forth, stode styl, or lyfte them selues vp fro the earth, then the wheles also wente, stode styl, and were lyfte vp, for the byrthe of lyfe was in the wheles.

Above ouer þ heades of the beastes ther was a spymament, whiche was fashioned as it had ben of the most pure Chrystal & þ was spred oute above vpon their heades: vnder the same spymament wer theyr wynges laped abrode, one towarde an other, and two wynges couered the body of euery beaste. And when they wente forth, I hearde the noyse of their wynges, lyke the noyse of greete waters, as it had ben the voyce of the great God, & a rushynge togyther as it wer of an host of men. And when they stode styl, they let downe theyre wynges.

Nowe when they stode styl, and had letten downe their wynges, it thondred in the spymamente that was above theyr heades. Above the spymament that was ouer theyre heades, there was the fashyon of a seate, as it hadde bene made of Saphyr. vpon the seate ther sat one like a mā. I behelde hym, and he was lyke a cleare lyghte, as it had ben all of fyre wthyn fro his loynes vwarde.

And beneath when I loked vpon hym vnder the loynes, me thoughte he was lyke a shynynge fyre, that gyueth lyghte on euery syde. Yea the shyne and glystere that lyghtened rounde aboute, was lyke a raynebowe, whiche in a rayne dawe appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherin the glorie of the Lord appeared. When I saw it, I fell vpon my face, and bakened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

The.ii. Chapter.

The prophete is sente to call agayne the peo- ple from their erreure.

And then sayed he vnto me: Stande by vpon thy fete (o thou sonne of mā) and I will talke with the. And as he was communynge wth me, þ spyrte came into me and set me vpon my fete: so þ I marked the thing that he sayed vnto me. And he sayed: Beholde, thou sonne of man, I wyll sende the to the children of Israel, to those runnagates & obstinate people: for they haue taken part agaynste me, and are runne awaye fro me: bothe they and theyr forefathers vnto this day.

Yea I wyll sende the vnto a people that haue rough bysages and stiff stomackes, vnto whome thou shalt sape on this man- ner: Thus the Lord God hym selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedyent or no (for it is a stoward householde) they may knowe yet þ ther hath bene a pro- phete amonge them.

Therefore (thou sonne of man) feare them not, neyther be afrayed of their wordes: for they shal rebel agaynste the, & despyse the.

Yea thou shalt dwell amonge scorpys: but feare not their wordes, be not abashed at their lookes, for it is a stow- warde householde.

Se that thou speake my wordes vnto them, whether they be obedyent or not, for they are obstinate. Therefore thou sonne of man, obey thou all thynges, þ I sape vnto the, & be not thou styfnecked, lyke as they are a styfnecked householde. Open thy mouth and eate that I gyue the.

So as I was lokynge vp, behold, ther was sent vnto me an bande, wherin was a closed booke: and the hand opened it be- fore me, and it was wyrtten wthyn, and wthout, ful of carefull mounynges: a- las, and wo.

Thou sonne of mā, thy belly shall eate, & thy bowels shall be fylled wth the dooke, that I geue the. When did I ate & drinke, & it was in my mouthe sweeter then honye. And he sayd vnto me: thou sonne of mā, get the soone vnto the house of Israel, & shew the the wordes that I commaunde the. for I sende the not to the people & hath a strange language, nor to harden the heart, but vnto the house of Israel: Not to manye nations, whiche haue dyuerse speeches & hard languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not. Neuerthelesse, if I sende the to those people they woulde folowe the: But the house of Israel wyl not folowe me: yea all the house of Israel haue styf foreheades, and harde hertes. Beholpe therfore, I wil make thy face p<sup>re</sup>uayle agaynst their faces, & harden thy forehead agaynst their foreheades: so that thy forehead shall be hard as euen an Adamant or flint stone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayed of them, for they are a stowarde householde.

He sayd moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of mā, take dyligence hede wth thine eares to the wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thine herte: and goo to the prysoners of thy people, & speake vnto them, and saye on this maner: Thus the Lorde God hath spoken, whether ye heare or heare not. Wth that the spirite toke me vp. And I herde the noyse of a greete rushynge, and remouynge of the most blessed glory of the Lorde out of hys place.

I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, & that rushed one agaynst another, yea and the ratlynge of the wheles that were by them, whiche rushynge and noyse was very greate.

Nowe when the spirite toke me vp, and carped me awaye, I went wth an heuie and a sorowful minde, but the hand of the Lorde comforted me ryght soone.

And so in the begynnyng of the moneth Abib, I came to the prysoners, that dwelt by the water of Cobar, and remayned in that place, where they were: And so continued I amonge them seuen dayes, besynge verie sore.

And when the seuen dayes were expired, the Lorde sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, I haue made the a (a) watchman vnto the house of Israel: (b) therefore take good hede to the wordes, and geue them warnynge at my commaundement.

If I saye vnto the, concernynge the vngodly man, that (without doubt) he must dye, and thou geuest hym not warnynge, he speakest vnto hym, that he maye turne from his euill waye, and so to lyue: Then shall the same vngodly man dye in hys owne vnrightheousnes, but hys blood wyl I requyre of thine hande. Neuertheles, if thou geue warnynge vnto the wycked, and he yet forsake not hys vngodlynesse, then shall he dye in his owne wyckednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule.

Nowe if a ryghteous man go from hys ryghteousnesse, and doo the thyng that is euill, I wyl lay a stowpynge blocke before hym, & he shall dye, because thou hast not geuen hym warnynge: yea dye shall he in hys owne synne, so that the verue whiche he was before, shall not be thought vpon: but hys blood wyl I requyre of thine hande.

Neuerthelesse, if thou exhorteste the ryghteous, that he synne not, and so the ryghteous do not synne, then shall he lyue, because he hath receyued thy warnynge, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came the hand of the Lorde vpon me, and he sayd vnto me: Stande vp, & go into the felde, that I may there talke with the.

So when I had risen vp, & gone forth into the felde: Beholde, the glory of the Lorde stood there, lyke as I sawe it afore, by the water of Cobar.

Then fell I downe vpon my face, and the spirite came into me, whiche set me vp vpon my feet, and sayd thus vnto me: See thy waye & sparer thy self in thine house. Beholde (O thou sonne of mā) there shall charnes be brought for the, to hynde the & chal, so that thou shalt not escape oute of them. And I wyl make thy tung cleue so to the roofof thy mouthe, that thou shalt be dumme, and not as a chyld wth them: for it is an obstinate householde.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouthe, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: who so heareth, let hym heare, who is wyl not, let hym leaue: for it is an obstinate householde.

The Notes of the. iiii. Chapter.

(a) By this watchman are figured Bishops, priestes, and preachers, which must take the occasion of the speaking and exhorting at the mouthe of God, and speake not in theyr owne, but in hys name.

(b) Some reade, thou shalt hearken vnto the woorde of my mouthe, and shall mynne the them from out of me.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The besiege of the cytye of Ierusalem is signified. The long contynuaunce of the captiuitie of Israel. In hunger is prophesied to come in the captiuitie.

Thou sonne of mā: take a (a) tyle stone, and laye it before the, and describe vpon it the cytye of Ierusalem, howe it is besieged, howe bulworkes and stronge ditches are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes, and an hooste of men rounde aboute it.

Moreouer take an Iron pan, and set it betwixte the, and the cytye in syde of an Iron wall. Then set thy face toward it, besiege it, and laye ordynaunce agaynst it, to wyne it. This shall be a token vnto the house of Israel.

But thou shalt slepe vpon thy left syde, and lay the synne of the house of Israel rael vpon the. Certayne dayes apoynted, thou shalt slepe vpon that syde, & beare theyr synnes. Neuerthelesse, I will apoynte the a tyme (to put of theyr synnes) and the numbze of the dayes: Thre hundredeth and. xc. dayes muste thou beare the wyckednes of the house of Israell. When thou hast fulfilled these dayes, lye down a gaine, & slepe vpon thy right syde. xl. dayes, and beare the synnes of the house of Iuda.

An. xlii. f

A day for a yere, a day (I say) for a yere, will I euer laye vpon the. Therefore sett now thy face agaynst that besieged Ierusalem, and discouer thyn arme, that thou mayst prophesye agaynst it.

Beholde, I will laye chaynes vpon the, that thou shalt not turne the frome one syde to another, tyll thou hast ended the dayes of thy sieg.

Wherefore take vnto the wheate, barley, beanes, growell seede, Millium & fitches: and put these together in a vessell, & make the loues of bread thereof accordynge to the numbze of the dayes that thou must lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayest haue bread to eate, for thre hundredeth, and. xc. dayes. And the meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne wayght appoynted: namelpe twenty sicles euery daye. This apoynted meate shalt thou eate dayly from the begynnynge to the ende.

Thou shalt drynke also a certayne measure of water, namelpe, the fyrte parte of an Hin shalt thou drynke daylye from the begynnynge vnto the ende. Barlye cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fyrste strake them ouer wyth mans donge, that they maye se it. And wyth that sayed the Lorde: Euen thus shall the chyldren of Israell eate their despyled breade in the myddest of the Gentyles, among whome I will scatter them.

Then sayd I: O Lord God, Beholde, my soule was yet neuer staped: for fro my pouthe vp vnto thys houte, I dyd neuer eate of a dead carcase, oz of that whiche was slayne of wyld beasts, neyther came there euer any vncleane fleshe in my mouth. Wherunto he answered me, & said: Wel then, I wil graunt the to take coowes dong, for the dong of ma, and to strake the bread ouer wythal before them.

And he sayed vnto me: Beholde thou sonne of man, I will mynthe al the poruision of bread in Ierusalem, so þ they shall wyte their breade, and eate it wyth scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a berre litle measure thereof to drynke. And whē they haue no more bread ne water, one shall be destroyed wyth another, & sampe a waye for their wyckednesse.

The Notes of the. iiii. Chapter.

(a) This is a prophesye done by an outwarde signe, as in Ieremy. xlii. a. Whē the people are unworthy of the woorde of God, then are the prophetes comaunded to vse such vylible signes, as here to paynte out Ierusalem and the besyging therof in a tyle stone.

The ryddle of the herres, by which is signified the destruccyn of the people. The causes of the anger of God towards the people. The Lorde discloseth the ryddle of the herres.

Thou sonne of man, take the then a sharp knife, namelpe a rasour. Take that and shawe the herre of thy head and berd: Then take the scales and watght, & deuyde the herre a sunder. And burne the thirde part thereof in the fyre in þ myddest of the cytie, & cut the other thirde parte in peces wyth a knyfe. As for the thirde parte that remayneth, cast it in the wynde, and then shewe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtsey of it, and cast it in the myddeste of the fyre, and burne it in the fyre. Dure of the same fyre shall there go a flame vpon the hole house of Israell.

Moreover, thus sayed the Lorde God: Thys same is Ierusalem, I set her in the myddest of the Heathen and nations that are rounde about her: but she hath despyled my iudgementes more then the Gentyles themselves, and broken my commaundementes more then the nations that lye rounde about her: For they haue cast out my ordinaunces, & not walked in my lawes. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: For so muche as ye wyth your wyckednesse fatte excede the Heathen that dwel rounde aboute you: (For ye haue not walked in my lawes, neither haue ye kept myne ordinaunces.) Therefore thus sayth þ lord god.

I will also come vpon the, for in the myddest of the, will I syt in iudgemente, in the syghte of the Heathen, and will handle the of suche a facion as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer will doo from that tyme forth, and that bycause of all thynne abhominacions. For in the, fathers shall be slayne to eate theyr owne sonnes, and the sonnes theyr owne fathers. Such a courte wil I kepe in the, & all the whole remnant wil I scatter into all the wynds.

Wherefore as trulpe as I lpe (sayeth the Lorde God) seynge thou hast despyled my Sanctuarpe wyth al maner abhominacions, and with all thy shameful offences, For thys cause will I also destroy the. Myne eye shall not ouerse the, neyther will I spare the.

One thirde parte wythin the, shall dye of the pestylence and of hunger: Another thirde parte shall be slayne downe rounde about the, wyth the sword: The other thirde part that remayneth wil I scatter abroad towards al the wynds, and drawe out the sword after them. Thus I will performe my indignacyon, and set my wrath agaynst them, & ease my self. So that when I haue fulfilled myne angre agaynst them, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche wyth a feruente gelousye haue spoken it.

More

Moreover I will make the waste and abhorred before all the Heathen that dwell aboute thee, and in the syghte of all them that goo by thee: so that when I punyſhe thee in my wrath, in myne anger and wyth the plague of my hoate dyspleasure, thou shalt be a very abhominaciō, shame, a gaspynge and wondryng stocke amonge the Heathen that lye about the.

Ezech. iii. e
Eze. xlii. d
Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and it shall come to passe, when I shote among them the peryllous dartes of hunger, whiche shall be but death: Yea, therefore shall I shote them bycause I wyl destroy you, I wyl increase hunger, and mynyshe all the prouision of bread amonge you.

Plagues and myserye wyl I sende you, yea and wylde bestes also to destroye you. Pestilence and bloudshedynge shall come vpon you, and the sword wyl I bring ouer you. Euen I the Lorde haue sayd it.

The. vi. Chapter.

He sheweth that the people shalbe plagued for the synne of Idolatry. He prophesyeth the repentance of the remnant of the people, and theyr deliuerance. The destruction of the forwarde is prophesied.

Eze. xxxvi. e
A And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israell, that thou mayest prophesy vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God, o ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, baleties and dales.

Beholde, I wyl bringe a sword ouer you, and destroy your hye places: I wyl cast downe your aulters, & breake downe your temples. Your slayne men wyl I lay before youre gods, and the dead carcases of the chyldren of Israell wyl I cast before theyr ymages: your bones wyl I destroy rounde about your aulters, and dwelling places.

B The cytyes shall be desolate, the hyl chapels layed waste: your aulters destroyed, and broken: your goddes cast downe and taken awaye, your temples layed euen with the grounde, your workes clene rooted out.

Baruc. iii. e
Your slayne men shall lye amonge you, that ye may learne to knowe howe that I am the Lorde. Those that amonges you haue escaped the sword, wyl I leaue amonge the Gentyles: for I wyl scatter you among the nations. And they that escape fro you shal thynke vpon me amongs the Heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie.

As for that booryshe and vnfaithfull heart of theirs, wherwyth they run awaye fro me, I wyl breake it: yea, and put out those eyes of theirs, that commit fornication wyth theyr ydolles.

Then shall they be ashamed, and dyspleased wyth their selues, for the wyckednes and abhominacions whiche they haue done, and shall learne to knowe howe that it is not in bayne that I the Lorde spake to bringe suche misery vpon them.

The Lorde sayed moreover vnto me: Smyte thyne handes togyther, & stampe wyth thy fete, and saye: Wo worch all the abhominacions and wyckednesses of the house of Israell, for bycause of them they shall perishe wyth the sword, wyth hunger, and wyth pestilence. Whoso is farrre of, shal dye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hand, shal perishe wyth the sword, & the other that be besieged, shal dye of hunger.

Thus wyl I satisfye my wrathfull dyspleasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe that I am the Lorde, when your slayne men lye amonge your gods, and about your aulters vpon al hye hylles, and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge al thycke okes: euen in the places where they dyd sacrifice to al theyr ydolles. I wyl stretch my hande out vpon them, and wyl make the lande waste: so that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wyldernes of Deblathath forth, thow come all their habitacions, to learne them for to knowe that I am the Lorde.

The. vii. Chapter.

He sheweth the ende of al the lande of Israell shal soone come. The cause of the destruction therof. The prophete is commaunded to shew the summe of the synnes that are at hande.

T The worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: Thee I call o thou sonne of man. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the land of Israell: The ende cometh, yea verily the ende cometh vpon al the four corners of the earthe. But nowe shal the ende come vpon the: for I wyl send my wrath vpon the, & wyl punishe the accordyng to thy wayes, and rewarde the after al thy abhominacions. Myne eye shal not ouerse the, neyther wyl I spare the, but rewarde the accordyng to thy wayes, & declare thy abhominacions. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, one myserye and plage shall come after another: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) that waiteth for the, is come alreadye, the houre is come agaynst the, that dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedition is harde by, and no glad tidynge vpon the moystaynes. Therefore wyl I shortly poure oute my sore dyspleasure vpon the, and fulfill my wrath vpon the. I wyl iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the al thy abhominacions.

Myne eye shal not ouerse the, neyther wyl I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and shew thy abhominacions to learne you for to knowe howe that I am the Lorde that smyteth. Behold, the daye is here, the daye is come, the houre is runn oute, the * rodde flozyntheth, wylfulnesse waxeth grene, malicious violence is growen vp, & the vngodly waxen to a staffe.

Yet shall there no complaynt be made for them, nor for the trouble that shall come of these thynges.

For the vision shall come so greatlye ouer all, that it shall not be hyndred: No man also with hys wyckednes shall be habyle to saue his own lyfe. The trumpets shall ye blow and make you all redye, but no man shall go to þ batel, for I am wroth with al the hole multitude.

E The sword shall be without, pestilence and hunger within: so that who so is in the fælde, shall be slayne with the sword: he that is in the cytye shall perishe with hunger and pestilence.

The. viii. Chapter.

E An apperaunce of the similitude of God. Ezechyell is broughte vnto Ierusalem in the spete. The Lord sheweth the Prophete the Idolatries of the house of Israel, and chesely of the pyestres.

I It happened that in the sixt yere, the fift day of þ first moneth, I sate in my house and the Lordes of the counsell of Iuda wyth me, and the hand of the Lord God selenen there vpon me. And as I looked vp, I sawe as it were a lykenes of fyre from hys loynes downwarde, & fro hys loynes vward it shyned maruelous clere. This similitude stretched out an hand, toke me by the herry lockes of my head, & the spirit lyfte me vp betwixt heauen and earth: and God brought me in a vision to Ierusalem, into the cytye of the (a) inner port that lyeth toward þ north: there stode an image, wyth whiche he that hath all thynges in hys power, was very wrothe. And behold, the glorie of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen as I had sene it afore in the fælde. And he sayde vnto me: E Thou sonne of man, lyft vp thyne eyes, & loke toward the north. Then lyft I vp myne eyes toward the north, & beholde besyde the port northwarde, ther was an altare made vnto the image of prouocation in þ very entryng in. And he sayd furthermore vnto me: Thou sonne of mane, seest thou what these do?

Seest thou the great abhominacions þ the house of Israel comyt in this place, whiche ought not to be done in my Sanctuarie? But turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions. And wyth þ brought he me to the courte gates: and when I looked, beholde, there was an hole in the wal. The said he vnto me: thou sonne of man, byg thowme the wall: And when I had bygged thowme the wall, beholde there was a doore. And he sayd vnto me: Go thy way in, and looke what wycked abhominacions they do there. So I went in and sawe, and beholde, ther wet al maner Images of moymes & beastes, all Idoles and abhominacions of the house of Israel painted euery one round aboute the wall. There stode also before the Images thre score & ten Lordes of the counsell of the house of Israel: and in the myddes of the stode Jaazanyah þ sonne of Sapha: And euery one of the had a censoure in hys hand, & out of the incense ther wet a smoke, as it had ben a cloud. The sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of mane, hast thou sene what þ senatours of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chabre? For they say, cuth þ Lord seeth vs not, þ Lord regar-death not the worlde. And he sayed vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt see y greete abhominacions that they do. And wyth that he brought me to the dore of the porte of the Lordes house towardes the North. And beholde ther sat women mourning for (a) Thamuz. Then sayed he vnto me: hast thou sene thys thou son of man? Turne the aboute, & thou shalt see yet greater abhominacions.

And so he brought me in to the inward courte of the Lordes house: and beholde at the porte of the Lordes house, betwixt the foreentree and the aulter, there wer fyue & twentye men that touned therr backs vpon the temple of the Lord, and therr faces toward the East, & these worshipped the sunne.

¶ And he sayed vnto me: hast thou sene thys thou sonne of man? Thynkedst thou the house of Israel that it is but a trylle, to do these abhominacions here? Shouldest thou fyll the land full of wyckednesse, and undertake to prouoke me vnto ager? Yea, and purposely to cast vp therr noses vpon me? Therefore wyl I also do some thyng in my wrathful dyspleasure, so that mine eye shall not ouerse them, neyther wyl I spare them. Yea and though they cry in myne eares wyth loud voyce, yet wyl I not heare them.

The Notes of the viii. Chapter.

(a) The hyl Sion was walled round aboute, & that wall whiche compassed it was called the outwarde wall: Aboute the temple was there another wal, that was called the inward wal, whiche although it were outward from the temple, yet was it inward from the wall whiche compassed y hyl. The space betwene the inward wall & the temple, was called the inner court. Therin were many portes, and in the northe porte therof was Ezechiel set, for that place was holy, and therein dyd they vse to worshyp God: but in the fylthynes of his hateful ymage of Baal, whych y Prophet here calleth y ymage of prouocation, because it prouoked y Lorde to vengeance had they defiled it, as supersticious doeth commonly defyle euen the mooste holiest thynges, and such as appeare y most Godly est. (b) That is, after Saynte Iherome, Adonides Amasis, whych was Aenas fayrest sonne, and whych is fained to haue rylen from death to lyfe, whych fable the women of Jewry dyd celebrate and holde solemne both wyth mythe and teares. Some saye that it was an ymage, whych was made to wepe by craft. Before this ymage dyd women also bewaile therr separation from therr lovers, and reioyced when they obtayned them agayne.

The ix. Chapter.

¶ The destruction of Idolaters, and the conuersacion of the ryghteous. They that shalbe saved are marked. They that are vnmarched, are slayne. A complaint of the Prophete for the destruction of the people.

¶ He cryed also wyth a loud voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come here ye rulers of the citty, euerye man wyth hys weaponed hand to the slaughter. The came ther fire men oute of the floure of the upper porte toward the North, and euery man a weapon in his hand to the slaughter. Ther was one amongst the that had on hym a linnen rayment, and a wyrters ynckorne by his syde.

These went in and stode beside the brasen aulter, for the gloze of the Lorde was gone awaye from the Cherub, and was come downe to the threhold of the house, and he called the man that had the linnen rayment vpon him, and the wyrters ynckorne by hys syde, and the Lorde sayd vnto him: So thy way thow shalt be citty of Jerusalem, and set his marke, Thau, vpon the foreheades of them that mouene and are soye for all the abhominacions that be done therein. And to the other he sayd that I might heare: So ye after him thow shalt be citty, slaye, ouerse none, spare none, hyl and destroy bothe olde men and yonge maydens, chyldren and wyues.

But as for those that haue this marke, Thau, vpon them, let that ye touche them nor, and begyn at my Sanctuary. Then they began at the elders whiche were in the temple, for he had sayed vnto them: when ye haue defiled the temple, and felled the courte wyth the floure, then good wyre waye for the. So they wente oute, and came downe thow the citty. Nowe when they had done the slaughter, and I yet escaped, I fel downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lorde, wylte thou then destroye all the residue of Israel in thy fore dyspleasure, that thou haste poured vpon Jerusalem? Then sayed he vnto me: the wyckednes of the house of Israel and Juda is verie greate, so that the lande is full of bloude, and the citty full of vnfaythfulnesse. For they saye: Tush the Lorde regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not.

Therefore wyl I vpon them, myne eye shall not ouerse them, neyther wyl I spare them, but wyl recompente therr wyckednesse vpon therr heades. And beholde, the man that had the linnen rayment vpon hym, and the wyrters ynckorne by hys syde, tolde all the matter howe it happened, and sayed: Lorde, as thou haste commaunded me, so haue I done.

The x. Chapter.

¶ And as I looked, beholde in the firmament that was aboue the Cherubyns ther appered the symilitude of a stole of Saphir vpon them. Then sayed he that sat therein to hym that had the linnen rayment vpon hym: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubyns, and take thynne hande full of hote coles oute frome betwene the Cherubyns, and caste them ouer the cite.

And he crepte in that I myght se.

Nowe the Cherubyns stode vpon the ryghte syde of the house, when the man wente in, and the cloude fylled the inner-mer courte. But the gloire of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubyns, & came vpon the threshold of the house, so that the temple was full of cloude, and the court was full of the hyne of the Lordes gloire.
Yea and the sound of the Cherubins win-ges was herde into the fore courte, like as it had ben the voyce of the almyghty God when he speaketh.

Now when he had byddē the man that was clothed in linen, to go and take the hot coles from the myddest of the wheles whyche were vnder the Cherubyns, he went and stode besyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached for the hys hande from vnder the Cherubins, vnto the spere that was betwixen the Cherubins, & toke thereof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on the lynnen caryment, in his hand: whych toke it, & went oure.

And vnder the wynges of the Cheru-bynys ther appered the likenesse of a mans hande: I sawe also foure wheles besyde the cherubyns, so that by euery Cherub ther stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the facis of the precious stone of Tharsis: yet (vnto the syght) they were facioned as if one whele had bene in another.

When they wente forth, they went all foure together, not turninge aboute in theyr goynge: But wher the fyrst wente thither went they after also, so that they toured not about in theyr goynge. Theyr hole bodys, theyr backes, theyr handes and wynges, yea and the wheles also were all ful of eyes round about them all foure.
And I herde him call the wheles Galgal (that is) a rounde boule. Euery one of the had foure faces, so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the second of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an Eagle, and they were lyfted vp aboue. This is the beast that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubyns wente, the wheles wente with them, and when the Cheru-bynys shoke theyr wynges to lyfte the sel-ues vp warde, the wheles remayned not behynnd, but were with them also. Shortly whē they stode, these stode also: And when they were lyfte vp, the wheles were lyft vp also with them, for the spyrte of lyfe was in the wheles.

Then the gloire of the Lorde was lyft up from the threshold of the temple, & remayned vpon the Cherubyns: And the Cherubyns lackred with theyr wynges, and lyfte the selues vp from the earth: so that I saw when they wente, and the wheles with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde.
So the gloire of the Lorde was vpon the.

This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israell, by the water of Cobar. And I perceyued that it was the Cherubyns.
Euery one had foure faces, & euery one foure wynges, and vnder the wynges as if there mens handes. Nowe the figure of theyr faces was, euen as I had sene them by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenance of the: Euery one in hys goynge went straighe forwarde.

The xi. Chapter.

Who they were that made the people of Israel to strape. Agaynste these he prophesyeth, shewing them howe they shall be dysparpled abrode. The renuyng of the herse cometh of God, otherwyle can we not walke in hys com-vnto there owne counsellors.

Moreover the spyrte of the Lorde lyft me vp, & brought me vnto the East porte of the Lordes house. And behold there were xxv. men vnder the doze, amonge whō I sawe Jaazaniab the sonne of Azur, Sheltiah the sonne of Bananiab, the rulers of the people. The sayd the Lorde vnto me: thou sonne of mā, these men ima-gyn myscheyse, & a wycked counsell take they in this cite, sayinge: thus there is no destruccio at hande, let vs buyld houses: this Ierusalem is the cauldron, and we be the fleshe. Therefore shalt thou prophesy vnto them, yea prophesy shalt thou vnto this sonne of man. And with that fel the spyrte of the Lorde vpon me, and sayd vnto me: Speake, thus sayeth the Lorde.

On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israell) and I knowe the ymaginacions of your herts. Many one haue ye murdered in this cite, & filled the stretes full of the slayne. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: The slayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in this cite, are the fleshe, and this cite is the cauldron. But I wyll bring you oute of it: ye haue draw-en oute the swearde, euen so wyll I also bring a swearde ouer you, sayth the Lorde God. I wyll dryue you oute of this cite, and deliuer you into youre enemies hande, and will condemne you. Ye shall be slayne in al the coastes of Israell, I wyll be auēged of you: to learne you so to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

This cite shall be your cauldron, neyther shall ye be the fleshe therein: but in the coastes of Israell wyll I punishe you, that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: in whose commaundementes, ye haue not walked, ne kepte hys lawes: but haue done after the customs of the Heathen that lye rounde aboute you.

Now when I preached, Sheltiah the sonne of Banniah dyed, the fell I downe vpon my face, and cryed with a loud voyce: O Lorde God, wilt thou then verryly de-stroye all the remnaunte in Israell? And so the worde of the Lorde came to me on this maner: thou sonne of man, thy brethren

then, thy kynsefolke, and the whole house of Juda, whych dwel at Jerusalem sape: they be gone far from the lord, but, the lād is giue vs in possession. Therefore tel them, thus sayeth the lord God: I wyl send you far of amonge the Gentyles, and scatter you among the nations, and I wyl halow you but a litle in plāds wher ye shal come.

Tel them also, thus saith the Lord god: I wyl gather you agayne out of the nations, and brynge you from the countreys wher ye be scattered, and wyl gyue you the land of Israell agayne: and thither shall ye come. And as for al impedimēts, and all your abhominacions, I wil take the away.

D And I wyl geue you one hearte, and I wyl plant a new sprite within youre bowels. That stony heart wyl I take oute of your body, and geue you a fleshy heart:

that ye may walke in my commaundmentes, and kepe myne ordynauces and dooe them, that ye may be my people, & I your God. But looke whose hertes are dysposed to folow their abhominacion, and wicked liuings, those mens deedes wyl I brynge vpon theyr own heades saith the lord god.

After this byd the Cherubins lyfte vp theyr wynges, and the wheles went with them, and the glory of the Lord was vpon them. So the glory of the Lord wente vp from the myddest of the cytpe, and stode vpon the mount of the cytpe, towarde the east. But the wynde took me vp, and in a bysson (whych came by the spirit of God) it brought me agayne into Caldea among the prysoners. Then the vision that I had sene, vanyshe awaye from me. So I spake vnto the prysoners al the wordes of the Lord whych he had shewed me.

The. xii. Chapter.

The parable of the vessels of the captiuitie. The expolitiō of the parable, by which shewyng of kynge Sedechias is signyfyed. In other parable whereby the dystresse of hunger and thurst is signified.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of mā, thou dwel lest in the myddest of a froward household whych haue eyes to se, and yet se not: eares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not: for they are a stubborne household. Therefore (O thou sonne of man) make thy gere readye to flyt, and go forth by sayre day lyght that they maye se: Yea, euen in theyr syght shalt thou go from thy place to an other place: if peraduenture they wyl consyder that they be an vnoberdyent household.

Thy gere that thou hast made redy to flyt wylthal, shalt thou beate oute by sayre day light, that they se: & thou thy self shalt go forth also at euen in theyr syghte, as a man doth when he flyteth. Dye thorow the wal, that they maye se, and beate thorow it the same thyng that thou tokest vp in theyr syght. As for thy selfe, thou shalt go forth in the darcke. Hyde thy face that thou se not the earth, for I haue made the a shewe token vnto the house of Israell. Now as the Lord commaunded me, so I dyd: the gere that I had made readye, broughte I oute by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thorow the wall with my hand: and when it was darcke I tooke the gere vpon my shoulders and bare the out in theyr syght.

And in the moynynge came the worde of the Lord vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, if Israell that froward household aske the and say: what doest thou ther? The tel them, thus sayth the Lord God: This punishment toucheth the chiefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israell that dwel among them. Tel them I am youre shewe token: lyke as I haue done, so shal it happen vnto you. Flytte shall ye also, and go into captiuitie. The chiefe that is amonge you, shal load his shoulders in the darcke, and get hym away. He shal breake downe the wal to cary stuffe ther thorow. He shal couer his face that he see not the ground with his eyes.

My lyne wyl I streade out vpon hym, and catch hym in my net and cary hym to Babilō, in the land of the Caldees, whiche he shal not se, and yet shal he dye there: as for al his helpers, and al his hosts that be about hym, I wyl scatter them towarde al the wyndes, and diaue oute a swearde after them. So when I haue scattered them among the heathē, & strowed them in the lāds, they shal know that I am the Lord.

But I wyl leaue a lytle number of the from the sweard, hunger, and pestilence, to tel al theyr abhominacions among the heathen, wher they come, that they maye know how that I am the Lord.

Moreover the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, with a fearful tremblynge shalt thou eate thy bread, with carefulnes and sorow shalt thou drynke thy water. And vnto the people of the lād, speake thou on this manner. Thus sayth the Lord God to them that dwel in Jerusalem, and to the lande of Israell. Ye shal eat your bread with sorow, & drynke your water with heynnes: Yea, the lande with the fulnes therof shalbe laied waste, for the wyckednes of them that dwel ther in. And the cities that now be wel occupied, shalbe voide, and the land desolate, that ye may know how that I am the Lord.

Yet came the word of the Lord vnto me agayne, saying: Thou sonne of man, what maner of byword is that whych ye vse in the land of Israell, sayinge: Tushe, seyng that the dates are so lacke in comynge, al the visions are of none effect. Tel the therfore thus sayth the Lord God: I wil make that bywoorde to cease, so that it shal no more be commonly used in Israell.

But say this vnto them: The dayes are at hand, that euery thyng whych hath ben prophecied, shalbe fulfilled. Ther shal no byson be in bayne, neither any prophetic sayle among the chyldren of Israel: for it is I the Lord that speake it, and what soeuer I the Lord speake, shalbe performed and not be slacke in comynge.

Yea euen in your dayes (O ye fromwarde household) wil I deuise something, a byng it to passe sayeth the Lord God. And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Behold thou sonne of mā, the house of Israel sayth in this maner. Thus as for y<sup>e</sup> vision that he hath sene, it wyl be manye a day or it come to passe: It is far of yet, the thyng that he prophetieth. Therefore saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lord God. All my wordes shal no more be slacke: looke what I speake, that same shal come to passe, sayth the Lord.

The. xiii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lord agaynst false Prophetes, which teache the people counsels of theyr owne hertes.

The word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Speake prophecy agaynst those prophetes that preach in Israel: and saye thou vnto them that prophete oute of theyr owne hertes: Heare the word of the Lord: Thus sayth the Lord god: Doe vnto those foo-lysh prophetes that solow theyr own spirit, and speake where they se nothyng, O Israel, (a) thy prophetes are like the foxes vpon the drye field: For they stande not in the gappes, neyther make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men myghte abide the perill in the daye of the Lord.
Wayne theynges they see: and tell lyes to mayntayne theyr preachynges wythall.
The Lord (say they) hath spoken it, when in very dede the Lord hath not sent them.
Wayne byspons haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecies, when ye saye: the Lord hath spoken it, wher as I neuer sayd it.

Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: Because your wordes be bayne, and ye seeke out lyes: Behold, I wyl vpon you, sayeth the Lord. Agayne hades shal come vpon the prophetes that looke out bayne thynges, and preach lies: they shal not be in y<sup>e</sup> councel of my people, nor wyrtten in the booke of the house of Israel, neyther shal they come in the lande of Israel: that ye maye know how that I am the Lord God. And that for this cause, they haue dysceyued my people, and told them of peace, where no peace was. One setteth vp a wall, and ther dawbe it wyth loose clay. Therefore tel the which dawbe it wyth buttempered morter, that it shal fal. For ther shal come a great howre of rayne, great stones shal fal vpon it, and a sore storme of winde shal bryake it, so shal the wal come downe.

Shal it not then be said vnto you: wher is now the morter, that ye dawbed it wyth all? Therefore thus sayth the Lord God:
I wyl bryake oute my wrathful dyspleasure wyth a stormy wynde, so that in minis anger, ther shal come a myghtye howre of rayne, and haylestones in my wrath to destroie wyth all.

As for y<sup>e</sup> wal that ye haue dawbed wyth buttempered morter, I wyl bryake it downe, make it euen wyth the ground, so that the foundation therof shal remoue, and it shal fal, yea and ye your selues shal perishe in the myddest thereof, to learne you for to know that I am the Lord.

Thus wyl I performe my wrath vpon this wal, and vpon the that haue dawbed it wyth buttempered morter, and then I wyl say vnto you: The wal is gone, and thy dawbers are away. These are y<sup>e</sup> prophetes of Israel, wyche prophete vnto the cty of Iherusalem, and looke out vnsuous of peace for them, where as no peace is, sayth the Lord God.

Wherefore (O thou sonne of mā) set thy face agaynst the daughters of thy people, wyche prophete out of theyr own hertes, and speake thou, prophecy agaynst them, and say: Thus sayeth the Lord God. Doe vnto you that some pylowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heades both of yong and old, to catch soules wyth al. For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in your captiuitie, ye promysed them lyfe, and dyshonoure me to my people, for an hand ful of barley, and for a pice of bread, when ye kil the soules of the that dye not, and promysed lyfe to them that lyue not: thus ye dyssemble wyth my people that beleuech your lyes.

Wherefore thus saith the Lord god: Behold, I wyl also vpon the pylowes wher wyth ye catche the soules in slynges, them I wyl take from your armes, and let the soules go, that ye catch in slyng.

Your bolsters also wyl I teare in ptes-ces, and deliuer my people oute of your hande, so that they shal come no more in your hands, to be spoiled, and ye shal know that I am the Lord.

Seyng that wyth your lyes ye discomfort the hearte of the ryghteous whom I haue not dyscomforted. Agayne, for so much as ye courage the hande of the wycked, so that he maye not turne from his wycked way, and lyue. Therefore shal ye swee oute no more bayntye, nor prophete your owne gessynges, for I wyl deliuer my people out of your hand, that ye maye know how that I am the Lord.

Then resorted vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, and sat down by me: Then came the word of the Lord vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, these men beare they? Idols in they? hearts, and go purposely vpon the stonblpyng blocke of they? owne wyckednes: how dare they then aske counsell at me? Therefore speake vnto them and say: thus sayeth the Lord God: Euerie man of the house of Israel that beareth hys Idols in hys herte, purposyng to stonble in hys own wyckednes, and commeth to a prophet to enquire any thyng at me by hym: vnto that man wyl I the Lord my selfe geue answer, accordyng to the multitude of hys Idols: that the house of Israel may be snared in their own herts, because they be cleane gon fro me, for they? Idols sakes.

Wherefore, tel the house of Israel: thus sayth the Lord god: Be conuered, forsake your Idols, and turne your faces from all your abominacions. For euerie mā (whether he be of the house of Israel or a stranger, that sojourneth in Israel) which departeth from me, and carrieth Idols in hys hert purposyng to go stpl stonbling in his own wyckednes, and commeth to a prophet, to aske counsell at me thowowe hym: vnto that man wyl I the Lord gyue answer by myne own selfe. I wil set my face agaynst that man, and wyl make hym to be an example for other, yea and a comē bityrb: and wil roote hym out of my people, that he may know that I am the lord.

when the lande synneth agaynst me, and goeth forth in wyckednes, I wyl stretche myne hand vpon it, and destroye all they? prouision of they? bread, and send dearthe vpon them to destroy mā and beast in the land. And though Noe, Daniel, and Job, these thre men wer among them, yet shall they in they? ryghtuousnes delpyer but they? owne soules, sayth the Lord God. If I byrnyng nopsome beastes into the land, to waste it vp, and it be desolate, that no mā may go therein for beastes: if these thre mā also were in the lande, as trulpe as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) they shal saue neyther sonnes nor daughters, but be onelpe deliuered them selues: and as for the land, it shall be waste.

Or if I byrnyng a stweard into the land, and charge it to go thowow the land: so that I slay downe man and beast in it, and if these thre men wer therein: As trulpe as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) they shal delpyer neyther sonnes nor daughters, but onelpe be saued them selues. If I send a pestilence into the land, and poure out my soze indignacion vpon it in bloude, so that I roote out of it both man and beast, and if Noe, Daniel, and Job, were therein: as trulpe as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) they shal delpyer neyther sonnes nor daughters, but saue they? own soules in they? ryghtuousnes. Moreover thus sayth the Lord God: Though I send my. iiii. troublous plagues vpon Ierusalem: the stweard, hunger, peryous beastes and pestilence, to destroy mā and beast out of it: yet shal ther be a remnant saued therein, which shal byrnyng forth they? sonnes and daughters. Behold they shal come forth vnto you, and ye shal see they? waye, and what they take in hande, and ye shalbe comforted, as touchyng all the plagues that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem. They shal comfort you, when ye se their way and works: and ye shal know how that it is not without a cause that I haue done so agaynst Ierusalem, as I did, sayth the Lord God. The .xv. Chapter.

Je. xv. d.

As the vnyprofytable woodde of the vyne tree is cast into the fyre, so (sayth he) that Ierusalem shalbe byent.

The word of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, What commeth of the vyne among al other trees: and of the vyne stocke among al other tymber of the groue? Do men take of it, to make any worke wythal? Or maye ther a nayle be made of it, to hange any thyng vpon? Beholde, it is cast in the fyre to be byente, the fyre consumeth bothe the endes of it, the myddest is byent to ashes: Is it mete then for any worke? No.

Seynge then that it was meete for no worke byyng whole, much lesse may there any thyng be made of it, whē the fyre hath consumed and byent it. And therefore thus sayth the Lord God: Lyke as I caste the vyne into the fyre for to be byent, as other trees of the wood: Euen so wyl I do wyth them that dwell in Ierusalem, and set my face agaynst them, they shal go oute from the fyre, and yet the fyre shal consume the. When shal ye knowe that I am the Lord, when I set my face agaynst the, and make the lande waste: because they haue so sore offended, sayth the Lord God.

The .xvi. Chapter.

The prophete entendyng to speake of the abominacions of Ierusalem: doth fyrst shewe the benefytes of God toward it. Ierusalem is reprobous of vnkynndnes, for her fornicaciō with ydols. He iustifyeth the wyckednes of other people in comparyson of the synnes of Ierusalem. The cause of p abominaciōs into which the Godomys set. Mercy is promysed to the repē repentaunte.

A Sayne, the worde of the Lord spake vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man shewe the cytpe of Iherusalem theyr abhominacions, and saye: thus sayeth the Lord God vnto Iherusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the land of Canaan, thy father was an Amozite, thy mother a Cethite. In the daye of thy birthe when thou wast borne, the (a) string of thy navel was not cutte of, thou wast not barbed in water to make the cleane, thou wast neyther rubbed with salt, nor swadled in cloutes. No man regarded the so much, as to do any of these thynges for the, or to shewe the such sauour, but thou wast utterly cast out vpon the feld, yea dyspyled wast thou in the day of thy byrth.

Then came I by the, and saw the trode done in thine owne bloud, and said vnto the, thou shalt be purged from thine owne bloud from thine own bloud (I say) shalt thou be censed. So I planted the, as the blossome of the field, thou art growen vp, and waken great, thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaunt beutye, thy breastes are come vp, thy herte is goodly growen, wher as thou wast naked and bare afoze.

Now when I went by the, and looked vpon the, beholde thy tyme was come, yea euen the tyme to vowe the. Then spied I my clothes ouer the, to couer thy dishonour, yea I made an oth vnto the, & married my self wth the (saith the Lord God) and so thou becamest myne own. Then washed I thee wth water, and purged the bloud from the. I anointed the wth oyle, I gaue the chaunge of rayments, I made the shoes of Exarus leather: I girded the aboute wth whyte sylke, I clothed thee wth kerchers, I decked the wth costly apparel, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chayne aboute thy necke, spanges vpon thy foreheade, earexynges vpon thyne eares, and set a beautifull crowne vpon thyne heade. Thus wast thou deckt wth syluer and golde, and thy rayment was of fyne whyte sylke, of needlewoorde, and of dyuerse coloures.

Thou dydest eat nathing but stinuels, honye, and oyle: maruelous goodlye wast thou and beutiful, yea euen a very Quene wast thou. In so much that thy (b) beauty was spoken of among the heathen, for thou wast excellent in my beuty, whych I put vpon the, sayeth the Lord God.

But thou hast put confydence in thyne own beauty, and played the harlot, when thou haddest gotte the a name. Thou hast committed whoredome, wth all that wot by the, and hast fulfilled theyr desires: yea thou hast taken thy garmentes of dyuerse coloures, and deckt thyne aulters therewith, wherupon thou myghtest fulfyl thy whoredome, of suche a fashyon, as neuer was done nor shalbe. The goodly ornaments and Jewelles, whych I gaue thee of myne owne gold and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymages thereof, and committed whoredome wth thal.

Thy garmentes of diuerse coloures hast thou taken and deckt them therewith, mine oyle and incense hast thou set before them.

My meate whych I gaue thee, as synnels, oyle, and honye (to feede the wth thal) that hast thou set before them, for a sweete sauour. And thys came also to passe sayeth the Lord God: Thou hast take thine owne sonnes and daughters, whome thou hadst begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered vp vnto them, to be theyr meate. As thys but a smal whoredome of thyne (thinkest thou) that thou shaldest my chyldren, & geuest them ouer, to be brente vnto them? And yet in al thy abhominacions & whoredome, thou hast not remembred the daies of thy youth, how naked & bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne own bloud. After al these thy wyckednesses (two two vnto the sayeth the Lord) thou hast buylded thy stewes and bydel houses in euerye place: yea at the heade of euerye strete haste thou buylded thee an aliter. Thou hast made thy beuty to be abhorred, thou hast layd out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multiplied thine whoredome. Thou haste committed fornicacion wth the Egypcyans thy neyghbours, which had much flesh, and thus haste thou bled thyne whoredome, to anger me.

Behold, I wyl stretch out my hand ouer the, and wyl mynsh thy store of foode, and delruer the ouer into the wyls of the whylines thyne enemyes, whych are ashamed of thy abhominable way. Thou haste played the whore also wth the Assyrians, whych myght not satysfye thee: Yea thou hast played the harlot, and not had enough. Thus hast thou styl committed thy fornicacion from the land of Canaan vnto the Caldees, & yet thy lust not satisfied. Howe should I circumcise thine hert (sayeth the Lord God) seying thou doest al these thynges, thou precious whore: buyldynge thy stewes at the head of euery strete, and thy bydel houses in al places?

Thou hast not bene as another whore, that maketh boast of her wynnynge, but as a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh other in stede of her housband. Gifts are geuen to al other whores, but thou giuest rewardes vnto all thy louers, and offerest them gyfts, to come vnto the oute of al places, and to commit fornicacion wth thee: It is come to passe wth thee in thy whoredoms contraye to the vse of other women: yea ther hath no such fornicacion bene committed after the, seying that thou proferest gyfts vnto other, & no reward is giuen the: thys is a contrary thyng.

Therfore heare the worde of the Lord, O thou harlot, thus sayeth the Lord God. For so much as thou hast spent thy mony, and dyscouered thy shame, thowste thy whore whoredome wyth al thy louers, and wyth al the ydols of thy abhominacions in the bloud of thy chyldren, whom thou hast geuen them: Behold therfore I wyl gather together al thy louers, vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe common: yea, and all them whom thou sauest, and euerpe one that thou hatest: and wyl dyscouer thy shame before them, that they al may see thy fylthynesse. Moreover, I wil iudge thee as a breaker of thy wedlocke, and a murderer, and recompence the thine owne bloud in wyath and gelousy. I wyl geue the ouer into theyr power, þ shal breake downe thy stewes, and destroy thy bodel houses: they shal strip the out of thy clothes, al thy fayre and beutiful Jewels shal they take from the, and so let the sit naked and bare: yea they shal bynge the common people vpon the, which shal stone the, and lay the downe wyth theyr sweardes. They shal burne vp houses, & punysh the in the sight of manpe women. Thus wyl I make thy whoredome to cease, so that thou shalte giue out no more rewardes.

Shoulde I make my wyath to be still, take my gelousye from thee, be contente, and no more to be dyspleased, seynge thou remembrest not the dates of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wyath in al these thynges? Beholde therfore, I wyl bynge thyne owne wayes vpon thyne head, sayeth the Lorde God: how be it I neuer dyd vnto thee accordynge to thy wyckednesse and all thy abhominacions. Beholde, all they that vse common prouerbes, shal vse thys þrouerbe also agaynst the: such a mother, such a daughter.

Thou art euē thy mothers own daughter, that hath cast of her husband and her chyldren. Yea thou art the syster of thy sisters, which forsooke theyr husbandes and theyr chyldren. Your mother is a Chitite, and your father an Amorite. Thine eldest syster is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwel vpon thy left hand.

But thy yongest sister that dwelleth on thy ryght hand, is Sodoma and her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wates, nor don after theyr abhominacions, but in al thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupt then they. As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lord god: Sodoma thy sister wyth her daughters, hath not done so euill, as thou and thy daughters. Behold the syns of thy syster Sodoma were these: þyde, fulnes of meate, aboundaunce and ydlenes: these thynges had she and her daughters. Besides that, they reached not their hand to the poore and needye, but were proude, and dyd abhominable thyngs before me: therfore them I rooke awaye, when I had sene it. Neether hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, yea thou hast exceeded them in wyckednes: In so much that in comparyson of al the abhominacions which þ hast done, thou hast made thy ters good women.

As for theyr captiuitie, namely the captiuitie of Sodoma and her daughters: the captiuitie of Samaria and her daughters I wyl bynge them agayne, so wyl I also bynge agayne thy captiuitie amonge them: that thou mayest take thyne owne confusion vpon thee, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, and to comforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her daughters, Samaria and her daughters, wyth thy selfe and thy daughters, shall be broughte agayne to poure olde estate.

When thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wyckednes came to the lyghte, thou wouldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodoma, vntil the time that the Syrias with al theyr townes, and the Philistines with al that lye round about them, brought the to shame and confusyon, that thou myghtest beare thyne owne fylthynesse and abhominacion, sayth the Lord.

For thus sayth the Lord God: I shoulde (þy syght) deale wyth thee, as thou hast done. Thou hast despised the oth, and broken the couenaunt. Neuerthelesse, I wyl remember the couenaunte that I made wyth the in thy youth, in so muche that it shalte be an euerlastyng couenaunte: so that thou also remember thy wayes, and be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receiue of me thy elder and younger sisters whome I wyl make thy daughters, and that besyde thy couenaunte. And so I wyl renew my couenaunte wyth the, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lorde: that thou mayest thynke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thyne own confusion no more: when I haue forgeue the al that thou hast done, sayth the Lord God.

The viii. Chapter.

The parable of the wood Eagles signifieth that redeliab which contrarye to hys other had forsaken the frendshipp of Nabuchodonosor, turned hym selfe to the kyng of Egypt, and therefore perished. An exposition of the parable. A Prophecy of Christ.

The word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, put forth a darcke speaking and a parable vnto the house of Israel, and say: Thus sayeth the Lord God. There came a greete Eagle with greete wynges, yea, with myghty long wynges, and ful of feathers of diuerse coloures, vpon the mount of Libanus, and tooke a bryanch from a Cedar tree, and brake of the top of hys twyg, and caried it vnto the lande of Canaan, and set it in a sty of marchauntes. He tooke also a bryanch of the lande, and planted it in a fruitful ground, he brought it vnto great waters, and set it as a willow treetherby.

It did it grow, and was a great vyne stocke, but low by the ground: thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, and spread out bryanches.

But ther was another Eagle, a greete one, whiche had greete wynges and many feathers, and behold, the rootes of thys vyne had an hunger after hym, and spread out hys bryanches toward hym, to water hys frutes. Neuertheles it was planted vpon a good ground beside great waters, so that (by reason) it shoulde haue broughte oute bryanches and fruit, and haue bene a good ly vyne.

Speake thou therefore: thus sayeth the Lord God. Shal this vyne prosper, shal not hys rootes be pluckt out, hys frute be broken of, hys grene bryanches wyther and fade away? yea, without eyther stryg arme or manye people, shal it be plucked vp by the rootes. Behold, it was planted: shal it prosper therefore? Shal it not be dried vp and wythered, yea, euen in the thooptyng out of hys blossoms, as soone as the east wynde bloweth?

Moreover, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Speake to that froward household: know ye not, what these things do signify? Tel them: beholde, the kyng of Babylon came to Ierusalem, and toke the kyng & his princes, and led the to Babilon.

He tooke of the kynges seede, and made a couenaunt with hym, and tooke an othe of hym: The wynges of the land toke he wyth hym also, that the lad might be holden in subiection, and not rebel, but keepe the couenaunt, and fulfyl it. But he fel from hym, and sent hys Embassadors into Egypt that he myght haue horses and much people. Shoulde that prosper? Shoulde he be kept safe, that doth such thyngs? Shoulde he escape that breaketh hys couenaunt? As truly as I lyue, sayth the Lord God, he shal dye at Babylon in the place wher the kyng dwelleth, that made hym kyng: whose othe he hath despised, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Therefore shal pharao with his great host and multitude of people maynrayne hym in the war: wher they cast vp dytches, and set bulwarkes to destroy much people. For sayng he hath despised the oth, and broke the couenaunt (wher as he yet gaue his hand therupon) and hath done all these thynges, he shal not escape.

Therefore thus saith the Lord God: As truly as I lyue, I wil bring mine oth that he hath despised, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vpon hys owne heade, I wil caste my net about hym, & catch hym in my patne. To Babylon wil I carry him, there wil I puny the hym, because of the great offence that he made me.

As for those that flye from him out of host, they shalbe slayne wyth the swearde. The residue shalbe scattered toward all the wyndes: and ye shal know, that I the Lord haue spoken it.

Thus sayth the Lord God: I wil also take a (a) bryanche from an hyghe Cedar tree, and wil set it, and take the vppermost twig, that yet is but tender, and plant it vpon an hye hyll: Namelye, vpon the hye hyll of Syon wil I plante it: that it maye bring forth twygs, and geue fruite and be a greete Cedar tree: so that all maner of foules maye byde in it, & make their nestes vnder the shadowe of hys bryanches. And al the trees of the field shal knowe that I the Lord haue brought down the hie tree, and set the lowe tre vp: that I haue dried vp the grene tre, and made the dry tree to flooryshe: Such I the Lord that speake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The xiiii. Chapter.

He sheweth that euerye man shal beare hys owne synne. To him that amendeth is saluacion promised. Death is prophesied to the ryghteous, whiche turneth backe from & right way.

The word of the Lord came vnto me on thys mannet: what meane ye by this common prouerbe, that ye vse in the lande of Israel, saynge: The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, and the childrens teeth are set on edge? As truly as I lyue, sayth the Lord God, ye shal vse thys byword no more in Israel.

Behold, al soules are myne. Lyke as the father is myne, so is the soune myne also. The sonne that synneth, shal dye. If a man be godly, and do the thyng that is equall and ryght, he eateth not vpon the byls: he lyftech not hys eyes vp to the Idoles of Israel: he desyleth not hys neyghbours wyfe, he medletb wpyth no menstruous woma, he greuetb no body, he geueth bys better bys pldge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by vpolence: he parteth bys meate wpyth the hongrye, he clotheb the naked, he lendeth nothing vpon vsury, he taketh nothpyng ouer, he wpythdza wpyth bys hand from doyng wrong, he handleth saythfully betwixt man and man, he walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, and perfourmeth them saythfully. Thys is a ryghtuous man, he shall surely lyue sayth the Lord God.

If he now get a sonne, that is a murderer, a shedder of bloud, if he do one of these thynges ( though he do not all) he eateth vpon the byls, he defyleth bys neighbours wyfe, he greuetb the poore and needye, he robberth and spoyleth, he geueth not the bys eyes vnto ydolles, and medletb wpyth the abhominable thyng, he lendeth vpon vsury, and taketh more ouer. Shall thys man lyue? He shall not lyue. Seing he hath done al these abominacions, he shall dye:

bys bloud shall be vpon hym.

Now if thys man get a sonne also, that feeth all bys fathers synnes, whpythe he hath done, and feareth, neyther doth suche lyke, Namelye he eateth not vpon the mountaynes, he lyftech not bys eyes vpon the ydolles of Israell, he defyleth not bys neyghbours wyfe, he vereth no man, he kepeth no mans pldge, he neyther spoy-leth nor robberth any man, he dealeth bys meate wpyth the hungrye, he clotheb the naked, he oppretheth not the poore, he recepueth no vsury, nor any thyng ouer, he kepeth my lawes and walketh in my commaundementes, Thys man shall not dye in bys fathers synne, but shall lyue wythoure fayle. As for his father, because he oppressed and spoyled bys brother, and byd wic-kedy among bys people: lo, he is deade in his owne synne. And yet say ye. Wherefore thou shalt not this sonne beare bys fathers synne? Therefore, because the sonne hath done equity and right, hath keppe all my commaundementes, and done them: therefore shall he lyue in deede. The same soule that synneth, shall die. The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, neyther shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnes of the ryghteous shall be vpon him, and the wickednes of the wicked shall be vpon hym selfe also. But if the vngod-ly wyll turne away from all bys synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thyng that is equal and righte: doubtes he shall lyue, and not dye. As for all his synnes that he doyd before (a) they shall not be thoughte vpon: but in his ryghteousnes that he hath done he shall lyue. For haue I any pleasure in the deathe of a synner, sayeth the Lord God, but rather that he conuert, and lyue?
Agayne, if the righteous turne away from bys ryghtuousnes, and do iniquity, accor-dyng to all the abominacions that the wicked man doth, shall he lyue? Al the righ-tuousnes that he hath done, shall not be thought vpon, but in the fault that he hath done, he shall dye.

And yet ye say: Tush, the way of the Lord is not indifferent. Heare therefore ye house of Israell: is not my way ryght. Or at not poure waies rather wicked? When a rightuous man tourneth away from his righ-tuousnes, and medletb wpyth vngodlynes, he must dye therein: yea for the vnyghtuousnes that he hath done, must he dye. A-gayne, when the wicked man turneth away from bys wickednes, he hath done, and doth the thyng which is equal & right he shall saue his soule althow. For in so much as he remembreth hym selfe, and turneth hym from al the vngodlynes that he hath doen, he shall lyue and not dye.

And yet saith the house of Israell, Tush the waye of the Lord is not equal: Are my wayes vnyght, O ye house of Israell? Are not poure wayes rather vnequall? As for me, I wyll iudge euery man, accordyng to bys wayes, O ye house of Israell, sayeth the Lord God.

Wherefore be conuerted, and turne your cleane from al poure wickednesse, so shall ther no syn do you harme. Cast awaye fro you al your vngodlynes, that ye haue don, make you new hearts and a newe spirite.
Wherefore wyll ye dye, O ye house of Israel? seing I haue no pleasure in the deathe of hym that dyeth, sayeth the Lord God:
Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

The Notes of the. xviii. Chapter.

(a) Shall not be thought vpon. The Sophis-ters haue a proper solution for thys text and such lyke whpych testify that God so forgueth, that he wyll not after cal agayne his forguenes and punishment. True it is (say they) God forgueth the synne, but not the punishment due vnto the synne. Seuen yeares punishment (as they prate) must we abyde in purgatory for euery synne, when it is forgiven. Yf thys be not to mocke wpyth God and bys holy woord, I wote not what is mockage. Yf God can, & do (as they affirme) geue me punishment due vnto my syn, so that he neyther geue me to muche nor to lytle payne therfore, and yet not once thynke on my synne, surely he hath a wonderful remembraunce.
And that he wyll not thynke on it, the text doth here openly affirme. By thys sophistery myghte the kyng geue a man bys pardon for theft, and after hang hym vpon. For he myght say: I forgaue you your theft, but not your hanging which is due vnto your theft. Such pardon wold they be loth to haue that first ymagyned it. Yf the king which is but a man be more saythfull, the to deale so wpyth his prisoners whom he forgesueth: how should God then whpych is our hea-uenly father, and which is euery goodnes it selfe, haue such a litle, fained, and vnperfect forguenes, that shuld after punish. But hereof wyll I now speake no more, leaste ye shoulde happye smell that thys solucy on were ymagyned to pyckemennys purses, thozowe Masse penre, dyngge Groates, Trentalles, ycare myndes, modesty myndes, &c.

The .xix. Chapter.

The .xix. Chapter.

The captivity of Jehoahaz: & of Jehoacin is signified by the Lyons whelpes, and by the lion. He setteth oute the prosperitie of the cytye of Jerusalem that is past, and the myserie ther of that is present.

But mourne thou for the prynces of Israel, and saye: Wherefore laye thy mother that Lyones among the Lyons, and noryshed her yong among the lions whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a Lyon: it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The heathen hearde of hym, and tooke hym in theyr nets, and broughte hym in chaynes vnto the land of Egypt.

Now when the dam sawe that all her hope and comfort was away, she tooke another of her whelpes, and made a Lyon of hym: whych went among the Lyons, and became a fierce Lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made theyr cityes waste. In so much that the whole land and euery thing therein, were utterly desolate thowme the very voyce of hys roaring.

Then came the Heathen together, on euery syde out of al countreys against him, layed theyr nets for hym, and tooke hym in theyr ppyte. So they bounde hym with chaynes, and broughte hym to the kyng of Babylon: whych put hym in pryson, that hys voyce should no more be herd vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a vyne in thy bloud, planted by the water syde: her frutes and braunches are growen out of many waters, her stalkes were so strong that men myghte haue made stauies therof for officers, she grewe so hygh in her stalkes.

So when men sawe that she exceded the heigth and multitude of her braches, she was rooted oute in dyspleasure, and cast downe to the ground.

The East wynde dried vp her frute, her stronge stalkes were broken of, withered and bent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wyldernes, in a dry and thursty ground. And ther is a fyre gone out of her stalkes, whych hath bent vp her braches and her frut: so that she hath no more strong stalkes, to be stauies for officers. This is a perillous and myserable thing.

The .xx. Chapter.

The Lord denpeth that he wyl answer them whan they praye, for the offence of unkyndnes whych he here objecteth. He promyseth that his people shall retorne from captiuyte. By the word that should be bent, is signified the burning of Jerusalem.

In the .xviii. yere the .x. day of the .iij. moneth, it happened that certayne of elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsel at the Lorde, and sette them downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of man speake vnto the elders of Israel, and say vnto them. Thus sayth the Lorde God: As ye come to aske any thing at me? As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord) I wyl geue you no answer. Wylt thou not reprove them? (I sonne of man) wilt thou not reprove them? Shew them the abominacions of theyr forefathers, and tel the. Thus sayth the Lord God: In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyft vp myne hand vpon the seede of the house of Jacob, and shewed my self vnto them in the land of Egypt: yea when I lyft vp mine hand ouer them, and sayed I am the Lord your God; euen in the day that I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, to bryng them out of the land of Egypt, into a lande that I had prouided for them, which floweth with mylke and honny, and is a pleasaunt land among al other: Then sayd I vnto them: Cast away euery man the abominacions that he hath before hym, and defile not your selues with the ydols of Egypt, for I am I Lord your god.

The Prophecy

But they rebelled against me, and wold not folow me: to cast away euery man the abominacions of hys etes, and to forsake the ydols of Egypte. Then I made me to pour my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfy my wrath vpon them: yea euen in the myddest of the land of Egypt. But I wold not do it, for my names sake, that it should not be vnhalowed before the Heathen, amonges whom I shewed my self vnto the: that I wold bryng them out of the lande of Egypt. Now when I had carped them out of the land of Egypt, and brought the into the wyldernes, I gaue them my commaundementes, and shewed the my lawes, whych who so keperth, shall lue in them, I gaue the also my holy dayes to be a token betwixt me and the, and therby to knowe that I am the Lord whych haloweth the. And yet I house of Israel rebelled against me in the wyldernes, they wold not walk in my commaundementes, they haue caste away my lawes (whych who so keepeth should lue in them) and my sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

Then I made me to pour out my indignacion vpon them, and to consume them in the wyldernes. Yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake, least it should be dishonored before the Heathen, from the which I had carped them away. But I swore vnto them in the wyldernes, that I wold not bryng them into the lande, whych I gaue them, a land that floweth with mylke and honny, and is a pleasure of al landes: & that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for theyr hert was gone after theyr ydols.

Neuer thelesse myne eye spared them, so that I wold not utterly slaye them, and consume them in the wyldernes. Moreouer I sayd vnto theyr sonnes in the wyldernes: walke not in the statutes of your fore forefathers, kepe not they: ordynances, and defyle not your felues wth they: p-dols, for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my laws, and do th<sup>m</sup>, halow my Saboths, for they are a token betw<sup>x</sup> me and you, that ye may know how that I am the Lorde.

But wthstandyng they: sonnes rebelled agaynst me also: they walked not in my statutes, they kept not my lawes to fulfyll them (whych be that doth shal lue in the) neither halowed they my Saboth daies.
Then I made me agayne to poure out my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfy my wth vth them in the wylernes. Neuer theles I wthdue my hnd for my names sake, lest it shoulde be vnhalowed amongs the heathen, before whom I had brought them forth. I lyft vp myne hand ouer the also in the wylernes, that I wold scatter them among the heathen, and strow them among the nations: because they had not kept my laws, but cast asyde my command- ementes, vnhalowed my Saboths, and lyft vp they: eyes to they: fathers pdols.

Wherfore I gaue them also command- ments not good, and lawes thowth the whych they shoulde not lue, and vnhalo-wed them in they: owne gyftes (when I appoynted for my selfe al their firstborne) to make them desolate: that they myghte know, how that I am the Lorde.

Therefore (thou sonne of man) tel the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God.
Besyde al thys, your forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offeded agaynst me: for after I had broughte the into the land, that I promysed to giue the when they saw euery hye hyl, and all the thychke trees: they made there they: offeryngs, and prouoked me wth they: oblacions, making swete saours ther, & poured out they: drinckofferynges. Then I asked them: what haue ye to do wthhall, that ye go thither? And therefore it is called the hye place vnto this day.

Wherfore speake vnto the house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde God: ye are eu<sup>er</sup> as vncleane as your forefathers: and com-myt whoredom also wth they: abhomy-nacions. In al your Idols, wherunto ye bryng your oblacions, & to whose honour ye burne your children: ye defile your sel-ues, eu<sup>er</sup> to this day: how dare ye the come, and aske question at me O ye household of Israel: As truly as I lue (sayth the lord God) ye get no aunsw<sup>er</sup> of me: as for the thing that ye go about, it shal not come to passe, whet as ye say: we wil be as the heathen, and do as the other people in y<sup>e</sup> land, wood, and stone wyl we worshyp.

As truly as I lue sayth the Lorde God:
I my selfe wyl rule you wth a myghtye hand, wth a stretched oute arme, & wth indignacion poured out ouer you and wil bring you oute of the nations and landes, wheremye are scattered, and gather you to gyther wth a myghtye hande, wth a stretched out arme, and wth indignacion poured out vpon you, & wil bring you into the wylernes of y<sup>e</sup> people, and ther I wyl reason wth you face to face. Like as I punished your forefathers in y<sup>e</sup> wylernes, so wyl I punish you also sayth the Lorde god.

I wil bring you vnder my iurisdiction, & vnder the bond of y<sup>e</sup> couenaunte. The for-sakers also & the trasgressours wil I take from among you, and bryng them oute of the land of your habitation: as for the lad of Israel, they shal not come in it, that they may know how that I am the Lorde.

So now then (sayth the Lorde God) ye house of Israel, cast away and destroy eu<sup>er</sup> y<sup>e</sup> m<sup>a</sup> bys pdols, the shal ye heare me, and no more blaspheme my holye name wth your offeringes, and pdols. But vpon my holye hyl, eu<sup>er</sup> the hye hyl of Israel shal all the house of Israel, and al that is in y<sup>e</sup> land, worshyp me: and in the same place wyl I sauour them, and ther wil I require your heau<sup>e</sup> offeringes, and the fulfillings of your oblacions, wth al your holy thynges.

I wyl accept your swete sauour, when I bring you from the nations, and gather you together out of the landes, wher in ye be scattered: that I maye be halowed in you before the heathen, and that ye maye know that I am the Lorde, whych haue brought you into the lande of Israel: yea into the same lande that I swore to geue vnto your forefathers: Ther shal ye cal to remembraunce your owne wayes, and al your imaginacions wher in ye haue bene despyled: and ye shal be dyspleased wth your owne felues, for al your wyckednesse whych ye haue done.

And ye shal knowe howe that I am the Lorde, when I intreat you after my name:
not after your wycked wayes, nor according to your corrupt workes, O ye house of Israel, sayth the Lorde.

Moreover, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward the South, and speake to the South wynde, and say to the wood toward the South. Heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayth the Lorde God. Behold, I wyl kyndle a fyre in the, that shal consume the (a) grene trees wth the drye. No man shalbe able to quench bys flame, but al that looketh from the South to the North shalbe bzet therin: and al flesh shal see that I the Lorde haue kyndled it. so that no m<sup>a</sup> may quench it. Then sayd I, O Lorde, they wyl saie of me. Tush, they are but fables that be tellet.

The. xxi. Chap.

to prophesie the destruction of the chylde of Ammon. After the slaughter of other, at the last the Lord threateth death vnto Nabuchodonozor hym selfe.

The word of the Lord came to me saying: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, and prophesy agaynst the land of Israel, saye to the land of Israel: Thus sayth the Lord God. Behold I wyl vpon the, and wyl draw my swerde out of the sheath, and roote out of the both thy righteouse, and the wycked. Sepnge then that I wyl roote out of the both thyghtous and wycked, therfore shal my swerd go oute of my sheath agaynst al flesh, from the North to the South: that al flesh may know how that I the Lord haue drawen my swerd out of my sheath, and it shal not be put in againe.

Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) that thy loines crack with al, yea mourne bytterly for them: And if they say, wherefore mournest thou? Then tel them: for the thyngs that cometh, at the whiche all hertes shal melt, al handes shall be letten downe, al stomackes shal faint, & al knees shal ware feable. Behold, it cometh, and shalbe fulfilled, sayth the Lord God.

Again, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, prophesie and speake: Thus sayeth the Lord God: speake, the swerd is sharpened and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be bryght, (a) O the destroying staffe of my sonne shal bring downe al wood. He hath put his swerd to the dryghting, that good hold may be taken of it. Thy swerde is sharpened and dryght that it may be geuen into the hande of the man slayer.

Crye (O thou sonne of man) and howle, for thy swerde shal smyte my people, and al the rulers in Israel, whiche with my people shalbe layne downe to the ground thorow this swerd. Smitte thou vpon thy thigh, for wherfore shoulde not the plage and staffe of iudgement come? Prophesie thou sonne of man and smyte thyne hands together: make the swerd two edged, yea make it thre edged, that manslayers swerd, that swerd of the great slaughter, whiche shal smyte them, euen in theyr priuy chambers to make them abashed and fainte at the hertes, and in al gates to make some of them fall. O bryght and sharpe it is, howe wel dyght, and mete for the slaughter. Get thee to some place alone, eyther vpon the right hand or vpon the left, whither soeuer thy face turneth. I wyl smyte my handes together also, and satisfy my wrathful indignacion. Euen I the Lord haue sayd it.

The word of the Lord came yet vnto me agayne, saying: Thou sonne of man, make the two stretes, that the swerde of the kynge of Babylon may come. So the these stretes shal goe oute of one lande. He shal set hym vp a place, at the head of the stretes shal he chose hym out a corner. Make the a strete that the swerde maye come toward Babath of the Ammonites, and to the strong city of Jerusalem.

For the kynge of Babylon shal stand in the turning of the way, at the head of the two stretes, to aske counsell at the southsayers, castinge the lots with his atomes to aske counsell at the ydols, & to loke in the spuer.

But the southsayng shal poynte to the ryght syde vpon Jerusalem, that ye maye set men of war to smyte it, with a greate noise to cry out alarum, to set battel rams against the gates, to graue by ditches, and to make bulwarkes.

Neuerthelesse, as for southsayng they shal hold it but for vanity, euen as though a test were tolde them: yea, and they them selues remember theyr wickednes, so that by ryght they muste be taken and wounne. Therefore sayeth the Lord God: For so muche as ye poure selues shewe poure offence, and haue opened poure wyckednes, so that in al poure moorkes men maye see your synnes: yea in so much (I say) that ye your selues haue made mencion therof, ye shalbe taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wycked guide of Israel whose day is come, euen the tyme that wyckednes shal haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lord God, take awaye the mytre, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted, & the proud brought low. Punyshe punyshe, yea punyshe them wil I, and destroye them: and that shal not be fulfilled vntill he come, to whome the iudgemente belongeth, and to whome I haue gyuen it.

And thou (O sonne of man) prophesie and speake: Thus sayth the Lord God to the chylde of Ammon, and to theyr blasphemers: I me speake thou: The swerd, the swerd is drawen forth alreedy to the slaughter, and scoured that it glystereth (because thou hast looked the out vanities, & prophesied lyes) that it may come vpon thy neck, like as vpon the other vngodlye, whiche be layne: whose daye came, when theyr wyckednes was ful.

Though it wer put by agayne into the sheath, yet wyl I punyshe the in the lande wher thou wast nourished and borne, and pour my indignacion vpon thee, and wyl blowe vpon the in the fyre of my wrath, and deliuer the vnto cruel people, whiche are deliuered to destroy. Thou shalt feede the fyre, and thy blood shalbe shed in the land, that thou maiest be put out of remembrance. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it.

The Notes of the. xxi. Chapter.

(a) Some read: Shal we reioyce our selues? He despiseth the staffe of my sonne, and al woodde. The Caldee readeth the trybe of my sonne: that is to saye, the trybe of Juda. O shall the staffe of my sonne dispise al woodde? That is, shal the trybe of Juda despise al the other.

The. xxii. Chapter.

The

The word of the Lord agaynst Jerusalem for man slaughter, and denyng due honoure to theyr fathers and mothers, and other wyckednesses. Of the wycked doctrine of the false prophets and priestes, and of theyr vnfaciable couetousnes. The Tyranny of rulers. The vnhyndnes of the people.

Moreouer the word of the lord came vnto me and sayed: thou sonne of manne wylt thou not retriue thy bloud thyselfe? Shewe them theyr abominacions and tel them: Thus sayeth the Lord God. O thou crite that shedest bloud in the myddest of the, that thy time may come also, and makest the ydolles to despyle the wyrtball. Thou hast made thy selfe gylyt in the bloude that thou hast shed: and despyled the in the ydols whiche thou hast made.

Thou hast caused thy dates to draw nie, and made the spie of thy yeares to come. Therefore wyl I make the to be confounded among the Heathen, and to be despyled in al the landes, whether they be nie or far from the: they shal laugh the to scorne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, and art ful of myschiefe. Beholde, the rulers of Israel haue brought euery mā bys power, to shed bloude in the. In the haue they despyled father and mother, in thee haue they oppressed the straunger, in thee haue they vexed the wyddow and the fatherles. Thou hast despyled my sanctuary and vnhalowed my Saboth. Murderers are ther in the, that shed bloud and eat vpon the hylls, and in the they vse vnhappynes.

In the haue they discovered their fathers shame, in thee haue they vexed women in theyr sickenes. Euerye man hath dealt shamefully with his neighbours wife, and abominably defiled bys daughter in law. In the hath euerye man forced bys owne syster, euerye bys fathers doughter: yea giftes haue bene receiued in the to shed bloud. Thou hast taken vsury and encrease, thou hast oppressed thy neighbours by extorcion and forgotten me, sayth the Lord God.

Behold, I haue smitten my hands vpon thy couerousnes that thou hast vsed, and vpon the bloude whych hath bene shed in the. As thy hert able to endure it, or maye thy hands defend them selues in the tyme that I shall bring vpon thee: Euen I the Lord that speake it, wyl bring it to passe. I wyl scatter thy selfe amonge the Heathen and strow the about in the landes: and wil cause thy fylchpnesse to cease out of thee: yea and I wil haue the in possession in the syghte of the Heathen, that thou mayest know that I am the Lord.

And the word of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, the house of Israel is turned to dross. All they that should be brasse, tyron, and leade, are in the fyre become dross. Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: For so much as ye al are turned into dross, behold, I wyl bringe you together vnto Jerusalem lyke as syluer, brasse, tyron, and leade are put together in the furnace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melt them: Euen so wil I gather you, put you in together, and melte you in my wrath and indignacion. I wyl bringe you together, and kindle the fyre of my cruel dyspleasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin. Like as the siluer is melted in the fyre, so shal ye also be melted therein, that ye may know how that I the lord haue poured my wrath vpon you.

And the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tel her: Thou art an vnclene land, whych is not rapned vpon in the dawe of thy cruell wrath: the prophets that are in the, are sworne together to deuoure soules, lyke as a roaring Lion that lyueth by his pray.

They receyue ryches and good, & make many widowes in the. Thy priestes breake my law, and defile my Sanctuary. They put no difference betwene the holy and vnholy, neither discern betwene the cleane and vnclene: they turne theyr eyes from my sabotbes, & I am vnhalowed among the. Thy rulers in the are lyke rautching wolues to shed bloud, to destroy soules for their owne couetous lucre. As for thy prophets, they dawbe with vntempered claye, they se vanities, and prophete lyces vnto the, sayinge: the Lord God sayth so, where as the Lord hath not spoken. The people in the land vse wicked extorcion and robbery. They were y poore and needy, and oppressed the straunger against right.

And I sought in the land for a mā that would make vp the hedge, and set him self in the gap before me, in the lands behalf, that I should not utterly destroy it, but I could fynde none. Therefore wyl I poure out my cruel displeasure vpon them, and burne them in the fyre of my wrath: theyr own waies wil I recompence vpon theyr heades, sayth the Lord God.

The.xxi. Chapter.
Of the fornication, meaning the Idolatrye of Samaria and Jerusalem, vnder the names of Dholah and Dholibah. In comparyson of Samaria he sheweth that the fornicacion of Jerusalem is the filthier. The destruction of Jerusalem is propheted. The aduourty of both the whores is found out. Theyr destruction.

The word of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou son of mā ther wer. ii. womē that had one mother: These (whiche ther wer pong) began to play y harlotes in Egypt. Ther wer their breasts brosed, & y paps of their maidenhead destroyed. The eldest of the was called Dholah, & her yongest syster Dholibah. These. ii. wer mine, & bare sons & daughters, their names wer Samaria, & y was Dholah: & Jerusalem y was Dholibah. As for Dholah, she began to go a whoring, whiche I had take her to me. She was set on fyre vpon her louers the Assirians, which had to do with her: euen y princes and Lords that wer dect in costly array.

The Prophecy

That is I dwel in her
as in my ho ly place.

I saye pong men lusty ryders of horses.
Thus thow to her whoredome, she cleued vnto al the young men of Assiria: Yea she was mad vpon them, and despyled her selfe wytth al theyr ydolles. Next she ceased she from the fornicacyon that she vsed wyth the Egyptians: for in her yowthe they laye wyth her, they brosed the breasts of her maidenhead, and poured theyr whoredome vpon her. Wherefore I deliuered her into the hands of her louers, euen the Assirians whom she so loued. These dyscouered her shame, tooke her sonnes and daughters, & slew her wyth the sword. An euyl name gat she of al people, and they punished her.
Her sister Oholibab saw this, and destroyed her selfe with inordinate loue, more then she, and exceeded her sister in whooredome, she loued the Assirians (whych also lay wyth her) namely the princes & great Lords, that were clothed wyth al maner of gorgeous apparel, al lusty horsmen, and fatte pong persons. When I saw that they both were despyled alike.

But she encreased still in whoredome: for when she saw men paynted vpon the wal, the ymages of the Caldees set forth wyth fresh coloures, wyth saye gyrdels about them, and goodly bonets vpon theyr hea-des, loking al lyke princes (after the maner of the Babylonians and Chaldees in theyr owne land, wher they be borne) immediately as soone as she saw the, she bryt in loue vpon them, and sent messengers for them into the land of the Caldees.

Nowe when the Babylonians came to her they lay wyth her, and defiled her with their whoredome, and so was she polluted wyth them. And when her lust was abated from them, her whoredome and shame was dyscouered and sene, then my hearte forsooke her, lyke as my hearte was gone from her sister also.

Nevertheless, she vsed her whoredome euer the longer the more, and remembred p dayes of her youth, wherin she had plaied the harlot in the land of Egypt, she bryt in lust vpon them, whose flesh was like the flesh of asses, and theyr seede lyke the seede of horses. Thus thou haste renued the syl-thynges of thy youth, when thy louers bro-sed thy pappes, and married thy breasts in Egypt. Wherefore (O Oholibab) thus sayeth the Lord God, I wyll rayse vp thy louers (wyth whō thou hast satisfied thy lust) against the, and gather the together round about the: namely the Babylonians, & all p Caldees: Decod, Schoa and Coa, wyth al the Assirians, al pong and fatte louers, princes and lords, knyghtes and gentlemē whych be al good horsmen: these shal come vpon the with horses, charets, and a great multitude of people, whych shal be harne-sed about on euery side, with breastplates, sheldes & helmets, I wil punish the before the, yea they them selues shal punish thee, according to their own iudgement. I wyll put my gelously vpon the, so that they shal deale cruelly wyth the. They shal cutte of thy nose and thine eares, and remnant shal fall thow the sword. They shal carry away thy sonnes and daughters, and the residue shal be dynt in the fyre. They shal strypp the out of thy clothes, and carpe thy costly Jewels away wyth them.

Thus wyll I make an end of thy sylthy-nes & whoredome, which thou hast brought out of the land of Egypt, that thou shalt turne thyne eyes no more after them, and cast thy mynde vpon Egypt. For thus saeth the Lord, behold, I wyll deliuer thee into the hands of them, whome thou ha-test: yea, euen into the hands of the, wyth whom thou hast fulfilled thy lust, whiche shal deale cruelly wyth the. Al thy labour shal they take wyth them, and leue the naked and bare: and thus the shame of thy sylthy whoredome, shal come to lycht. All these thynges shal happē vnto the, because of thy whoredome, which thou hast vsed among the Gentyles wyth whose Idolles thou hast defiled thy selfe. Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister, therefore wil I geue the her cup in thy hand.

Thus sayeth the Lord God. Thou shalt drynke of thy sisters cup, bowe deepe and far fouer it be to the botom. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and had as great in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt be ful of dronkenness and sorowe: for the cup of thy sister Samaria, is a cup of destruction and wastynge: the same shalt thou drynke and sup it out, euen to the dregs: yea thou shalt eat vp the broken peces of it, and so teare thyne own breasts: For euen I haue spoken it sayeth the Lord God.

Therefore thus saith the Lord God: For so much as thou hast forgottē me, and cast me asyde, so beare now thyne own sylthy-nes and whoredome.

The Lord saied moreouer vnto me, thou sonne of man, wyll thou not reprove Oholab, and Oholibab? Shew the theyr abho-minacions: namely that they haue broken theyr wedlocke, and stayned theyr handes wyth bloude: yea euen wyth theyr ydolles haue they committed adoutry, and offered them theyr own chyldren (to be deuou-red) whom they had borne vnto me.

Yea and this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defiled my sanctuary, in that same day, and haue vnhallowed my Sabbath. For when they had slaine theyr children for their ydols, they came p same day in my sanctuary to despyle it. Lo thus haue they done in my house.

Beside al this, thou hast sene thy messegers for men out of far countreies: & when they came, thou hast barbed, trimmed and set forth the thy selfe of the best facion: thou sattest vpo a goodly bed, and a table spred before the, wher vpo thou hast set mine incense and myne oyle.

Then was there greete chere wyth her,
and

and the men that were sent from far countries over the desert, unto these they gave bracelets upon their handes, and set glorious crownes upon theyr heades: then thought I: no doubt these will use theyr harlotrye also with ponder olde whore. And they went into her, as one unto a common harlot. Euen so went they also to Dholiab and Dholibab those filthy women.

Leuit. xx. 6.
Ezec. xvi. 10.
O ye all that loue vertue and rightousnes iudge them, and punyſhe them: as adulterers & murderers ought to be iudged and punyſhed. For they are breakers of wedlock, & the blood is in their handes. Wherefore thus ſaith the Lord god: Bring a great multitude of people vpon them, & make them be ſcattered & ſpoyled: theſe ſhall ſtone the, and gore them with theyr ſwerdes. They ſhall ſlay theyr ſonnes and daughters, & burn vpon their houſes with fyre. Thus will I deſtroye all ſuche fylthyneſſes out of the lande, that all women may learne, not to doo after your vnclennes. And ſo they ſhall laye your fylthyneſſes vpon your owne ſelues, & ye ſhall be punyſhed for the ſinnes that ye haue committed with your ydolles, and ye ſhall knowe that I am the Lord.

The. xliii. Chapter.

He prometh the ſpying of Jeruſalem by a parable of a ſethyng pot. The parable of Ezechiel's wyfe beeyng dead whiche he after expoundeth.

Eze. xlii. a
Ezech. xi. b
In the ninth pere, in the tenth moneth, the tenth day of the moneth, came the word of the lord vnto me, ſaying: O thou ſonne of man wyte vpon the name of this day, yea, euen the houre of this preſent daye, when the kyng of Babylon ſet hym ſelf agaynſt Jeruſalem. Shewe that ſubborne houſe ſhoulde a parable, and ſpeake vnto them. Thus ſaith the Lord God. Get the a pot, ſet it on, & poure water into it, put all the peces together in it, al the good peces, the loine & the ſhoulder, and fil it with the beſt bones. Take one of the beſt hepe, and an heape of bones with all, let it boyle wel, and let the bones ſerue wel therein.

With that ſayd the Lord God on this manner: Wo be vnto the bloudy city of the pot, wherupon the ruſtyneſſe hangeth, and is not yet ſcourged awaye. Take out the pieces that are in it, one after an other, there nede no lots be caſt therefore, for the blood is yet in it. Vpon a plaine dry ſtone hath ſhe poured it, & not vpon the ground that it myght be covered with duſt. And therefore haue I lett her poure her blood vpon a plaine dry ſtony rocke, becauſe it ſhould not be hyd, & that I myght bypnyng my wrathful indignacion & vengeance vpon her. Wherefore thus ſaith the Lord god: Wo be vnto that bloud thirſty citty, for whom I will prepare a heape of woodde: beate thou the boones together, kyndle thou the fyre, ſet the fleſh, let all be well ſodden, that the bones maye be ſuckt out.

Moreouer ſet the potte emptye vpon the coales that it maye be warme, and the metall hote, that the fylthe and ruſtyneſſe maye be conſumed.

But it will not goo of, there is ſo much of it: the ruſtyneſſe muſt be brente out. Thy fylthyneſſe is abhominable, for I woulde haue clenſed the, but thou woldeſt not be clenſed. Thou canſt not be pouged from thyne vnclennesſe, tyl I haue poured my wrathful indignacion vpon the. Euen I the lord haue ſo deuyſed: Yea it is come thereto already that I will doo it. I will not go backe, I will not ſpare, I will not be intreated: but accordyng to thy wayes & ymaginacions thou ſhalt be punyſhed ſayeth the Lord God.

And the woorde of the Lord came vnto me ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man, beholde: I will take awaye the pleaſure of thyne eyes with a plague: yet ſhalt thou neyther mourne nor wepe, ne water thy chekes therefore: thou mayeſt mourne by thy ſelfe alone, but uſe no deadly lamentacion. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy ſhoes vpon thy fete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners breade. So I ſpake vnto the people by tymes in the mournyng, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte morning I did as I was commaunded. And the people ſayd vnto me: wilt thou not tel vs what that ſignified whiche thou doſt?

I answered them, the word of the Lord came vnto me, ſayinge: Tell the houſe of Iſrael, thus ſaith the Lord God: behold I will ſuſpende my Sanctuarie, euen the glorie of your power, the pleaſure of your eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: your ſonnes and daughters whom ye haue left, ſhall fall thorow the ſwerde. Lyke as I haue done, ſo ſhall ye do alſo: Ye ſhall not hyde your faces, ye ſhall eate no mourners breade: your bonnettes ſhall ye haue vpon your heades, & ſhoes vpon your fete.

Ye ſhall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in your ſynes ye ſhall be ſorrowfull, and one repente with an other. Thus Ezechiel is your ſhe token. For like as he hath done, ſo (when this cometh) ye ſhall doo alſo: that ye maye lerne to knowe that I am the Lord God. But beholde, O thou ſonne of man: In the daye when I take from them theyr power, theyr top and honour, the luſte of theyr eyes, the burthen of theyr bodies: namely theyr ſonnes and daughters. Then ſhall there one eſcape, and come vnto the: for to ſhewe the. In that daye ſhall thy mouth be opened to hym whiche is eſcaped, that thou mayeſt ſpeake, and be no more dumme: Yea, and thou ſhalt be theyr ſhe token, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lord.

Eze. xli. d.
Jer. xli. a

The word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of mā, set thy face agaynst the Ammonytes: Prophecie vpon the, & say vnto the Ammonytes, heare the worde of the Lorde God. Thus sayth the Lorde God. For so muche as thou speakest ouer my Sanctuary, a ha, I trow it be now suspended: & ouer the lāde of Israel, I trow it be now desolate, yea & ouer the house of Iuda, I trowe they be now ledde awaye prysoners. Beholde, I wyl deliuer the to the people of the East, that they may haue the in possession: these shal set theyr castels & houses in the. They shal eate the fruyte and dryncke by thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyl make of it a stal for camelles, and of Ammon a shepe folde, & ye shal know that I am the Lorde.

W For thus sayeth the Lorde God: In so muche as thou hast clapped with thine handes & stamped with thy fete, yea reioysed in thine heart ouer the land of Israel with despyte, beholde, I wyl stretch out myne hand ouer the also, & deliuer the to bespoyled of the Heathē, & roote the oute from among the people, & cause the to be destroyed out of all landes: yea I wyl make the be layed waste, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lorde.

W Thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so muche as Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house of Iuda, it is but lyke as all other Gentyles be, Therefore beholde I will make y cities of Moab weaponles, & shal take awaye theyr strength & cite cities and chiefe coastes of their lande, which are the pleasures of the cōstrey: As namely Bethesimoth, Baalmeon, and Cariathaim, these wyl I open vnto them of the East, that they may fall vpon the Ammonytes, & wyl geue it them in possession, so that the Ammonytes shal no more be had in remembrance amonge the Heathen. Euen thus wyl I punte Moab also, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

W Moreover thus sayeth the Lorde God, Because that Edom hath auenged and eased hym self vpon the house of Iuda; therefore thus sayth the Lorde, I will reache out myne hand vpon Edom, & take awaye man and beast out of it. Fro Heman vnto Dedan will I make it desolate; they shal be slaine with the sword. Therefore my people of Israel wil I auenge me agayne vpon Edom: they shal handle hym accordinge to my wrath & indignacion, so that they shal knowe my vengeance, sayth the Lorde God.

W Thus sayeth the Lorde God. For so muche as the Philistines haue done this, namely taken vengeance with despyte full stomackes, and of an olde cuppl wyl I set them selues to destroy, Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyl stretch out myne hande ouer the Philistines, and destroy the destroyer, & cause al the remnant of the sea coste to perishe. A great vengeance wyl I take vpon them, and puny the them cruelly; that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde, which haue auenged me of them.

The. xlv. Chapter.

The propheticth that Tyus shall be ouerthrowen, because it reioyced at the destruction of Ierusalem. The wondering & astonishment of the marchauntes, for the desolation of Tyus.

It happened that in the. xi. yere the first day of the moneth, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying. Thou sonne of mā, because that Tyre hath spoken vpon Ierusalem. A ha, now I trow the portes of the people be broken, and she turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my helpe full.

Yea, therefore sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, O Tyre, I wyl bring a great multitude of people agaynst the, lyke as whē the sea ryseth with his waues. These shal breake the walles of Tyre, and cast downe her towres: I wyl scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yea as the dryinge place where the fyshers hange vpon the nettes by the sea syde. Euen I haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God. The Gentyles shal spole her, her daughters vpon the felde shal perishe with the sword, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

W For thus sayeth the Lorde God: behold, I wyl bringe byther Nabuchodonosor (which is the king of Babylon, and a king of kinges) fro the North vpon Tyre, with horses, charrettes, horsemen, & with a great multitude of people. Thy daughters that are in the lāde, shal he sle with the sword: but agaynst the he shal make bulworkes, and graue by dyches aboute the, and lyfte vp his shylde agaynst the. His langes and battell cammes shal he prepare for thy walles, & with his weapons breake downe thy towres. The dust of his horses shal couer the, they shal be so many: thy walles shal shake at the noyse of the horsemen, charrettes, and wheles, when he cometh to thy portes, as men doo into an open cite. With the hofes of his horse fete, shal he treade downe all thy stretes.

W He shal sle thy people with the sword, & breake downe the pylers of thy strength. They shal waste awaye thy riches, & spole thy marchaundys. Thy walles shal they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy timbre and foundations, shal they cast in the water. Thus wyl I bringe the melodye of thy songes, and the voyce of thy mynstrelsy to an end, so that they shal nomore be heard. I wil make a bare stone of y, yea a dryinge place for nettes, & shal neuer be buylded agayne. For euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God. Thus hath the Lorde God spoken concerninge Tyre: The Isles shal be moued at the noyse of thy fall, and al the crye of the sayne that shal be murthered in the. Al kynges of the sea shal come downe

The xxviii. Chapter.

The Prophet is moued to bewaile the desolacion of Tyre. He setteth oute the prayle of Tyre for the haunteynge of marchauntes thereto.

A The worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte vpon Tyre, and say vpon Tyre, which is a poete of the sea that occupyeth with much people and many ples: Thus speaketh the Lord God. O Tyre, thou hast said: What? I am a noble cytie: Thy borders are in the myddest of the sea, and thy builders haue made the merueylous goodly, all thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of the mount of Sanir. From Libanus haue they taken Cedre trees to make the mastes: & the okes of Basan to make the towers.

B Thy borders haue they made of puerp, & costly wood out of pple of Cethim. Thy sayle was of white small nedle worke out of the lande of Egypte, to bange vpon thy mast: and thy hangynges of yelow silk purple, oute of the ples of Elyfab. They of Sidon and Arvad were thy mariners, and the wyldest in Tyre were thy shippmasters. The eldest & wyldest at Gedall were they that mended and stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the sea wyth theyr shippmen occupied theyr marchaundes in thee. The Perles, Lidians, & Libians, were in thine hoste, & helped the to fight: these hanged vpon theyr shieldes and helmettes wyth the, these set forth thy beautie. They of Arvad were wyth thyne hoste rounde about thy walles, and were thy watchmen vpon thy towres, these hanged vpon theyr shieldes rounde aboute thy walles, and made the maruelous goodly. Tharlis occupied with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tinne, and lead, & made thy market great. Iauan, Tubal, & Mesech were thy marchauntes, which brought the men and ornaments of metall for occuppyng. They of the house of Thogarma, brought vnto the at the tyme of thy marre, horse, horsemen and mules. They of Dedan were thy marchauntes: and manye other ples that occupied with the, brought the wetters, Elephant bones, & peccokes for a preser. The Sirians occupied with the, because of thy diuers workes, & increased thy marchaundysse, with Smaragdes, wyth scarlet, wyth nedle worke, wyth whyte linnen cloth, with silke and wyth Christall.

Juda and the lande of Israel occupied with the, and brought into thy markets, wheate, balme, bony, oyle, & trespale. Damascus also vld marchaundysse with the, in the best wine and white woll: because thy occuppyng was so greate, and thy wares so manye. Dan, Iauan, and Mesull, haue brought vnto thy markets, yron reade made, wyth Cassia and Calamus, according to thyne occuppyng. Dedan occupied with the, in sayre tapestrey worke & quoythyns. Arabia, & al the prynces of Cedar haue occupied with the, in shepe, wetters & goates. The marchauntes of Seba & Kema, haue occupied also wyth thee, in costly spyes, in al precious stones, & gold, whych they brought vnto thy markettes. Haran, Chene, and Eden: the marchauntes of Saba, Assiria and Chelmad, were all doers wyth the, & occupied wyth the: in costly rayment, of yelow silk and nedle worke (verye precious, and therefore packt and bounde togyther wyth ropes.) Yea and in Cedre woode, at the tyme of thy markettes. The shippes of Tharlis were the chiefe of thy occuppyng.

Thus thou art full, and in worshyppe euen in the myddest of the sea. Thus marchyners were euer bringyng vnto the oute of many waters. But the East wynde shall ouerbeare the into the myddest of the sea: so that thy wares, thy marchaundysse, thy ryches, thy mariners, thy shippmasters, thy helpers, thy occupiers (that brought the thynges necessary) the men of warre that are in the: yea and all thy commens shall perishe in the myddest of the sea, in the day of thy fall. The suburbs shall shake at the loude crye of thy shippmen. Al wherry men, & al mariners vpon the sea, shall leape out of theyr botes, and set them selues vpon the lande. They shall lyfte vpon theyr voyce because of the, and make a lamentable cry. They shall cast dust vpon their heades, and lye downe in the ashes. They shall haue them selues, & put sacke cloth vpon them for thy sake.

Whē thy wares and marchaundise came from the seas, thou gauest all people ynoughe. The kynges of the earth haste thou made ryche, thowowe the multitude of thy wares and occuppynges.

But thou art now cast downe into the depe sea, all thy resorte of people is perished wyth thee. All they that dwell in the Isles are abashed at the, & al they kynges are afrayed, yea they faces haue chaiged coloure. The marchauntes of the nations wonder at the. The woode of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tell the prynce of Tyre. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: because thou hast a proude heart, & hast sayd: I am a God, I haue my seate in the myddest of the sea, lyke a God: wheras thou art but a man and not God, and yet standest in thyne owne conceit, that thou art God: Beholde, thou thyntest thy selfe wyser then Daniel, that ther is no secretes hyd from thee.

Wyth thy wysdome and thy vnderstaundyng, thou hast gotten the great welchynesse and gathered treasure of syluer, and golde: Wyth thy great wysdome and occuppynges hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy great ryches, thy herte is proude. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so muche as thou hast lyst vpon thine herte, as though thou were God, behold, I wyl bring enemyes vpon the, euen the tyrauntes of the Heathen: these shall draw out their sweardes vpon thy beauty and wysdome, and shall despyle thy glory. Carbuncle, and Golde. Thy beauty and the holes that be in thee, were set forth in the daye of thy creacion. Thou arte a sayre Cherub, stretched wyde oute for to couer.

I haue set the vpon the holy mounte of God, ther hast thou bene, & walked among the sayre glysternge stones. From the tyme of thy creacion thou hast bene ryght excellent, tyll wyckednesse was founde in thee. Because of thy marchaundise, thy herte is full of wyckednesse, and thou hast offended. Therefore wyl I cast the from the mount of God (I thou couering Cherub) and destroye the amonge the glysternge stones. Thy herte was proude in thy sayre beauty, & thowowe thy beauty, thou hast destroyed thy wysdome, I wyl cast the downe to the grounde, and that in the syght of kynges.

Thou haste despyled thy Sanctuarie, wyth the greate wyckednesse of thy vnrightheous occuppynges. I wyl bringe a fyre from the myddest of the, to consume thee: and wyl make the to ashes, in sight of all the that loke vpon the. All they that haue bene acquainted wyth the amonges the Heathen, shall be abashed at the: for ynge thou art so cleane brought to nought, and comest no more vp.

And the woode of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, sette thy face agaynst Sydon. Prophecie vpon it, and speake. She shall no more be a pryckynge thorne, and an hurtynge byer vnto the house of Israhell, nor vnto them that lye rounde aboute her and hate her: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: when I gather the household of Israhell together agayne from the nations amonge whom they be scatered: then shall I be sanctified in them in the syght of the Gentyls, and they shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to my seruante Jacob. They shall dwell safely therein, buylde houses and plante vyneyardes: yea safely shall they dwell therein, when I haue punysshed all those that despyle them rounde aboute, and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde theyr God.

I will put an hooke in thy chawes, and hange all the fysh in thy waters vpon thy scales: after that I will drawe the oute of thy waters: Yea and all the fysh of thy waters that hange vpon thy scales. I will caste the oute vpon the drye lande wth the fysh of thy waters, so that thou shalt lye vpon the felde. Thou shalt not be gathered nor taken vp, but shalt be meate for the bestes of the felde, and for the soules of the ayre: that all they whiche dwel in Egypt, may knowe, that I am the Lorde: because thou hast bene a staffe of reede to the house of Israel. When they tooke hold of the wyth theyr handes thou brakest and pyckedst them on euery syde: & yf they leaned vpon the, thou brakest & hurtest the reynes of theyr backes. Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde I will brynge a swerde vpon the, and roote out of the both man and beast. Yea the lande of Egypt shall be desolate and waste, & they shall knowe that I am the Lorde: Because he sayd: that water is myne, I my selfe haue made it: Beholde therefore, I will vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I will make the lande of Egypt waste & desolate, fro the towre of Syenes, vnto the borders of the Moztians lande, so that in xl. yeres there shall no foote of man walke there, neyther foote of cattell good there, neyther shall it be inhabited. They shall no more be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neither prouoke them any more to wyckednes, to cause them turne backe and to solowe them: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde God. In the xxv. yeare, the first daye of the first month, came the woorde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon hath made hys hoste, wth greate trauayle & laboure to come before Tyre: that euery head may be balde, & euery shoulde bare. Yet hath Tyre giuen neyther hym nor hys host any rewarde, for the greate trauayle that he hath taken there.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde I will gyue the lande of Egypt vnto Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon, that he maye take awaye all her substance, rob her robberes, and spoyl her spoyles, to pay hys host their wages wthal. I wil gyue him the lande of Egypt for his laboure that he toke for me before Tyre. The Notes of the xxx. Chapter.

(a) The propertie of Dragons is to hunt where aboundaunce of waters are: Therefore is the kyng of Egypt here called a Dragon, because of the aboundaunce of waters that are in Egypt, where he raygned. So is Jerusalem called a steele, because of her haunting of Idolatry: as before in the. xv. c. d

The xxx. Chapter.

The destruction of Egypt and of hys ctytes is bewayled.

The woorde of the Lorde came mozeouer vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, prophesye & speake: thus sayth the Lorde God: Mourne, woe worthe thys day, for the day is here, the day of the Lorde is come: the darke day of the Heathen, the houre is at hande, the swerde cometh vpon Egypt. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypt, when her people are taken away, and when her foundations are destroyed, the Moztians lande shall be afrayed, yea the Moztians lande, Libia and Lidia, al their common people, and Chub, al that be confederate vnto them, shall fall wth them thorowe the swerde.

Ezech. xxi.
xxi. c

Thus sayeth the Lorde: the maynteyners of the lande of Egypt shall fall, the pryde of her power shall come downe, euen vnto the tower of Syenes shall they beslayne downe wth the swerde, sayeth the Lorde God: amonge other desolate countreys they shall be made desolate, and among other waste ctytes they shall be wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypt, & when al her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme, shall their messengers goo forth fro me, in shyps, to make the carelesse Moztians afrayed, & sorrow shall come vpon them in the daye of Egypt, for doubtlesse it shall come.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will make an ende of the people of Egypt thoro the hand of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon. He and his people wth hym, yea and the cruell tyrantes of the Heathen even shall be brought to destroy the lande. They shall draw out theyr swordes vpon Egypt, and fyl the lande full of slayne me, I wyl dype vpon theyr floudes of water, and sell the lande into the handes of wycked people. The lande and all that is therein, wyl I destroy thorow the enemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayd it.

I And thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyl destroy the Idolles, & brynge the Images of Asoph to an end. There shall no more be a prince of Egypt, and a fearfulnesse wyl I sende into the Egyptians lande. As for Pathures, I wyl make it desolate; and kyndle a fyre in soan, Alexandria wyl I punyche, and poure my wrathful indignacion vpon Sin, which is the strength of Egypt. Al the substance of Alexandria wyl I destroy, and kyndle a fyre in Egypt.

E Sin shall be in great heauynesse, Alexandria shall be rooted oute, and Asoph shall haue dayly sorowe. The best men of Heliopolis and Bubaste shall be slaine with the sword, & carryed away captiue. At Taphnis the day shall be darke, when I breake there the Sepher of the lande of Egypt, & whē the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, & her boughers shall be ledde awaye into captiuitie. Thus wyl I punyche Egypt, that they may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

I It happened in the .xj. yere, vpon the seuenth daye of the first moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, saying: Beholde thou sonne of man, I wyl breake the arme of Pharao kyng of Egypt: and loe it shall not be bounde vp to bee healed, neyther shall any playster be layde vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so strong, as to holde a sword. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wyl vpon Pharao the kyng of Egypt, & bryse his stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) and wyl I smyte the sword out of his hande.

As for the Egyptians, I wyl scatter the among the Heathen, and strow the in the landes about. Agayne I wyl strength the arme of the kyng of Babilō, and gyue him my sword in his hand: but I wyl breake Pharaos arme, so that he shall holde it before hym piteously lyke a wounded man.

I Yea I wyl stablyshe the kyng of Babilōs arme: and the armes of Pharao shall fall downe, that it may be knowne that I am the Lord, whych gyue the kyng of Babilō my sword in his hand, that he may draw it out vpon the land of Egypt: & that when I scatter the Egyptians among the Gentyles, and strowe the in the landes about, they may know, that I am the Lord.

me, saying: Thou sonne of mā, speake vnto Pharao kyng of Egypt, and to al his people: Whom art thou like in thy greatnes? Beholde Asur was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the mount of Libanus. He sayre by aunches: so thych, that he gaue shadowes and shot out very hygh. Hys top reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made him great, and the depe set hym vp an hygh. A rounde about the routes of him ran there floudes of water, he sent out his lytle riuers vnto al the trees of the fiede. Therefore was he hygher then all the trees of the fiede, and thorow the multitude of waters that he sent from hym, he obtayned manie longe banches. All foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in hys banches, vnder hys boughes gedred al the beastes of the fiede, and vnder hys shadowe dwelt all people. Sayre and beautiful was he in his greatnes, and in the length of hys banches, for hys roote stode besyde greare waters, no Cedre tree myght hyde hym.

I In the pleasaunt garden of God, there was no sayre tree lyke hys banches, the playne trees were not lyke the boughes of hym. Al the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in hys beautie, so sayre and goodly had I made him with the multitude of his banches: In so muche that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God, had enuy at hym.

I Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: for so muche as he hath lyft vp hym selfe so hygh, and stretched hys toppe into the cloudes, and seying hys heart is proude in hys hyghnesse: I wyl delpue hym into the handes of the myghtyest amonges the Heathen, whych shall roote hym out. Accordyng to his wyckednesse, wyl I caste hym away, the enemyes shall destroy hym, and the myghty men of the Heathen shall scatter hym, that hys banches shall lye vpon al mountaines and in al valleyes, hys boughes shall be broken downe to the grounde thorow the lande. Then all the people of the lande shall goo from hys shadowe and forsake hym.

I When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall syr vpon hym, & al wyld beastes of the fiede shall goo aboute amongs his banches: so that frō henceforth, no tree in the water shall attayne to his highnes, nor beache his toppe vnto the cloudes, neyther shall anye tree of the water stande so hygh, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be delpued vnder the earth, and goo downe to the graue, lyke other men.

I Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lord God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue, I wyl cause a lamentacion to bee made, I wyl couer the depe vpon hym, I wyl clauethe hys floudes, and the greare waters shall be restrayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorowfull for hys sake, and all the trees of the fiede shall be smitten.

I wyl make the Heathen shake at the Al the lygbres of heauen wil I put out ouer the, and bryng darkenesse vpon thy land sayeth the Lorde God. I wyl trouble the vertes of manye people, when I bryng thy destruction amonges the heathen, and contries whom thou knowest not. If I say vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou shalt surely dye, and thou gyuest hym not warnynge, that he may beware of the vngodly waye: then shall the wycked dye in his owne synne, but his bloude wyll I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheles if thou warne the wycked of his way, to turne from it, where as yet he wyll not be turned from it, then shall he dye because of his synne, but thou hast deliuered thy soule.

The Prophecy

Therefore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Yea saye thus: Oure offences and synnes lye vpon vs, & we be corrupte in them, howe shoulde we then be restored vnto lyfe? Tell them: As trulye as I lyue sayeth the Lord God, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wycked, but muche rather that the wycked turne from his waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from your vngodly wayes, O ye house of Israel. Oh, wherefore wyll ye dye. Thou sonne of man, tell the chyldren of thy people: The ryghteousnesse of the ryghteous shall not saue hym, when so euer he turneth awaye vnfaythfully: Agayne, the wyckednesse of the wycked shall not hurte him, when so euer he conuerteth from his vngodlynes.

And the ryghteousnesse of the ryghteous shall not saue his lyfe, when so euer he synneth. If I saye vnto the ryghteous, that he shall surely lyue, and so he trust to his owne ryghteousnesse, & doo synne: then shall his ryghteousnesse be no more thought vpon, but in the wyckednes that he hath done, he shall dye.

Agayne if I say vnto the wycked: thou shalt surely dye, and so he turne from his synnes, and doo the thyng that is lawfull and ryght: In so much that the same wycked man geueth the pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by roberte, walketh in the commaundementes of life, and doth no wronge: Then shall he surely lyue, and not dye. Yea the synnes that he hath done shall neuer be thought vpon.

For in so much as he doth now the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, he shall lyue. And yet the chyldren of thy people saye: Tushe, the waye of the Lord is not right, where as their owne waye is rather vngodly. When the righteous turneth from his ryghteousnesse, & doth the thyng that is wycked, he shall dye therefore. But if the wycked turne fro his wyckednes, doing that thyng that is lawfull & right, he shall lyue therefore. Yet ye saye: the way of the Lord is not equall, O ye house of Israel, I wyll iudge euery one of you after his wayes.

In the twelue th yere the .v. day of the .x. moneth of oure captiuitie, it happened, that one whiche was fled out of Ierusalem, came vnto me, and sayed: the cytie is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lord had bene vpon me the euening afore this man (whiche was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntil the morning that he came to me: yea, he opened my mouth, so that I was no more dōbe. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me, and sayed:

sayd: Thou sonne of man, these that dwell in the wasted lande of Israel, say. Abrahā was but one man, and he had the lande in possession, now we are we manye, and the lande is geuen vs to possesse also.

And therfore tell them: Thus sayth the Lorde: In the blood haue ye eaten, youte eyes ye haue lyft vp to Idols, & haue shed blood: shal ye the haue y lande in possession?

Ye leane vpon your swearthes, ye worke abominacions, euerpe one despyeth his neyghbours wyse: and shall ye then possesse y lande? Say thou these wordes vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: *As truly as I lyue, is an oth whiche the lord comenly vseth whē he promyseth any thyng. As truly as I lyue all ye that dwell in this wilderness, shal be slayne with the sword: what so euer is vpon the fælde, wil I giue vnto the beastes to bee deuoured: those that be in strong holdes and denues, shall dye of the pestylence. For I wyl make the lande so desolate and waste, & the pompe of her strength shal come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shal be so waste that no man shall trauaile thereby.

Then shall they learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the lande waste and desolate, because of all theyr abominacions that they haue wroughte. And thou sonne of manne, the chyldren of thy people that talke of the, by the walles and in the doores of theyr houses, sayinge one to an other: Come let vs heare, what worde is gone forth from the Lord: These come vnto the after the maner of a greete people: yea my people syt down before the and heare thy wordes, but they doo not there after: for in their mouthes they shew them selues, as though they were seruent, but their herte goeth after their owne concuetous lustre. And as a ballet that hath a swete tune, and is pleasaunte to synge, so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes shall they heare, but they wyl not do there after. When this cometh to passe (for loe, it cometh in dede) then shall they knowe that there hath ben a prophet among the.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Agaynst Bishops and Curates that despye the flocke of Christ, and seke theyr owne. The Lorde sayeth that he wyl vset his dysperpled flocke, and gather them together. He repproeth the malice of certayne of the flocke. He promyseth the true shepheard of Christ, and with hym peace.

As the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophesye agaynst the shepherdes of Israel, prophesye & speake vnto them. Thus sayth the lord God. Wo be vnto the shepherdes of Israel that fede the selues. Shuld not y shepherdes fede the flockes? Ye haue eaten vp the fatte, ye haue clothed you with the woll: the best fed haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue ye not nourished. The weake haue ye not holden vp, the sycke haue ye not healed, the broken haue ye not bounde together, the outecastes haue ye not broughte agayne, the lost haue ye not sought, but churlyshly, & cruelly haue ye ruled them. Thus are they scattered here & there without a shepheard, yea all the beastes of the fælde deuoure them, and they go astray.

My shepe goo wandryng vpon all mountaynes, and vpon euerpe hye hyll. Yea they be scattered abroad in all feldes, and there is no man that careth for them, or seketh after them. Therfore O ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue, for as muche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wyld beastes of the fælde, haunge no shepeherdes: And seynge there my shepeherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues onely and not my shepe, Therefore heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye shepherdes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Behold, I my self wyl vpon the shepeherdes, and requyre my shepe from their handes, and make them cease from fedynge of my shepe: yea the shepeherdes shall fede them selues no more. For I wyl delouer my shepe oute of theyr mouthes, so that they shal not deuoure them after this. For thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyl looke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. Like as a shepeherde amonges the flocke, seketh after the shepe that are scattered abroad, euen so wyl I seke after my shepe, and gather them together out of all places, where they haue bene scattered in the clowde & darke daye. I wyl byng them oute from all people, and gather them together out of all landes. I wyl byng them into the lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countrey. I wyl fede them in ryght good pastures, and vpon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall their foldes be. There shall they lye in a good folde, and in a fatte pasture shal they fede: eue vpon the mountaynes of Israel. I wyl fede my shepe my selfe, and byng them to their rest, sayeth the Lorde God. Suche as be lost, wyl I seke, suche as goo astray, wyl I byng agayne, suche as be wounded, wyl I bynde vp, suche as be weake, wyl I make stronge, suche as be fat and wel lykynge, those wyl I preferre, and fede them with the thyng that is lawfull. And as for you, O my shepe, sayeth the Lorde God: I wil put a difference amonge the shepe, amonges the wetters and the goates. Was it not ynoughe for you to eate vp y good pasture, but ye must treade downe the residue of youte pasture with your fete also? Was it not ynoughe for you to drynke cleere water, but ye must trouble y residue of youte pasture also with your fete. Thus my shepe must be sayne to eate the thyng that ye haue troden down with your fete, and to drynke it, that ye with your fete haue despyled. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God vnto them. Beholde, I will seuer the fat shepe from the leane, for so muche as ye haue sette the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulders, and run vpon them with your hornes so longe tyll ye haue utterly scattered them abroad. I will helpe my shepe, so that they shall no more be spoyled: yea I will discern one shepe from another, I will raise vpon vnto them one only shepeherde: euen my seruauunt (a) David, he shall feed them, & he shall be their shepeherd. I & the Lord will be their God, and my seruauunt David shall be their prince: euen I the Lord haue spoken it.

Thus

Moreover, I will make a covenante of peace with them, and byue all euill beasts oute of the lande, so that they may dwell safely in the wyldernes, & slepe in the woodes. Good fortune and prosperitie will I giue the, & vnto al that be rounde aboute my hyll. A prosperous howse and rayne will I sende them in due season, that the trees in the woode maye bringe forth their frutes, and the ground her increase. They shall be safe in their lande, and shall knowe that I am the Lord, whiche haue broken their yoke, & deliuered them out of the handes of those that helde the in subiectiō.

They shall no more be spoyled of the Heathen, nor deuoured with the beasts of the lande, but safelye shall they dwell, and no man shall feare them. I will set vpon an excellent plante for them, so that they shall suffer no more hunger in the land, neyther beare the reproche of the Heathen any more. Thus shall they vnderstande that I the Lord the God am with them, and that they (euen the house of Israell) are my people, sayeth the Lord God: Ye men are my flocke, ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am your God, sayth the Lord God.

(a) Christ here and in many other places is called David because he was looked for of the Jewes to sitte on the seate of David. xxxiii. l.

The xxxv. Chapter.

The destruction that shall come on the hyll Seir that is on the Idumeans, because they troubled the people of the Lord.

Moreover, the woorde of the Lord came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward the mount Seir, & prophesy vpon it, & saye vnto it: Thus sayth the Lord God. Beholde, O thou mount Seir, I will vpon thee. I will reache oute myne hande ouer the, yea waste and desolate will I make the. Thy cyties will I breake downe, & thou shalt lye voyde, that thou mayest knowe howe that I am the Lord. For so muche as thou bearest an olde enmitye agaynst the children of Israell, and with a cruell hande hast made them afayed, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for their synne. Therefore as truly as I lye, sayeth the Lord God, I will prepare the vnto to bloud, yea bloud shall folowe vpon the: saying thou layest wayte for bloud, therfore shall bloud persecute the. Thus wil I make the mount Seir desolate and waste, and byng to passe that there shall no man goe thither, ne come from thence. His mountaynes wil I fyl with bys sayne men: thy hylls, dales, and valeys, shall lye full of them that are sayne with the swerde. I wil make the a perpetual wyldernes, so that no man shall dwell in the cyties: that ye may knowe howe that I am the Lord.

And because thou hast sayed: what, both these nations, and both these landes muste be myne, and I will haue them in possession, where as the Lord was there. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: As truly as I lye, I will handle the according to thy wrath & gelousy, lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly with them: that I may be knowne among them, howe I haue punished the. Yea, and that thou mayest be sure that I the Lord haue herde all thy dispitful wordes whiche thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israell, saying: Doe, they are made waste, and giuen vs to deuoure. Thus with your mouthes ye haue made your boiste agaynst me, yea and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, whiche I haue herde altogether. Whereunto thus sayeth the Lord God: When the hole worlde is in wealch, then will I make the waste. And lyke as thou (O mount Seir) wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israell was destroyed: euen so will I do vnto the also, that thou, and hole Idom shall be destroyed, and knowe that I am the Lord.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

The promise of deliuerance from the Gentyles vnto Israell. The benefites done vnto the Jewes are to be ascribed to the mercy of God, not vnto their deservynges. God reneweth our hertes that we may walke in his commaundementes.

Thou sonne of man, prophesy vpon the mountaynes of Israell, and speake. Heare the woorde of the Lord, O ye mountaynes of Israell, Thus sayeth the Lord God: Because your enemy hath sayd vpon you. A ha, the hye euerlasting places are now become oures. Prophecy therefore and speake, thus sayth the Lord God. See ynge ye be wasted and troden doune on euery syde, and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentyles, whiche haue broughte you into mennes mouthes, and vnto an euill name amonges the people. Therefore heare the woorde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus sayth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hylls, valleyes & dales, to the voyde wyldernes, and desolate cyties, whiche are spoyled and had in derision on euery syde, amonge the residue of the Heathen: Yea, euen thus sayeth the Lord God: In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuyce, deuyce, agaynste the residue of the Gentyles, and agaynste all Edom: whiche haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possession, whiche also reioysed from their hole herte wth a dispitfull stomacke to wastefull and to spoyle it.

Eze. xxxv. d. Prophecy therfore vpon the land of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes and hilles, to valleys & dales, thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, this haue I bent in my gelousye and terrible wrath. For so much as ye haue suffered reproche of the Heathen: therfore thus saith the Lord God: I haue sworne that the Gentyles whiche lye aboute you, shall beate youre confusion them selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shoute out youre braunches, and bringe forth youre fruite to my people of Israel, for it is hard by that wyl come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyl I turne me; that ye maye be tilled and sowed.

C I wyl sende you muche people, whiche shall be al of the house of Israel: the cyties shall be inhabited, and the decayed places shall be repayred agayne. I wyl prouyde you wth muche people and catel, whiche shall encrease and bringe fruite. I wil restore you also to your olde estate, and shew you more kyndenesse then euer ye hadde before, whereby ye shall knowe that I am the Lord. Yea people wyl I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israel) whiche shall haue the in possession, and thou shalt be their inheritaunce, so that thou shalt be no more be without the. Agayne thus sayeth the Lord God: for so muche as they saye vnto you: thou art an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eat no more men, neyther destroy the people any more, sayth the Lord God. And I wyl not suffer the for to beate thynne owne confusion among the Gentyles from hence forth. Thou shalt not beate the reproche of the nations, nor caste out thynne owne people any more, sayeth the Lord God.

D Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: O thou sonne of man, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their owne grounde, they despyled them selues wth theyr owne wayes and ymaginacions, so that in my sight theyr waye was lyke the vncleanness of a menstruous woman. Wherefore I poured my wrathful displeasure vpon them, bycause of the blood that they had shed in the lande, and bycause of theyr ydolles, wherewith they had despyled them selues. I scattered them also amonge the Heathen, so that they were strewed aboute in the landes. Accordynge to their wayes, & after their owne inuencions, so dyd I punyssh them.

E Nowe when they were gone vnto the Heathen, and come in amongst them, they (a) dishonoured my holpe name: so that it was sayed of them: Are these the people of God, and must goo oute of theyr owne land? Then spared I my holy name whiche the house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gentyles, to whom they came. Therfore tell the house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord God: I doo not this for your sakes (O ye house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonoured amonge the Heathen, wher ye came to them. Therfore I wil halow my great name agayne, which amonge the Gentiles is full spoken of: for ye your selues haue dishonoured it amonge the. And the Gentyles shall knowe that I am the Lord, wher I am honoured in you before their eyes, saith the Lord God. As for you I wil take you fro amonge the Heathen, and gather you together out of all countreys, & bring you againe into youre owne lande. Then will I poure cleare water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane: yea fro all your vncleanness, and from al your ydols shall I cleanse you. A newe hert also wyl I geue you, and a newe spirite wyl I put into you: as for that stony herte, I wyl take it oute of your body, and giue you a fleshy herte. I wyl geue my spirite amonge you, and cause you to walke in my commaundementes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyll them.

And so ye shall dwell in the lande that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I wyl be your God. I wil helpe you oute of all your vncleanness. I wyl call for the corne, and wyl encrease it, and wyl let you haue noonger. I will multiply the fruites of the trees, and the encrease of the field for you, so that ye shall beate no more reproche ofonger amonge the Heathen. The shall ye remember your owne wycked wayes, and your imaginacions, which were not good: so that ye shall take displeasure at your owne selues by reason of your synnes & abominacions.

But I wyl not doo this for your sakes (sayeth the Lord God) be ye sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israel be ashamed of your synnes. Moreover, thus sayth the Lord God: what tyme as I shall cleanse you from all your offences, then wyl I make the cyties to be occupied agayne, & wyl repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate land shall be buylded agayne, whiche afore tyme laye waste in the sight of al them, that went by: Then shall it be sayed: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the wyde desolate and broken downe cyties are now strong and fenced agayne. When the residue of the Heathen that lye rounde about you, shall know that I am the Lord whiche repayre that was broken downe, and plant agayne that was made waste. Euen I the Lord haue spokē it, and will do it in dede. Thus sayeth the Lord God: I wil yet ones, be founde agayne of the house of Israel, and do this for them: I shall encrease them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holpe flocke, & the flocke of Jerusalem are in the high so-

The Notes of the xxxvi. Chapter.

(a): To dishonoure the name of the Lorde is to blaspheme the name of god among the vnfaith-

He prophesieth the byngynge agayne of Lorde, and let me downe to a playne round about by them: & beholde the bones that lay vpon the felde were very many, and merueylous dye also. Then sayed he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thynkest thou these bones may lyue agayne? I aunswere-lyue: I wyl gyue you stowes, and make fleshe growe vpon you, and couer you ouer wth skyn, and so gyue you bzeib that ye may lyue, and knowe that I am the Lord.

came a noyse and a greate motion, so that the bones ranne euerye one to an other.

Nowe when I had looked, beholde, they had sinowes, and fleshe grewe vpon them, and aboue they were couered wth skyn, but there was no bzeib in the: Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, prophecie thou towarde the wynde, prophecie, and speake to the wynde. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Come (O thou ayre) from the four wyndes, and blowe vpon these flaine, that they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied, as he had commaunded me: then came the bzeib into them, and they receiued lyfe greate sorte.

Moreouer, he sayed vnto me. Thou sonne of man, these bones are the hole house of Israel. Beholde, they say: Our bones are cut of. Therefore prophecie thou, & speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde I wyl open your graues (O my people) & take you out of your sepulcres, and byng you into the land of Israel a-gayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lord, when I open your graues, & byng you out of them. My spirit also wyl I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I wyl set you a-gayne in your owne lande, & ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whyche haue sayed, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayng: Thou sonne of man, take a sticke & write vpon it: Vnto Iuda and to the chyldren of Israel his companiōs. Then take an other sticke, and write vpon it: Vnto Ioseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the householde of Israel his cōpaniōs.
And the take both these together in thyne hande, so shall there be one sticke thereof.
Now if the chyliden of thy people say vnto the: wylt thou now shew vs what thou meaneest by these? then gyue them this an-swere: thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde I wyl take the stocke of Ioseph, whych is in the lande of Ephraim, and of the trybes of Israel his felowes, and wyl put them to the stocke of Iuda, and make the in one stocke, & they shall be one in my bande. And the two sticke whereupon thou wyltest shalte thou haue in thyne bande, that they maye see, and shalt saye vnto them.

Dee. i. b

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyl take away the chyliden of Israel frō among the heathen, vnto whome they be gone, and wyl gather them together on e-uerye syde, and bynge them agayne into their owne land, yea I wyl make one people of the in the land, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they all shall haue but one kynge. They shall no more be two peoples from henceforth, neyther be deuyded into two kyngdomes: they shall also defile the selues no more with their abhominaciōs, ydoles, and all their wycked doynges. I wil helpe them out of all their dwellynge places wherein they haue synned, and wil so cleanse the, that they shall be my people, and I their God.

Dauid my seruaunt shall be their kynge and they all shall haue one shepherde one lye. They shall walke in my lawes, and my commandementes shall they bothe kepe and fulfill. They shall dwell in the lande that I gaue vnto Iacob my seruaunt wher as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yea euē in the same lande shall they, their chyliden, and their childers chyliden dwell for euermore: and my seruaunt Dauid shall be their euerlastynge prynce.

Eze. xxxviii

Iohn. x. b

Moreouer I wyl make a bonde of peace with them, which shall be vnto them an euerlastynge couenaunte. I wyl settle them also, and multiply the, my Sanctuarie wyl I set amonge them for euermore. My dwellynge shall be with them: yea I wyl be their God, and they shall be my people. Thus the heathen also shall knowe that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Israel: when my sanctuarie shall be amonges them for euermore.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

He prophesieth that Gog & Magog shall come with an appoynted host into the lande of promyse. Their intente: He reherseth that the commynge of Gog was before prophesied of the Prophetes. The destruction of hym.

And

And the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man turne thy face toward Gog in the land of Magog, whych is þe chiefe prince at Mesecche and Tubal. Prophecy agaynst hym, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lord God, O Gog thou chiefe prince of Mesecch and Tubal, Behold, I wyl vpon the, and wyl tourne the about, and put a byt in thy charmes, I wyl bring the forth and all thyne host, both horse and horse men, whych be all weaponed of the best faccon, a greate people, that handle altogether speares, shylde, and swerdes, the Perses, Mozyans, and wyth them the Lybyans, whych al beare shylde and helmets, Gomer and al his hostes, the house of Togorma out of the North quarters, and al his hostes, yea and much people wyth the.

Therefore prepare thee, set thy selfe in a raze wyth al thy people that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be vspyt, and in the latter peares thou shalt come into the lād that hath bene destroyed with the swerde, and nowe is replenished agayne with diuerse people vpon the mountaynes of Israell, whych haue longe lpen waste. Yea, they be brought out of the nations, and dwel al safe.

Thou shalt come vp lyke a stormy weather to couer the land, & as it were a darke cloude, thou wyth al thyne hostes, and a great multitude of people wyth the.

Moreover, thus saith the Lord God: At the same tyme shal many thynges come in to thy mynde, so that thou shalt imagine myscheyse, and saye: I wyl vp to yonder playne land, seying they spt at ease, & dwel so safely (for they dwel all wythoute anye wals, they haue neyther bars nor doores) to spoyle them, to rob them, to laye hande vpon they; so well inhabited wyldernes, agaynst that people that is gathered together from among the heathen, which haue gotten cattell and good, and dwell in the myddest of the land. Then shal Saba and Dedan, and the Marchauntes of Tharsis wyth al they; worthies say vnto the: Arte thou come to rob? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wylt spoyle? To take siluer and gold, to cary away cat tel and good, and to haue a great pray?

Therefore, O thou son of man, thou shalt prophecy, and saye thus vnto Gog: Thus sayth þe Lord God: In that day thou shalt know that my people of Israell dwell in safe, and shalt come from thy place out of the North partes: thou, and much people wyth the, whych rde vpon horses, wheres of ther is a great multitude, and an innumerable sort. Yea, thou shalt come vnto my people of Israell, as a cloude to couer the land. Thys shal come to passe in the latter dayes, I wyl bring the vp into my lād, that the Heathen maye knowe me, when I gette me honour vpon the, O Gog, before they eyes.

Esaie. xl. 5.

Thus saith the Lord God: Thou art he of whome I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruantes the Prophetes of Israell, whych propheted in those dayes and peares, that I should bring the vnto them. At the same tyme, when Gog cometh vp in to the land of Israell (saith the Lord God) shall my indignacion goo forth in my wrath. For in my gelousye and hote displeasure I haue deuyled, that ther shalbe a greate trouble in the land of Israell at that tyme. The very fyres in the sea, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the fielde, and all the men that are vpon the earth, shal tremble for feare of me.

Mat. xxiii. Luke. xxi. 5.

The hills also shalbe turned vpside down, the stappes of stone shal fall, and al walles shal synke to the ground. I wyl call for a swerde vpon them in all my mountaynes, sayth the Lord God, so that euerye mans swerd shalbe vpon an other. Wyth pestilence and bloude wyl I punysh hym: for my rayne and hayle stones, fyre, and brim stone wyl I cause to rayne vpon hym, and all his heape: yea and vpon all the greate people that is wyth hym. Thus wyl I be magnified, honored, and knowne amongs the Heathen: that they maye be sure howe that I am the Lord.

The. xxxix. Chapter.

The sheweth the destruccio of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and of his hostes. He prophetyeth that Gog and his company shalbe deuoured of byrdes and beastes. Wherefore the house of Israell is wasted. The bringynge agayne from captiuitie is promysed.

Therefore, O thou sonne of man, prophecy agaynst Gog, & speake. Thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, O Gog thou chiefe prince at Mesecch and Tubal: I wyl vpon the, and turne the about, and cary the forth, and lead the fro the North partes, & bring the vp to the mountaynes of Israell. As for thy bow I wyl smyte it out of thy left hande, and cast thyne arrowes out of thy ryght hand. Thou wyth al thine heape and al the people that is wyth the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israell. Then wyl I gyue the vnto the foules and wyld beastes of the fælde, to be deuoured: ther must thou lye vpon the feld: for euen I the Lord haue spoken it, sayth the Lord God.

Eze. xxxviii. Apoc. x. 6.

Into Magog, and amonge those that spt so careles in the ples: wil I send a fyre, & they shal knowe that I am the Lord. I wyl make also the name of my holynes to be knowne amongs my people of Israell: and I wyl not let my holy name to be euyl spoken of any more: but the very heathen also shal know that I am the Lord, the holy one of Israell. Beholde it cometh and shalbe fulfilled in dede saith the Lord God. Thys is the day wherof I haue spoken: They that dwel in the ctyes of Israell

Of the latter dayes, & what they sygnify, see haue in.

II. iii. rael

rael, shal go forth and set fyre vpon the weapons, and burne them: shylbes and speares, bowes and arrowes, byls & clubs: seven yeaeres shal they be burning therof, so that they shal els bring no styckes from the field, neither haue nede to hew downe any out of the wood: for they shal haue weapons ynough to burne. They shal rob those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoyled them, sayth the Lord God.

At the same tyme wil I giue vnto Gog a place to be buryed in, in Israel: euen the valey, wher thow men go from the East to the seaward. Those that trauaile therby shal abhorre it: Ther shal Gog and all hys people be buryed: and it shalbe called the valleie of the people of Gog. Seauen monethes long shal the house of Israel be burning of them, that they may cleanse the land. Yea al the people of the land shal bury them. O it shalbe a glorious day, when I get me that honour, saith the Lord god. They shal ordeine men also to be dead buryers, euer going thow the land, and appoint them certayne places to bury those in whych remayne vpon the field, that the land be cleansed. From ende to ende shal they seke, and that seven monethes long. Now those that go thow the land wher they se a mans bone, they shal set vp a token by it, tyl the dead buryers haue buryed it also, in the valey of the people of Gog. And the name of the crite shal be called Hammonah: Thus shal they make the lande celane.

What is multitude.

And thou soune of man, thus sayeth the Lord God: Speake vnto al the foules, and euery byrd, yea and to al the wyld beasts of the field: heape you togyther and come, gather you round about vpon my slaughter, that I haue layne for you: eue a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel: eat flesh, and drinke bloud. Ye shal eat the flesh of the worshypes, and drynke the blud of the princes of the land: of the wetters, of the lammes, of the goates, and of the oxen that be al layne at Basan. Eate the fat pour belly ful, and drinke blud til ye be drunken, of the slaughter whych I haue layne vnto you. Fyl you at my table, wyth horses and strong horsemen: wyth capitaines and al men of war, saith the Lord God.

Apoc. xix. d.

I wil bypnyng my glory also amongs the Gentyls, that al the Heathen may see my iudgement that I haue kept, and my hand whych I haue laid vpon them: that the house of Israel maye knowe how that I am the Lord thev God, fro that day forth. And the heathen shal know, that wher as the house of Israel was led into captiuitie: it was for their wickednes sake, because they offered me. For the whych cause I bydde my face from them, and deliuered them into the hands of their enemyes, that they myght al be layne wyth the swerde. Accordyng to their uncleannes, and vnsaythfull dealinge, so haue I entreated them, and byde my face from them. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Now wil I bypnyng againe the captiues of Jacob, and haue mercye vpon the whole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holy names sake. At their confusion and offence that they haue done agaynst me, shalbe taken away, and so safely shal they dwel in their land, that no man shal make them afraid. And when I haue broughte them againe from amonges the people, when I haue gathered them togyther out of their enemyes landes, and am prayled in them before many heathen: the shal they know that I am the Lord thev God, whych suffered them to be led into captiuitie among the Heathen, but nowe haue broughte them againe into their owne land, and not left one of them yonder. After that wil I hide my face no more from the, but wil poure out my spirit vpon the house of Israel, sayth the Lord God.

The xl. Chapter.

The restoring of the city & of the temple that was to come, is shewed vnto the Prophet.

In the xxv. yere of our captiuitie, in the begynnyng of the yere, the tenth day of the moneth: that is the. xiiii. after that the crite was smytten down, the same day came the hand of the Lord vpon me, and carryed me forth, euen into the lande of Israel brought he me in the vispons of God: and set me doune vpon a marueylous hye mountayne, wher vpon there was a burying (as it had bene of a cite) toward the North. Thither he carryed me: and behold ther was a manne, whose similitude was lyke brasse, whych had a threde of flaxe in hys hand, and a meterod also. He stode in the doze and said vnto me: mark wel with thine eyes, harken to with thine ears, and fasten it in thine hert, what so euer I shal shew the, for to the entent that they might be shewed the, therefore art thou broughte hyther, and whatsoever thou seest, thou shalt certysy the house of Israel therof.

Behold, ther was a wal on the outspide round about the house: the meterod that he had in hys hande was sixe cubits longe and a span. So he measured the bredth of the building, whych was a meterod, and the heygth also a meterod. Then came he vnto the East doze, and wer by the seares and measured the posts of the doze, wherof euery one was a meterod thicke. Euery chamber was a meterod long and brode, betwene the chambers was fyue cubytes. The poste of the doze wythin the porche, was one meterod. He measured also the porch of the innermost doze, which contened a meterod. The measured he the entree of the doze that contened eyghte cubytes, and hys pylers two cubytes: and this entree stode inward.

The chambers of the doze Eastward, wer thre on euery side, alike brod and long. The pylers also that stode of bothe the sydes were of one measure. After thys he mea-measured the wydenes of the doze, which was ten cubytes, and the heygthe of the doze thyrtyene cubytes. The edge before the chambers was one cubit brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambers syxe cubytes wyde of ether syde. He measured the doze fro the rydge of one chamber to another; whose wydenes was .xxv. cubytes, and one doze stode agaynst another. He made pyl- lers also thre scoze cubytes hie, rounde a- bout the courte doze. Besoie the inwarde parte vnto the fore entry of the innermer doze, was fiftie cubits. The chambers and theyr pyl- lers wythin, rounde about vnto the doze, had syde wyndowes: So had the fore entres also, whose wyndowes wente round aboute wythin. And vpon the pyl- lers ther stode date trees.

Then brought he me into the fore court wher as wer chambers and paved works made in the fore courte round about. .xxx. chambers vpon one paved worke. Now the paved worke was a long besyde the doores, & that was the lower paved work. After thys he measured the bredthe from the lower dooze vnto the innermer courte of the out syde, whych had an hundred cu- byts vpon the East and the North parte. And the dooze in the vntermost court to- ward the North, measured he after the length and bredth, hys thre chambers al- so on ether syde, wyth his pyl- lers and fore entres, whych had euē the measure of the measure of the first doze. His heigth was fiftie cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubytes: hys wyndowes and porches wyth hys date trees, had euē lyke measure as the dooze toward the East, ther were seuen steppes to go vp vpon, and theyr porch before the. Now the doze of the innermer court stode straght ouer agaynst the doze that was toward the North East. From one dooze to an other he measured an hundred cubits. After that, he brought me to the South syde, wher ther stode a dooze toward the South: whose pyl- lers and porches he mea- sured, these had þ first measure, and wyth theyr porches, they had wyndowes round about, lyke þ first wyndowes. The heigth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. wyth steps to go vp vpon: hys porch stode before him, wyth hys pyl- lers and date trees on eyther syde. And the dooze of the innermer court stode toward the South, and he measured from one dooze to an other an hundred cu- bits. So he brought me into the innermer court thow the doze of the South syde, whych he measured, and it had the mea- sure afore sayd. In lyke maner hys cham- bers, pyl- lers, and fore entres, had euē the foresayde measure also. And he had wyth hys porches round aboute wyndowes of fiftie cubytes heygth, and syue and twenty cubytes brode. The porches rounde about wer .xxv. cubytes long, and .v. cubytes brod: and hys porch reached vnto the vntermost court: vpo hys pyl- lers ther wer date trees and .viii. steps to go vp vpon.

He brought me also into þ inmost court vpon the East side, and measured the doze, accordyng to the measure afore said. Hys chambers, pyl- lers, and porches had euē the same measure as the first hadde: and with his porches he had wyndowes round about. The heygth was fiftie cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubits: hys porches reached vnto the vntermost court: hys pyl- lers al- so had date trees on eyther syde. and .viii. steppes to go vp vpon.

And he brought me to the North dooze, and measured it, whych also had the fore sayd measure. Hys chambers, pyl- lers and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute, whose heigth was .l. cubytes, and þ bredth .xxv. Hys pyl- lers stode toward the vnter most court, and vpon them both wer date trees, and eight steps to go vp vpon. Ther stode a chamber also, whose intrasice was at the dooze pyl- lers, and ther the burnt of ferynges were washed.

In the doze porche, ther stode on eyther syde two tables for the slaughtinge: to lay the brentofferynges, synneofferynges and trespassse offerynges thetebypon. And on the outesyde as men goo forth to the North dooze ther stode two tables. Foure tables stode on ether syde of the doze, that is .viii. tables wher vpon they slaughted. Four tables were of hewen stone for the burnt offerynges of a cubyte and a halfe long and brod, and one cub yt hygh: wher- vpon wer laied the vessels and ornamen- tes which wer used to the burnt and slain offerynges, when they wer slaughted. And within there were hookes foure syngers brode, fastened round about, to hang fleshe vpon, and vpon the tables was laid the of feryng flesch. On the outesyde of the inner- mer doze were the syngers chambers in þ inward court beside the North doze ouer agaynst the South. Ther stode one also, besyde the East doze Northward.

And he sayd vnto me. This chamber on the South syde belongeth to the priestes that kepe the habttacion, and this toward the North, is the priestes that wayte vpon the aulter, whych be the sones of Sadoch, that do seruite before the Lord in steade of the chyldren of Leui. So he measured the fore courte, whych had in lengthe an hun- dred cubits, and as much in bredth by the four corners. Now the aulter stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entry of the house, and measured the wals by the entry doze, whiche were .v. cubytes long on eyther syde. The thynknes also of the doze on ether side, was .iii. cubytes. The length of the porche was .xx. cubytes, the bredth .ii. cubits, and vpon the steps went men vp to it, by the walles also were pyl- lers on eyther syde one.

The disposicion & deuice of building agayne the temple, & of the other thinges thereto belöging.

After

ii. Pa. iii. a
ii. Reg. ii. f.

After thys he brought me to the temple and measured the postes, whych were of both the sydes syre cubytes thyeke, accorpyng to the wydenes of the tabernacle. The bredth of the doore, x. cubytes, and the walles of the doze on either syde, v. cubytes. He measured the lengthe thereof, whych contained. xl. cubytes, and the bredth. xx. Then went he in, and measured the dooze postes, whych wer two cubytes thyeke: but the doze it selfe was. vi. cubites, and the breadth of the dooze was vii. cubits. He measured the lengthe and bredth thereof, whych were euerye one. xx. cubytes before the temple.

And he sayd vnto me: thys is the holiest of all. He measured also the wal of the house whych was syre cubytes. The chambers that stode rounde aboute the house, were euery one. iiii. cubits wyde, and one stode hard vpon another, wherof ther wer xxx. and thye. And ther stode postes beneth by the wals round about the house, to bear them vp: but in the wall of the house, they wer not fastened. The side chambers wer the hygher, the wyder, and had steps thoro them round aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, & from the lowest mighte go to the hyghest and myd chambers. I saw also that the house was very hygh round about. The foundation of the syde chambers was a meterod (that is. vi. cubites) brode. The thyeckenes of the syde wal wythout, conteyned. v. cubits, and so dyd the outwal of the chambers in the house. Betwene the chambers, was the wydenes. xx. cubits round about & house. The chamber dozes stode ouer against the outwal, the one doze was toward & north, the other toward the south: and the thiknes of the outwal was syre cubits round about. Now the building that was separated toward the west, was thie score and ten cubits wyde: the wal of the building was. v. cubytes thyeke round aboute, and the lengthe foure score cubits and ten. So he measured the house whych was an. C. cubytes long, and the separated building wyth the wal wer an. C. cubits long also. The wydenes before the house, and offe that was separated toward the east, was an hundred cubytes.

And he measured the lengthe of the building before and behynde wyth the chambers vpon both the sides: and it contained an. C. cubits. The innermer temple, & porch of the fore court, the syde postes, these thie had syde wyndowes, and pylles, round about ouer against the postes, fro the ground vp to the wyndowes.

The wyndowes them selues were filed ouer wyth boordes: and thus was it aboue the dooze, vnto the inmost house, and wyth out also: pea the whole wal on euery syde both within and wythout was filed ouer wyth greute boordes.

There were Cherubins and date trees made also, so that one date tre stode euery betwxt. ii. Cherubins: One Cherub had two faces, the face of a mā loking aside toward the date tre, and a lions face on the other side. Thus was it made round about in al the house: Yea the Cherubyns & date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue the dooze, and so stode they also vpon the wal of the temple.

The by postes of the temple were foure squared, & the house of the sanctuary was euen as it appeared vnto me afore in & vision. The table was of wood. iiii. cubits hie, and. ii. cubits long: his corners, the legth and the wals wer of wood.

And he sayd vnto me: Thys is the table that shal stand before the Lord. The temple and the holiest of al had either of them ii. dozes, and euery doze had. ii. lytle wyckets which were souden in one vpon another, on euery syde. ii. And vpon the dozes of the temple ther were made Cherubyns and date trees, lyke as vpon the wals: and a great thicke balke of wood was before on the outside of the porch. Vpon both the sydes of the wals of the porch, ther were made depe wyndowes and date trees, hauing balkes & beames, lyke as & house had

Of the chambers of the temple for the pylles, and the holy thynges.

Then carped he me oute into the fore court toward the north, and brought me into the chamber that stode ouer against the backe building Northwarde, which had the legth of an. C. cubits, whose doze turned toward the North. The wide nes conteyned. l. cubits: ouer against the xx. cubites of the innermer court, and against the paued woork that was in the fore court. Besyde al these. iiii. there stode pylles one ouer against another: And before thys chamber, there was a walkyng place of. x. cubits wide, and wythin was a way of one cubit wyde, and theyr doozes toward the North. Thus the hyghest chambers wer alway narrower then the lowest and mydlemost of the building: for they bare chamber vpon chamber, and stode. iiii. together one vpon another, not hauing pylles like the fore court: therfore wer they smaller then these beneth, and in & midst to beaken from the ground vward.

The wal without that stode by the chambers toward the vtmost court vpon the forsyde of the chambers, was. l. cubytes long: for the lengthe of the vttermost chambers in the fore court was. l. cubytes also, but & lengthe thereof before the temple was an. C. cubits. These chambers had vnder then an intrance of the east syde, wherby a man myght go into them out of the fore court, thoro the thyeke wall of the fore court toward the east, ryght ouer against the separated building. Before the same building vpon thys syde ther wer chambers also whych had a waye vnto them, lyke lyke as the chambers on the North syde, of the same length and wydenes.

Their intrance, fashyon and dozes wer also of the same maner. Yea even lyke as the other chamber dozes wer, so were also those of the South syde. And before I way toward the syngers steps on the east side, ther stode a doze to go in at. When sayd he vnto me: The chambers toward the North and the South which stode before the back building, those be holy habytacions, wher in the priestes that doo seruyce before the Lorde, muste eat the most holy offerings: and ther must they lay the most holy offerings: meat offerings, synne offerings, & trespass offerings, for it is an holy place. When the priestes come therin, they shal not go out into the fore court: but (seyng they be holy) they shal leaue the clothes of their ministracion and put on other garments, when they haue any thyng to do wth the people.

Now when he had measured all the innermer house, he brought me forth thorow the East porte, and measured the same round aboute. He measured the East syde wth the meterod, which round about cōteyned .v. C. meterodes. And the north side measured he, which cōteined round about euen so much. The other .ii. sydes also toward the South and the West (which he measured) cōteyned either of them .v. C. meterods. So he measured all the four sides wher ther went a wal round aboute .v. C. meterods lōg, and as broad also, which separated the holy from the unholy.

The. xliii. Chapter.

He seeth the glory of God goynge into the temple, from whence it had before departed. He mencyneth the Idolatrye of the chyldren of Israel, for whiche they were consumed and brought to nought. He is commaunded to cal the agayne to repentance.

So he brought me to the doze, that fureth toward the east. Behold, the cam the glory of the God of Israel fro oute of the east, whose voyce was lyke a great noyse of waters, and the earth was lycht ned wth his glory. His syght to lōke vpon was lyke the syght that I saw, when I went in, what tyme as the city shuld haue bene destroyed: and lyke the vjsyon that I saw by the water of Cobat. Then fel I vpon my face, but the glory of the Lord came into the house thorow the east dooze. So a winde toke me vp, and brought me into the innermer court: and beholde, the house was ful of the glory of the Lord.

I herd one speaking vnto me out of the house, and ther stode one by me, that sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man, this room is my seate, and the place of my fote steps: wher as I wyl dwel among the chyldren of Israel for euermore, so that the house of Israel shal nomore desyle my holy name: neyther they, nor they synnes, thorow theyr whoredom, thorow theyr hye places and thorow the dead bodies of theyr kinges, which haue builded theyr thresholds in maner hard vpo my thresholds, & theyr postes almost at my postes: so that there is but a bare wal betwixt me and them.

Thus haue they desyled my holy name with their abominacions that they haue cōmitted. Wherfore I haue destroyed the in my wrath. But now they shal put a wal theyr whoredome, and the dead bodies of theyr kings out of my syght, that I maye dwel among them for euermore. Therefore (O thou sonne of man) shew thou the house hold of Israel a temple, that they may be ashamed of theyr wickednes, and measure them selues an example therat. And whē they be ashamed of al theyr workes, then shew them the fourme and fashyon of the temple: the cōmmyng in, the goynge out, al the maner and descripcion thereof, pea al the vses and ordinaunces of it, that they may kepe and fulfyl all the fashyons and customes therof.

This is the descripcion of the house: A boue vpon the mount round about all the corners, it shal be the holiest of al. Behold, that is the descripcion and fashyon of the house: This is the measure of the aulter (after the true cubyt: which is a span longer then an other cubyt) bys botom in the myddest was a cubit longe and wyde, and the ledge that went round about it, was a span broad. This is the height of the aulter. From the ground to the lower steps, the length is two cubytes, and the bredth one cubyt, and from the lower steps to the higher are four cubits, and the bredth but one cubit. The aulter was four cubytes hygh, and from the aulter vaward stode four hornes, and it was .xii. cubites long and .xii. cubites broad, vpo the .iiii. corners: the couering of the aulter was .xliii. cubites long, and broad vpon the four corners, and the ledge that went round about, had valse a cubyte: and the bottome thereof round about one cubyte, bys steps stode toward the East.

And he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lord God. These are the ordinaunces and lawes of the aulter, in the day when it is made to offer burnt offerings, and to sprynkle bloud therevpon. To the priestes, to the Leuytes that be of the seide of Sadoch, and treade before me, to do me seruyce, sayth the Lord god: Vnto these geue thou a pong bullocke, for a synne offering: and take the blud of him & sprynke bys four hornes wythal, and the four corners of the aulter coueringe, wth the ledge that goeth round aboute: herewith shalt thou cleanse it, and reconcile it. Thou shalt take the bullocke also of the sinne offering, and burne hym in a seuerall place wythout the Sanctuary.

The. xliii. Chapter.

He sheweth what doze of the temple is shut. He is commaunded to vphrayde the people with theyr offence. The vncircumcised in herte and in the flesh. Who are to be admittyd in the seruice of the temple, and who to be refused. He sheweth what priestes he would haue admitted the holy place, and also theyr offyce.

After this, he brought me agayne to the outward doore of the Sanctuarye on the East syde, and that was shut. Then said the Lord vnto me: This doore shall be still shut, and not opened for any man to go thorow it, but onely for the Lord god of Israel: yea he shall go thorow it, els shall it be shut still. The prince hym selfe shall come thorow it, that he may eat breade befoze the Lord. At the porch shall he come in, and ther shall he go out again. When brought he me to the doze, vpon the North syde of the house. And as I looked about me, behold, the glory of the Lord filled the house, and I fell downe vpon my face. So the Lord spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, fasten this to thyne hert, behold, and take dyligent hede to all that I wyl say vnto the, concerning al the ordynaunces of the Lord, and al his lawes: pōder wel with thine hert the commynge in of the house, and the goynge forth of the sanctuary: and tel that obdurate household of Israel: Thus saith the Lord god: O house of Israel, ye haue now done ynough with al your abominacions, seying that ye haue brought into my Sanctuarye strangers, hauing vncircumcised herts & flesh, where thorow my sanctuarye is defyled, when ye offer me bread, fat, and bloud.

Thus with al your abominacions ye haue broken my cōdenaunt, and not kepte the holy ordynaunces of my Sanctuarye: but set keepers of my Sanctuarye, euen after your own mynde. Therefore thus saith the Lord God: Of all the strangers that dwell among the chyldren of Israel, no stranger (whose hert and flesh is not circumcised) shall come within my Sanctuarye: No, not the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and haue dysceyued the people of Israel with al errors, goynge after theyr ydols: but they shall beare theyr owne wyckednesse. Shoulde they be sette

And ordeyned to minister vnder the dozes of the house of my Sanctuarye? And to doo seruice in the house: to lay burnt offerings and sacrifices for the people: to stand befoze them, and to serue them: seing the seruice that they do them, is befoze theyr Idols, and cause the house of Israel to stōble thorow theyr wyckednesse? For the whych cause I haue pluckt out myne hand ouer them (saith the Lord) so that nowe they must beare theyr own iniquitye, and not to come nye me, to serue me with theyr priesthoode, in my sanctuarye, and most horrible of al: that they may beare their own shame and abominacions, whyche they haue done. Shoulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to al the seruice that is done therein? But the priestes, the Leuites the sonnes of Sadoche, that kepte the holy ordynaunces of my sanctuarye, when the chyldren of Israel were gone fro me, shall come to me, to do me seruice, to stand befoze me, and to offer me the fat and the bloud, saith the Lord God.

They shall go into my Sanctuarye, and treade befoze my table, to do me seruice, & to wayte vpon myne ordynaunces. Now when they go in at the dozes of the inner mer court, they shall put on linnen clothes, so that no wollen come vpon them: whyle they do seruice vnder the dozes of the innermer court, and within. They shall haue sayre linnen bonets vpon theyr heads, and linnen breeches vpon theyr loynes, whych in theyr labour they shall not put aboute them: And when they go forth to the people into the outward court, they shall put of the clothes wherin they haue ministered & lay the in the habytacio of the sanctuarye, and put on other apparel, least they unhallow the people with theyr clothes.

They shall not haue theyr heades, nor norissh the bush of theyr heare, but rounde theyr heades only. Al the priestes that go into the inmost court, shall drink no wyne. They shall mary no wydowe, neyther one that is put fro her housband: but a maide of the seide of the house of Israel, or a wydow that hath had a priest befoze.

They shall shew my people the differēce betwene the holy, and unholy, betwixt the cleane and vncleane. If any dyscorde arysse, they shall dyscerne it, and grue sentence after my iudgements. My solemne feastes, my lawes and ordynaunces shall they kepe, and halowe Sabbothes. They shall come at no dead personne, to desyle theyr selues (excepte it be father or mother, sonne or daughter, brother or sister, that hath had yet no housbande) in suche they may be desyled.

And when he is clensted, ther shall he be rebened vnto hym. vii. dayes: and yf he goo into the sanctuarye agayne to do seruice, he shall bring a synneofferynge sayeth the Lord God. They shall haue an herytage, yea I my selfe wyl be theyr herytage: els shall

The. xlv. Chapter.

The sacryfices of the Sabothe and of the new Moones. Throughe whych doores they must go in, or come out of the Temple. &c.

Thus saith þ Lord God: the doore of þ innermer court toward the east shal be shut the. vi. work dayes: but in the Saboth and in the day of the new moone it shall it shall be open. When shall the prince come under the doze porch, and stand styll wylth out by the doze cheke. So the priestes shall offer hys burnt and healtbofferings. And he shall worshipp at the dozepost, and go his way sothe agayne: but the dooze shall no more be shut tyl the euenyng,

On the same manner shall the people of the land also do theyr worshipp before the Lorde wylthout thys dooze vpon the Sabothes and newe Moones. This is nowe the burnt offering, that þ prince shall bring vnto the Lord vpon the Saboth: vi. lambs wylthout blemish, and a ram wylthout blemish, and an Ephab for a meateoffertinge wylth the ram. As for the lambes, he may gyue as many meateofferynges to them, as he wyl, and an Hin of oyle to one Ephab. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shall be a pong bullocke wylthout blemish, vi. lambes and a ram also wylthout blemish. Wylth the bullock he shall giue an Ephab, and wylth the ramme an Ephab also for a meateofferyng: but to the lambes, what he may come by. And euer an Hin of oyle to an Ephab. When the prynce cometh he shall go vnder the doze of þ porch, and ther depart sothe agayne. But when the people of the land come before the Lord in the hygh solempne feast, as manye as come in by the North doze to do worshipp, shall go out agayn at the south doze. And they that come in at the Southe dooze, shall go sothe agayne at the north doze. There shall none go out at þ doze wher he came in, but shall go sothe ryght ouer on the other syde, and the prynce shall go in and out among them.

Upon the solempne and byghe feast dayes this shall be the meateofferynge: An Ephab to a bullock, and an Ephab to a ram, and to the Lambes as manye as he wyl, but euer an Hin of oyle to an Ephab. Nowe when the prynce bringeth a burnt offering or an healtboffering wylth a free wyl vnto the Lord, the East dooze shall be opened vnto hym, that he maye do wylth hys burnt and healtbofferinges, as he doth vpon the Saboth, and when he goeth sothe, the doze shall be shutte after hym agayne. He shall dayly bring vnto the Lord a lambe of a yere old wylthout blemish for a burnt offering. Thys shall he do euer morning. And for a meateofferynge he shall gyue the first part of an Ephab, and the third part of an Hin of oyle (to mingle wylth the cakes) euer morning. Yea thys shall be a dayly meateofferynge vnto the Lorde, for an euerlastyng ordynauce: and thus shall the Lambe, the meateofferynge and oyle be gyuen euer morning, for a dayly burnt offering.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: If the prynce gyue a gyfte vnto any of hys sonnes, then shall it be hys sonnes herptage perpetuall, that he maye possesse it. But if he wyl gyue one of hys seruantes some of hys herptage, it shall be hys to the free yere, and then to retorne agayne vnto the prynce: for hys herptage shall be hys sonnes onelye. The prynce also shall take none of the peoples enherptage, nor put them from theyr possession, but to hys owne sonnes shall he gyue his posselsion, that my people be not scattered abroad, but that every man may haue hys owne.

And he brought me thorow the intrance at the syde of the doze to the habitation of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to the priestes, and stode toward the North, and behold ther was a place vpon the West side, then sated he vnto me: Thys is the place, wher the priestes shall dryght the trespass, and synneofferynges, and bake the meateofferynges: that they nede not beare them in to the outward court, and so to the uttermost court, round aboute al the four corners. Beholde, in euerye corner of the fore court ther was yet a lytle court.

Yea in al the four corners of the courte ther was a lytle court of .xl. cubytes long, and .xxx. cubytes broade: these four lytle courtes wer of one lyke measure, and ther went a ryg wal round about them al four, vnder the whych there wer barthes made rounde aboute. Then sated he, vnto me Thys is the kytyhn, wher the mynistres of the house shall dryght the clayne offerynges of the people,

The bysyon of the waters that come out of the temple. The coastes of the land of promyse, and the deuysion therof by trybes.

After thys he brought me agayne before the doze of the house: and behold ther gushed out waters from vnder the postes of the house Eastwarde (for the house stode toward the East) that ran downe vpon the ryghte syde of the house, whycher lyeth to the aulter Southwarde. Then carped he me out to the north doze, and brought me sothe ther round about by the uttermost doze that turneth eastward. Beholde, there came sothe the water vpon the ryghte syde.

Now when the man that had the mete rodde in hys hande wente vnto the East dooze, he measured a thousande cubytes, and then he brought me thorow the water, even to the ancles: so he measured pet a .M. & brought me thorow the water agayne vnto þ knees: pet measured he a .M., and brought me thorow the water vnto the loines. After this he measured a .M. agayne, then was it suche a ryuer, that I myghte not wade thorow it: The water was so depe, that it was nedefull to haue swymmed, for it myghte not be waded ouer. And he sated vnto me: haste thou sene this, O thou sonne of man: and wylth that he brought me to the riuer banck agayne.

Now when I came there, there stode many trees vpon eithersyde of the ryuer bancke. Then sated he vnto me: Thys water water that floweth out toward the east and runneth downe into the playne feld, commeth into the sea: and from the sea it floweth out, and maketh the waters hal.

Yea, al that lyue and moue wherunto this spuer commeth, shall recouer. And wher e this water commeth, there shall be much nets: for ther shall be great heapes of fsh, lyke as in the mayne sea. As for his clay

By this spuer vpon bothe the sydes of the fhoze, ther shall grow al maner of fruitful trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall their frut perishe: but euer be ripe at theyr monethes, for ther water runneth out of theyr Sanctuary. His frut is good to eate, and his lease profitable for medi-

The first Chapter.

The Prophecie sheweth the captiuitie of Iohann king of Iuda. Of the sonnes that were in captiuitie, The kyng commaunded to those whiche of them should be taught the learninge and language of the Caldees. They are allowed the kynges feeding. Daniel abstayneth fro the meate of the king of Babilon. The science and instruction of these chyliden.

In the thyrde yere of the reigne of Iohann king of Iuda, came Nabuco-odonosor kyng of Baby- lon unto Jerusalem and beseged it: and the Lord deliuered Iohann the kyng of Iuda into his hand: wth certain ornaments of the house of God: whiche he caried away unto the land of Sennar, to the house of hys God. & ther he brought the into hys gods treasury. springolds which eat of the kings meate. Thus Melchior tooke away theyr meate and wyne, and gaue them potage, therfore God gaue now these four springolds cunning and learning in al scripture & wysdome, but vnto Danyel specially he gaue vnderstandyng of al vyls and dreames. Now whē the tyme was expyred that the kyng hadde appoynted to byrge in these younge springoldes vnto hym: the chiefe chamberlaine brought them before Nabuchodonozor, and the king commaned with them. But amonges them all wer founde none such as Danyel, Ananias, Misael, & Azarias. Therfore stode they before the king, whych in al wisdom and matters of vnderstandyng that he enquired of them, found them. x. tymes better then all the southsayers and charmers that were in al his realme. In the second yere of the raigne of Nabuchodonozor, had Nabuchodonozor a dreame wher thowhe his spryte was vexed, and his slepe brake from him. Whē the king commaunded to cal togyther all the southsayers, charmers, witches & Caldees, for to shew the kyng his dreame. So they came and stode before the kyng. And the kyng said vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spryte was so troubled therewith, that I haue cleane for gotten what I dreamed. Upon this the Caldees answered the kyng in the Syrius spech: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shew thy seruantes the dreame, and we shall shewe what it meaneth. The kyng gaue the Caldees thier answer, & said: It is gone fro me: If ye wil not make me vnderstand the dreame, wyth the interpretation thereof, ye shal dye, and your houses shal be pyrfed. But if ye tel me the dreame and the meaning thereof ye shal haue of me gyftes, rewardes, and great honour, only shewe me the dreame and the significacion of it.

They answered againe and sayed: The king must shew his seruantes the dreame, and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the king answered, sayinge: I perceiue of a truth, that ye do but prolong the tyme: for so much as ye se that the thing is gone fro me. Therfore if ye wil not tel me the dreame, ye shal al haue one iudgemēt. But ye saie and dissemble with vain words, whych ye speake before me, to put off the tyme. Therefore tel me the dreame, and so shal I know if ye can shew me what it meaneth. Upon this the Caldees gaue answer before the kyng, and said: there is no man vpon earth that can tel the thyng whych the king speaketh of: Yea, ther is neyther king, prince nor Lord that euer asked such thyngs at a southsayer, charmer or Caldee, for it is a hard matter, that the king requyeth, neither is ther anye, that can certify the kyng thereof, excepte the gods: whose dwelling is not among the creatures.

For the which cause the kyng was wroth wyth great indignacion, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon, and the proclamacion went forth, that the wyse men shoulde be slayne. They soughte also to slep Danyel with his companions. Then Danyel enquired Arioch the kyngs steward of the iudgemente and sentence, that was gone forth already to kyll suche as were wyse at Babylon.

He answered and saied vnto Arioch the kyng then the kyngs deputy: Why hath the king proclaimed so cruel a sentence? So Arioch told Danyel the matter. Upon this went Danyel vp, and desired the kyng that he might haue leasure to shewe the kyng the interpretation, and then came he home againe, and shewed the thing vnto Ananias, Misael, and Azarias his companions, that they should beseeche the God of heaue for grace in this secret, that Danyel & his felowes, with other such as were wyse in Babylon, perished not. Then was the mistery shewed vnto Daniell in a vylson by night. And Danyel praised the God of heaue. Danyel also cryed loued, and sayed: O that the name of God myghte be prayfed for euer, for wysdome and strength at his own, he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth down kings, he setteth vp kings: he gyueth wysdome vnto, the wise, and vnderstanding to those that vnderstande: he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thing that lyeth in darknes, for the lycht dwelleth wyth hym. I thanke thee, and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou hast lent me wisdom & strenght, and hast shewed me the thing that we desired of thee, for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Upon this went Danyell in vnto Arioch, whom the kyng had ordeyned to destroye the wyse at Babylon: he wente vnto hym and sayed: destroye not suche as are wyse in Babylon, but byrge me into the kyng, and I shal shew the kyng the interpretation. Then Arioch brought Danyell in to the kyng in all the haste, and sayed vnto hym. I haue founde a man amonges the prisoners of Iuda, that shal shewe the kyng, the interpretation. Then answered the kyng and sayed vnto Danyell, whose name was Balthasar: Telle thou he that canste shewe me the dreame, whych I haue sene, and the interpretation.

pretacion therof? Danyel answered the the kyng to hys face, and sayd: As for this secret, for the whych the kyng maketh inquisition, it is neyther þ wylse, the socerer, the charmer, nor the deupl confuter, that can certify the kyng of it: Ouelpe God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes.

Math. xi. c

Thy dreame, and that whiche thou hast sene in thyne head, vpon thy bed, is this: O kyng thou dydest caste in thy mynde what should come heare after. So be that is þ opener of misteries, telleth thee what is for to come. As for me, this secret is not shewed me for any wysedome that I haue more then any other luyng: but only that I myght shew the kyng the interpretacion, and that he might know the thoughtis of hys owne hert. Thou king sayest, and behold, ther stode before the a great image whose spure was marueilous great, and his visage grim. The ymage head was of fyne golde, hys breste and arme of syluer, hys bodye and loynes were of copper, hys legs wer of yron, his feete wer part of yron, and parte of earthe.

Math. xxi. e
Luke. xx. b.

Thou sayest, til the time (that without any handes) there was hewen of a stone, whych smote the ymage vpon the feete, that were borde of yron, and earthe, and brake them to poudre: then was the yron, the earthe, the copper, the syluer and glod broken altogether in ppeces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that þ wynde bloweth away from the sommer doores, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that smot the ymage became a great mountayne, whych fulfyllerth the whole earth: this is the dreame. And now wyl we shew before the kyng, what it meanerth.

Dani. v. d.

O king, thou art a kyng of kynges: For the God of heauen hath giuen the a kyngdome, ryches, strenght, and magestye: and hath deliuered the al thynges that are amongs the chyldren of men: the bestes of the field, and the foules vnder the heauen, and gauen the dominion ouer the al. Thou art that golden head. After the, there shal aryse an other kyngdome, shal be les then thyne. The thyrd kyngdome shal be like copper, and haue dominactio in all lands. The fourthe kyngdome shal be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron brooseth and breaketh al things: Yea euen as yron beateh euerye thyng downe, so shal it beate downe and destroy.

Wher as thou sawest the feete and toes part of earthe and parte of yron, that is a deuised kyngdome, whych neuer thelesse shal haue some of yron ground myxt with it, for so much as thou hast sene the Iron myxt with claye.

The toes of the feete that were part of yron and parte of claye, signifieth that it shal be a kyngdome partely stronge, and partely weake. And wher as thou sawest est Iron myxt with claye, they shal mingle them selues with the seede of simple people, and yet not contynue one with another, lyke as yron wyl not be souldered with a pottherde.

Escape. ix. b.

In the dayes of these kynges, shal the God of heauen set vp an euertlasting kyngdome whych shal not perthe, and hys kyngdome shal not be gyuen ouer to another people: yea the same shal breake and destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shal endure for euer.

Heb. xii. a

And wher as thou sawest that without any handes ther was cutte out of the mount a stone, whych brake the yron, the copper, the earthe, the syluer and golde in ppeces: by that hath the great God shewed the kyng what wyl come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretation therof is sure. Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon hys face, and bowed hym selfe vnto Danyel, and commaunded that they should offer meat offernynges, and swete odoures vnto hym. The kyng answered Danyel, and said: yea of a truthe poure God is a God aboue all gods, a Lorde aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes, serng thou canst dyscouer this mystery. So the kyng made Danyel a great man, and gaue him many and greates gyftes.

He made hym ruler of al the countreys of Babilon, and Lord of al the nobles that were at Babilon. Now Danyel intreated the kyng for Sidrach, Mysach, and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer al the offces in the lande of Babilon. But Danyel hym selfe remayned still in the court by the kyng.

The.iii. Chapter.
The kyng setteth vp a golden Image, whych he commaundeth to be worshipped. Sidrach, Mysach, and Abednago are accused, by cause they despyled the kyngs commaundement. They are brought vnto the kyng, and commaunded to worship the Image. They refuse to doo it, and are put into a burnyng ouen. By belife in God, they are deliuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confelleth the power of God after the syght of the myracle.

Nabuchodonosor the kyng caused a golden ymage to be made, whych was thre score cubytes hygh, and syre cubytes thicke. This he made to be sette vp in the felde of Dura in the land of Babilon, and sente oute to gather together the Dukes, Lords, and Nobles, the iudges and officers, the debities & shryues with all the rulers of the lande, that they might come to the dedicactio of the ymage whych Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp. So the Dukes, Lords, and nobles, the iudges and officers, beires and shryues, with all the rulers of the land gathered together, and came vnto the dedycatynge of the ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp.

After the Greke some read: in the felde that maye be inhabited: wherevpon Josephus in the tenth boke of his antiquities the. xii. cha. sayeth: in a very greete felde.

Nowe when they stode before the Image whych Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedel bedel cryed oute with al his myght: O ye people, kintredes, and tungen, to you be it sayed: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes whiche shal be blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalterpes, symphonies, & all maner of musyke, ye fall downe and worshyp the golden ymage that Nabuchodonozor the kyng hath set vp. Who so the fallerh not downe, and boweth hym selfe, shal euen the same houre be cast into an hote burnynge ouen. Therfore, when al the folke hearde the noyse of the Trompettes that were blowen, with the Harpes, Shawmes, psalterpes, Symphonies, and all kynde of melodye, then all the people, kintredes and nacions fell downe, & bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage that Nabuchodonozor the kyng had set vp.

Nowe were there certayne men of the Caldes that went euen then & accused the Jewes, and sayed vnto the kyng Nabuchodonozor: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beynge kyng, hast gyuen a commaundement that all men, when they heare the noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalterpes, Symphonies, and al the other melodyes, shal fall downe and bowe them selues toward the golden ymage: who so the fel not downe and worshipped not, that he should be cast into an hote burnynge ouen.

Dani. ii. 5

Nowe are there certayne Jewes, whom thou hast set ouer the offces of the lande of Babylon: namely Sidrach, Misach & Abednago. These men (O kyng) regarde not thy commaundemente, yea they wyl not serue thy gods, ne bowe them selues to the golden ymage that thou hast sette vp.

The Nabuchodonozor in a cruel wrath and dyspleasure, commaunded, that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago shoulde be brought vnto hym. So these men were brought before the kyng. Then Nabuchodonozor spake vnto them, and sayed: what? O Sidrach, Misach & Abednago, wyl not ye serue my gods? nor bowe you selues to the golden ymage that I haue set vp? well be redye hereafter, when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the Harpes, Shawmes, psalterpes, Symphonies, and al the other melodyes, that ye fall downe & worshyp the ymage whiche I haue made. But if ye worshyp it not, ye shall be caste immediatlye into an hote burnynge ouen. Let see, what God is there, that maye deliuer you oute of my handes? Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago answered the kyng, and sayed: O Nabuchodonozor, we ought not to consent vnto the in thys matter, for why? oure God whome we serue, is hable to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kyng) and can ryght wel deliuer vs oute of thy handes. And though he wyl not, yet shalte thou knowe (O kyng) that we wyl not serue thy goddes nor do reuerence to the ymage, whych thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonozor full of indignacion, so that the countenance of hys face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded that the ouen shoulde be made seuen tymes hotter then it was wont to be and spake vnto the strongest workmen that were in the hote, for to bind Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, and to cast them into the hote burnynge ouen. So these men were bounde in their cotes, hose, shoes, with their other garmets, and cast into the hote burnynge ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so strypte and the ouen was excedynge hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men: Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, fel downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beynge fast bounde.

Da. xvi. 9

Then Nabuchodonozor the kyng maruelled, and stode vp in al hast, he spake vnto hys counsell and sayde: byd ye not caste these thre men bounde into the fyre. They answered, and sayed vnto the kyng: Yea, O kyng. He answered and sayed: Loo for all that, yet doo I see foure men goynge loose in the myddest of the fyre, and nothyng corrupt, and the fourth is like an aungell to looke vpon.

Esa. xliii. 2

Vpon this went Nabuchodonozor vnto the mourthe of the hote burnynge ouen: he spake also, and sayed: O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, ye seruautes of the hye God, goo forth, and come hyther. And so Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago went oute of the fyre. Then the dukes, lordes, and nobles, and the kynges counsell came together to see those men, vpon whom the fyre had no maner of power in their bodies, In so muche that the berpe herre of their head was not burnt, and their clothes vunchanged: Yea there was no smell of fyre felt vpon them.

D Actes. ix. 6
Dani. x. 6

Then spake Nabuchodonozor, & sayd: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago, which hath sent hys aungell, & defended his seruautes, that put their trust in hym, that haue altered the kynges commaundemente, and leoparded their bodies thereupon, rather then they would serue or worshyp any other God, except their own God only. Therefore I wyl & commaunde, that al people, kintreds, and tungen, which speake any blasphemy agaynst the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and their houses shall be pryed, because there is no God that maye saue as thys. So the kyng promoted Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, in the lande of Babylon.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Nabuchodonozor dreameth againe. Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonozor is put oute of his realme and eateth with beastes. He confesseth the power of God, and is restored into hys kyngdome.

The.iii. Chapter.

Nabuchodonozor kyng unto all people, kyngeddes & tinges that dwell vpon the whole earth peare be multiplied amonges you: I thought it good to shewe the tokens & marueylous workes, that the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O how great are hys tokes, and how myghty are his wonders? His kyngdome is an everlastynge kyngdome, & hys power lasteth for ever and ever. I Nabuchodonozor being at rest in myne house, & floureshyng in my palace, sawe a dreame, which made me afraide, & the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, wyth the visions of my head troubled me. Then sent I out a comyssion, that al they whiche were of wysdome at Babylon should be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacion of the dreame. So ther came & soursayes, charmers, Caldees and counters of deuils, to whiche I told the dreame, but what it betokened they coude not shew me: tyll at the last there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar) accordynge to the name of my God, whiche hath the spirite of the holpe goddes in hym: to whome I tolde the dreame, sayinge: O Balthasar, thou wyrt of soursayes. For so muche as I know that thou hast the spirit of the holy gods, and no secreete is hyd from the, tel me therfore what & visio of my dreame (that I haue seene) may signifie.

I saw a visio in my head vpon my bed, and beholde there stode a tree vpon the grounde whych was verpe hygh, greete, and myghty: the heigth reached vnto the heauen, and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earth, hys leues were sayre, he had very muche fruite, so that euery man had inough to eate therein.

The beastes of the fielde had shadowes vnder it, & the soules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes thereof. Shortly all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my head a visio vpon my bed, & beholde, a watcher came down from heauen, and cryed myghtily, sayinge: Hewe downe the tree, breake of his boughes, shake of hys leues, and scatter hys fruite abrode, that all the beastes may get them awaye from vnder hym, & the soules from hys boughes. Reuerchelesse, leaue the grounde of his roote styll in the earth, and bynde him vpon the playne field, wyth chelines of Iron and stele. With the dewe of heauen shal he be wet, and he shal haue his parte in the herbes of the ground wyth other wyld beastes. That mans herte of hys shalbe taken from hym, and a beastes herte shalbe gyuen hym, tyll seven yeaeres be come and gone vpon hym.

This errande of the watcher, is a commaundement grounded and fought out in the counsell of hym that is mooste holy: to learne meune for to vnderstande that the highest hath power ouer hys kyngdomes of men, & gyueth them to whom it lykerh hym, and byngeth the verpe out castes of men ouer them. This is the dreame that I kyng Nabuchodonozor haue seene: therfore, O Balthasar, tell thou me what it signifith: for so muche as all the wyse men of my kyngdome are not hable to shew me what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of the holy goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) helde hys peace by the space of an houre, and hys thoughtes troubled hym. So the kyng spake, and sayed: O Balthasar, let neyther the dreame ne & interpretacion thereof feare the. Balthasar answered, sayinge: O my Lorde thys dreame happen to thynne ennemyes, and the interpretacion to thynne aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest, which was so great, and myghty whose heigth reached vnto the heauen, & his bredth into al the world, whose leues were sayre, and the fruite muche, vnder the whiche the beastes of the fielde had their habitacion, & vpon whose boughes the soules of the ayre dyd sytte. Euen thou (O kyng) art the tree, greete and stronge. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, and reacheth vnto the heauen, so doth thy power to & endes of the earth. But where as the kyng sawe a watcher euen an holy angel, that came down from heauen, and sayd: hew downe the tree, and destroy it: yet leaue the grounde of the roote in the earth, & bynde hym vpon the playne field, wyth chelines of Iron and stele. He shalbe wet with the dewe of heauen, and his parte shalbe with beastes of the fielde, tyll seven yeaeres be come and gone vpon hym: This (O kyng) is the interpretacion, yea it is the very deuyce of hym that is best of al, and it toucheth my lorde the kyng.

Thou shalt be cast out fro men, and thy dwellynge shal be with the beastes of the fild, with grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an ore. Thou must be wet with the dewe of heauen: Yea, seven yeaeres shal come and go vpon the tyl thou knowe the byest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them to whom he lyt. Moreover, wheras it was sayed that the roote of the tree should be left styll in the ground, it betokeneth that thy kyngdom shal remayne hole vnto thee, after thou hast learned to knowe, that the power cometh fro heauen. Wherefore, O kyng be content wyth my counsell, that thou mayest loose thy synnes wyth righteousnesse, and thynne offences wyth merce to poore people, for suche thynges shal prolonge thy peace. Al these thynges touche the kyng Nabuchodonozor. So after & twelue monethes, the kyng walked vp & downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayed: This is the great ctyte of Babylon, whych I myself (wyth my power & strength) haue made a kynges courte, for the honour of my maieste. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouthe, there fell a voyce from heauen, sayinge: O kyng Nabuchodonozor

The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Rabuchodonozor, so that he was cast out of mens company, and eate grasse lyke an oxe.

His body was wet with the dewe of heauen, tyl his heres wer lyke a great Egles feathers, & his nayles lyke byrdes clawes.

When this tyme was past, I. Rabuchodonozor lyft vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandynge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thanks vnto the highest. I magnified and praysed hym that lyueth for euer moze, whose power endureth alwaye, and his kyngdome from one generacton to an other in comparison of whome al they that dwel vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothyng.

My great estates & prynces sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worship. Then dyd I Rabuchodonozor loue, magnify and prayse the kyng of heauen, for all his workes are true, and his wayes ryght. As for those that goe proud lyke, he is able to bring them downe.

The. v. Chapter.

Balthazar kyng of Babylon abusynge the vessels of the temple, seeth a hand wytyng in the wall. The soothsayers called of the kyng, can not expounde the wytyng. Daniel is called which readeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthazar beynge slayne. Darius succeedeth in his roune.

II. pa. xxxv. c

KYNGE Balthazar made a great banquet to his thousand Lordes: with al these thousand he made great chere, he was dronken wyth wyne, he commaunded to bring him the golde and syluer vessels, whiche his father Rabuchodonozor had taken out of the temple at Ierusalem: that the kyng and his Lordes wyth his quene & concubines myght drynke therein. So they brought the golden vessel that was take out of the temple of the Lordes house at Ierusalem. Then the kyng and his Lordes with his quene & concubines dronke of them. They dronke wyne, and praysed they: Idols of golde, syluer, copper, Iron, wood and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mannes hand wytyng ryght ouer agaynst the candel: stycke vpon the playn wall in the kynges palace: and the kyng saw the palme of the hand that wrote. Then chaiged the kyng his countenance, and his thoughtes troubled hym, so that the ioyntes of his bodye shoke, and his knees smote one agaynst the other. Wherfore the kyng cryed mightily, that they should bring hym the charmers, Caldes and churcers of deuils. The kyng spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, and sayed: Who so can rede this wytyng, and shewe me the playne meanynge therof: shalbe clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Dani. ii. a

Upon this, came al the kynges wyse men, but they coude neyther reade the wytyng, ne shewe the kyng what it signified. Then was the kyng sore astrayed, in so much that his coloure chaunged, and his Lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of this matter, that happened to the kyng and his Lordes, the quene went vp her self into the bankette house, and spake vnto the kyng, sayinge: O kyng God saue thy lyfe for euer: Let not thy thoughtes trouble the, and lette not thy countenance be chaunged. For wherfore there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the spirite of the holye goddes with in hym, as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge and wysedome lyke the goddes. Yea the kyng Rabuchodonozor thy father made this man chiefe of the soothsayers, charmers, Caldes & deuill couniurers, because that suche an aboundant spirite, knoweledge & wysedome (to expounde dreames, to ope secretes, & to declare hard doubtis) was founde in hym: yea, euen in Daniel, whome the kyng named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sent for, and he shall tel, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kyng. So the kyng spake vnto Daniel, and sayed: Arte thou that Daniel, one of the pryncers of Iuda, whome my father the kyng brought out of Iurye: I haue heard speake, thou hast the spirite of the holye goddes, experience and vnderstandynge, and that there hath bene great wysedome founde in the. Now haue there bene brought me wyse and cunnyng charmers, to reade this wytyng, and to shewe me the meanynge therof: But they coude not tell me, what this matter signified. Wherfore I saye, that thou couldest expounde darke thinges, and declare hard doubtis. Well than if thou canst reade this wytyng, and shewe me the meanynge thereof: thou shalt be clothed with purple haue cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Daniel answered, and sayd before the kyng: As for thy rewardes, kepe then thy selfe, or grue thy ryghte gyftes to al

Then commaunded Balchazar, to cloth Daniel wyth purple, to bange a cheyne of golde aboute hys necke, and to make a proclamacion concernynge hym, that he shoulde be the ruler of the thyrde part of his nacion of the acte, wherof Daniel is accusid the kynge as a transgressoure. He is in a den of lyons by the commaundement of the kynge. He is deliuered by fayth in God.

His accusers are put in to the lyons to be these be set thye princes (of whom Danti-el was one) that the lordes myght graue accompres vnto them, and the kynge to be vndiseased. But Daniell excused all these princes and lordes, for the spirite of God was plenteous in hym: so that the king was mynded to set him ouer the hole realme. Wherefore the princes & lordes sought, to pycke out in Daniel some quarel agaynst the kingdome, yet coulde they fynde none occasyon ne faute vpon hym.

For why? he was so saythfull, that there was no blame ne dishonesty foude in hym.

B Then sayed these men: we will get no quarrell agaynst this Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe of hys God. Upon this wente the princes and lordes togyther vnto the kynge, and sayed thus vnto hym: kynge Darius God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greates of the realme: as the princes, Dukes, Senatours, and Iudges, are determined to put out a commandement of the kynge, and to make a sure stature, namely that whoso desyreth any pe-ticion, eyther of any God or man (wythin this. xxx. dayes) except it be onely of the,
the same person may be cast into the lyons den. Wherefore, O kynge con-firme this statute, and make a wrytynge that the thynge whiche the Medes and Perses haue ordeined be not aultered ne broken. So Darius made the wrytynge, & confirmed it. Nowe when Daniel vnder-stode that the wrytynge was made, he went into his house: and the windowes of hys hall, towarde Ierusalem, stode open. There kneled he down vpon his knees, thre times a daye, there he made hys petition, and prayed hys God, lyke as his maner was to doo afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, & founde Daniel makynge hys petition, and prayynge vnto hys God: So they came to the kynge, and spake before hym concernynge hys commaundement, sayynge: O kynge hast thou not subscribed the statute, that wythin thyrtye dayes whoso requyryth hys petition of anye God or man but ou-lye of thy selfe, O kynge: he shalbe cast into the den of the lyons? The kynge answered, and sayed: yea it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that may not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayed vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the prysoners of Juda O kynge, regardeth neyther the, ne thy statute that thou hast made, but ma-keth hys petition thre tymes a daye.
When the kynge heard these wordes, he was sore greued, and woulde haue excused Daniell, to deliuer hym, and put of the matter, vnto the Sunne went downe, to the intent that he myght saue hym.

These men perceyvinge the kynges mynde, sayed vnto hym: knowe this (O kynge) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is: that the commaundement and statute

Dan. xlii. e

statute whiche the kyng maketh, may not be altered. Then the kyng had them bring Daniel, and they cast hym into the lions denne. The kyng also spake vnto Daniel, & sayd: thy God, whom thou alway seruest, euen he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, & layed vpon the hole of the den, this þ kyng sealed with his owne ring, and with the signet of hys prynces: that the kynges commaundement concerning Daniel, should not be broken.

So the kyng went into hys palace, and kept hym sober all night, so that there was no table spread before hym, neyther coude he take any slepe. But betymes in the morning at the breake of the day, the kyng arose, & went in all hast vnto the den of the Lyons. Now as he came nigh vnto þ den, he cryed with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yea the kyng spake, and sayd vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunte of the lyuyng God, is not thy God (whom thou alway seruest) hable to deliuer the from the Lyons? Daniel sayd vnto the kyng: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. My God hath sent hys aungel, which hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they myght not hurte me. For wher myne vngiltynes is founde oute before hym. And as for the, O kyng, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kyng exceedinge glad and commaunded to take Daniel oute of the den. So Daniel was brought out of the den, & no maner of hurt was found vpon hym. For he put his trust in hys God. And as for those men whiche had accused Daniel, the kyng commaunded to byng the, and to cast them in the Lyons den, them, their chyldren and their wyues. So the Lyons had the mastery of them, & brake all their bones a sonder, or euer they came at the grounde.

After this, wrote kyng Darius vnto all people kindredes, and runges, that dwelt in all landes: peace be multiplyed with you: My commaundement is, in all my domination and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God.

For he is the lyuyng God, whiche abydeth euer: hys kyngdome shall not fayle, and hys power is euerlastyng. It is he that deliuereth, & sauerh: he doeth wonders and meruelous workes, in heauen and in earth: he hath preserved Daniel from the power of the Lyons. This Daniel prospered in the reygne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

The. vii. Chapter.

A visio of foure beastes shewed vnto Daniel. The visio is interpreted of foure kyngdomes of the world. Of the power & increase of Antichrist. Of þ euerlasting kyngdome of Christ.

In the first pease of Baltazar kyng of Babylon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a visio: was in hys head vpon hys bed. Whiche dreame he wrote, and the sum of the matter is this: Daniel spake and said: I sawe in my visio by nyght, and beholde the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue bys on the sea, and foure greate beastes came vp from the sea one vnylike an other.

The fyrste was as a lyon, and yet had he Eagles wynges. I sawe, that hys wynges were pluckt from hym, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon hys fete as a man, and that there was gyuen hym a mans herte.

Beholde, the seconde beaste was lyke a beare, & stode vpon the one syde. Amonges hys teeth in hys mouth he had thre greate long teeth, and it was sayd vnto hym: Arise, eat vp muche fleshe. Then I looked: and beholde, there was an other lyke to a Leopard: this had wynges as a foule, euen foure vpon the backe. This beaste had thre beades, and there was power gyuen hym. After this I saw in a visio by nyght, and beholde the fourth beaste was grym, & horrible, and meruelous stronge. It had greate Iron teeth, it deuoured, destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was sarre vnylike the other beastes that were before it: for it had ten hornes, wherof I tooke good hede.

And beholde, there came by among them, an other lytle horne, before whome there were thre of the first hornes pluckt away. Beholde thys horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouthe speakyng presumptuous thynges. I looked tyll the seates were prepared, & tyl the old aged sat hym downe. Hys clothyng was as whyte as snowe, and the beaces of hys head lyke the pure woll. His throne was lyke the fyre flame, & hys wheles as the burnyng fyre. There dreyne forth a fyre streame, and went oute from hym. A thousande tymes a thousand serued him. x. times. x. stode before hym. The iudgement was sette, and the bookes opened. Then I toke hede therunto, because of þ voyce of þ proude wordes, whiche that horne spake. I behelde tyll the beaste was slaine, & his body destroyed, and geuen ouer to be brent in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but they lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a visio by nyght, & beholde there came one in the cloudes of heauen like the sonne of a man, which went vnto the olde aged, before whome they broughte hym: Then gaue he him power and dignitie regeall, that all people, trybes and runges should serue hym. Hys power is an euerlastyng power, whiche shall neuer be put doayne: and hys kyngdome endureth vncorrupt. My herte was vered, & I Daniel had a troubled spryte within me, and the visions of my head made me afraid: tyl I gat me vnto one of them that stode by, to knowe the truth, concerning al these thynges. So he told me, & made me vnderstande the interpretacion of these thynges.

The viii. Chapter.

These four greates beasts, are four kynges which shal aryse out of the earth. These shall take in the kyngdome of the sayntes of the most hygh, and possesse it still more and more for a long season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the truth, concernynge the fourth beast, which was so farre vnylike the other beasts, and so horryble: whose teeth were of yron, and his nayles of brasse: whiche deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his feete. I desired also to knowe the truth, as touchynge the tenne hornes that he had vpon his head, & this other whyche came vp afterwarde before whose face there fell downe thre: whiche horne had eyes and a mouthe that spake presumptuous thynges, and looked wyth a grimmer vyfage then his felowes. I beheld, and the same horne made battayle agaynst the sayntes, yea and gat the victory of them vntill the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgement was gynn to the chiefest sayntes, and till the tyme that the sayntes had the kyngdome in possession. He gaue me this answer: That fourth beast shall be the fourth kyngdome vpon earth: it shall be more then all other kyngdomes, it shall deuoure, treade down, and destroy all other landes.

The ten hornes, are ten kinges, that shal aryse out of the kyngdome, after whome there shal stande by an other, which shal be greater then the first. He shal subdue thre kynges, and shal speake wordes agaynst the hygh of all: he shal destroy the sayntes of the moste hygh, and thynke that he may chaunge tymes and lawes. They shal be giuen vnder his power vntill a time two tymes, and halfe a tyme.

But the iudgement shal be kept, so that his power shal be taken from hym, for he shall be destroyed, and perishe at the last. As for the kyngdome, power, and al might that is vnder the heauen: it shall be gynn to the holpe people of the moste hygh, whose kyngdome is euerylastynge, yea all powers shall serue and obey hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuerthelesse, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenance chaunged, but the wordes I kept still in my herte.

The viii. Chapter.

A vision of a strepe betwene a ram and an he goate. The vnderstandynge of the vision, is of the battell betwene the kyng of Persia, and the kyng of the Grecians. Of the shamelesse kyng Antichrist.

In the thyrde yere of the rayne of kyng Baltazar, there appeared a vision vnto me Daniel after that I had sene the fyrst, I sawe in a vision (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chiefe citie, whiche lyeth in the lande of Elam) and in the vision I thought I was by the ryuer Ulai. Then I looked vp, and sawe: and beholde,

The Prophecy

there stode before the ryuer, a ram, whiche had hornes: and these hornes were bygh, but one was higher then an other, and the hygher came by last.

I sawe that this ram pushed with his hornes, agaynst the West, agaynst the North, and agaynst the South: so that no beastes myght stande before hym, nor defende them from his power: but he did as hym lysted, and waxed greatly. I tooke hede vnto this, and then came there an he goate from the West ouer the hole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a marueylous goodlye horne betwixt his eyes, and came vnto the ram that had the two hornes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcelly vpon him with his might. I sawe hym drawe hygh vnto the ramme, being very scarce vpon hym: yea he gaue hym such a stroke, that he brake his two hornes: Neether had the ramme so muche strength as to stande before hym: but he cast hym downe, trode hym vnder his fete: and no man was able to deliuer the ram out of his power.

The goate waxed exceeding greates, and when he was at the strongest, his greates horne was broken also. Then grewe there other four such lyke in the stede, toward the East, wyndes of the heauen. Yea out of one of the lest of these hornes, there came by yet an other horne, which waxed marueylous greates: toward the South, toward the East, and toward the sayre pleasaunte lande. It grewe vp to the hoste of heauen, wherof it dyd caste some downe to the ground, and of the starres also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yea it grewe vp vnto the pynce of the host, from whom the dayly offeringe was taken, and the place of his Sanctuarye casten downe. And a certayne season was gynn vnto it, agaynst the dayly offeringe (because of wyckednesse) that it myghte cast downe the veritie to the ground, & so to prosper in all thynges that it went about.

Vpon this I herde one of the Sayntes speaking, whyche Saynte sayed vnto one that asked this question: Howe long shal this vision of the dayly sacrifice and of the wastynge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuarye and the power shal so be troden vnder fete? And he answered hym vnto the euening and the moorning, euen two thousand & thre hundred dapes: then shal the sanctuaty be clensed agayne.

Now when I Daniel had sene this vision, and sought for the vnderstandynge of it, beholde, there stode before me a thyng lyke vnto a man. And I hearde a mannes voyce in the ryuer of Ulai, whyche cryed, and sayd: O Gabriel, make this man vnderstand the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his comynge, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayed he vnto me: O thou sonne of man, of mā, marke well, for in the last tyme shal thys vpsion be fulfilled. Nowe as he was speaking vnto me, I waxed faynt, so that I suncke downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, and set me vpon my feete, saying: Behold, I will shew the, what shal happen in the last tyme: for in þe tyme appointed it shalbe fulfilled.

The ramme whiche thou sawest wryth the two hornes, is the kyng of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is the kyng of Greke lande: the greete horne that stood betwixt his eyes, that is the pryncypall kyng. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the stede, it signifieth, that oute of thys people shal stande by foure kyngdomes, but not so myghty as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynnesse is a growynge) there shal arysse a kyng of an vnshamefast face, whiche shal be wyse in darke speakynges.

He shalbe myghty and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shal destroy about measure, and al that he goeth aboute shal prosper: he shal stay the stronge & holy people. And thorow his craftines, falsed shal prosper in his hand, his herte shal be proude, and many one shal be put to death in his welthines. He shal stande vpon agaynst the prynces of prynces, but he shal be destroyed wrythout hande. And this vpsion that is shewed vnto thee, is as sure as the euening and the morning. Therefore wryte thou vpon this syght, for it wyll be long or it come to passe.

Vpon this was I Daniel very saynte, so that I laye sycke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I went about the kynges busynesse, and manuepled at the vylpou, neuertheles no man knewe of it.

The ix. Chapter.

Daniel desyret to haue that perfourmed of God which he had promysed concernyng the returue of the people from theyr banishment in Babylon. A true confession. Daniels prayer is hearde. Gabriel the Angell expoundeth vnto hym the vylpou of the thye scoe and ten wekes.
The annoyntynge of Chyrl. The buyldynge a-gayne of Ierusalem vnder Nehemias. The death of Chyrl. The castynge oute of the wycked Jewes.

In the fyrste yere of Darius the sonne of Assuerus, whiche was of the seede of the Medes, and was made kyng ouer the realme of the Caldees: yea euen in the fyrst yere of his raigne, I Daniel desyred to knowe the yeaerlye nombre oute of the bookes, wherof the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophete, that Ierusalem shoulde be waste thye scoe and ten yeaeres: and I turned me vnto God the Lorde for to pray and make myne intercession, with fastynge, sackcloth and ashes. I prayed before the Lorde my God, & knowledged, sayinge: O Lord, thou great & fearful God, thou that keepest couenaunt and merce wryth them, whiche loue the, and do thy commaunde-mentes: We haue sinned, we haue offeded, we haue bene disobedient and gone backe:

yea we haue departed frome all thy pre-ceptes and iudgementes.

We would neuer folowe thy seruantes the prophetes, that spake in thy name to oure kynges and prynces, to oure forefathers, and to al the people of the lande. O Lorde, ryghteousnes belongeth vnto thee, vnto vs partayneth the norbynge but open shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto euerie man of Iuda, and to them that dwelle at Ierusalem: Yea vnto all Israel, whether they be farre or nyghe thorow out all landes: wherein thou hast strowed them, because of the offences that they had done agaynst the.

Yea O Lorde, vnto vs, to oure kynges & prynces, to oure forefathers: euen to vs all that haue offended thee, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde oure God, pertayneth mercy and forgeuenes. As for vs, we are gone backe from him, and haue not obeyed the voice of the Lord our God, to walke in his lawes, which he layed before vs by his seruantes the prophetes: yea all Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy law, so that they haue not harkened vnto thy voyce.

Wherefore the curse and othe, that is wrytten in the law of Moyses the seruant of God (against whom we haue offended) is poured vpon vs. And he hath perfourmed his wordes, whiche he spake agaynst vs: and agaynst oure iudges that iudged vs, to byng vpon vs suche a great plage, as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Ierusalem. Yea all this plage, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moyses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not our prayer before the Lorde our God, that we myght turne agayne from oure wyckednesse, and to be learned in thy veritie.
Therefore hath the Lorde made haste, to byng thys plage vpon vs: for the Lorde our God is ryghteous in all his workes whiche he doeth: for why, we woulde not herken vnto his voyce. And now, O Lorde our God, thou that wryth a myghty hande hast brought thy people oute of Egypte, to gette thy selfe a name, whiche remaineth thys daye: we haue sinned. O Lorde, and done wyckedlye agaynst all thy ryghteousnesse: yet let thy wrathfull dyspleasure be turned awaye (I beseeche the) from thy citty Ierusalem thy holy hyll. And why?
for oure synnes sake, and for the wyckednesse of oure forefathers is Ierusalem and thy people abhorred of all them that are about vs. Now therefore, O our God, here the prayer of thy seruant, and his intercession. O let not thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth waste.

O my God, encline thyne eare, and herken (at the least for thyne owne sake) open thyne eyes: beholde howe we be desolated, yea and the citty also, whiche is called after thy name: for we doo not cast

our prayers before the in our owne righteousness, no, but onely in thy great mercies, O Lord, heare: O forgiue Lord: O Lord consider, tary not ouer long: but for thyne owne sake do it, O my God: for thy citie & thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakynge at my prayers, knowledgyng myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makynge so myne intercession before the Lord my God, for the holy bylles sake of my God: yea, whyle I was yet speakynge in my prayer, beholde, the man Gabryell (whom I had sene afore in the vision) came flying to me, and touched me about the offerynge tyme in the euening. He informed me, and spake vnto me: O Daniel sayed he, I am now come to make the vnderstand it: For as soone as thou beganest to make thy prayer, it was so deuised, and therefore am I come to shew the. And why? for thou art a man greatly beloued.

A weke is taken here for vii. yeres as in Leuit. xxv. wherefore the lxx. weakes are foure. c. and xx. yeres.

Wherfore, ponder the matter wel, that thou mayst learne, to vnderstande the vision. * the score and ten weakes are determined ouer thy people, and ouer the holpe citie: that the wyckednesse may be consumed, that the syn maye haue an ende, that the offence may be reconciled, & to byngge in euerlastynge ryghteousnesse, to fulfill the visions and the prophetes, and to anoynt the most holy one. Vnderstand this then, and marke it wel, that from the time it shalbe concluded, to go and repayre Ierusalem againe, vnto Christ (or the anoynted) prince: there shall be seuen weakes. Then shal the stretes and walles be buylagayne. lxxii. weakes, but wyth hard tribulous tyme. After these lxxii. weakes, shall Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in hym. Then shall there come a people wyth the prince, and destroy the citie and the Sanctuary: and bys ende shal come as y water flood. But the desolacion shal continue tyl the ende of the battayle.

He shal make a strong bonde wyth manye, for the space of a weke: and when the weke is halfe gone, he shal put downe the slayne and meat offerynge. And in the temple there shal be an abhominable desolacion, tyl it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that thys wastynge shal continue vnto the ende.

The .x. Chapter.

There appeareth vnto Daniel a man clothed in linnen, whiche sheweth hym wherefore he is sent.

In the thyrde yere of kynge Citrus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (otherwise called Balthazar) a matter, yea a true matter, but it is per a long tyme vnto it. He vnderstoode the matter wel and perceyued what the vision was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre weakes, so that I had no lust to eate breade: as for flesch and wyne, there came none wythin my mouth. No, I dyd not ons anoynt my selfe, till the whole thre weakes were out.

Upon the xliiii. dape of the fyrst moneth, I was by the greates flood, called Tigris: I lyft vp myne eyes, and looked: and behold, a man clothed in lynn, whose loines were girded vp wyth fyne golde of Araby, bys bodie was lyke the Chrysolite stone, bys face (to looke vpon) was lyke lychtynge, bys eyes as the flame of fyre, bys armes and fete were lyke sayre glistering metall, but the voyce of bys woordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude.

Dan. iii. c.
Actes. ix. a

I Daniel alone sawe thys vision, the men that were wyth me, sawe it not, but a great fearfulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and byd them selues. I was left there my self alone, and saw this great vision, so longe tyl there remayned no more strenght wythin me: yea I lost my colour cleane, I wasted awaye, & my strenght was gone. Yet herde I the voyce of bys woordes, and as sone as I herd it, sayntnes came vpon me, and I fel downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche set me vpon my knees, and vpon the palmes of my handes, sayng vnto me: O Daniel, thou wel beloued man: take good hede of the woordes, that I shall say vnto the, and stande ryght vp, for vnto the am I now sent.

Dan. ix. b.

And when he had sayd these woordes, I stood vp tremblynge. Then sayd he vnto me, feare not Daniel: for why sence the fyrste dape that thou set thyne herte to vnderstande, and dyddest hasten thy selfe before thy God: thy woordes haue bene herd. And I had come vnto thee, when thou beganest to speake hadde not the prince ouer the kyngdome of the Perses wythstande me. xxi. dayes. But lo Michael one of the chiefest princes, came to helpe me, him haue I left by the king of Persia, and am come to shew the what shal happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes. For it wyl be long yet or the vision be fulfilled.

Iosue. v. d.
Dani. v. d.

Now when he had spoken these woordes vnto me, I caste downe my head to the ground and helde my tounge. Behold there touched my lippes one verpe lyke vnto a manne. Then opened I my mouth, and sayed vnto hym, that stood before me: O my Lord, my lynes are lewised in the vision, and there is no more strenght wythin me: Howe maye my Lordes seruaunte then talke wyth my Lord? sayng there is no strenght in me, so that I can not take my bryth: Upon thys there touched me agayne, one muche lyke a manne, and comforted me, sayng: O thou man so wel beloued, feare not: be contente, take a good herte vnto the, and be strong.

Dan. ix. b.

So when he had spoken vnto me, I recovered, and sayed: Speake on my Lord, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayed he: Knowest thou wherefore I am come vnto thee: now wyl I go againe to fight wyth the the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, for the prince of Greke lande shall come. Neuerthelesse, I wyl shewe the the thyng, that is fast noted in the scripture of truerth. And as for all powder matters, there is none that helpeth use in them, but Michael your prince.

The. xi. Chapter.

In a prophete of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egypt, and of the bonde therof, and of the battel wyth the kyngdom of Siria. Of the Jewes that styve vnto the kyng of Egypt, whom Antiochus the kyng of Syria persecuteth, whiche figureth vnto vs Antichriste. The pryde of Antiochus.

And in the firste yeare of Darius of Medea, I stode by hym, to comforte hym, and to strength hym, and nowe wil I shew thee the truerth. Beholde, there shal stande by yet thre kynges in Persia, but the fourth shal be farre rycher then they all. And when he is in the chiefest power of hys ryches, he shal prouoke euery man agaynst the realme of Greke land. When shal there aryse yet a myghty kyng that shal rule wyth greates dominion, and doo what him lyst. And as soone as hys kyngdome cometh vp, it shal be destroyed, and deuoyded towarde the. iiii. wyndes of the heauen. They that come after hym, shal not haue suche power and dominion as he: but hys kyngdome shal be scatered, yea euen amonges other then those. And the kyng of the south shal be myghtier, then hys other princes. Against him there shal one make him selfe stronge, & shal rule his dominion wyth great power. But after certayne yeares they shalbe toynded togyther, and the kynges daughter of the south shal come to the kyng of the north, for to make frendshyp, but she shal not obteyne power of that armie, neither shal she be able to endure thowme his myght: but she, & such as brought her (yea and he that begat her, and comforted her for his tyme) shalbe deuoyered vp. Out of the braunches of her roote, there shal one stande by in his stede, which wyth power of armes shal goe thowme the kynges lande of the northe, and handle hym accordynge to hys strength.

As for theyr Idolles and princes, wyth their costly Jewels of golde and syluer, he shal carpe them amape captiues into Egypte, and he shal preuaile agaynst the kyng of the North certayne yeares. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the south he shal be fayne to turne agayne into his owne lande. Wherefore hys sonnes shalbe displeased, and shal gather togyther a myghty greates hoste of people: and one of them shal come, and goo thowme lyke a water floud, then shal he returne, and go forth wyth despyng and boasting vnto his owne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shalbe angry, and shal come forth to fyght agaynst the kyng of the North, he shal brynge a greates multitude of people togyther, and a greates heape shalbe gyuen into his hand, these shal he cary away wyth greates pryde, for so muche as he hath cast downe so manye thousandes, neuerthelesse he shal not preuaile. For the kyng of the North, shal gather (of the newe a greates heape of people then afore, and come forth, after a certayne tyme & yeares) wyth a myghty host and excedyng greates good.

At the same tyme there shal many stand by agaynst the kyng of the south, so that the wycked chyldren of thy people also shal ralte them selues (to fulfyll the vrsion) and then fal. So the kyng of the north shal come to lay seige, & to take the strong fenced cyties: And the power of them of the south shal not be able to abyde hym, and the best men of the people shal not be so stronge as to resyst hym. Shortly, when he cometh, he shal handle hym as he lyst, and no man shalbe so hardye as to stande agaynst hym. He shal stande in the pleasaunt country, whiche thowme hym shalbe destroyed. He shal set his face wyth al hys power to obteyne hys kyngdome, & to be lyke it. Yea that shal he doo, and gyue hym vnto the daughters amonges women, to destroy hym. But he shal sayle, neyther shal he obteyne hys purpose.

After this shal he set hys face vnto the ples, and take manye of them. A prince shal stoppe hym, to do hym a shame besyde the confusid that els shal come vnto him. Thus shal he turne agayne to hys owne lande, to mble and fal, & be no more found: so be that came vpon him, and did him violence, shal stande in his place, and haue a pleasaunte kyngdome: and after fewe dayes he shalbe destroyed, and that neyther in warthe, nor in battayle. In hys stede there shal aryse a vple person, not holden worthy of a kynges dignite: this shal come in craftely, & obteyne the kyngdome wyth fayne wordes: he shal fyght agaynst the armes of the myghtye (and destroy them) yea, and agaynst the prince of the couenaunte.

So after that he hath taken truce wyth hym, he shal handle disceytfully: that he maye get by, and ouercome hym wyth a small flocke, and so wyth craftynesse to get hym to the fatted place of the lande, and to deale otherwys then eyther hys fathers or graundfathers dyd. For he shal destroy the thyng that they robbed and spoyled, yea and at their substance, ymagynge thoughtes agaynst the stronge holde, and that for a tyme. His power and herte shal be styred vp wyth a greates armie agaynst the kynges of the South, where thowme the kyng of the South shal be moued then vnto battayle wyth a greates and myghtye hoste also. Neuerthelesse he shal not be able to stande, for they shal conspyre agaynst hym. Yea, they that eate of hys meate shall hurte hym, so that hys hoste shall fall, and many be slayne downe.

1. Mac. v. a.

These twoo kynges shall be mynded to doo myschite, and talke of disceyte at one table, but they shall not prosper: for why? the ende shall not come yet, vnto the tyme appoynted. Then shall he go home agayne into hys owne lande wyth greate good, and set hys hearte agaynst the holy couenant, he shall be busy agaynst it, and then retorne home. At the tyme appoynted he shall come agayne, & goo toward the south. So shall it happen other wyse then at the fyrst: yet ones agayne. And why? the shyps of Tybim shall come vpon hym, that he maye be smytten and turne agayne, that he may take indignacion agaynst the couenant of holynes, to meddle agaynst it. Yea he shall tourne hym, and drawe suche vnto hym as leaue the holpe couenante.

2. Mac. xiii.

He shall set myghtye men to vnbalowe the Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the dayly offering, and to set by the abhominable desolacion, and suche as breake the couenante shall be flatter wyth fayre wordes. But the people that wyll knowe theyr God, shall haue the ouer hande and prosper. These also that haue vnderstanding among the people, shall enfourme the multitude: & for a long season they shall be persecuted wyth sword, wyth fyre, wyth captiuitie, and with the takyng awaye of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be set vp wyth a lytle helpe, but manye shall cleaue vnto them saynedly.

Ye some of those which haue vnderstandinge shall be persecuted also, that they may be tryed, purified, and clenfed, tyl the tyme be out, for there is yet an other tyme appoynted. The kyng shall do what hym lyst, he shall exalt and magnifye hym selfe aboue all, that is God. Yea he shall sweake matueplous thynges agaynst the God of al Goddes, wherein he shall prosper so long tyl the wrath be fulfilled, for the conclusion is deuised already. He shall not regarde the God of hys fathers, but hys lust shall be vpon women: Yea, he shall not care for any God, for he shall magnifie hym selfe aboue all. In hys place shall he worshyppe the myghtye ydols: and the God whome hys fathers knewe not, shall he honoure with golde & syluer, with precious stones, and pleasaunt Jewels.

Apoc. xv. a.

Thys shall he do, sekynge helpe and succoure at the myghtye ydols and straunge Goddes. Suche as wyll receyue hym, and take hym for God, he shall giue the greate worshyppe and power: yea and make them Lordes of the multitude, and gyue them the lande wyth rewardes.

In the latter tyme shall the kyng of the south streue wyth hym, and the kyng of the North in lyke maner shall come agaynst hym with charrettes, horsemenne, and wyth a greate nauye of shypes. He wyll come into the landes, destroy and goo thowwe: he shall enter also into the fayre pleasaunt lande. Many cytyes and countreyes shall decaye, excepte Edom, Moab, and the best of the chyldren of Ammon, whiche shall escape from hys hande. He shall stretch forth hys handes vpon the countreyes, and the lande of Egypte shall not escape hym. For thowwe hys goynge in, he shall haue domynion ouer the treasures of syluer & golde, and ouer all the precious Jewels of Egypte, Lybia, and Ethiopia.

Apoc. xii. c.

Neuerthelesse the tydynges oute of the East and the North shall trouble hym, for the whiche cause he shall goo forth to destroye and curse a greate multitude. The tentes of hys palace shall be pyched betwixt the two seas, vpon the hyl of the noble sanctuary, for he shall come to the ende of it, and then shall no man helpe hym.

Then shall the people be deliuered, yea all those that be founde written in the booke. Many of those that slepe in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to the euerylastynge lyfe, some to perpetual shame and reprobacion, the wyse (suche as haue taught other) shall glyster as the shynynge of heauen, and those that haue instructed the multitude vnto godlynes, shall be as the sterres, world without ende.

The booke of the prophete Oseas.

The first Chapter.

The tyme wherein Oseas prophesied. Oseas by taking an harlot to his wyfe, signifieth the idolatry of the people. The destruction of the kynge of Iehu, and of the Israelites is prophesied.

This is the worde of the Lord, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Becri in þ dayes of Oseas, Jothan, Achas & Ezechias kyng of Iuda: and in the tyme of Jeroboam the son of Joas kyng of Israel.

First when the Lorde spake vnto Oseas, he sayd vnto hym: So thy wyfe, take an harlotte to thy wyfe, and get chyldren, by her: for the land hath committed great whoredome agaynst the Lorde. So he went, and toke * Gomor the daughter of * Deb-laim: which conceived and brought forth a sonne. And the Lorde sayd vnto hym: call his name * Jisrael, for I wyl shortly avenge the bloud of Jisrael vpon the house of Iehu, and wyl brynge the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then wyl I breake the bowe of Israel in the valley of Jisrael.

She conceived yet agayne, and bare a daughter. And he sayd vnto hym: Call her name * Lurubamah (that is, not opteyning mercy) for I wyl haue no pittie vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put them clene out of remembrance. Nevertheless, I wyl haue mercy vpon the house of Iuda, and wyl saue them, euen thowme the Lorde theyr God. But I wyl not deliuer them thowme aye bowe, sword, batel, horses or horsemen.

Nowe when she had weaned Lurubamah, she conceived agayne, and bare a sonne. The sayd he: call his name * Loamy. For why? ye are not my people, therefore wyl not I be yours. chyldren of Israel be gathered together agayne, and chose them selues one head, and then departe out of the land: for great shalbe the day of Israel.

The.ii. Chapter.

The people is called vnto repentance.

Tel poore brethren, that they are my people: and your sisterne, that they haue obteyned mercy. As for your mother, ye shal chide with her, and reprove her: for she is not my wyfe, neyther am I her husbnde, vnlesse she put away her whoredome out of my syght, & her aduouty from her brestes. Yf no, I shal strip her naked, and set her euen as she came into the world: yea, I shal lay her waste, and make her lyke a wyldernesse, and sea her for thirte. I shal haue no pittie also vpon her chyldren, for they be the chyldren of fornicacion.

Ther mother hath broken her wedlocke, and she that bare them, is come to confusion. For she sayd, I wyl goo after my louers, that geue me my water and my breade, my wol and flaxe, my oyle, and my drinke. But I wil hedge her way with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde her foote-steppes: and though she runne after her louers, yet shal she not get them, she shal seke them, but not fynde the. I wyl make it a woode, and the wyld beasts shal eat it vp: I wyl punishe her also for the dayes of Baal, wherein she censed hym, deckyng hym with her care rynges and cheynes: when she folowed her louers, and forgot me, sayeth the Lorde.

Wherefore beholde, I wyl call her agayne, brynge her into a wyldernesse, and speake frendly vnto her: there wil I giue her, her vyneyardes agayne: yea, and the valey of Achor also to her to her hope and comfort. # The booke of the prophete Oseas.

The first Chapter.

The tyme wherein Oseas prophesied. Oseas by taking an harlot to his wyfe, signifieth the idolatry of the people. The destruction of the kynge of Iehu, and of the Israelites is prophesied.

This is the worde of the Lord, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Becri in þ dayes of Oseas, Jotham, Achas & Ezechias kyng of Iuda: and in the tyme of Jeroboam the son of Joas kyng of Israel.

First when the Lorde spake vnto Oseas, he sayd vnto hym: So thy wyfe, take an harlotte to thy wyfe, and get chyldren, by her: for the land hath committed great whoredome agaynst the Lorde. So he went, and toke * Gomor the daughter of * Debaiun: which conceived and brought forth a sonne. And the Lorde sayd vnto hym: call his name * Jezrael, for I wyl shortly avenge the bloud of Jezrael vpon the house of Iehu, and wyl bringe the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then wyl I breake the bowe of Israel in the valley of Jezrael.

She conceived yet agayne, and bare a daughter. And he sayd vnto hym: Call her name * Lozibamah (that is, not obtaining mercy) for I wyl haue no pittie vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put them clene out of remembrance. Nevertheless, I wyl haue mercy vpon the house of Iuda, and wyl saue them, euen thowme the Lorde theyr God. But I wyl not deliuer them thowme aye bowe, sword, batel, horses or horsemen.

Nowe when she had weaned Lozibamah, she conceived agayne, and bare a sonne. The sayd he: call his name * Loamy. For why? ye are not my people, therefore wyl not I be yours. The.iii. Chapter.

G A complaynte agaynst the people, and the prestes of Israel.

A H Care the woorde of the Lorde, O ye chyldren of Israel: for the Lorde must punishe them that dwell in the lande. And why? There is no faythfulnes, there is no mercy, there is no knowledge of God in the lande, but swearing, lying, manslaughter, theft, and aduoutrye, haue gotten the ouer hande, and one bloudgytynes foloweth an other. Therefore shall the land be in a miserable case, and all they that dwell therein, shall mourne. The beastes in the field, the foules in the ayre, and the fyshes in the sea shall dye. Yet is there none that will chaste nor reprove an other.

The prestes whiche shoulde reforme vnto the men, are become like the people.

Therefore stonblest thou in the daye tyme, and the prophete wpth thee in the nyght. I wyll byng thy mother to sylce, and why? my people perishe, because they haue no knowledge. Seepnge then that thou hast refused vnderstandynge, therefore wyll I refuse the also: so that thou shalt no more be my prest. And for so muche as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wyll also forget thy chyldren. The more they increased in the multitude, the more they synned agaynst me, therefore wyll I chaunge theyr honoure into shame. They eate vp the synnes of my people, and courage them in theyr wyckednes. Thus the prest is become lyke the people. Wherefore I wyll punishe them for theyr wycked wayes, and rewarde them accordyng to theyr owne ymaginacions. They shall eate, and not haue ynough: They haue vnto whoredome, therefore shall they not prosper: and why? they haue forsaken the Lorde, and not regarded hym.

Whoredome, wyne, and dronkenesse take the bert away. My people aske counsell at theyr stockes, theyr staffe must tell them. For an whorpe mynde hath dyscepued them, so that they commit fornicacion agaynst theyr God. They make sacrifices vpon the hye mountaynes, and burne theyr incense vpon the hylles, yea amoges the okes, groues, and bushes, for there are good shadowes. Therefore your daughters are become harlottes, and your spouses haue broken theyr wedlocke, I wyll not punishe your daughters for beyng despyled, and your bydes that became whores: sepyng the fathers themselves haue medled with harlottes, & offered with vntyestes: but the people that wyll not vnderstande must be punisshed.

Though thou (a) Israel art dysposed to play the harlot, yet shouldest not thou haue offended, O Iuda: thou shouldest not haue runne to Galgala, nor haue gone vp to Bethauen, nor haue swozne, the Lorde lyueth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton come. The Lorde therefore shall make her fede, as the lambe that goeth astray. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of ydolls, wel, let hym go. Theyr dronkenesse haue put them backe, and broughte them to whoredome. Theyr rulers loue rewardes, byngge (saye they) to theyr owne shame. A winde shall take hold of theyr fethers, and they shall be confounded in theyr offerynges.

The Notes of the.iii. Chapter.

(a) Israel and Ephraim, for the moste parte in the prophetes are take for the ten trybes. Isa. lxxviii. b. ye read in the. iii. of the kynges. xli. & f. that tenne trybes folowed Jeroboam, where as onely Iuda and Ben Iamin abode by Reshoboam. Those tenne trybes are commonly called Israel in the prophetes: and Ben Iamin is rekened wpth Iuda.

The. v. Chapter.

Agaynst the priests and rulers of Israel.
The help of man can do nothing against God.

O Ye priests: heare thys, take hede, O thou household of Israel: gve eare, O thou kynghouse: for thys punishment wyl come upon you that are be come a snare unto Mizpah, and a spede net unto the mount of Ephraim. They kyll sacryfices by heapes, to begyle the people therewith: therfore wil I punyssh them al. I know Ephraim wel ynough, and Israel is not hydde fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot, & Israel is despyled. They are not mynded to turne vnto the Lord, for they haue an whorish heart, so that they can not know the Lord.

But the pride of Israel wyl be rewarded hym in hys face: yea both Israel and Ephraim shall fall for theyr wyckednesse, and Juda wyl fall them also. They shall come wylth theyr sheepe and bullockes to seeke the Lord, but they shal nor fynde him, for he is gone from them. As for the Lord they haue refused hym and broughte vp bastard chyldren: a monerth therfore shall deuour them, with theyr porcyss. Wle wylth the shammes at Gabaa, and wylth the trompet in Ramah, cry out at Berthanen vpon the backside of Ben Iamin. In the tyme of the plage, shal Ephraim be lated wast, therfore byd I saythfully warne the rybes of Israel. Yet are the prynces of Juda become lyke them that remoue the landmarkes: therfore wyl I pour out my wrath vpon them lyke water.

Ephraim is oppressed, and can haue no eyght of the law: for why? they folowe the doctrynes of men. Therefore wyl I be to Ephraim as a morhe, and to the house of Juda as a caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe hys sycknes, and Juda his disease: Ephraim went vnto Asur, and sent vnto kynge Narek, yet coulde not he help you, nor ease you of your pain. I am vnto Ephraim as a lion, and as a lions whelp to the house of Juda. Euen I wyl spyle them and go my waye. I wyl take them wylth me and no man shal rescue them. I wyl goo, and retourne to my place, tyl they waxe sayntre, and seeke me.

Then shal we haue vnderstandyng, and en deuoute oure selues to knowe the Lord. He shal go forth as the spring of the day, and come vnto vs as the euening and moonyng raine vpon the earth.

O Ephraim, what shal I doo vnto the? O Juda, howe shal I entreate the seynge your loue is like a morning cloud, and like a dewe that goeth early away. Therefore haue I cut down the prophets and let the be staine for my words sake, so that punishment shal come to lyght.

For I haue pleasure in lounge kynnesse, and not in offering: yea in the knowe ledge of God more then in burnt sacrifice. But euen lyke as Adam byd, so haue they broken my couenaunt & set me at naught. Balad is a citty of wicked doers, of malicious people and bloudshedders. The multitude of the priestes is lyke an heape of the theues, murderers, and bloud thirsty: for they haue wrought abhominacio. Horrible thynges haue I seene in the house of Israel, they playe Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is despyled: but Juda shal haue an hauest for hym selfe, when I retourne the captiuitie of my people.

The Notes of the. vi. Chapter.

Of the hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

Do not thou triumphe, O Israel, & make no boasting more then the best of then, for thou hast committed aduoutry against thy god: thy strange rewards hast thou loued, more then al the corne flowers. They wyl not dwel in the Lords land, but Ephraim turneth agayne into Egypt and eateth vncleane thynges among the Assyrians.

They poure out no wyne for a dryncke: offering vnto the Lord, neyther giue they him theyr flain offeringes, but they be vnto me as mourners meates, wherein all they that eat the, are defiled. For I breade & they haue sate it vnto, shal not come into the house of the Lord. * What wyl ye doo then in the solemne dayes, and in the feast of the Lord. No, they shal get them away for the destruction, Egypt shal receyue them, and Asoph shal bury them.

The nettles shal ouer grow theyr pleasure: sancte goodes, and burres shal be in theyr tabernacles. Be ye sure (O Israel) the time of visitacion is come, the dayes of recompensyng are at hand. As for the prophete, ye hold hym for a fool: and hym that is rich in the spirit, for a madman, so great is your wyckednes and malice. They be gon to far, and haue destroyed them selues, lyke as they dyd alsoe tyme at Gabaa. Therefore theyr wyckednes shal be remembred, and theyr synnes punyshed.

Theyr hearte is deuised, therefore wyl they be destroyed. The Lord shal breake downe theyr images, he shal destroy theyr aulter. The Lord shal say: we haue no king: for why we haue not feared the Lord. And what shal then the kynge do to vs? Theyr common togyther, and swete vaine othes: they be confederate togyther, therefore groweth theyr punishment, as the wedes in the forowes of the land.

W They that dwel in Samaria haue worshipped the calfe of Berhaun: therefore shal the people mouen ouer them: yea, and the priests also that in theyr welthynges relyed wylth them: and why? It shal passe away from the. It shal be brought to the Assyrians for a presēt vnto king Nareb. Ephraim shal receiue ful punishment: Israel shal be confounded for hys owne ymaginations, Samaria wylth hys kynge shal banish away as the scōme in the water. The hye places of Auen, wher Israel do synne, shal be cast down: thistles and thorns shal grow vpon theyr aulter. Then shal they say to the mountaynes, couer vs, and to the hyls, sal vpon vs.

Luk. xxi. d

I Israel, thou hast sinned as Gaba did afore tyme, wher they remained: shuld not the batteyle then come vpon the wycked children, as wel as vpon the Gabaonites? I wil chasten them, euen after myne own desyre, the people shal be gathered togyther ouer them, when I punish the them for theyr great wyckednes.

Ephraim was vnto me, as a colwe that is vnto plow, therefore I loued hym, and fel vpon hys sayre necke. I drewe Ephraim, Iuda plowed, and Iacob played the housband man: that they might sow vnto rightousnes, and reape the frutes of wel doing: & they might plowe vp their frethe land, and seeke the Lord, til he cam, and led them ryghteousnes.

W But now they haue plowed the wyckednes, therefore shal they reape synne, and eate the fruit of lyes. Seynge thou puttest thy confydence in theyr owne wayes, and leanest to the multitude of thy wordes: ther shal grow a sedition amongs thy people. Al thy strong cityes shal be laied wast, eue as Salmana was destroyed wylth his familyers, the wycked hym that was auenged of Arbel in the day of batteyle, wher the mother perished wylth her chyldren. Euen so shal it goo wylth you (O Berhel) because of your malycious wyckednesse. Lyke as the morning goeth away, so shal the kynge of Israel passe.

The. xi. Chapter.

Agaynst the vnkynndnes of Israel.

V When Israel was yong, I loued him and called him my sonne oute of the lande of Egypte. But the more they were called the more they went back, offering vnto Idols and censyng Images: I learned Ephraim to go, and bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that woulde haue healded them. I ledde them wylth cordes of frendshipp, and wylth bandes of loue. I was euen he that layed the yoke vpon theyr neckes. I gaue them theyr fodder my selfe, that they should not go agayne into Egypte. And now is Asur theyr kynge: for they woulde not turne vnto me.

What great things haue I giuen the, O Ephraim: how saythfull ye haue I desended the, O Israel: haue I deale wylth the as wylth Adama: or haue I intreated the lyke Seboim? No, my hert is otherwylse mynded. Yea, my mercye is to seruate: therfore haue I not tourned me to destroy Ephraim in my wrathful displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holy one in the midst of the, though I come not into the cite.

and in his strength he wrestled with god. He strove with the angel, and gat the victory, so that he praised and desired him. He found him at Berhel, and there he talked with us. Yet the Lord god of hostes, even the Lord him selfe remembred him: Then turne to thy God, kepe mercy and equity, & hope still in thy God. But the marchaunt hath a false weight in his hand, he hath a pleasure to occupie extortion. Ephraim thinketh thus. Tush, I am ryche, I have good enough. In al my woorkes shall not one faute be founde, that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lord thy God, even as when I brought the out of the land of Egypte, and set the in thy tentes, and as in the hye feast dayes. I haue spoken thorow the prophets, and shewed dyuerse visions, and declared my selfe by the mynistracion of the prophets. But at Galaad is the abhominacion, they are fallen to vauptye. At Balgal thei haue slaine oxen: and as many heapes of stones as they had in theyr land forowes, so many auters haue they made. Jacob fled into the land of Siria, and Israel served for a wyfe, and for a wyfe he kept shepe. By a prophet the lord brought them out of Egypte, and by a prophete he preserved them. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure thorow his abhominacions, therefore shall his bloud be poured upon him selfe, & the Lord his god shall reward his blasphemies.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Of the abhominacions of Israel.

The abominacion of Ephraim is come also into Israel. He is gone backe to Baal, therefore must he dye. And now they synne more and more: of theyr syluer they make them molten Images, like the Idoles of the Heathen, and yet al is nothing but the woork of the craftesman. Nor withstandinge they preache of the same: who so kylle the calves, offereth to men. Therefore they shall be as the morning cloud, and as dewe that earlye passeth awaye, and lyke as the duste that the wynde taketh away from the floure, and as smoke that goeth out of the chimney. I am the Lord thy God, whych broughtre the oute of the lande of Egypte: that thou shouldst know no God but me onely: and that thou shouldst haue no Sautoure but only me. I toke dyspente hede of the in the wyldernes that dry land. But when they were wel fed and had inough, they waxed proude and forgot me. Therefore wyl I be vnto them as a Lyon, and as a Leopard in the waye to the Assyrians I wyl come vpon them as a she Beate that is robbed of her whealpes, and I wyl breake that subburne hearte of theirs. Where wyl I deuout them as a Lyon: yea the wyld beastes shall reare them.

I Israel, thou dost but destroy thy self. In me onely is thy healse Where are the Kinges now, that should help the in al thy cities? Yea and thy iudges, of whom thou saydest, gyue me a king and Princes: wel, I gaue the a king in my wrath and in my dyspleasure wyl I take hym from the again. The wickednes of Ephraim is bound together, and his synne lyeth byd. Therefore shall sorowes come vpon hym, as a woman that trauayleth. An vndiscrete sonne is he, for he consydereth not that he shulde not haue bene able to haue endured in the tyme of his birth, had not I defended hym fro the graue, & deliuered him from death.

Death, I wyl be thy death: O bell, I wyl be thy ring. Yet can I se no comforte, for when he is now the goodlyest amonge the brethren, the east wynde (even the wynde of the Lord) shall come downe fro the wyldernes, and drye by his condities, and drink by his wels: he shall spoyle the treasure of al pleasaunt vessels.

As for Samaria, they shall be made wast and why? they ate disobedient vnto the Lord. They shall perishe with the swerde, theyr chyldren shall be slaine, and theyr women great with chyld shall be rpyt vp.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

The destructions of Samaria.

I Israel, turne the now vnto the Lord thy God, for thou hast taken a great fal thorow thy wyckednes. Take these wordes with you, when ye turne to the Lord and say vnto him: O forgyue vs al our synnes receyue vs graciouslye, and then wyl we offer the bullockes of oure lyps vnto thee. Alur shall be no more oure helper, neither wyl we ryde vpon horses any more. As for the works of our handes, we wyl no more cal vpon them: For it is thou that art our God, thou shewest euer mercy vnto the fatherles.

O (if they wold do this) I shoulde heale theyr sores: yea with al my heart woulde I loue them: so that my wrath shuld clene be turned away from them. Yea, I woulde be vnto Israel as the dewe, and he shoulde growe as the lylle, and his roote shoulde breake oute as Libanus. His braunches shoulde spred out abroad and be as sayre as the olyue tree, and smel as Libanus. They that dwel vnder his shadow, shoulde come againe, and grow up as the corne, and theyr lye as the vyne, he shoulde haue as good a name, as the vyne of Libanus.

O Ephraim what haue I to doo with Idols any more? I wyl graciouslye heare hym, and lede him forth. I wyl be vnto the as a grene fyve tree, vpon me shalt thou fynde thy frutt. Who so is wyse, shall vnderstand this: and he that is ryghte cunctate, wyl regarde it. For the wayes of the Lord are ryghtuous such as he Godly wyl walke in them: As for the wicked they wyl stumbe therein.

The ende of the Prophecy of Oseas.

A prophecy agaynst the Jewes. He exhorteth the priestes to prayer and fastyng, for the mysery that was commyng at hand.

In the prologue of the prophet whiche the Jewes not shew of the prophete, byd the prophet in the time of the prophet that standeth next before them, whiche declareth the tyme of his prophete.

De. xxxii. d

This is the worde of the Lord, that came unto Joel the sonne of Phatuel: Heare, O ye elders: ponder this well all ye that dwell in the land: for ever there happened suche a thing in your dayes, or in the dayes of your fathers. Tel your chyldren of it, and let the chyldren shew it unto their chyldren, and so they to their chyldren. Loke what the caterpyller hath left, that hath the greeshopper left, that hath the locust eaten up, & what the locust hath left, that hath the blasynge consumed. Make up ye dronkardes, and wepe: mourne al ye winesuppers, because of your swete wyne, for it shalbe taken away from your mouth. Yea a myghty and an innumerable people shal come up into my land: these haue teeth lyke the teethe of lions, and chaste bones lyke the lionesses. They shal make my vyneyard waste, they shal pyl of the barkes of my sygtrees, strip them bare, cast them away, and make the braunches whyte.

Make thy moone as a virgin doth that girdeh her selfe with sacke, because of her bydegrome. For the meate and drynk offeryng shalbe taken away from the house of the Lord, and the priestes the Lords ministers shal mourne. The feld shalbe wasted, the land shalbe in a miserable case, for the corne shalbe destroyed, the swete wyne shal come to confusyon, and the oyle vnterly desolate. The husband men & the wine gardeners shal looke pyteously and make lamentacion for the weate, wyne, and barley, and because the harvest vpon the feld is so clene destroyed. The grapegatherers shal make greete mone, whē the vineyard and figtrees be so vnterly wasted.

Yea all the pomgranetes, palmetrees, apple trees, and the other trees of the field shal wither away. Thus the mery chere of the chyldren of men, shal come to confusyon.

Byd you, and make your mone, O ye priestes: mourne ye minister of an altar go your way in, and sleepe in sacke clothe. O ye officers of my God: for the meate and drynk offeryng shalbe taken away fro the house of your God. Proclayme a fastyng, call the congregacion, gather the elders and al the inhabytors of the land together into the house of the Lord your God, and cry vnto the Lord: Alas, alas, for this day. And why? the day of the Lord is at hande, and cometh as a destroyer from the almighty. Shal not the meates be taken & way before our eyes, the myrth also & joy from the house of our God: The sede shal perish in the grounde the garners shal lye wast, the floures shalbe broken downe, for the corne shalbe destroyed. O what a sighyng make the cattel: the bullockes are very euel lpyng, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are famished away.

O Lord, to the wyl I cry: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wilderness, and the flame hath byent up al the trees of the feld. Yea the wylde beasts cry also vnto the: for the water cpyers are dreyed up, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wilderness.

The. ii. Chapter.

The prophete sheweth the commyng and cruelty of their enemyes. An exhortacion to moue them to conuerte.

Blowe oute the trumpet in Syon, and cry vpon my holy hyl, that al such as dwell in the land, maye tremble at it, for the daye of the Lord cometh, and is hard at hand: a darcke daye, a gloomyng daye, a cloudy daye, yea and a stormy daye lyke as the moonyng syeadeth oute vpon the hyls. Namelye, a greete and myghty people such as haue not bene sene sene the beginning, neither shalbe after them for evermore. Before hym shalbe a consuming fyre, and behynde hym a burnyng flame. The lande shalbe as a garden of pleasure before hym, but behynde hym shal it be a very wast wilderness, and there is no man that shal escape hym. They are to lye vpon like barded horses, and runne like horsesmen. They skip vpon the hyls, as it were the sound of charrets, as the flame of fyre that consumeth the straw, and as a myghty people redy to the battayle.

The folke shalbe afrayed of hym, al faces shalbe as blacke as a pot. These shal run lyke gasites, and leape ouer the wals lyke men of war. Euerie man in his gosse shall kepe his aray, and not go out of his path. Ther shal not one dytue another, but eche shal kepe his owne waye. They breake in at the wyndowes, & not be hurt. They shal come into the citty, and run vpon the wals. They shal clyme vpon the houses, and clyppe in at the wyndowes lyke a thiefe. The earth shal quake before hym, yea the heauens shalbe moued. The sunne and moone shalbe darchned and the stars shal wythdrawe their shine. The Lord shal shew his voice before hym, for his host is great, strong, and myghty to fulfyl his commaundement. This is that great and marueylous feareful daye of the Lord: And who is able to abyde it.

Now therefore saith the Lord: Turne you vnto me with al your herts, with fasting, wepyng, and mournyng, rent your heartes, and not your clothes. Turne you vnto the Lord your god, for he is gracious and merciful, long sufferyng and of great compassion: & redy to pardon wyckednes.

 The ende of the Prophecie
 of Joel.

The booke of the Prophet Amos.

The first Chapter.

The tyme of the Prophecie of Amos. The woorde of the Lozde agaynst Izrah, agaynst Tyre, agaynst Edom, and agaynst the son-nes of Ammon.

These are the sermons that were shewed vnto Amos (wherhe was one of the shepherdes at Thecua)
 vpon Israel, in the tyme
 of Osiab kyng of Iuda,
 and in the tyme of Iero-
 boam the sonne of Ioah kyng of Israel
 ii. yere before þe earth quake. And he sayd:
 The Lozde shal roare out of Syon, & shewe
 his voice fro Ierusalem: so that þe pastures
 of the shepherdes shall be in a myserable case, and þe top of Carmel dyed vp. Thus saith þe Lozde for. iiii. &. iiii. wickednes of Damascus, I wyl not spare her, because they haue threshed Galaad wth yron flayles:
 But I wyl send a fyre into the house of Ha-zael, the same shal consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus wyl I breake the bars of Damascus, & roote out the inhabytter fro
 the feld of Auen, and him that holdeth the scepter, out of the pleasaunt house, so that þe people shal be dryed out of sayre Siria saieth the Lozde. Thus saith the Lozde. For. iiii.
 and. iiii. wickednes of Gaza, I wyl not spare her: because they make þe prysoners yet more captiue & haue dryen them into the land of Edom. Therfore wil I send a fyre into the wals of Gaza, which shal deuoure her houses, I wyl roote out the þe dwel at a good and him that holdeth the scepter of

Accalon, and stretch out myne hand ouer
 Ascar, that the remnant of the Philistines shal perishe saith the Lozde. Thus saith the Lozde: for. iiii. and. iiii. wickednes of the city of Tyre, I wyl not spare her, because they haue increased the captiuitie of þe domites, and haue not remembred the brotherly couenaunt. Therfore wil I sende a fyre into the wals of Tyre that shal consume her palaces. Thus saith the Lozde:
 For thre and foure wickednes of Edom, I wyl not spare him, because he persecu-ted his brother wth the sword, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very long and so kept indignacion alwaye by hym.
 Therfore wil I sende a fyre into Theman which shal deuoure the palaces of Bosra.
 Thus saith the Lozde: for. iiii. &. iiii. wickednes of the chylde of Ammon I wil not spare them: because they cyppe vp the women great wth chylde in Galaad, to make the borders of theyr lands the wy-
 der. Therfore I wyl kyndle a fyre in the wals of Rabba that shal consume her palaces with a great cry, in the day of battle, in tempest, and in the day of storme:
 so þe kyng shal go into captiuitie he &
 his princes togither, saith the Lozde.

The.ii. Chapter.

Agaynst Moab, Iuda, and Israel.

Thus saith the Lozde: For. iiii. and
 iiii. wickednes of Moab, I wyl not spare hym: because he brent the bones of the kyng of Edom to ashes. Therfore wil I send a fyre into Moab, which shal consume the palaces of Cariath: so þe Moab shal perishe wth a noyse and the sound of a shawme. I wil rote out the iudge fro among them and slay al his princes wth
 him saith the Lozde. Thus saith the Lozde:
 for. iiii. and. iiii. wickednes of Iuda, I wyl not spare him: because he hath caste a fyre the law of the Lozde, and not kept his commandements: for why, they woulde nedes be disciued wth the lies, that the forefathers folowed. Therfore wil I send a fyre into Iuda, which shal consume the palaces of Ierusalem.

Thus saith the Lozde: for. iiii. and. iiii.
 wickednes of Israel, I wyl not spare
 hym: because he hath sold the ryghtous for money, & the poore for shoes. They tread vpon poore mens heades, in the dust of the earth, and croke the wates of þe meke. The sonne & the father go to the harlot, to dys-honoure my holpe name, they lye besyde ther shal no straungers go thorow her a-

 The ende of the Prophecie
 of Joel.

The booke of the Prophet Amos.

The first Chapter.

The tyme of the Prophecie of Amos. The woorde of the Lozde agaynst Izrah, agaynst Tyre, agaynst Edom, and agaynst the son-
 nes of Ammon.

These are the sermons that were shewed vnto Amos (wherhe was one of the shepherdes at Thecua)
 vpon Israel, in the tyme
 of Osiab kyng of Iuda,
 and in the tyme of Iero-
 boam the sonne of Ioah kyng of Israel
 ii. yere before þe earth quake. And he sayd:
 The Lozde shal roare out of Syon, & shewe
 his voice fro Ierusalem: so that þe pastures
 of the shepherdes shall be in a myserable case, and þe tope of Carmel dyed vp. Thus saith þe Lozde for. iiii. &. iiii. wickednes of Damascus, I wyl not spare her, because they haue threshed Galaad wth yron flayles:
 But I wyl send a fyre into the house of Ha-zael, the same shal consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus wyl I breake the bars of Damascus, & roote out the inhabytter fro
 the feld of Auen, and him that holdeth the
 scepter, out of the pleasaunt house, so that þe people shal be drien out of sayre Siria saieth the Lozde. Thus saith the Lozde. For. iiii.
 and. iiii. wickednes of Gaza, I wyl not
 spare her: because they make þe prysoners yet more captiue & haue drien them into the land of Edom. Therfore wil I send a fyre into the wals of Gaza, which shal deuoure
 her houses, I wyl roote out the þe dwel at
 a good and him that holdeth the scepter of

Accalon, and stretch out myne hand ouer
 Ascar, that the remnant of the Philistines
 shal perishe saith the Lozde. Thus saith the Lozde: for. iiii. and. iiii. wickednes of the city of Tyre, I wyl not spare her, because
 they haue increased the captiuitie of þe
 domites, and haue not remembred the brotherly couenant. Therfore wil I sende a fyre into the wals of Tyre that shal consume her palaces. Thus saith the Lozde:
 For thre and foure wickednes of Edom, I
 wyl not spare him, because he persecu-
 ted his brother wth the sword, destroyed
 his mothers wombe, bare hatred very long
 and so kept indignacion alwaye by hym.
 Therfore wil I sende a fyre into Theman
 which shal deuoure the palaces of Bosra.
 Thus saith the Lozde: for. iiii. &. iiii. wic-
 kednes of the chylde of Ammon I wil
 not spare them: because they cyppe vp the
 women great wth chylde in Galaad, to make the borders of theyr lands the wy-
 der. Therfore I wyl kyndle a fyre in the wals of Rabba that shal consume her palaces with a great cry, in the day of battle, in tempest, and in the day of storme:
 so þe kyng shal go into captiuitie he &
 his princes togither, saith the Lozde.

The.ii. Chapter.

Agaynst Moab, Iuda, and Israel.

Thus saith the Lozde: For. iiii. and
 iiii. wickednes of Moab, I wyl
 not spare hym: because he brent the bones of the kyng of Edom to ashes. Therfore wil I send a fyre into Moab, which shal

 ab shal perishe wth a noyse and the sound of a shawme. I wil rote out the iudge fro among them and slay al his princes wth
 him saith the Lozde. Thus saith the Lozde:
 for. iiii. and. iiii. wickednes of Iuda, I
 wyl not spare him: because he hath caste a fyre the law of the Lozde, and not kept his commandements: for why, they woulde nedes be disciued wth the lies, that the forefathers folowed. Therfore wil I send a fyre into Iuda, which shal consume the palaces of Ierusalem.

Thus saith the Lozde: for. iiii. and. iiii.
 wickednes of Israel, I wyl not spare
 hym: because he hath sold the ryghtous for money, & the poore for shoes. They tread

The.iii. Chapter.

Prophets among your children, and abstainers among your young men. Is it not so. O ye children of Israel, sayth the Lord:
But ye gave the absters wine to drink yea ye commanded the prophets, saying: Prophecy not. Behold I will crash you in sunder, lyke as a wayne crasheth, that is ful of sheues, so that the swyft shal not escape, neyther the strong be able to do any thing, no, the Gaunte shal not saue hys own lyfe. The archer shal not abyde, and the swyfte of foote shal not escape. The horseman shal not saue hys lyfe, and he that is as manly of stomacke as a gaunt, shal in that day be sayde to run hys waye naked, sayth the Lord.

The.iii. Chapter.

He reprooveth the house of Israel of wickednes.

Hear, what the Lord speaketh unto you (O ye children of Israel) namely unto all the tribes, whō I brought out of Egypt and sayd: you only haue I accepted from all the generacions of the earth: therfore wyl I vspyt you in al your wyckedneses. Maye they walke together except they be agreed among them selues?
Doth a lyon roare in the wood, excepte he haue a pray? Or creepeth a Lyons whelp out of hys denne, excepte he haue gotten some thing? Doth a byrd fal into a snare vpon the earth, wher no fouler is? Taketh a ma hys snare vpon the grounde, also he catch somwhat? Crye they out Alarum wyl the trumpet in the city, and the people not afrayed? Commeth ther any plage in a city without it be the Lords doyng?
Nowe dothe the Lord God no maner of thyng, but he telleth hys secret before vnto his seruantes the prophets. When a lion roareth, who wyl not be afrayed? Seing then that the Lord God him self speaketh, who wyl not prophete?

Each in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces of the land of Egypt, and say:
gather you together vpon the mountaines of Samaria, so shal ye se great murder & violent oppression amongs them: for whyp, they regarded not the thyng that is righte sayth the Lord, they gather together euill gottē goods, & lay robberie in their houses.
Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Thys land shal be troubled and besieged rounde aboute, thys strength shal be pluckt from the, and thys palaces robbed. Thus sayeth the Lord: lyke as an heardeman taketh two legges or a peece of an eare out of the Lyons mouth;

Even so the chyldre of Israel that dwel in Samaria, hauing theyr couches in the corner, and theyr beddes at Damascus) shal be pluckt away. Heare, and heare record in the house of Jacob (sayth the Lord God of hostes) that when I begyn to vs-set the wickednes of Israel, I wyl vsset the altars at Bethel also: so that the hornes of the altar shal be broken of, and fall to the grounde.

The Prophecy

As for the wynter house and Sommer house, I wyl smyte them downe: and the houses of Newye; yea and manye other houses shal perishe, and be destroyed, sayeth the Lord.

The.iii. Chapter.

Against the gouernours of Samaria.

Hear this worde ye satynes that be vpon the hill of Samaria: ye that do poore men wronge, and oppresse the needie: ye that say to your lords: byng hyther let vs drynke. Therefore the Lord hath sworne by hys holynesse: The dayes shal come vpon you, that ye shal be lyfe vpon spearres, and youre posteritye carry-ed awaye in fyshers panyers. Ye shal get you oute at the gappes one after another, and in Armon shal ye be caste awaye sayeth the Lord.

Ye came to Bethel for to worke vngratiousnes, and haue increased your synnes at Balgal: ye broughte your sacrifices in the mornynge, and youre tythes vnto the chyldre day. Ye made thankofferynge of leuen, ye promised frewill offerings, & proclaimed the. Such lust had ye, O ye chyldre of Israel, sayth the Lord God. Therefore haue I giue you idle teth in al your cities & scarcenes of bread in al your places: yet wil ye not turne vnto me sayth the Lord.
When ther wer but .iii. monethes vnto the haruest, I whelde the raine fro you: yea I rained vpon one cite, & not vpon an other, one peece of ground was moistured w rain & the ground that I rained not vpon was dry. Therefore .ii. yea .iii. cities came vnto me, to drinke water: but they wer not satisfied, yet wil ye not turne vnto me sayth the Lord. I haue smitten you wylth drouth & blasting, & looke how many orchardes, vynyardes, sygetrees, and olyue trees ye had: & caterpillar hath eaten the vp. But yet wyl ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lord: pestilence haue I sent among you, as I did in Egypt: your young men haue I slain wylth the sword, and caused your horses to be taken captiue: I made the stinking sauour of youre tentes to come vp into youre nostreils. Yet wyl ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord. Some of you haue I ouer-throwen, as I ouerthrew Sodom and Gomor, so that ye wer as a brand plucked out of the fyre: Yet wyl ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lord. Therefore thus wyl I handle the again, O Israel: yea euē thus wil I handle the. Make the ready the to mete thy God, O Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountaines, he ordereth the wynde, he sheweth mā what he is about to do, he maketh the morning and the darknes, he treadeth vpon the hye places of the earth: the Lord God of hostes is hys name.

Wher as ther dwelt a thousand in one cy-

Neuer thelesse, thus sayth the Lord vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye

Balgal shalbe caried awaye captiue, and much then as ye oppres the poore, and rob hym of his best sustenance: therfore wher as ye haue builded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwell in them. Agarueplous pleasunt vyneyardes shal ye plante, but the wyne of them shall ye not drynke, and why? as for the multitude of your wicked-

The vii. Chapter.

Of the captiuitie of Israel and Iuda.

The Lorde God shewed me such a vysion: behold the Roode one that made gre Hoppers, euen whil the corne was shootynge forth, after the kynge had clip-t bys shepe. Now when they undertooke to eate vp all the grene thynges in the lande, I sayd: O Lorde God, be mercyfull I besech the: who shoulde els heape vp Iacob that is brought so lowe? So the lord was gracious therein, and the Lord sayd: wel, it shal not be. Agayne the Lorde shewed me this vysi- on: behold, the Lorde God called the fyre to punish iherusalem, and it deuoured the great depe: pea, it consumed a part altedr. Then said I: O lord god, hold this hand: for who shoulde els heape vp Iacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lord was merciful therein, and the Lord God sayd:
wel, it shal not be.

Moreover he shewed me this vysion: Behold, the Lorde stood vpon a plastered wal, and a masons trowel in his hand, and the Lord sayd vnto me: Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a masons trowel.
Then sayd the Lord: Behold, I wyl laye the trowel amonge my people of Israell, and wyl no more ouerse them: but the hye hyl chapels of Isaac must be layed waste, and the churches of Israell made desolate, and as for the house of Ieroboam, I wyl stand vp agaynst it wth the sword.

Upon this sent Amasiah the pyeste to Berdel, vnto Ieroboam the king of Israel, sayinge: Amos maketh the house of Israel to rebel agaynst the, the lande can not away wth bys woo: des. For Amos sayeth, Ieroboam shal dye wth the sword, and Israell shal be led away captiue oute

Amos answered and sayd to Amasiah:
As for me, I am neyther prophete nor prophetes sonne, but a keeper of cattel. Howe as I was breakynge downe mulberyes, and goyng after the cattel, the Lord tooke

The viii. Chapter.

Agaynst the rulers of Israel. The Lorde swareth that he wyl fulfyll the thynges, which he hath determined agaynst Israell.

The Lorde God shewed me this vysion: and behold, there was a maunde wth sommet fruite. And he sayd: Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a maunde wth sommet fruite. Then sayd the Lorde vnto me: the ende commeth vpon my people of Israell, I wyl no more ouerse them, In that day shall the songes of the temple be turned into sorow, saith the Lorde God.
Many dead bodies shal lie in euery place, and be cast forth secretly.

Hear this, O ye that oppresse the poore and destroy the nedp in the land, sayinge: When wyl the newe moneth be gon, that we may sel byrable: and the Saboth, that we may haue scarcenes of corne: to make the busshell lesse, and the sytle greater: we shall set vp false wayghes, that we maye get the poore vnder vs wth thei: mony, and the nedp also for thooes: pea let vs sel the chaffe for corne.

The Lorde hathe sworne agaynst the pyde of Iacob: these wo:ks of thei:ys wyl I neuer forget. Shal not the lande reeble and all they that dwel therein mourne for this: Shal not thei: destruction come vpon them lyke a water streame, and flowe ouer them, as the floude of Egypt: At the same tyme (saith the Lorde God) I shal cause the Sunne to go downe at noone, and the land to be darke in the cleare daye. Your hye feastes wyl I turne to sorow, and your songes to mourning: I wyl bynge lacke cloth vpon all your backs, & baldnes vpon e-uery head: pea such a mourning wyl I fild the, as is made vpon an only begottē sonne, and they shal haue a miserable ende.

Beholde, the tyme commeth (saith the Lorde God) that I shal send an hunger into the earth, not the hunger of breade, nor the thyrst of water: but an hunger to hear the wo:de of the Lorde, so that they shal go from the one sea to the other, pea from the North vnto the East, runnyng aboute to seeke the wo:de of the Lorde, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme shall the sayre byrgens and the younge men peryshe for thyrst, pea euen they that sweare in the offence of Samaria, and sai: as truly as thy God lyueth at Dan, and as truly as thy God lyueth at Bersaba. These shall fall, and neuer rylse vp agayne.
